"Gentlemen:

Six months have elapsed since purchasing two of your 'Motiograph De Luxe Model' projecting machines, and I want to say at this time that they have given us 100 percent satisfaction.

The picture projected by them at our Lorin Theatre is second to none in that it is flickerless, clear and as steady as a rock.

I speak from experience when I state that the machines run smooth and noiseless, as I do relief work now and then, and I look forward to that time with a great deal of pleasure.

There is also a great saving in carbons by being able to trim two full lengths of carbons at one time, top and bottom.

To be candid, I believe the Motiograph De Luxe is the best projector on the market today.

Yours very truly,

BEACH KRAHN AMUSEMENT CO., INC.,

Narrow Width Film

THE question as to the adoption of a narrow width film standard by the Society of Motion Picture Engineers seems to be, for some reason, rather in doubt in the minds of some of those interested in the Motion Picture industry.

At the meeting of the Society held in Rochester in April, 1918, a resolution was passed adopting a narrow width standard, dimensions of which are given herewith.

At a meeting of the Society held in Cleveland in November, 1918, the matter of reconsidering the action taken at the Rochester meeting was discussed, but upon vote of the Society it was decided finally that the special standard should stand.

It may be well to go into the questions which prompted the Society in taking the action.

When a man comes into the industry and is desirous of producing a small projector, he at once casts about for advice and help as to the film gauge which he should use. He dreams monopoly—he dreams untold riches—he squanders his money and that of his friends and then quietly retires from the business, realizing that special width film, all his own, is of no value. It is an impossible game.

Had he had a small width film standard which he could have used and which was used by others he might still be in business, for he would then have been able to sell his projectors and feel that a film supply was available, for there are quantities of film in the new standard which is available.

Why use any width other than the "Professional Standard?" The following are some of the reasons given in discussion:

1. Because the film expense must be cut as low as possible, due to small rentals and the fact that the bookings for film of this type, from its very nature, are slow in coming in. It is a long-time investment as compared with "Professional Film."

2. The competition between the Home Field and the Theatre Field must be cut to a minimum. The small projector makes theatre patrons. The use of the larger standard on small projectors might tend to competition, not only through film supply in the exchanges outside the theatres, but also increase the competition for patrons between the theatre and the semi-public gathering place.

3. It is desirous that outside the theatre pictures should be able to be shown without a booth. In order to do this non-inflammable film must be used. The passing of laws that all film manufactured must be non-inflammable is beyond belief, but the passing of a law that the "Narrow Width Standard" should be entirely non-inflammable is possible, for in doing this the opposition of the "entertainment film interests" would not be met.

4. The standard adopted allows of the printing by a simple optical reduction process of all the old negatives on the "narrow width standard," which means added revenue to the Film Companies and an increased library for small projector use at a considerable reduction of raw stock cost.

5. It means one film width which differs from the "Professional Standard" instead of as many different widths as there are machines.

6. It means a broader use of motion pictures, for with the reduction in cost of apparatus and the assurance of a film supply, motion pictures can be used in rural districts before small audiences where they are not used to-day, because it is impractical.

The point was clearly made that the Society does not recommend the manufacturers of the small projectors to adopt this "narrow-width film" as the one to be used on their projectors. The "Professional Standard" can be used at any time, but the Society does request that one or the other be used and insisted on by the industry.

Some of those present felt very strongly that this was the solution to the educational problem and would do away with all opposition on the part of the Theatre Interests to the use of motion pictures in churches, schools and other semi-public places.

Whether or not the ideas of the Society work out or not remains to be seen. At the present time the manufacturers of small projectors are using both standards with considerable success and are equally insistent that their own judgment is correct.

Questions

The brushes should be removed from the holders and wiped off occasionally so that they will not become gummy and stick in the boxes. When brushes are dirty they will not make proper contact with the commutator, and sparking will result. It is a good plan to take the brushes out of the boxes once a week and carefully clean them. Do not take the pigtails loose from the brush-holders and be sure to place the brushes back in the boxes in their original position, for if they are turned around they will not fit the commutator surface. The brushes should have a smooth, unscratched surface, free from deposit of copper.

Uneven wearing of the commutator will sometimes result in the mica protruding slightly above the commutator surface. In this case the commutator should be trued up as described above. There should be a slight endwise movement of the armature, about $\frac{1}{16}$ inch, which will cause the brushes to wear evenly across the face of the commutator and prevent their wearing grooves in the commutator face.

(c) Wrong Spring Pressure on the Brushes.

There should be just sufficient pressure on the brush springs to insure good contact between brushes and commutator.

(d) Open or Short Circuit in Armature.

This trouble will most often occur near where the armature winding is connected to the commutator and results generally from a bruise in handling or some foreign body getting caught in the armature, or from a chip caught when commutator is being turned or repaired. If an open circuit, the trouble is very apparent, since the long, heavy spark accompanying it generally eats away the mica between the segments on each side of the break and thus shows its location. A short circuit in the armature will show at once by the excessive heating and perhaps smoking of the coil or coils short circuited, and if the operation is continued the machine will be burned out. Where trouble of this kind is suspected the necessity of prompt attention by an electrician is obvious.

If considerably more current is being taken by the lamp than the machine is designed for, sparking may result. See that the machine is not excessively overloaded.

(f) Brushes in Wrong Position.

If the brushes are left in the same position as when the machine is received, trouble will not occur from this cause. If brushes are ever moved or changed, see that they are put back where they belong and that marks on brush yoke and bearing housing agree.

MACHINE MAKES EXCESSIVE NOISE

This is most often due to a weak floor or to the machine not setting firm and level. If the noise seems to be in the machine itself and nothing can be observed out of place, send for an electrician, as the trouble may be serious.

Sometimes the noise made by the motor generator when running can be heard in the theatre, where it is objectionable. Since these sets do not require holding-down bolts or special foundation, this noise can be overcome by setting the machine in a shallow box containing an inch or two of sawdust or mineral wool, or by putting several thicknesses of heavy linoleum or sheet cork under it.

Any electrical machine will make a certain amount of noise when running. Some locations where there are reflecting walls or vestibule may magnify this noise until it is objectionable. If possible the locations should be given a try-out before the machine is permanently installed.

BEARINGS RUN HOT

The first rule when a bearing runs hot is to see that the oil well is filled with good clean oil and that the oil rings run freely, carrying the oil to the shaft. If the bearing runs hot on a new machine shut down and wash out the bearing with kerosene. Trouble is probably due to dirt that has accumulated in shipment. If the bearing has been running along satisfactorily and suddenly gets hot, flood the well with clean oil, leaving the drain cock open and pouring in the clean oil while machine is running to free the bearing from dirt. A change to a different grade of oil, either heavier or lighter, will often correct a bearing trouble of this kind. Never use water to cool a bearing; it may get into the insulation of the windings and cause a worse trouble. A machine with clean oil of the proper grade never gives trouble from hot bearings.

REPAIRS

When repair parts are needed it is poor economy to try to get along without them. Brushes and bearings for these machines can be shipped promptly and will always be of correct size and quality. In ordering repair parts (new brushes, new bearings or other part of machine) for one of these motor generators, bear in mind that the serial number and name-plate readings of the machine should be placed on the order.

CONNECTIONS

All connections on the machine and all bolts and nuts should be inspected and carefully tightened up. The carbon jaws and connections on the lamp should also be kept clean and tight. When clamping the carbons in their holders it is necessary to use considerable pressure on the clamp to insure a good contact. A poor contact at this point will not only result in a poor light, but will also seriously damage the carbon-holder, due to the high resistance of the poor contact. Loose contacts are a continual source of trouble.

TROUBLES

All motor generators are carefully inspected in the factory and tested on a projection arc lamp under actual operating conditions (as near as they can be secured in a factory), so that when received by the customer they are all ready to be set up and run. Every effort is made that the machines shall give perfect satisfaction to the manager and operator.

If trouble is experienced do not blame the machine until you are certain that the trouble does not lie either in some other part of the equipment or in some unusual local condition.

MACHINE DOES NOT START

If the machine does not start when the switch is closed, first examine the fuses and make sure that the current is on at the switch terminals. It sometimes happens that a single fuse has blown on a three-phase three-wire outfit, in which case the motor generator will run as a single-phase machine, but if stopped will not start again until the blown fuse has been replaced; if a single-throw switch be used. However, if a double-throw starting switch be used, the motor generator will be started up on the unfused side, therefore the missing fuse must be detected by the operation of the machine while running. If a fuse is missing it can usually be detected by the unusual noise made by the machine while running, by the motor end heating excessively and, more particularly, by change in speed with change in load and general unsteadiness of the arc. If a fuse be blown it should be replaced at once, for it may save the burning out of the motor.

SPARKING AT THE BRUSHES

When a vicious sparking develops under the brushes of the motor generator it is an indication that something is wrong. The most usual causes are:

(a) Dirt on the Commutator or Brushes.

MOTION PICTURE CARBONS

Give Perfect Alternating Current Projection

The advance of modern motion picture photography has exerted a marked influence on modern projection. The exhibitor is selecting his light source with great care. The following requirements must be fulfilled by the light source in order that the picture projected on the screen be pleasing to the eye.

1. The light must be such that the finest variations of high lights and shadows shall be perfectly recorded on the screen and every object depicted in perfect detail.
2. The flexibility must be great enough to compensate for the varying densities of films made under different conditions of lighting.

The White A. C. Special Carbons fulfill these requirements in every particular. They give a strong, pure white light of high intensity which brings out the gradation of tone in the picture, noiseless and flickerless operation, and a rugged light source not affected by any slight changes in voltage.

Offset Projection

Will C. Smith

We have had so many inquiries concerning the location of the projection room and the distortion which results if the line of throw is other than perpendicular to the screen surface at the center of the picture that we have decided to reprint the following article prepared for the Society of Motion Picture Engineers by Mr. Will C. Smith of the Nicholas Power Company and printed in the Transactions of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, under date of October, 1917. The cuts give graphic illustrations of the Keystone effect brought about by placing the projection in other than the perpendicular position. This is of the greatest importance to all prospective theatre builders and contains data which should be accessible to all those in the trade.

When a projecting machine is set in any other position than directly opposite the center of the picture screen, in other words, when the projecting machine is "offset" from the center of the screen, certain highly undesirable effects are produced in the picture. These undesirable effects are of two kinds, first, blurring of certain edges of the picture and, second, distortion of the objects appearing on the screen.

Taking up the first of these effects, blurring of the edges, this is seen to be due to the fact that one edge of the screen is further from the lens than the other edge, and, consequently, if any chosen part of the picture is "focused" clearly on the screen other parts of the picture must, of necessity, be "out of focus." When the "offset" of the projecting machine from the screen center is not great than, say, 5 to 10° then the blurring effect is not particularly noticeable, but when, as in some theatres in present use, the angle is as great as 35 it is utterly impossible to produce a clear picture of any attractive size.

How the Metronome Came Into General Use

AN instrument, constructed for the purpose of enabling composers to indicate the exact pace at which they wish their works to be performed.

The great masters of the earlier schools left the Tempi of their compositions entirely to the discretion of the executant. In doing this they incurred no risk whatever of misconception; for until the close of the 16th century and even later, the composer was almost always a singer in the choir for which he wrote; and his relations with his fellow-choristers were infinitely closer than those existing between a modern composer and the orchestra under his control. But the change of style introduced by Claudio Monteverde, added to the impulse given to instrumental music and vocal music with instrumental accompaniments after the beginning of the 17th century, changed these relations very materially. The invention of the Opera brought new ideas into the field. The individuality of the composer began gradually to throw the characteristics of the "School" into the background; and musicians, no longer guided by traditional laws, soon became alive to the necessity for giving some sort of direction as to the manner in which their pieces were to be sung or played. Hence arose the employment of such words as Grave, Allegro, Adagio, and other terms of like import, which have remained in common use to the present day. As the resources of modern art became fully developed, even these directions were found to be insufficient for their intended purpose. A hundred different varieties of Allegro were possible. How was it possible to indicate to the performer which of these the composer intended him to adopt? The number of technical terms was multiplied indefinitely; but it was clear that none were sufficiently explicit to remove the difficulty; and at a very early period the use of the pendulum was suggested as the only rational means of solving it.

To Etienne Loulie belongs the credit of having first turned this idea to practical account. In a work entitled "Elemens ou principes de Musique, mis dans un nouvel order" (Paris, 1696, Amsterdam, 1698), he describes an instrument, called a Chronometer, formed of a bullet suspended to a cord, and provided with means for lengthening or shortening the latter at pleasure, in such a manner as to indicate seventy-two different degrees of velocity. This was a good beginning, but nevertheless this machine did not become generally known. Other inventors and musicians, among them Joseph Sauveur, Cabory, Pelletier and others too numerous to mention, both in France and Germany, gave serious thought and attention to a satisfactory pendulum or time-beater. In 1813, Weber advocated the use of a pendulum formed by a small bullet attached to the end of a string. Beethoven became interested also, and Henry Smart in 1821 made a further improvement, but the satisfactory pendulum or metronome, as we call it, had not been discovered.

All these inventions failed, however, more or less completely, through the inconvenience caused by the length of the pendulum necessary to produce beats of even moderate slowness. In order to perform sixty oscillations in a minute, a pendulum must, in our latitude, be 39.2 inches long. One long enough to execute forty would be difficult to manage. This difficulty, which had long been recognized as a bar to further improvement, was eventually removed through the ingenuity of a celebrated mechanist named Winkel, an inhabitant of Amsterdam, who first entertained the idea of constructing a metronome upon a system before untried, involving the use of a certain kind of double-pendulum, the motions of which are governed by mathematical laws of extreme complexity; though practically considered, the principle is simple.

Johann Nepomuk Maelzel, an accomplished musician and a mechanic of European reputation, had long meditated an improvement upon Stockel's machine, another inventor of a time-beating instrument; and succeeded about this time in producing a species of so-called "Chronometer," which fairly satisfied Salieri, Weigl, and even Beethoven himself. Fortified by the approval of these high authorities, he determined to bring out his invention in London. Meanwhile, he exhibited it, in company with other mechanical curiosities, in a traveling museum, which he carried about with him from city to city, through some of the principal countries of Europe. Among other places he visited Amsterdam, where he saw Winkel's instrument. Struck with the superiority of the double-pendulum to the principle adopted in his own time-keeper, he at once offered to purchase the invention. Winkel declined to cede his rights; but Maelzel, having now learned all he wanted to know, proceeded to Paris, patented the double-pendulum in his own name, and in 1816 set up the first metronome manufactory on record.

Winkel afterwards obtained possession of one of the Paris instruments, established its identity with his own, and took advantage of Maelzel's return to Holland to submit his case to the "Niederlandische Akademie" for decision. A commission was appointed to investigate its merits; and as it was proved that the graduated scale was the only part of the instrument really originated by Maelzel, a formal judgment was recorded in Winkel's favor—too late, however, to do him full justice, for to this day his share in the work is, by common consent, suppressed, and Maelzel is universally regarded as the inventor of the instrument which bears his name.

Artmusic Inc. Novelties

TWO very interesting compositions have been published by Artmusic, Inc., one entitled "Waters of Venice," and the other "Forever Is a Long, Long Time." Both numbers are of exceptional musical merit and of great value not only to those playing for pictures, but also for concert purposes.

"Waters of Venice" is a waltz lento movement, composed by Albert Von Tilzer, opening with an eight-bar introduction, seguing into a melodious movement of thirty-two bars, and finishing with a pathetic refrain, surpassing the best ever written.

The second song, "Forever Is a Long, Long Time," is an expressive melodious ballad by Albert Von Tilzer and is most appropriate for pathetic situations and also for love themes and parting scenes.

Any further information regarding these two numbers will be gladly furnished to our readers upon request.

Help the French Musicians

THE American Friends of Musicians in France announce that they have sent $30,000 to France in the last eleven months that during this time fourteen branches have been formed in different cities of the United States to work in the same cause and under the same name. These branches send their contributions through the parent organization in New York, which in turn sends to Paris through Blair Fairchild, its Paris representative.

It is the hope of the president, Walter Damrosch; the chairman, Mrs. George M. Tuttle; and the executive committee that the year 1919 will result in even larger contributions to this great needed work. The need in France is greater than ever since peace has come. The conditions in the cities of the north evacuated by the Germans pass all description; the actual physical privations are unimaginable. These must be met. Also the young mobilized musicians now gradually being released from military service are exhausted from four years of war. Many of them are shell shocked; all of them wearied physically and mentally. They have need of a period of rest—of a time to gather themselves, together to find new positions and to practice again their instrument, or to find—if not a musical career again—something to provide bread and butter for their families. In addition to this, many musicians have lost the use of their fingers in this war and must re-make their existence. There are all sorts of conditions to be met, and the next year is an important one in the history of our work.

The second of the ill effects of "offset" projection, the distortion of the objects shown, is due to the fact that the light beam coming from the projection machine to the screen is cone shaped and grows rapidly larger in area as the screen is approached. Consequently, if a section is taken through such a light cone at an angle, then, since one edge of the section plane cuts a narrower part of the beam than the other edge, it follows that one edge of the picture will be larger than the other; and further, since the further the cutting section is taken from the lens the larger the projection is, it follows that the same object moving to different positions in the picture will undergo a change in size.

Considering now a special case, which is perhaps the most common case of "offset projection," let us consider that the projecting machine is placed in the balcony of a theatre directly in line with the center of the screen on the stage but considerably above it. Then the light cone will come down to the screen and strike at an angle and the following undesirable effects will be apparent:

1. The top and bottom of the picture will be blurred while the middle will be clear.
2. A body moving from the top to the bottom of the picture will become considerably larger.
3. All vertical objects will be large at the bottom and small at the top—for instance, a man will have big feet and a small head.
4. All objects will be abnormally tall.

When the projecting machine is horizontally in line with the center of the screen, but a considerable distance to one side or the other of it, then the same distortions are present in the picture, but with some difference, as follows:

1. The sides of the picture will be blurred while the middle will be clear.
2. A body moving from one side to the other of the picture will become larger or smaller.
3. All horizontal objects will be larger at one end than at the other.
4. All objects will be abnormally long.

In some theatres the projecting machine is offset both horizontally and vertically, in which case the picture shows evidence of both kinds of distortion described in the special case above.

There have been certain attempts made to correct the bad effects of "offset projection" but, owing to the fact that offset projection is basically wrong, these methods have proved far from successful. These plate corrective methods consist in:

1. Filing the aperture of the projecting machine, and thus giving the light cone a distorted shape previous to its reaching the screen—the result of this distortion and the natural distortion being neutral and thus having a picture with a correct border line. But, it should be noted that this method does not in any way correct the distortion actually within the border.
2. Showing a small picture high upon the screen. The disadvantage of this method is apparent.
3. Tipping the screen one way or the other. This method makes the picture hard on the eyes of the audience and is, consequently, little used.

In conclusion it may be stated that there is at the present time only one way of preventing the ill effects of "offset projection" and that is to eliminate the "offset," in other words, to place the projecting machine perpendicular to the center of the screen.

Theatres Worth While

A hint of the elaborateness of the new Riviera theatre in Chicago is given by these views, the one at the left showing the walls and boxes. To the right is a view of the auditorium and balcony

New Riviera in Chicago Prospers Outside the Loop Section

THE new Riviera theatre, located at Broadway and Lawrence and operated by Messrs. Balaban and Katz, is one of the most beautiful and completely equipped in Chicago. It is situated in the high-class residence and commercial center of the north side, about six miles from the Loop.

The program presented at the Riviera is of the Balaban & Katz standard, consisting of photodrama, symphonic music and soloists of well known merit, in surroundings which in themselves attract patrons to their theatre.

The Riviera is entered through an outer lobby of great height illuminated with crystal fixtures. The side walls are paneled to a height of ten feet with imported marble, above which is a pilaster and column treatment in French Caen stone extremely effective in its proportion and color.

Passing into the inner lobby, stairs on either side rise to the balcony foyer, and one is here impressed by the height and spaciousness increased by the colonnade above, opening to the mezzanine foyer. Caen stone walls are contrasted with the dull green border of the art marble floor, the warm grey of the marble stairs and the dull gold in which the pilasters and cornices above are brought out. Through arched openings on both sides, one descends to the women's and men's retiring rooms, the former in late French Renaissance and the latter with a heavy beamed ceiling, red tile floor, English style. Here one also finds the nursery equipped as a playroom, with a maid in attendance, the convenience of which is obvious.

The inner lobby opens into the lower foyer serving the lower floor. Since the axis of the auditorium is at right angles to that of the lobbies, this broad foyer sweeps away into a grand curve, and its damask panels, mirrored pilasters and harmonious lamps end a pleasing and elegant effect.

From the inner lobby, one ascends to the mezzanine foyer or the grand promenade, the architecture of which is adapted from two of the most famous playhouses in Europe, erected in the seventeenth century and still regarded as architectural gems for their beauty and proportion. The effect of a luxurious drawing room is here achieved with its marble fireplace, its brocaded divans and chairs, its south wall alternated with French beveled mirrors and silk damask panels and its north wall made up of arched openings looking out upon the house. Through these openings an excellent view of the splendid dome in the under side of the balcony is obtained. This dome is illuminated by concealed reflectors and colored lamps at its base, so that, seated in the grand promenade, one can watch the play of colors on the ornamented surface of the dome, colors ranging from deep purple to delicate rose and soft amber. This dome gives a sense of spaciousness and height to the portion of the main floor beneath the balcony that is often lacking and a sense of width and openness to the promenade and includes those seated on the first floor in the musicales held on the mezzanine foyer every afternoon before the program is given.

are effectively illuminated by concealed lights in back of exquisitely colored draperies festooned at the sides and above. Above the balcony the side walls become three arched penetrations with medallions and lunettes adorned with mural paintings.

The main ceiling and that under the balcony are all illuminated with concealed coves and the sounding board, arches over proscenium box recesses and curves of proscenium arch are perforated and have concealed colored lights behind them.

Perhaps the most striking feature of the house is the arrangement of orchestra and stage. The building is so designed as to permit its being converted into a legitimate theatre with full stage at any time in the future and advantage of this fact has been taken in the recessing of most of the orchestra behind the proscenium arch line, and the development of a curved colonnade with surmounting dome on the stage.

Between the columns one looks out upon Italian scenes softly lighted from above the dome, the screen in the center being covered with warm silk hangings appliqued with silver. These curtains pull slowly apart and the picture projected comes out in full brilliancy on the screen. Orchestra and soloist may be illuminated with changing colors, may be in cold moonlight or warm red or soft rose, thrown from above the dome. In fact, the Riviera boasts of the most complete electrical and mechanical equipment in Chicago, the lighting effects having a wide range of brilliancy and color and may be varied to suit the feeling of the production.

The ventilation is thoroughly modern and fully meets the rigid requirements of the city of Chicago as well as providing for a cooling system which will, in the heat of the summer, always give a temperature in the theatre of 70 degrees.

The building stands on an irregular plot of ground about 150 feet square, with stores and lofts on the Broadway side; the auditorium itself, with its rear foyers, being 150 feet long and 90 feet wide, contains upward of 2,000 seats.

The architects are C. W. and George L. Rapp who also designed the Central Park theatre for Balaban & Katz, one of the most palatial homes of the photodrama,

"The Game Is Up," with Ruth Clifford

(Bluebird—Jan. 20. Directed by Elsie Jane Wilson)

THIS picture ought to create a fun-riot, especially where the houses may happen to be full. It is simply a scream. Rapid action of plot, interest, suspense, comedy, and many other elements are intelligently blended in a romantic story. The result is a clean and highly enjoyable entertainment.

The desire of a young girl to appear prosperous forms the basis of the plot. The story first introduces a young man, the only nephew and prospective heir. Before the uncle's departure on a month's trip, he is enjoined to stop dissipating and to reform; otherwise, he will be cut off without a cent. So the young man decides to mend his manners.

The heroine writes her chum that she gained fame as an artist, that she knows the elite of the town, and that she owns an automobile. On her way to Honolulu, her friend stops to see her for a few hours.

Before her arrival, the heroine approaches the young man of the story, and taking him for a chauffeur, bargains with him for a five-hour engagement. The novelty of the situation induces him to accept the bargain. He is ordered to take her to the station, where she meets her friend at the arrival of the train. She takes her to a tea house.

Shortly the visiting friend's chaperon arrives and announces that the boat will not leave for a week. So she asks the heroine to accommodate them for that time. This unexpected turn of affairs places the heroine in a tight situation, and compels her to make a clean breast to the supposed chauffeur. Without divulging his identity, he places the apartments of his uncle at her disposal, giving as an excuse that, since his employer is to be away for a month, there will be no harm done in the move.

It takes too much space to describe the funny situations that arise from this point forward. Suffice it to say that, toward the end, the uncle and the butler are arrested as burglars and handcuffed together. The police is also called in the fray. In the end, the hero marries the heroine, thus proving to his uncle that he has made good.

"Suspicion," with Grace Davidson

(M. H. Hoffman—State Rights—5 Reels)

THE evils of society gossip form the foundation of this attraction. Picture stories have been written upon this theme several times in the past, but this one differs from those by this much—that the leading characters give no justified cause for the gossip, their moral conduct being above reproach; they are simply the victims of scandal mongers. This fact makes you throw your sympathy on their side. That is exactly what every picture is seeking to accomplish.

The nephew, a young man, is seen in company with the wife of his uncle, a doctor, too often. Their innocent friendship sets the tongues of the scandal mongers in motion. The good-hearted doctor has too much faith in his nephew and business partner to believe the stories, but eventually his good judgment is affected. He becomes suspicious.

A strange noise coming from his wife's room causes him to rush in. He arrives in time to see the figure of a man jumping off the balcony. He is sure it is his nephew. The young man as well as his wife are shocked.

Next morning a detective, detailed by the government to watch the doctor's home, to whose care it placed certain plans, arrives and tells the doctor that the night before he had caught a German spy running away from the house. This explains all and proves the doctor's suspicions groundless. He then asks forgiveness.

This picture was run at the Broadway theatre several weeks ago and was reviewed by several of the trade papers as it was shown. There were some bad points in the last one and one-half reel, making the doctor appear weak-minded. Certain suggestions were made then to Mr. M. H. Hoffman which were accepted in good spirit. As now re-edited, the picture shows a vast improvement. On the whole it is a clean picture and full of human sympathy. It is above the average program offering.—P. S. Harrison.

Pathe News No. 102

THIS number of Pathe News, shown to the reviewers by special invitation, contains about one hundred and fifty feet of "Bird-Eye" views of New York City, taken from a huge Caproni aeroplane. It is, without question, the first time that so clear views of the biggest city in the world have been taken. The Metropolitan, Municipal and Woolworth buildings are shown very clearly. They appear as huge poles, projecting above the rest of the buildings. The harbor, with the Statue of Liberty, is also plainly shown.

This feat was accomplished by the Pathe cameramen, Karl W. Sasold and H. D. Blauvelt, carried in a Government triple-propeller Caproni, the last word in aeroplane construction, piloted by Capt. Edward L. Williams, Jr., one of the most daring men in the Government service. It should prove of interest to the people of the country in general, especially to those who have never visited New York.—P. S. Harrison.

"THE CRAVING"—BLUEBIRD

Holds Suspense Clear Through; Staging Well Done

THE chief merits of this contribution are: Ability to hold the spectator in suspense; good acting and intelligent directing; remarkable trick photography, accomplished by accurate double exposure. Diminutive figures of women are seen to dance in a champagne glass, set before a lifesize person also to climb in and out of a bottle, and many other tricks.

The theme of the story is a battle of two minds for supremacy; the one is a Hindoo scientist; the other, an American. In order to accomplish his end, the former works upon a past weakness—craving for drink—of the latter. To this he is assisted by a young woman, held under his control. For a time he succeeds, as he makes the American scientist once more abandon himself to drink. The latter is about to give up as beaten, but a vision strengthens him into resisting. He renews the fight, and by the aid of the young lady, he wins out.

Although the picture deals almost exclusively with drink, it does not produce the same effect such cases usually do to some picturegoers. It is not used simply to show that some one is drunk, but to furnish the cause for the struggle between the two minds; and as the picture has been handled realistically it interests well.

As an entertainment, opinion may vary: Those who believe in the control of the body by the mind will think this is the only sensible picture ever made; those who don't, may be divided—some of them will like it, some of them will not.—Released, Jan. 13.—Length, 5 reels.—P. S. Harrison.

THE CAST

Carroll Wayles.....Francis Ford
Beulah Grey.....Mae Gaston
Ala Kasarib.....Peter Gerald
Dick Wayles.....Duke Worne
Mrs. Wayles.....Jean Hathaway
Story by Francis Ford.
Scenario by Francis Ford.
Directed by Francis Ford and Jack Ford.

CATCH LINES

He fought against a craving for drink and conquered, only to have the man he made of himself turned again into a beast by the perfidy of a man he called his friend.

Containing some of the most remarkable photographic illusions ever cast on the screen.

Written and produced by Francis Ford, the man responsible for so many of the excellent Universal serials. Mr. Ford also appears in the leading role and creates a remarkable character.

In which a beautiful girl is made the instrument of a man's destruction.

Here's the sort of a fight that you have never seen before. It is a fight of will against will—two minds struggling with one another for conquest—most amazing feat ever attempted on the screen.

AD TALK

Novelties are always a welcome thing in the world of pictures and for this reason, if for no other, patrons of the theatre will probably welcome the showing of "The Craving," a Bluebird photoplay, on _____ of _____ week. This picture contains some of the most remarkable photographic work yet revealed and at the same time it tells a story of sure dramatic strength and strong appeal. The photographic work mentioned is introduced when the principal character, Wayles, relates to another the struggle he had in freeing himself from the tentacles of drink. By means of a series of remarkable exposures this part of the picture is made absolutely startling, so realistic is it in effect.

However, it is, perhaps, unfair to devote all space to description of these scenes when the complete whole is so meritorious. It was written and directed by Francis Ford in collaboration with his brother, Jack. Mr. Ford has been responsible for some of the best serials turned out by the Universal Company and is an old favorite with picture followers who saw his one, two, three and five-reel subjects on this program. Mr. Ford has many fine things to his credit but none so fine as "The Craving," which introduces so much that is original and novel.

He also takes the leading part in the picture while he is surrounded by a competent supporting cast headed by Mae Gaston and Peter Gerald.

THE STORY

Carroll Wayles, a scientist, has developed a formula for a powerful explosive. He is particularly careful of it, as it gives promise of proving of value to his government. There arrives in America Ala Kasarib, a scientist from East India, anxious to get possession of the formula for his own selfish ends. With him is Beulah, an English girl, whose father, a British army officer, left her in charge of Ala Kasarib when he died. Ala Kasarib makes a point of cultivating Wayles' acquaintance and finds this an easy task indeed, when he discovers the American's affection for his ward.

One day Ala Kasarib invites Wayles to take a drink, but is refused. Wayles then tells the East Indian that he once was a victim of alcohol and only by the utmost force of will did he raise himself from the gutter where it had laid him. In a series of graphic descriptions he makes this point clear to his auditor.

Unable to secure possession of the formula, Ala Kasarib determines to conquer Wayles through a battle of wills. In his laboratory he sets to work on him and a terrific struggle ensues between the minds of the two men—a struggle as fierce as any physical combat could possibly be. Wayles is defeated and before he has the opportunity to regain himself, Ala Kasarib has made off with the precious formula. Wayles then loses all control of himself, takes to drinking and, finally, as a means of regeneration, reaches the battlefields of Europe. Afterwards, when he regains his old self and realizes what has happened, he goes to Ala Kasarib and a fight takes place. The East Indian is killed by the explosion of the material prepared from the formula. His self respect restored, Wayles then feels free to ask Beulah to become his wife.

SUGGESTIONS

Play up the photographic novelties of this picture. The delirium of a drunkard is shown in a series of startling camera exposures. Besides being an amazing feat from its technical standpoint.

"THE DANGER ZONE"—FOX

Melodrama Sheds Sensationalism, But Little Realism

"THE DANGER ZONE" is a melodrama from head to foot. It is the sort whose chief trait is not realism, but sensationalism.

The theme is of the questionable sort. At the opening, the picture shows the lover quitting the heroine because he becomes tired of her. He goes to Europe; she gains fame as a prima donna. Eventually she marries a rich widower who has a grown daughter.

In time, the villain returns, and finding his former sweetheart at the height of her glory, attempts to renew their old relations. She scorns him.

At a reception, he meets the step-daughter. He makes loves to her, eventually getting her promise to marry him; but when the heroine learns of the plans, she spoils them.

In order to get even, the villain commences to blackmail her under threat of exposure. Several times he gets into her room by climbing the wall. During one of these intrusions, a struggle ensues in which she stabs and kills him. Owing to circumstantial evidence, the crime is fastened upon the step-daughter. She is about to be convicted, when the heroine confesses. The husband is shocked and refuses to have anything to do with her.

Moved by her truthful statements, the jury exonerates her. Her sincerity wins her back the affections of her husband, a reconciliation taking place.

The picture is hardly fit for family patronage.—Released Dec. 29.—Length, 5 reels.—P. S. Harrison.

THE CAST

Lola Dupre.....Madlaine Traverse
Senator Fitzmaurice.....Thomas Holding
Marie, his daughter.....Fritzie Ridgeway
Philip Whitney.....Edward Cecil
Story by Marshall Bruce Bennington.
Scenario by Denison Clift and Adrian Johnson.
Staged by Frank Beal.
Photography by Harry Gersted and J. Dev Jennings.

CATCH LINES

The story of a woman who dared to face the world with the secret of her past exposed—all that an innocent girl might be saved from a similar tragedy.

A jury of twelve men acquitted her in the face of self-confessed story of murder! Why? There is only one answer to that question. See it made into one of the strongest photodramas of the times in "The Danger Zone."

"A Woman's Honor Is Her Life"—thus spoke Lola Dupre, grand opera singer and wife of the distinguished Senator Fitzmaurice, when brought to court to stand trial for the murder of Philip Whitney. "A woman's honor is her life—that's why I killed him." Would the jury acquit her? See the answer in this powerful photoplay.

Lola Dupre, a great opera singer, weds Senator Fitzmaurice, without revealing her past life, in which Philip Whitney, a good-for-nothing, figured prominently. Philip demands money from her or threatens exposure, and for a time Lola accedes to his demands. Whitney makes love to Fitzmaurice's daughter, Marie, but is warned off by Lola. Despite her he continues his advances toward the girl and wins her affection. They plan to elope. On the night of a reception they are awaiting Marie's appearance, Lola goes to her room in search of her and while she is there Whitney comes in and attacks her. A furious struggle ensues, in which the man is killed.

Lola leaves the room and returns to the reception. Marie finds Whitney's body on the floor and is horror-struck. And it so happens that a guest discovers her bending over the body with a dagger in her hand. Lola, however, frees her from all suspicion by telling the truth about the murder. She is brought to trial and, though she confesses the murder before the jury, it acquits her on her plea that "a woman's honor is her life." She returns to her home and she and Fitzmaurice begin a new life away from the shadow of Whitney.

AD TALK

A photoplay of unusual dramatic force and of a lavishment in production and scenic investiture seldom seen will be shown at the theatre on _____ of _____ week in "The Danger Zone," a William Fox picture featuring the emotional artiste Madlaine Traverse. Miss Traverse is one of the newer Fox luminaries, but if anything remained to be proven regarding her ability to portray character, it finds an answer in "The Danger Zone." The story, in its essentials, concerns the familiar figure of the woman with a past, but in treatment and climax it far differs from the ordinary photoplay of this nature.

Miss Traverse appears as Lola Dupre, a noted opera singer who marries a prominent senator without revealing to him her past, a past too intimately connected with one Philip Whitney, a good-for-nothing. How this past rises up to mock her happiness and how she dares to speak out with the truth when an innocent girl becomes involved makes a series of powerful dramatic incidents. Miss Traverse performs rarely in the role of chief importance, while she is brilliantly supported by Thomas Holding, Fritzi Ridgeway and Edward Cecil.

"The Danger Zone" was written by Marshall Bruce Bennington and scenarioized by Adrian Johnson and Dennison Clift.

"A VAGABOND OF FRANCE"—PATHE

French-Made Picture Shows Padding; Titles Need Improving

IF this offering is in any way representative of the French product, our producers, then, have not the monopoly on suggestive pictures; and as far as padding is concerned, I think the French have it all over them. The four reels could have easily been put into less than two.

The sole object of this contribution is to show that the lure of the Open Road, as one of the subtitles states, is strong within the Vagabond (Hobo). The hero, a hobo, works a day or so, whenever he feels like it. During one of those spells, he gets a job on a farm. He meets a woman who gets stuck on him. The usual consequences follow. The lure of the road seizes him again and he leaves.

Twenty years later he returns to find that he has a grown up son. The latter is stuck on the boss's daughter, but her father wouldn't have him for a son-in-law. She takes sick and is about to die when the hobo is asked to cure her. He suggests marriage with his son. After much hesitation, the father consents. The lure of the road again seizes the hobo and he leaves.

Two-thirds of the subtitles could have been left out; of the balance, half of them could have been written in plain every day English, instead of the literal translation from the French. It would be quite an improvement.

The part of the hobo is played by the famous Henri Krauss, who appeared as Jean Valjean in the French version of "Les Miserables."—Released Jan. 26.—Length, 4 reels.—P. S. Harrison.

AD TALK

On _____ of _____ week the management of the _____ theatre will present "The Vagabond of France," a Pathe picture of French manufacture starring the noted Henri Krauss, who made a name for himself in this country through his masterly portrayal of Jean Valjean in Pathe's visualization of Victor Hugo's "Les Miserables." "The Vagabond of France" is a photoplay that can best be described as "different," as different from the ordinary release as night from day, as refreshing as a drop of rain in a desert parched by sun.

Based on a poem "Le Chemineau," its central character is a Vagabond, a man before whom the Lure of the Open Road stretches fascinatingly. He is a wanderer who goes from town to town with a kind word for all and with a question in his eyes when he sees people remaining in the same places all their lives. His romance with Toinon, his departure after it which breaks her heart, his return twenty years later to smooth over the roughen surfaces of a romance in which his son figures, makes a picture of admirable quality, one that is indeed as poetic as the original on which it is based.

M. Krauss also produced the picture. All that the poets have sung of sunny France is seen in his work. There are some beautiful garden spots there, peaceful villages, pretty little farms—a France totally unlike that which we have been seeing in the war weeklies—a France of yesterday and tomorrow. We feel sure that in presenting this picture to our patrons we are offering a genuine treat, for it has in it the appeal that only a true poet could give it.

THE STORY

It is the Lure of the Open Road and the freedom of endless wandering that lures the Vagabond. Of Dull Care he knows nothing, but goes from town to town ever enjoying himself and wondering at the sorrows of those who stay cooped up in the same place all their lives. On one of his journeys he enters a village where Pierre, a sheep farmer, is distracted because a disease has broken out among his stock, threatening to destroy it. And the Vagabond who has learned much in his travels cures the sheep and saves Pierre from poverty. He is then offered the managership of the farm, but he refuses. The Call of the Open Road is upon him.

Even the entreaties of Toinon, a girl who works in the fields and whom he has learned to love, will not stay him. Off he must go again. And Toinon's grief is great, for she had given herself to the Vagabond.

And after twenty years the Vagabond again returns to the village. He sees the populace jeering and stoning a young man who is under the influence of liquor. He helps him to a nearby barn and then learns that this young man, Toinet, is his son. Toinon had married Francois, a tiller of the soil, who had given her boy a name and had loved him as his own. But Pierre, the farmer, knowing the truth of Toinet's parentage had refused him permission to marry his daughter, Aline. The Vagabond learns all this and goes to Pierre, telling him that he can cure men as well as sheep and that he must consent to the marriage that the young people may be happy. And Pierre, believing the Vagabond possessed of some great insight that is denied him, gives his consent. So all is happy again and off goes the Vagabond on the Open Road, leaving behind all those he loves and who love him.

CATCH LINES

See the sunny, smiling France of yesterday and tomorrow—the France of which the poets sing—see it reflected from the screen in a story possessing all the poetry of life and living. "A Vagabond of France" will be here when pictures of tomorrow are gone.

Produced by and starring Henri Krauss, the distinguished French artist who was seen before in Pathe's "Les Miserables."

"A Vagabond of France" was produced in that dear land across the water. It shows the old France—the France of sunny fields, pretty little farms and lanes awinding. If you miss it you will be passing up one of the real treats the screen has to offer.

The Call of the Open Road was upon the Vagabond—neither Love nor Home could stay him—and though he broke hearts he never remained behind—the Lure of the Open Called Him.

After twenty years he returned to the town of his romance. He saw the villagers jeering a young man who was under the influence of liquor. He helped him home and discovered that he was his own son!

SUGGESTIONS

Strive to bring out the poetic appeal that lies in this picture. There may be some among exhibitors who think that the public is not attracted by this sort of entertainment. Personally, we think those who entertain that opinion are wrong. Even a gangster can be moved to tears by a simple little verse and the toughest specimens have been seen poring over it. So bring out this poetic side of the picture. Tell them of the Vagabond who heard the Call of the Open Road and answered. There are a lot of people who would be attracted by that line alone.

Henri Krauss will be remembered by some as Jean Valjean in Pathe's "Les Miserables" and as this picture was recently reissued it might do for you to mention it. Also bring out the fact that the picture was made in France and that it shows us a sunny, cheery France, away from the strife and hell of the battlefield. The France the picturegoer of today knows is shell-torn and wasted. If you can bring out this contrast in your advertising you will find that it will attract a good many people. They will be curious for this reason alone.

"THE SILVER KING"—PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT

Melodrama That Offers Much Chance for Criticism

"THE SILVER KING" is a melodrama of the sort that demands much of your credulity. Perhaps spectators who derive their pleasure from sensational situations, irrespective of whether they are based on realism or not, may enjoy the picture; discriminating ones, however, will find much in it to criticize. For instance: It is improbable that the crooks, while in their hiding place, would be dividing their loot with the windows uncovered. Of course, this is done for the story's convenience, but it is not realism. Much reliance is also placed on the element of chance as well as the overheard conversation.

As a production, it possesses no extraordinary merits that may recommend it to a searching eye. The racing scenes are too amateurish to escape notice, in view of the fact that too many good ones have been produced in the last several years. They appear either as "dupes" or as having been printed out of an old negative.

The weakest point in the whole structure, however, is the fact that the leading characters get the worst of it throughout the picture, only to be rewarded towards the end. The hero is made to believe he has committed a murder. Under this impression, he goes away to escape justice. His wife, the heroine, gets the news of her husband's death in the wreck of the train he has boarded, ignorant of the fact he had jumped from it previously. She is dispossessed of all property to pay her husband's debts, and lives in poverty. While her child is sick, she is about to be evicted from the house for failure to pay the rent, when her husband returns, once more wealthy, bringing the much belated happiness. By chance he detects the real murderers, thus exonerating himself.—Released Jan. 12.—Length, 5 reels.—P. S. Harrison.

AD TALK

A picture of unusual interest and one which we feel confident that all our patrons will desire to see is "The Silver King," starring William Faversham, which will be shown at the theatre on _____ of _____ week. Here the picturegoer is offered a great star in a great play, and by great, we mean exactly what we say. If we weren't so modest we would elaborate on that statement and say the greatest star in the greatest play, for both Faversham and "The Silver King" have been seen and admired by thousands of people on both sides of the Atlantic.

Mr. Faversham is an actor of note. An Englishman by birth, he made his debut on the London stage in 1885 and his first American appearance in 1887. Since that time he has risen to a position of enviable importance on the stage. "The Silver King" was written by Henry Arthur Jones and remains as one of the best of this noted playwright's works. As adapted for the screen by Burns Mantle, well-known dramatic critic, and produced under the direction of George Irving, one of the leaders in the art, the picture stands as a material testimonial of the brains that created it.

The story is rich in suspense, color and originality and Mr. Faversham, in the role of the English squire who flees to America, believing himself guilty of murder, creates a screen character that will live long. Barbara Castleton appears in the opposite role while a selected cast of competent film players lends support. "The Silver King" will be shown on _____. Don't forget the dates.

THE STORY

Because Wilfred Denver, an English country squire, was successful in gaining the hand of a girl, Geoffrey Ware nurses a revenge against him. Gaining his confidence, he prevails upon him to bet his all on a certain horse, and of course the horse loses and Denver is left penniless. Afterwards Ware, in the guise of a good fellow, plies Denver with liquor and then takes him home in an intoxicated condition to his wife and two children. Here he gloats over the ruin he has wrought to Mrs. Denver but, unknown to him, Denver's now reviving brain catches the drift of the conversation. He procures a revolver and follows Ware to his home with intent to kill.

In the meantime, burglars have broken into Ware's home and are rifling the safe when Denver appears. They pounce on him and administer a good dose of chloroform. When Ware enters a moment later he struggles with the thugs and is shot and killed. Then when Denver revives and sees the dead body of his enemy stretched on the floor he believes that he committed the crime. He bids farewell to his wife and children and makes for the coast in a train. Disguised in the clothes of a seaman, he jumps off the train which, only a few minutes later, is wrecked. His apparent death is thus established. Denver goes to the United States and amasses a fortune. He returns to England under an assumed name in time to save his family from poverty.

He gets a clue of the real murderer of Ware and finds himself innocent and freed of all shadow of crime when Corkett, a former servant of Ware's, confesses to having seen the whole episode.

CATCH LINES

William Faversham, noted actor—"The Silver King," noted play—don't miss this rare combination. Such a combination has never been seen on the screen before. You will find it full worthy of the trouble you take in getting into the theatre.

Wilfred Denver came to, his brain in a cloud. He had recollected going to Ware's house with intent to kill him. He had taken a pistol for this purpose. And suddenly he discovered himself lying on the floor of Ware's library and Ware lay beside him dead! Was he the killer or wasn't he?

"The Silver King," by Henry Arthur Jones, the noted English playwright. It is one of the best of this dramatist's works and reveals a strikingly original plot treated in highly skilled fashion.

"THE GOLD CURE"—METRO

Viola Dana's Cleverness and Much Foolishness Make This a Continual Laugh

"THE GOLD CURE"—whatever the title means we have not the slightest notion—is the sort of picture that makes one delightfully irresponsible. It is so crowded with "foolishment" and offers Viola Dana such a wide opportunity to show her ability as a comedienne—an opportunity that she grasps to its fullest extent—that one is just obliged to sit back and he-haw after the manner of the mule.

Personally we have never seen such a clever impersonation of a male inebriate given by a woman—for that matter we have never seen any at all—that is so down-right funny and altogether void of that which is offensive. In clothes too large for her and with the benefit of hidden wires Miss Dana swings around in a fashion that intoxicates the spectator with laughter.

As for the plot it means little and amounts to less. But here after all is one of those pictures that manages to catch the spectator in just the right frame of mind, whatever that frame of mind happens to be. It is as indescribable as a crazy-quilt, but as amusing as they can possibly make 'em.—Length, 5 reels.—Released Jan. 13.—Peter Milne.

CATCH LINES

Viola Dana's characterization will live as one of the rarest pieces of comedy ever contributed to the screen.

Here is a picture which just defies you to pull a long face. You can come prepared to frown, but you'll go away with a few smile wrinkles in your face.

Annice strewed tacks all over the road in the hope that an eligible young man would come along and get a punctured tire and a heart. He got the former and a few broken limbs—and Annice got her wish only in a way she never expected.

"The Evils of Drink Exposed"—has rather a lurid sound, hasn't it? But in "The Gold Cure" you will see some of them exposed from a totally new viewpoint. The picture is so thoroughly amusing that it will live long in your memory.

AD TALK

Viola Dana will appear at the ——— theatre on ——— of ——— week in her latest Metro picture, "The Gold Cure." In this subject the star appears as a lovelorn girl of a little country village who strews the turnpike with tacks, hoping that some eligible young man's tire and heart will be punctured. Just what this little act of scattering tacks over macadam leads to is all amusingly told in "The Gold Cure," and Miss Dana gives a performance that is really way out of the ordinary. During one phase of the picture she is obliged to dress up in men's clothes. Now the ordinary actress is, as a rule, not at all likable so attired. She attempts to be clever and is not, and she thinks her disguise is really perfect when the only one it would fool would be a blind man.

Miss Dana's performance, however, is rich in comedy. She is well aware of the ridiculous idea of it and when attired as a member of the opposite sex she plays the role for its comedy and for its full worth. But more than this. While she assumes this role she is obliged to enter an asylum where they make a practice of curing drunkards, and to gain an entrance she feigns just a slight "hang-over" as it were. She plays this role excellently and with not the slightest trace of offense. In fact during this series of scenes she does some of the cleverest comedy work that it has ever been our privilege to present on the screen of the ——— theatre.

In "The Gold Cure" the star is supported by John McGowan, Bill Davidson and others.

THE STORY

Annice Paish discovers to her sorrow that one of her acquaintances has walked off with the only eligible man in Plainville as her husband. The situation takes on a serious aspect when she looks ahead and sees herself doomed to lead a single life unless she take some action. So action she does take and that hurriedly. Her first move is to strew the automobile road with tacks. Then she sits in the ditch and awaits developments. These occur embodied in the manly form of Vance Duncan. Vance is speeding along the road at a merry clip when one of the tacks finds its mark and as a consequence he is stretched on the ground with a broken leg, a broken arm and a broken head.

Of course Annice is much perturbed and she takes the young fellow to her home with the assistance of Cord, a detective who had been following Vance from the city. Cord insists that Vance is a "booze comedian, a rum hound" and what not, and that his Uncle Mike wants him confined in a sanitarium. All this Annice refuses to believe, but then Uncle Mike appears on the scene himself and proves to be a very reasonable sort of a fellow and very young. The detective, however, kidnaps Vance and has him placed in an asylum for the cure of drink and the bringing on of insanity. Annice gets him out of the fix by disguising herself as a little inebriate and then getting the keeper of the place under guard. Afterwards another Uncle Mike comes into view and tells the detective just what he thinks of him for following the wrong man. And Annice becomes Mrs. Uncle Mike, while her friend, Edna, becomes Mrs. Vance Duncan.

SUGGESTIONS

Play up Miss Dana's performance, as it is one of the cleverest she has ever given us. If, in the stills, you can find a picture of her in her comedy make-up by all means use this in your advertising copy. At any rate play up her acting. "The Gold Cure" is a picture that you can kid. It is frankly an affair of foolishness, but withal amusing from one end to the other. The director "played" with it and really kidded his own picture. Follow out the same line in your advertising. Have a little fun with the picture yourself. Don't take it altogether seriously and then, perhaps, you will attract more than the usual amount of attention.

You might mention for the benefit of your feminine patrons that "The Gold Cure" is an adaptation of a story by Alexine Heyland which appeared in The Woman's Home Companion.

"THE SILVER KING"

this production. You might also get their endorsement of the production and so broaden your appeal to take in people who do not ordinarily go to the pictures. However, the mere display of Paversham's name and the name of the play will attract this portion of the public. And for that matter, it should attract all sorts of people. Paversham has been before the public so long and the play has so often been produced that the names are instantly recognizable as great.

You might play up Burns Mantle's name as scenario writer after that of the author himself. He is well known with the theatre public of the United States through his articles contributed to magazines. There has seldom been such a combination of talent united in the production of a single picture. It certainly can stand a lot of advertising from this viewpoint.

"THE BLUFFER"—WORLD

An Expose of Society's Seamy Side That Is Thoroughly Entertaining

THIS is probably the best picture in which June Elvidge has appeared of late and this for the simple reason that the part of Sybil, a young woman who endeavors to bluff her way through society on her reputation, is well suited her. This exceptional character, the story in which she is the center of attraction, and the continuity were created by Clara S. Beranger, long one of the World staff writers. It is by all odds one of the cleverest scripts of Miss Beranger's many clever ones. Her story has an original twist, it is developed surely and her treatment of the central character, so well brought into expression by the star, is such that it attracts more than a modicum of sympathy.

The story narrows down to a relation of events concerning society's seamy side that is thoroughly fascinating. What theme that deals with incident beyond the range of vision possessed by the ordinary mortal is not, for that matter? The story has been set in a variety of settings, all of them suitable, while the few exteriors are pretty.

Miss Elvidge is supported by a strong cast of World players that includes Frank Mayo, George MacQuarrie, Irving Cummings, Muriel Ostriche and Jack Davidson.—Length, 5 reels.—Released Jan. 20.—Peter Milne.

CATCH LINES

Sybil bluffed her way through life successfully until John Moran called for a show down. He didn't mind a bluff, but he despised a cheat! Sybil had gone a step too far. See what it led to in "The Bluffer."

Sybil plunged in society without a penny. It was her idea to pick a rich husband. Wallace Duncan, once a millionaire and reputed rich, plunged in society without a penny. It was his idea to pick a rich wife! Fate willed that Sybil and Wallace should marry. Their life was far from being perfectly happy. But see their interesting domestic career in "The Bluffer."

Sybil had always gotten away with a bluff because no one had ever called for a show down, but when this call came she was not ready to meet it. See what happened in the dramatic climax of "The Bluffer."

AD TALK

"The Bluffer," a World picture starring June Elvidge, will be seen at the _____ theatre on _____ of _____ week. As the title implies the central character of this picture is a woman who goes through life with a false front—a bluffer. Sybil, a young woman reared in luxury and wealth, is suddenly cast on her own resources; she decides to trade on her reputation in society and bluff it out with the idea of securing a rich husband. But fate wills that she should secure a husband in exactly the same financial condition as herself. It is on their honeymoon that the couple takes stock of its united finances and discovers the horrid truth. And then husband and wife, despising each other, go on and bluff some more.

The complications that arise from the game these two make of life are many and dramatic and of the utmost interest. June Elvidge appears to splendid advantage in the leading part. The role fits her well and she plays it with spirit. Frank Mayo is the husband, while in a large cast Irving Cummings, George MacQuarrie and Muriel Ostriche are prominent.

"The Bluffer" was written and prepared for the screen by Clara Beranger, one of the mainstays of the World scenario department for a long time. She is one of the best equipped writers in the business, as "The Bluffer" very well proves. Under the direction of Travers Vale the picture has given a thorough and realistic production, while the scenes are particularly pretty.

THE STORY

Sybil's father dies, leaving her without a cent. Reared in luxury and unequipped to work her way through life, she seeks advice from Richard Vaughan, her late father's partner. Richard, because his partner had betrayed him with a big bluff and because he is bitter toward his memory, caustically advises Sybil to bluff her way along as her father had done. This idea strikes her as worthy of consideration and shortly afterwards, with her credit reinforced by a loan-shark, she plunges into a whirl of society life with the idea of catching a rich husband. There comes into her life Wallace Duncan, once a millionaire, but now utterly bankrupt, who is playing the same game of bluff with the idea of securing a rich wife. And so the two are married and on the honeymoon they make the sad discovery that they have no money.

So they decide to bluff again, and this time they work at cards and secure some money through little "friendly" games of bridge. Then appears John Moran, millionaire from the West, desirous of breaking into society. He is so fascinated with Sybil that he plays right into their hands. Finally he discovers their financial condition and their bluff and takes them west with him as paid social acquaintances. He believes that some day Sybil will submit to him. But Sybil's life has begun to appear before her in all its sordidness and Moran's sweet young daughter has been partly responsible for this awakening and the same Richard Vaughan, who has reappeared, accomplishes the rest. Duncan, however, has become a regular reprobate and plunges in various shady deals. Moran, soured by his failure to win Sybil attacks her, but is restrained by Vaughan. Then Moran and Duncan fight and the result is the death of the worthless husband. And Vaughan, seeing that he is to blame for the whole catastrophe because of his suggestion to Sybil, takes her away to begin a new life.

"JANE GOES A-WOOING"—PARAMOUNT

Care Given in Producing It, But Story Is Not Unusual

MUCH care has been given the production end of this picture. The dresses worn by the women are pretty, and the interior settings are elaborate. As an entertainment, however, it is not much above the average, because of the weak story. The sympathy, for one thing, is badly divided; too many of the characters lay claim to it, causing a constant switching. The logic, for another, is wanting; no one will believe that a person will throw millions away, just to show a good heart. It is not in human nature.

The acting of Miss Martin, added to her natural charms, will, no doubt, help to entertain picture goers, especially her followers; but it would be of more advantage if she could be supplied with heart appealing stories.

The plot presents the heroine as a stenographer of limited means. She is willed her employer's entire fortune. The nephew is cut off without a cent. Out of pity for him, and because she thinks she loves him, she makes it appear that the fortune is his, but is disappointed to find him unsteady in love. In the end, she tears the will and goes back to her sweetheart who always loved her faithfully.

AD TALK

Vivian Martin will be presented in her latest Paramount picture entitled "Jane Goes a-Wooing," at the _____ theatre on _____ of _____ week. This is said to be one of the prettiest pictures in which Miss Martin has appeared in her long career of pretty pictures. It was written for her particular talents by Edith M. Kennedy, one of the most accomplished scenarists in the business. When one stops to consider the wide latitude of her work, it is no wonder that she is able to write such downright delightful little pictures. Many of Constance Talmadge's recent scenarios bore her name, while "The Cruise of the Make Believes," in which Lila Lee, Paramount's new star appeared, was an original story of hers. "Mirandy Smiles," Miss Martin's immediately previous Paramount picture, was also written by Miss Kennedy. And now it's "Jane Goes a-Wooing," one of the best yet.

The picture was guided through the various stages of production by George Melford, a director who has had even a wider experience than Miss Kennedy. His handling of the pretty star is evident in the fact that the photoplay is one of real polish from first to last. Added to his good work, there is that of Paul Perry, the photographer, to be considered. The camera man is always an important cog in the production machine and Mr. Perry's work is never anything but the best.

Niles Welch, Casson Ferguson and Spottiswoode Aitken are chief in Miss Martin's support in this picture. All things considered, it is quite apparent that none but the best of talent was expended on it.

THE STORY

Jane Neill is a fairly competent stenographer with a penchant for chewing gum and building castles in the air. As is so often the case with dreamers, she neglects to see that which is beautiful and lying right at her feet. Not that Micky Donovan, keeper of the "White House" lunch cart is exactly beautiful himself, but he does offer Jane a beautiful love. However, Jane puts him off. She seeks to improve her finances that she may the better provide for the twins she is obliged to care for. So she secures a position as stenographer to David Lyman, an eccentric old millionaire, a nervous wreck, who is bound to write the great American play before he passes on to other worlds. His ideas are taking shape in the form of a morality play and it is to transcribe his thoughts that Jane is hired.

She meets the old gentleman's heir, Monty Lyman, a young gad-about, much pursued by a society girl named Nita, who likes his prospects. Monty takes an immediate interest in Jane and she in him, but before long Monty's pranks seriously offend the old gentleman and after making a new will he conveniently dies, leaving his fortune to Jane.

Jane doesn't exactly know what to do with it. It isn't hers, she thinks. But to see whether Monty will get to work she pretends that she is fully set on keeping it. And Monty doesn't make a success of working at all and ends up by proposing to Jane. And then all of a sudden Jane thinks of Micky Donovan and his real love for her. What a man he is compared to Monty! So she tears up her will and goes back to the "White House."

Written by Edith M. Kennedy, one of the most accomplished scenarists in the art. Her work here is visible in every one of the pretty scenes that go to make up the complete photoplay.

Vivian Martin, the charming young Paramount star, supported by two well-known leading men, Casson Ferguson and Niles Welch.

SUGGESTIONS

Play up Miss Martin's name for every picture in which she has appeared. She has appealed strongly to a certain type of picturegoer and her name is regarded as something of a synonym for this character of entertainment. If it is not so regarded and her pictures are successful in your house it is up to you to make it so regarded.

Miss Martin has Casson Ferguson and Niles Welch, both well-known leading men, in her support, while Edith M. Kennedy, author, and George Melford, director, represent the best in their respective branches of the business.

Jane, a pretty stenographer, has one object in life—to marry money. Yet, when the rich, young Apollo she loves, "pops"—she turns him down cold! How could she do it!

"HER INSPIRATION"—METRO.

May Allison in Average Romantic Drama

GEORGE D. BAKER and Tom J. Geraghty collaborated on the story and scenario, "Her Inspiration," which serves as a starring vehicle for May Allison on the Metro program. The writers cannot claim originality in either subject matter or plot construction, but they can lay claim to having furnished an ideal Allison play—the kind she did so well in when co-starring with the late Harold Lockwood. It is light as to dramatic strength, with no "heavy" moments interpolated and very little tenseness to make you grip your seats, but there is a real surprise in the climax which leaves you more than satisfied with the five reels of screen drama.

Either one or both of the authors made a bad break in the story's continuity for at about the beginning of the fourth reel the story ends for all intents and purposes. It is at this time that hero and heroine embrace and avow their love for each other. Herbert Heyes as the young playwright is a bit too anxious at times to "act." Charles Elder, Allen D. Sears and Jack Brammall, handle character parts with cleverness. reviewer recalls some clever work by Mr. Heyes opposite Jewel Carmen. His work in this picture is not in the same class. With few exceptions, the action is laid in the open and the cameraman has "shot" some beautiful exteriors.

AD TALK

A light romantic drama with plenty of comedy touches and a good comedy twist for a finish will be seen at the theatre when the latest Metro feature, "Her Inspiration," starring May Allison is shown on _____ of _____ week. This was written for Miss Allison by Tom J. Geraghty and George D. Baker and is one of the most enjoyable pictures turned out by this prolific pair. Miss Allison appears as pretty as ever in the role of Kate Kendall while others who contribute to the good of the picture are Herbert Heyes, Allen Sears, Charles Edler and Jack Brammall.

"Her Inspiration" starts off with Harold Montagu, a young playwright, receiving his most recent work of art back from the hands of the manager with the opinion that it lacks atmosphere. He is told that, seeing it is a story of Kentucky moonshiners, he had better go to the Kentucky mountains instead of bar-rooms for his atmosphere, it being more invigorating in the southern locality. So off he goes. Now, of course Harold didn't know that Kate Kendall, an actress, had—but oh shucks! We promised not to tell. It's such an interesting little secret, though, that it persists on trying to leak out every once in a while.

However, now that we've gone this far without letting the great American public in on it we'll keep it to ourselves and let the screen give it away, which it does in a much prettier fashion than we know of. "Her Inspiration" is pretty and clever and nice. You'll like it.

THE STORY

Harold Montagu, a young playwright, is told by the manager that his latest opus lacks proper atmosphere and as it is a moonshine story, Harold takes himself off to the Kentucky mountains, there to meet the originals of the counterparts in his play. He becomes acquainted with such denizens of the mountains as Curt Moots, Big Hank and Looney Lige—and last, but not by any manner of means least, with Kate Kendall—a wild mountain crew all of them—just the right people to contribute to Harold that atmosphere he needs to put his play over.

Of course the moonshiners regard him suspiciously, particularly Big Hank, who sees him making progress in a romance with Kate and doesn't like him at all. Big Hank tries to interpret every move made by Harold as that of a revenue officer. The others, however, accept him for what he is. Looney Lige, a half-witted and self-constituted guardian of Kate, nurses a hatred for Big Hank that is augmented into a fury when he sees him trying to kiss the girl. He threatens to go for the revenue officers and give away the secrets of the illicit still.

Soon after, twelve revenue officers arrive. Harold, not knowing who they are, directs them to the hiding place of the moonshiners. Big Hank sees him and decides that he must hang. He is only prevented by the arrival of Looney Lige at the head of the band of officers. After this, Harold decides that he has atmosphere enough and that he must return to the city, because it would never do to marry an uncouth girl of the mountains, no matter how much he loved her. As he is watching the rehearsal of his play the manager requests that he meet the leading lady—Kate Kendall who, strange enough, was also seeking atmosphere!

CATCH LINES

May Allison in a new Metro picture that is a thoroughly enjoyable combination of romance, drama and comedy. It's infectious, it is, and if you don't like it, something will be radically wrong with your system.

The playwright went to the Kentucky mountains for atmosphere for his moonshine play. He didn't figure on the leading lady going down and living the part of a raw, unlettered "gal" and her performance as such was so realistic that it completely took him in. And then after that he took her in as his wife. You'll enjoy this romantic comedy of the mountains.

He thought she was unversed—utterly unversed—no education—no knowledge of clothes—no experience—no anything—but that was only because she was a good actress!

Every once in a while a picture comes along that is so delightful it touches a spot long left untouched. That's how this picture acts on one. You'll laugh and smile and guess all the way through.

SUGGESTIONS

This film doesn't offer you anything strikingly original that you can do in an advertising way. Our advice is to "play" with it in your ad copy. Use light language in speaking of it and make sure to score the fact that it is a light romantic comedy-drama with a surprise finish. Feature Miss Allison, and if you can get hold of one of the cuts reproduced on this page use it as a center for your copy. It is so well done that it will surely attract attention.

"UNDER THE TOP"—ARTCRAFT

Fred Stone's New Artcraft Stands up Better Than His First

ONE can't tell whether the dream idea has been thought of when the story was first written or after the picture was completed. Whatever the case, it has been made clever use of; as, underneath this cover, several unpardonable sins against the laws of logic have been committed. The continuity, in the other hand, is badly cut up; this is a fault which could have very easily been remedied in editing. For instance, about six hours are required to travel the distance of twenty-five miles on an automobile, with no excuse whatever to offer for such a delay.

The story belongs to the dime-novel class. It spreads in all directions, eventually managing to get together; but, in spite of all these shortcomings, the picture will entertain certain classes of people, especially the children, because an entire circus is used to stage it. This affords the star an opportunity to perform some acrobatic stunts, although, at times, they are forced. A little "pruning" could help a great deal.

The star is given a booby part, but it is hard for him to convince any one that he is a country fellow. He looks too polished.

The picture is clean. As an entertainment it is a little better than "The Goat."

AD TALK

Fred Stone, the acrobatic comedian, who scored such a success at the theatre in his first Artcraft photoplay, "The Goat," will return on _____ of _____ week in his second picture, a story of circus life, entitled "Under the Top." He is seen in the role of a house painter in a little town by the name of Three Forks and from childhood he has loved Pansy O'Neill, a girl of the circus that yearly comes to the town. And one time when it makes the town Jimmie (Mr. Stone) discovers that Pansy has inherited the circus from her father. And then enters plenty of villainy and Jimmie has a hard time of it protecting little Pansy from the various attempts made to marry her off to those desiring control of the circus.

Of course Jimmie and Pansy emerge from the conflict safe and sound when it is all over, but not before the observer has been given a few thrills. These are provided both by the story itself and the opportunities that the star so daringly takes to perform stunts. At one time when he is being chased hither and yon all over the tents during the progress of the show he performs on the wires, the trapeze, uses the spring board to leap over the backs of horses and elephants and delights the audience in the picture who believe him part of the performance. In fact "Under the Top" is a delightful mixture of comedy, acrobatics and human interest.

Mr. Stone's vehicle was written by John Emerson and Anita Loos, while Ella Hall, James Cruze, Sylvia Ashton, Guy Oliver and Charles Ogle contribute support of a sterling quality.

THE STORY

Jimmie Jones, who was born with a smile, is a house painter in the little town of Three Forks. When he was a boy and the circus came to town he fell in love with Pansy O'Neill, daughter of the owner of the circus, and years later when the show again makes the town, Jimmie renews the acquaintance and the romance. But there is villainy afoot. Pansy has inherited the circus at her father's death and her two rascally guardians, with foul play in mind, leave the little lady with Lotta Crust, a former performer of the ring, who lives in Three Forks. Lotta has a well formulated plot of her own, by which she plans to marry Pansy to her very flashy son Foxy, who,

be it known, is a gentleman of the light fingered fraternity.

Jimmie, however, enters a protest, a protest which Pansy rather likes. However, the guardians, on learning of Lotta's plot, put in an appearance again. It is their plan to force her to marry one of them—either one, for all they care about is getting complete control of the circus. To put this plan through they hypnotize Pansy, but Jimmie again interferes. He secures the marriage license and plans to keep it until three o'clock in the afternoon, the time set for Pansy to come out of the trance. The guardians let out the cry of "Hey, Rube"—the circus riot call—when they discover that Jimmie has gone off with the license, and as a result the canvasmen pursue the house painter all over the circus tents. He manages to evade them all by using the trapeze and the slack wires and at three o'clock he quits his antics and lets himself be captured. When Pansy learns of her guardians' plot she calls upon the hands to drive them out—and she, of course, is happy with Jimmie.

CATCH LINES

More comedy and more acrobatics from Fred Stone! You remember him only a short while back in "The Goat." He invaded a picture studio then. Here he invades a circus and puts it on its feet and marries the little lady that owns it. And speaking the circus! Well, Fred Stone is a complete three-ringer himself.

"Hey, Rube!"—the circus riot call. And out into the ring dashed Jimmie Jones with a coveted marriage license in his hand. After him came an angry pack of circus hands! But Jimmie was bound to keep that license until three o'clock, and keep it he did, even though he had to jump horses, swing on a trapeze and walk slack wires. Jimmie did some acrobatics and why shouldn't he, for he's none other than Fred Stone!

SUGGESTIONS

You have a big name to plug in connection with this production. Accentuate the star's ability as an acrobatic comedian. You can go the limit on this angle, for it is in stuff like that he shines. Dress all your ad copy up with a circus background or any design that brings out the atmosphere of the circus will suffice. Don't forget the names of Emerson and Loos in your billing. Here is a pair that has been responsible for some of Fairbanks' successes, but they aren't stopping there. They are adding to their laurels with each succeeding day. Recently they have been identified with the Shirley Mason-Ernest Truex pictures. You might mention these, as they are said to have been successes in most all localities.

Ella Hall, opposite Stone in this picture, was once a Bluebird star. She is well known and you might profit by making mention of her name also.

point, the product of this drunkard's brain is by no means uninteresting, consisting, as it does, of lots of pretty women. Get this over to your patrons.

If you live in a town where there is a wet-dry fight going on and you care to ally yourself with the dries they will, no doubt, be eager to support this production as being propaganda for their side. There is no preaching in it, to be sure, but this makes it all the more valuable to them.

"THE CALL OF THE SOUL"—FOX

"Wronged Girl" Story, with Few Moments That Appeal

A YOUNG hospital doctor and a young nurse go picnicing. The latter falls from a rock and hurts herself. She faints. Here's where the "wronged girl" stuff comes in.

The doctor joins a polar expedition. While in the North Seas, the leader is injured and is compelled to return to the States. The heroine, who in the mean time has given birth to a child, is called to nurse him. He falls in love with her, and, after a persistent wooing, they marry. She tells him nothing of the child.

The doctor, who was left in charge of the expedition, now returns broken in health. He is welcomed by the former leader, and is asked to remain in his home until he regains his health.

The child contracts pneumonia and the mother is called in a hurry. Remorse stricken for the wrong he had done to her, and seeking for a chance to atone, the doctor begs to be allowed to attend the case.

Missing his wife, the husband learns where she went and follows her there. He is shocked and demands to know. She tells him all. Angered, he returns to the house to wreak vengeance on the doctor. The latter explains that she is innocent; thereupon, he returns to his wife and asks forgiveness. In the mean time, the doctor kills himself.

The story is improbable and the kind not fit for family patronage. Towards the last part of the story, some of the situations are heart appealing, but I doubt whether they can impart good taste to so repulsive a theme for many a picture goer.—Released Jan. 19.—Length, 5 reels.—P. S. Harrison.

CATCH LINES

Gladys Brockwell in a role of many emotional opportunities. If you enjoy real acting in a story that amounts to something—a story that you don't forget as soon as you leave the theatre—see this brilliant actress in "The Call of the Soul."

Miss Brockwell has given us many great performances but it may safely be said that her portrayal of Barbara Deming in "The Call of the Soul" surpasses any other characterization she has contributed to the screen.

The story of a Woman and Two Men—a story that presents a living, sustaining series of thrilling incidents—a story that you will never forget. Don't fail to see "The Call of the Soul."

It was the Call of the Soul that excluded tragedy from the lives of Barbara and her husband, a man of the strictest principles.

AD TALK

"The Call of the Soul," with Gladys Brockwell as star, will be shown at the theatre on _____ of _____ week. This is an unusual picture in many respects for, although it treats of a story well known in the worlds of fiction and pictures, it is developed so realistically and without recourse to any of the established tricks it takes on a novel aspect. Miss Brockwell appears resplendent in the stellar part of Barbara Deming, a nurse. Miss Brockwell is one of our best emotional actresses and her work here only goes to prove the point in a particularly forceful manner. The support she receives from William Scott as the doctor and Charles Clary as the explorer, Neil McClintock, is of an exceptionally high order.

"The Call of the Soul" tells of Barbara Deming, who was taken advantage of by Dr. Clayton at a moment when neither of the two were aware of what they were doing. The doctor offers to marry her but a revulsion of feeling causes her to hate the very sight of him. A son is born to her and she keeps him in secret. Later she marries an Arctic explorer, an intimate friend of Dr. Clayton's. It may be seen from this mere outline of the beginning of the picture that it promises a denouement of unusual force. And this promise is well fulfilled. To relate the climax here, however, would be to spoil one of the best pieces of entertainment ever offered at the _____ theatre.

SUGGESTIONS

This is a picture that lends itself well to that sort of advertising in which you tell part of the story up to some strong dramatic climax and then leave the rest to the imagination. This is one of the most effective ways of advertising, whether it be a play, book or a motion picture. If you haven't tried it before do so in connection with "The Call of the Soul." A glance at the synopsis will give you the opportunity to find one of these crises, if you are not able to see the picture yourself before its exhibition at your theatre.

Play up Miss Brockwell's performance, for it is one of the best she has yet given the screen, it is said. Her popularity is increasing with each release and as she is one of the best in her art she deserves real featured prominence.

THE STORY

Barbara Deming, a nurse, and Dr. Clayton, visit an island on a picnic and are marooned there. The rowboat is carried away by the tide. Clayton builds a fire in a cave but until Barbara falls and meets with a slight injury she will not enter. As Clayton is reviving her he is struck by her beauty and appeal and passionately kisses her. When morning comes he has a thousand pardons to offer for what he has done but the very sight of him is repugnant to her. Later they are rescued and soon afterwards Clayton leaves to join the Arctic expedition of Neil McClintock. While he is away Barbara becomes a mother. She puts the child in charge of a woman she trusts. She loves the boy dearly.

McClintock breaks down on the trip and returns, leaving Clayton in charge. Barbara is assigned as his nurse and he falls in love with her. She loves him but thinks him too hard. But in time she learns that he is not so rough as his exterior would indicate and she marries him. Later Clayton returns and is invited to the McClintock home to rest up. One night Barbara is asked to the bedside of her child. He is sick with a fever. Clayton attends him and says there is little hope. But when Barbara tells the boy that she is his mother he brightens up and regains his health. Clayton, still stricken with remorse and knowing that McClintock suspects something, tells him the whole story, exonerating Barbara of all blame and adding that she has never loved any man but her husband. And McClintock takes his wife and her son back to his home.

Madlaina Traverse is a star new to the Fox banner and by way of introducing her to your public you might make the showing something of a special occasion. Circularize all your regular patrons, telling of her making her bow under the Fox management and, particularly to your women patrons, bring out the character of the story. Dwell also on the emotional ability of the actress.

Follow this plan out in your newspaper advertising and in any special advertising you may do in your lobby. Miss Traverse is to do more pictures for Fox, and you might as well start off with a splash if you intend to book her future productions. You will benefit, without a doubt, if you do make an "event" in a case like this. It is in way of "introducing" your public to the new player and the result will be that in future when you bill her, people will know what to expect.

Index to Complete Plan Book and EXHIBITORS' BOX OFFICE REPORTS

EDITOR'S NOTE—Exhibitors will find here a complete list of all feature pictures for the current quarter arranged alphabetically as an index to The Complete Plan Book for this period, naming the picture, the producer, the star, the release date, and designating the issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS which contained the original review.

The following also contains our reviewer's opinion encompassed in a brief single line and gives the comments of exhibitors who have shown the picture and forwarded their opinions. And we also publish a final line fairly summarizing a consensus of all opinions received on each picture. As many of the exhibitors do not comment on every picture (merely checking it Big, Average or Poor), we arrive at the consensus not only by the actual comments made and published, but are also guided by the reports from exhibitors who have made no actual comments but have merely checked the box office value of the picture.

All the pictures mentioned are five-reel features, unless marked otherwise. Serials are reviewed also. At the conclusion of this department will be found the "Flash-Backs," being comments on films released previous to October 6, 1918.

Directory of New Theatres

ALABAMA

A. A. Lightman has secured the lease of several lots on Court street in Florence and will erect a $40,000 theatre.

CALIFORNIA

Howe and Merrill are making such rapid progress on the interior decorations of their new Loring theatre at Riverside that the opening will take place late in January.

INDIANA

Iron-ton will soon have a new theatre erected by Col. H. L. Marting and Dr. A. Clarke Lowry on Third street adjacent to the Hotel Marting.

Handsome Theatre for Marietta, Ohio

MARIETTA, O., is to have a handsome new theatre to take the place of the Hippodrome, which was destroyed by fire early in the fall. At present the roof of the new house has been completed, and it is expected that the house, which will seat 1,300, will be ready for opening early in the spring. It will be equipped with a large stage, pipe organ and orchestra and will represent an investment of $100,000.

It is owned by the C. & M. Amusement Company. This company also owns the Putnam in Marietta, and the Strand and Colonial in Cambridge, Ohio. O. F. Sybert is managing director of the group of houses.

Goldwyn Equipped to Handle Others

ANNOUNCEMENT has been made that the Foreign Sales Department of the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation is now equipped to extend its facilities to other producers, and also to act in this country for responsible foreign organizations.

Milwaukee Theatres Recover From Street Car Strike

THE drawing power of motion picture theatres was amply demonstrated in Milwaukee New Year's Day when street car employees went on a strike.

After experiencing decided handicaps in business due to two previous influenza epidemics Milwaukee managers were far from jovial over the newest jinx. The carmen went on strike at six o'clock the morning of New Year's Day, so that the midnight shows on New Year's Eve were packed.

Though no cars were running, and taxicabs were at a premium, the afternoon business at the motion picture houses was normal for a holiday. Scores walked miles to the downtown theatres, and though the night business fell off some, nevertheless a good number refused to allow a lack of street cars to keep them from seeing their screen favorites.

By the next morning, however, the strike had been called off, but not before theatre managers had begun to think of taking legal action to avoid further financial loss.

If the strike had been prolonged it is possible that a sympathetic strike of electrical workers would have been called which would have resulted in all electric power being cut off, completely crippling the theatres.

Mae Marsh's Husband Well Known in Grand Rapids

LOUIS L. ARMS, who is reported to have been married to Mae Marsh, motion picture star, recently, is very well known in Grand Rapids where he spent most of his life and where he was employed on Grand Rapids newspapers.

Arms broke into the newspaper game in the Furniture City, his first position being as assistant sporting editor of the Herald.

He was a member of the Central High School football team and made a name in local and state sporting circles as pitcher for various amateur and semi-professional baseball teams.

Later he was sporting editor of the Grand Rapids Press and secretary of the Michigan State League of Professional baseball clubs, organized by E. W. Dickerson, now president of the Western League.

Arms left Grand Rapids several years ago, going to Los Angeles where he engaged in the business of selling automobiles.

Later he worked for San Francisco and St. Louis, Mo., newspapers, then going into the newspaper field in New York and later becoming press agent for the Goldwyn people.

His father died several years ago, but his mother and sister still reside in Grand Rapids.

Detroit Exhibitors Take Exception to Exchange Men's Rulings

DETROIT exhibitors and the local exchanges are in the midst of a merry scrap over the new rules of the Board of Motion Picture Exchange Managers which require that all pictures must be paid for before any films leave the exchange.

The exhibitors held a mass meeting Friday noon at the Hotel Tuller and Saturday the exchange managers went into session.

The exhibitors declare that the exchanges have no right to demand a deposit on pictures if they must be paid for in advance anyway and that the exchanges are always late in sending out their invoices.

Geo. W. Trendle of the Kunsy chain of houses has issued an open letter in which he wants new rules instituted by the exchanges giving the houses the right to cancel a picture if all the regular advertising matter, such as paper, heralds, etc., is not available two weeks in advance of the date of showing and permitting the exhibitor to charge for cuts and other advertising when the exchange fails to have the matter shown in the press book on the release.

He also holds exchanges are liable for damages when they fail to ship on time or for the failure of films to arrive.

Many of the exhibitors have offered to co-operate with the exchanges and none, as yet, have failed to make their advance payments, it is reported.

Mrs. Chaplin Makes Hit in Dubuque

THE last month of 1918 witnessed the sensational rise, in Dubuque, of Mrs. Charlie Chaplin, nee Mildred Harris. Before her marriage her pictures drew fairly well here, but they did not set the whole city to talking.

Then Jewel Productions Co. took advantage of her marriage to Charlie Chaplin, and they certainly struck a bonanza when they dropped her maiden name and advertised her as Mrs. Charlie Chaplin.

Marrying at a time when the famous comedian is at the height of his popularity, his wife has the advantage of a million dollar name—a name that attracts like none other.

Mrs. Chaplin really deserved her rise in the film world, for she is a hard working little body and her acting in "For Husband Only" and "Borrowed Clothes" shows an improvement over her former pictures.

Dubuquers enjoy her pictures and according to the manager of the Grand, "Mrs. Charlie Chaplin has come to stay."

Springfield Newspaper Criticizes Health Department's Attitude Toward Theatres

THE handling of the influenza situation in Springfield has been so badly managed that one of the papers, The Springfield News-Record, printed the following editorial on December 26:

Common Sense and the "Flu"

This community has endured with remarkable patience the inefficient, ineffective but sensational administration of the Superintendent of the City Health department. For some months now we have watched the attempt to quarantine the places of business where there were no cases of influenza and the almost complete failure to quarantine homes where there were cases.

But patience has ceased to be a virtue. The prevalence of influenza is a condition that is likely to continue all winter and we should prepare to treat it in a sensible manner.

In the morning newspapers, a few days ago, a threatening advertisement was inserted by the Superintendent of Health. He said that some theatres had been admitting persons who were coughing and sneezing and that if they continued to do this they would be closed.

Could anything be more ridiculous?

How is a theatre manager to know whether a patron has a cough by looking him in the eye as he passes through the door, and how can he tell whether or not the ticket holder will sneeze while he is in the place?

This is characteristic of the entire administration of Dr. Campbell. He would close up business houses, but permit people to assemble at will in the homes, and not even make an effort to prevent any number of persons from calling on influenza patients.

When he closed the churches he closed only those of certain denominations, at first, and permitted other denominations to hold services. When he closed the theatres he did not close other places where there was just as much opportunity for the spread of the disease.

He is a man of moods.

What is needed is a sane, commonsense consideration of the problem. People with influenza should be kept at home. The placards on every store in town warning against coughers and sneezers should be torn down, for they do no good, and placards should be placed on every home where there is influenza, for these would do good by keeping healthy persons away.

James J. Corbett Passes Through Chicago

JAMES J. CORBETT, former heavyweight champion of the world, passed through Chicago recently on his way to California, where he is to act for the movies for the Universal Film Company.

"Gentleman Jim" and his wife and a large chow dog stopped at the Congress Annex, where Jim had something to say regarding his plans for the next twenty weeks that he is scheduled to act for the silver screen. Among the things he said were:

"I'm going into pictures. Within a fortnight I'll be domiciled at Universal City under the Universal management, playing heroes' roles in Universal serials. I am asking for one thing—I'm amenable to direction and all that, and I'll do what I am told to do, and I'll do it to the best of my ability—but I'm asking for one thing. I want Universal to put me in one of those mix-up free-for-all fights. I want the director to bring out as many stalwart huskies as he cares to assemble. Then let them come on as thick and fast as they can. I want to show how a man who knows the science of that 'roped arena' will meet them. That will be a fight worth seeing—it will be a fight worth remembering. It will be a new sort of fight, too, for motion picture spectators to witness. And it won't be tame. It will be the hottest sort of a fight that ever set itself on record on the screen."

Jim Corbett rises to remark that some fights as he observes them on the screen are not all they might be, nor yet, indeed, all that they should be. And it may be conceded that "Gentleman Jim" is something of an authority on fights.

"I'm not talking about the screen's reproductions of fights in what the sporting editor calls the 'roped arena.' Those, of course, are set combats, surrounded with the usual formalities of the ring. They are always interesting—always dramatic.

"I'm referring specifically to those rough-and-tumble and stand-up-and-knock-down affairs in which the hero and the hero's friends—if he doesn't happen to be utterly and completely alone—meet the parties of the second part and open hostilities. Oh, and they're exciting, these fights. They're mighty exciting. But when I see them I find myself wondering what some fighter who knows how to couple science—the science of that 'roped arena'—with brute strength would be able to do."

Advices from Universal City say briefly and succinctly, pointedly and flatly that "Gentleman Jim" does not voice his wish in vain. "He shall have," they say, "precisely what he asks for—and a lot of it."

What Milwaukee Is Doing

BABY MARIE OSBORNE had some reception in Milwaukee because of the plans laid out by Manager George Fischer of the Alhambra theatre, where the little star appeared in person January 9. Baby Marie made four appearances, twice during the afternoon and again in the evening. Thursday morning she visited Milwaukee Orphan asylums. She was guest of honor at a children's party given in the Alhambra's big playroom at which 40 of Milwaukee's prominent children were present. On the day of her appearance an added feature to the program of "Little Women" was "Dolly's Vacation" in which Baby Marie stars. At each performance a reception was held on the Alhambra stage. With Baby Marie was her father, Leon Osborne, and William Aschman, manager of the Milwaukee Pathe exchange.

ORGAN recitals are becoming very popular with Milwaukee motion picture fans. Two theatres, the Alhambra, managed by George Fischer and the Toy theatre under the direction of Ralph Wettstein, have played up their organ solos. Wettstein has engaged an orchestra, directed by Glen R. Crum, well-known middle west director, and has installed a new $10,000 organ. At the Alhambra last week considerable applause was won by Walter Rowley playing the Raymond Overture on the organ with accompaniment by the Kiltie Band.

A SPLENDID touch in the presentation of "The Squaw Man" at the Butterfly theatre, Milwaukee, was secured by Manager Leo Landau, who engaged a singer and a dancer to appear between performances. The Butterfly does not boast of a large stage having just a strip in front of the screen. But Manager Landau placed a wigwam at one side and had a tripod and kettle at the other. The two performers appeared in Indian costume and one did an Indian dance. While both were finishing their numbers at the side of the stage with a red spot on them the film was started on the screen. By the time the action of the photoplay had commenced the spot had faded out on the two women, an abrupt break was avoided and a pleasant effect obtained.

News of the Week in Detroit

WHILE visiting his home in Detroit last week Harry I. Garson announced the opening date for Blanche Sweet in "The Unpardonable Sin" will be February 2 at the Globe theatre, New York, though the first showing is scheduled for Clune's theatre, Los Angeles, the week of January 13. Mr. Garson declared that no arrangements have yet been made for the distributing of the Clara Kimball Young pictures after "Cheating Cheaters." He returned to Los Angeles.

CAPT. J. O. BROOKS, formerly of the Fox sales force, Detroit, and more recently manager of the Liberty theatre at Camp Sherman, Ohio, has been transferred to the management of the Liberty theatre at Camp Custer, Battle Creek.

HARRY SOMERVILLE, former manager of the Drury Lane theatre, Detroit, is now booking manager of the Koppin circuit.

JOE FERTE, former film salesman, who has been a soloist at the Majestic theatre, has joined the Goldwyn exchange force.

THE MAJESTIC THEATRE has returned to its former scale of prices, 25 and 50 cents. It is reported that the business under the new management of Henry J. Guthard has gone upward, as Mr. Guthard has adopted a liberal advertising policy.

M. W. McGEE, former managing director of the Majestic, announces that he has accepted an offer of Frederick Ingersoll to be general manager of the Belle Isle Coliseum Company, which operates a park and other amusement enterprises in Detroit's own Coney Island. Mr. Ingersoll also owns a large interest in the Knickerbocker theatre.

A NEW $12,000 Hope-Jones organ has been ordered for the Bijou, Mt. Clemens, by Robert Pelletier.

EDDIE FONTAINE, Paramount booker, is to be married on January 15.

HENRY S. KOPPIN of the Woodward Theatre Company is letting contracts for a new theatre at Gratiot avenue and Beaubien street. It will seat 1,700, according to Howard Crane, architect.

R. H. RAMSEY has been promoted by Manager Ross of the Paramount exchange to city salesman. Mr. Ramsey has been stationed in the Toledo branch office.

FRED DE LODDER, proprietor of the Del—The theatre, has leased the Your theatre for a term of ten years, taking possession in two weeks. Mr. De Lodder, it is said, will soon take over some other houses.

ARTHUR S. HYMAN has purchased the Michigan rights to the Tourneur production of "Woman."

C. H. MILES, owner of the Regent and Orpheum theatres, Detroit, has come out as an advocate of higher prices. "Everything is going up, so why not the prices of admission," he says. "We pay more for pictures, for musicians, stage help, ushers and advertising. In other lines of business the consumer pays for this increase; the retailer just passes it on. We are not making the percentage of profit that we should and we will not until the exhibitors get together."

A FREE SHOW for the poor children of the West Side given by Arthur D. Baehr of the Crystal theatre, Detroit, on the day after Christmas brought a letter of commendation from the Police Department and others from various charity officials. Mr. Baehr gave a special morning show with "Treasure Island" and a Sunshine comedy and also distributed photographs of the Lee children. More than 1,000 youngsters marched to the theatre escorted by a squadron of forty mounted policemen.

FOR "The Romance of Tarzan" John Niebes, owner of the Dawn theatre, decorated the lobby, spending more than $50 in creating a jungle effect. As the Dawn is a theatre way out on Detroit's East Side, his enterprise attracted much attention from his patrons. The lobby was decorated a week in advance of the showing of the picture, and the increased receipts, he declared, more than paid for the money and energy expended in advertising it.

ALL of Michigan will probably be wide open again within the next week, so far as the "flu" is concerned. Health reports show a constant decrease in cases reported and deaths.

Dubuque Exhibitors Had Successful Year

THE year of 1918 was a fairly successful one for Dubuque exhibitors. Last January business started out with a rush, and continued good in spite of the war tax and, in some cases, the raising of admission, for the first six months of the year.

Around the middle of July the infantile paralysis epidemic caused the closing of the theatres for nearly a month. After they were re-opened, business boomed and exhibitors looked forward to a splendid fall season, when, in October, the town was quarantined on account of Spanish influenza.

Undaunted by this second quarantine the local exhibitors set out to retrieve business. Theatres were thoroughly disinfected, some were redecorated, inside and out and all were given a thorough airing and cleaning. The houses in order, they turned their attention to their pictures. Programs were revised, and unpopular star contracts dropped; pictures were shown that appealed to the general public.

Their efforts were rewarded, for during the last month and a half of 1918 none of the theatres could complain of the business. All had average, and some better than average, houses on week days, while on Sunday, capacity houses were the rule.

Considering the exhibitors added expenses, the quarantines, the increased cost of labor, the year's business compared very favorably with that of other years. With the exception of the Princess whose report was "great business during the entire year," the Dubuque theatres declared the 1918 business "average."

They Say in Chicago That—

WILBUR GILL has been added to the sales forces of the Universal Chicago office. Another evidence that Carl Laemmle always remember old friends.

J. D. WILLIAMS, the general manager of the First National, New York, stopped off in Chicago on his way to the Coast.

SID GOLDMAN is a busy man looking for a downtown theatre to exploit the forthcoming Jewel superproduction "Hearts of Humanity."

MISS FINAN of the Central Film Company office force is back at her desk after four weeks of the "flu."

JOE BRANDT of the Universal Film Company—don't know what his job is, but it is "some job"—will spend a day or so with the Chicago organization on his way to the Coast.

NATE ASCHER, Aaron Jones, A. H. Blank, Max Goldstein, Hy Abrams, Adolph Zukor and J. D. Williams left for Los Angeles on January 3, to be gone about two weeks—from where we sit it looks like a battle for stars.

HENRY WEISS and R. C. Seery of the Central Film Company and First National Chicago office, went to see "Business Before Pleasure" and learned a lot, and claim that they will be able to use it to good advantage in their new 1919 sales talk.

I. L. LESSERMAN, manager of the Universal Chicago office—he of the ever-present smile—is on the jump putting over three big guns, "Hearst News," "Universal Current Events" and "Screen Telegram."

MARTIN SAXE of the Lubliner and Trinz forces has been mustered out of the army and is back on the old job again.

BUSINESS is booming and exhibitors are availing themselves of the excellent facilities offered in the new quarters of the Famous Players in Chicago. Those arranging their bookings recently were H. R. Byerly of the Colonial theatre, Logansport, Ind.; I. F. Bennett of the Lincoln Square theatre, Decatur, Ill.; Samuel Greenbaum of the Garden theatre, Davenport, Iowa; Paul Miller of the Spencer Square theatre, Rock Island, Ill.; H. J. Samish of the A-Muse-U theatre, Clinton, Iowa; J. Reuben of the Princess theatre, Joliet, Ill.; George Fisher of the Alhambra theatre, Milwaukee, Wis., and C. E. Irvin of the Irvin theatre, Bloomington, Ill.

H. E. HARTLEY of the Hartley theatre, East Chicago, has been in Chicago arranging his bookings for 1919.

MRS. H. W. CADORAT of the La Petite theatre is laying plans for a big January business and is a thorough believer in the theory that "A mile a minute is good time, but a smile a minute gets more action."

ADOLPH ZUKOR, president of the Paramount-Artcraft organization; E. E. Shauer, assistant treasurer, and John C. Flinn, director of publicity and advertising, were Chicago visitors recently. Mr. Zukor, accompanied by Mr. Flinn, left for the Pacific Coast, where they will confer with the producers of pictures on questions of great importance in connection with their 1919 productions. Many big things are under way.

NATE ASCHER, head of the Ascher Bros. organization, made a first-class Santa Claus, as is attested to by all of their employees. Now that Max Ascher has been released from the army and Harry Ascher is entirely recovered from the effects of his recent operation and back on the job, the elder brother, Nate, accompanied by Mrs. Ascher, can make their Coast trip.

HARRY SAUERS, operator of the Majestic theatre, Rochelle, Ill., died recently of the influenza.

THE PALACE THEATRE at Mendota has been forced to close again on account of poor business.

C. A. FOX, formerly on the sales force of the Central Film Company, is reported as having arrived at Tampico, Mexico, being the first man to navigate the Chicago River, the Illinois, Rock and Mississippi Rivers on the Great Lakes to Ocean Waterway. Mr. Fox has inaugurated a motorboat express service between the United States and Mexico across the Gulf Stream.

HARRY WILLARD, one of Chicago's oldest film men, recently associated with the Fox Chicago office, is now with the Metro exchange handling their screen classics under the able direction of Cress Smith.

THE ACORN SIGN SHOP has just opened at 809 Mallers Building and is in charge of A. S. Ward, who is considered to be one of the best sign writers for theatres in this part of the country. The Acorn Sign Shop will specialize in banners and artistic cards for lobby displays and is already meeting with marked success.

MAX LEVY, until recently of the Metro Chicago office handling screen classics, is now connected with the Celebrated Players.

REX LAWHEAD has been appointed general representative of the Crest Picture Corporation. Their first production, "A Romance of the Air," featuring Lieutenant Bert Hall of the Lafayette Esquadrielle and Edith Day will be handled through the Clearing House, Inc. Miss Day is now starring in "Going Up," a musical comedy playing at Cohan's Grand Opera House, Chicago. There will be a pre-release showing of the picture at a loop-theatre, Lieut. Hall to appear and relate his thrilling experiences while "over there." Carl E. Carlton, president of the company, has returned to New York after spending a week in this territory.

D. M. VANDERWALKER of the Doll-Van Company expects to do big things in 1919 and is going to snap up all the large pictures he can get. The gentleman figures that this will be a banner year and productive of prosperity for all engaged in the picture business.

MRS. HENRY LEVOYE of the Orpheum theatre, Bradley, Ill., has been in Chicago arranging her January booking and laying plans for a big advertising drive. If Mrs. Levoe sticks to the same determination and pep displayed while in Chicago there will not be much doubt about a good year for the theatre.

"CARELESS AMERICA," the propaganda picture furnished free to exhibitors by the Universal Film Company, is already booked for approximately five hundred play dates in Chicago. It will have its premiere at the Riviera theatre Monday, January 6, at which time Peter M. Hoffman, chairman of the Safety First Committee, will make an address.

C. C. NELSON, formerly of the Colonial theatre, Galesburg, Ill., died at Phoenix, Ariz., where he went for his health.

MANAGER FAY of the Temple theatre claims that he more than tripled his receipts on the opening night of "The Lure of the Circus," featuring Eddie Polo.

J. B. ROSS, JR., born December 22, Christmas present to Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Ross of the Garden theatre, Canton, Ill. Everyone well and happy. Papa excited because baby is pacified when shown a roll of tickets.

WE have had in our midst since the first of the year J. G. Hurby, Dalton, Ill.; J. A. Lisey, Rochelle, Ill.; G. A. Pettingen, Centralia, Ill., and A. Sigfried of Decatur.

With Dubuque Exhibitors

THE programs at Dubuque theatres on Christmas day were exceptionally good. The Princess had Alice Brady in "The Whirlpool," a feature well suited to the brilliant star; the Family also had an Alice Brady picture "The Knife." The Dreamland presented June Elvidge in "Joan of the Woods," and the Grand showed "For Husbands Only" with Mrs. Charlie Chaplin. The program at the Liberty theatre was "Rose of Paradise" with Bessie Barriscale.

THE three days after Christmas are supposed to be the best days of the theatres, at least in Dubuque. Thursday, Friday and Saturday were great days. Every theatre did a rushing business.

MARY MACLAREN in "Vanity Pool" was shown at the Grand Thursday and Friday, December 26 and 27. Miss MacLaren had a very suitable part; her acting was most convincing. The other star members of the cast, Anna Nilsson, Marin Sais, Thomas Holding and Franklyn Farnum, were very good in their respective roles.

ON Thursday, December 26, the Family presented Mabel Normand in "Dodging a Million," an uproarious comedy of youth. It was one of Miss Normand's snappiest plays; a laugh from start to finish. Tom Moore as the leading man headed an excellent supporting cast.

"WE CAN'T HAVE EVERYTHING," a highly interesting photoplay adapted from the novel by Rupert Hughes, was shown at the Princess Friday and Saturday, December 27 and 28. The stars, Kathlyn Williams and Elliott Dexter, were well received. This picture drew very good houses both days.

THE DREAMLAND presented Anna Nilsson and Franklyn Farnum in "In Judgment Of" on Thursday, December 26. These stars did some fine team work—are well suited to each other. Everyone who saw this play liked it.

ROY STEWART was the attraction at the Liberty theatre Friday, December 27, in "Paying His Debt," a western melodrama in five acts. The picture was favorably received.

EMMY WEHLEN was the star at the Dreamland theatre Friday and Saturday, December 27 and 28. Miss Wehlen was exquisite and her acting was up to her usual standard. The play "His Bonded Wife" drew exceptionally well.

AS a special attraction, the Family theatre presented "Even As You and I" on Friday evening, December 27. There were but two shows that evening, the first at 7 p. m. and the last at 8:45.

"THE MIDNIGHT BURGLAR" with the newest screen kiddie Gloria Joy, was presented at the Liberty theatre Saturday evening. A large Saturday crowd witnessed this picture.

ARTHUR MOYER, a former employee of the Dreamland theatre, died last week from a severe attack of influenza.

THE FAMILY, following closely on the heels of the Princess, presented that clever player, Gorge M. Cohan in "Hit the Trail Holliday." Cohan drew splendidly, for he has been in high favor at the Family ever since the showing of his first picture "Broadway Jones."

ON Sunday, the Family presented Ann Pennington in "Sunshine Nan," a light, pleasing comedy drama, well suited to the piquant personality of the tiny star.

"BUCHANAN'S WIFE" starring Virginia Pearson, and shown at the Dreamland theatre Sunday and Monday, December 29 and 30, was perhaps, the most unexpected play produced by Fox this year. It was also, sensational to a degree. Miss Pearson handled her role in a capable and satisfactory manner.

JACK PICKFORD and Louise Huff proved to be good drawing cards at the Princess theatre Sunday, December 29, where they appeared in "Mile a Minute Kendall." Jack will soon be as popular as his sister Mary, at least in this city, for he is a player of a type that cannot help but attract. Louise Huff makes a charming co-star and her popularity here is surprising.

THE GRAND'S Sunday attraction was "The Source" with Wallace Reid. Mr. Reid's very good acting was enhanced by that of his leading lady, Ann Little, who is an actress of no mean ability. Capacity houses both afternoon and evening bespoke the popularity of these players.

GLADYS BROCKWELL was the star at the Liberty theatre Sunday, December 29. The picture drew a good matinee crowd, and full houses in the evening.

WONDERFUL Norma Talmadge was starred at the Family theatre Tuesday, December 31 in "Ghosts of Yesterday." As the little seamstress, Ruth Grahame, Miss Talmadge did one of the best bits in her career, and her work as Jeanne La Fleur was above reproach. Many actresses have essayed dual roles, but none of them have done it in as convincing a manner as this talented actress. This picture made a favorable impression on Family patrons.

THE second United States official war picture "America's Answer," was shown at the Grand Monday and Tuesday, December 30 and 31. This story of America's first year in the world war was one of the best war films ever shown in Dubuque.

THE COZY theatre at Dyersville, Ia., had three excellent holiday specials. On Sunday, December 22, Theda Bara was starred in "Under the Yoke." The Christmas Day program was "The Blindness of Divorce" and on New Year's Day, William Farnum was shown in "The Rainbow Trail."

THE Christmas Day program at the Star theatre at Decorah, Ia. was "Infatuation" featuring Gaby Deslys. The story was indeed, most appropriate for the action began and ended on Christmas day. The musical comedy scenes made a big hit with the Star patrons.

THE BLENDE theatre at Benton, Wis., has a new slogan "Pictures Worth Seeing" and the manager is living up to his slogan by showing very good programs. The pictures are not the very latest, but they are features with some of the best stars in picturedom. On Friday, December 27, Wallace Reid was shown in "Nan of Music Mountain"; Mae Marsh was the star on New Year's day in "Polly of the Circus" and on January 10 "A Man Without a Country" was presented.

THE GRAND theatre at Anamose had Pauline Frederick in "Jealousy" for the Saturday, December 28 feature. In connection with this picture a Mack Sennett comedy "Saucy Madeline" and an educational reel was shown. The Grand had a special orchestra for this occasion.

Flint Exhibitors Are Optimistic

OPTIMISM reigns among the motion picture theatre men of Flint. There is no doubt that the industry is coming back into its own. After weeks of hard sledding on account of the influenza epidemic and the effects of the war when business was anything but good, the theatres are again entertaining large audiences and there is a general air of prosperity about the playhouses.

C. Edgar Momand, manager of the Garden theatre, voices his optimism in the following statement:

"The motion picture theatre has survived the gloomiest period in the history of the silent art.

"The year just closed has been the most prosperous one the Garden has enjoyed notwithstanding the war tax, seat tax, film footage tax and all the other taxes which we have had to meet. Film production itself has shown decided improvement, more worth-while films having been offered the public during the last year than in several of the preceding years."

News and Gossip of Springfield Theatres

CHRISTMAS DAY was a big one at all local theatres, though the weather turned out very bad. It started to snow along in the afternoon, which was almost a rain, and this probably kept many from the playhouses. The Gaiety had wonderful business with Mrs. Charlie Chaplin in "Borrowed Clothes"; so had the Vaudette with Vivian Martin in "Jane Goes a-Wooing"; the Lyric did extremely well with Earle Williams in "The Man Who Wouldn't Tell," and the Princess was busy all afternoon and evening with Ethel Clayton in "A Soul Without Windows"; The Royal, Capitol, Amuse-U, Savoy, Empress, North End Circle and Pekin theatres all booked extra good bills, and report the day as financially satisfactory.

ANNETTE KELLERMANN in "Queen of the Sea" played three days at the Lyric, December 26, 27 and 28, at increased admission prices and cleaned up nicely. The consensus of opinion was that "Queen of the Sea" is a better picture than "Neptune's Daughter" or "A Daughter of the Gods."

DOROTHY GISH scored heavily at the Vaudette for three days preceding Christmas in "The Hope Chest." If this young woman keeps on doing such fine things as "Battling Jane," "The Hope Chest," and "The Hun Within," she will take a place among the big ones.

W. W. WATTS, owner of the Gaiety and Vaudette theatres, has booked the Film Clearing House, Inc., specials, and will use them at both his theatres.

BEN ROVIN, of the Amuse-U, says he wishes he could get enough William Farnum pictures to play one every day in the year. His patrons are wild over the big star, and every time Ben has a Farnum play they nearly break down the doors in getting in. "The Heart of a Lion," "The Conqueror," "The Bondman," "Brave and Bold," and other Farnum plays have been on lately, and each time the receipts get bigger.

THE CAPITOL showed the first chapter of "The Lightning Raider," Pathe serial with Pearl White, Sunday, January 5. Miss White is the best liked star with Capitol crowds.

"TOO FAT TO FIGHT" did well for three days at the Gaiety, the days preceding Christmas, and Manager Thornton is convinced that were it not for the holiday shopping the picture would have made a new attendance mark. "Hick Manhattan" was on the same bill and went over big, although it was over the heads of some.

"WIVES OF MEN," Doll-Van special production with Florence Reed and Frank Mills, came to the Gaiety on New Year's Day for four days' stay. Miss Reed is a great favorite in this city, although she has appeared in but few pictures. Should she decide to become permanently identified with the cinema there is no doubt of her popularity with film fans. Frank Mills is also a local favorite.

"THE CRUCIBLE OF LIFE," with Grace Darmond, played to three days big business at the Princess on December 22, 23 and 24. Patrons voted it a splendid photoplay from first to last. Lewis Stone in "The Man of Bronze" also pleased Princess crowds on December 27 and 28.

THE bill for the week of December 29-January 4 at the Princess was as follows: Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, "Wild Honey," a Keeney picture with Doris Kenyon; Wednesday and Thursday, Gaby Deslys in "Infatuation," a Pathe special release; Friday and Saturday, Fannie Ward in "The Bravest Way," a Pathe play.

ELSIE FERGUSON played to tremendous patronage at the Gaiety on Sunday, December 29, in "Under the Greenwood Tree." While this picture was not the star's best, it pleased all. One of the reasons why it pleased the women was because Eugene O'Brien was in the cast. This young man is very popular here, due to his fine work in so many pictures with Norma Talmadge. Films showing "President Wilson's arrival in France," and "Painless Love," a two reel comedy, were also on the bill with Miss Ferguson. "Fatty" Arbuckle in "Camping Out" was advertised as coming for Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, December 29, 30 and 31, but Manager Thornton was notified on Saturday that the print had not reached Chicago from New York.

THE VAUDETTE did well with Ethel Clayton in "The Mystery Girl," on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, December 29, 30 and 31. Starting New Year's Day, and playing the rest of the week, was "Fuss and Feathers," Ince production, with Enid Bennett.

AFTER an absence of many months, Anita Stewart will be seen in this city at the Lyric in her new production, "Virtuous Wives." Miss Stewart has thousands of admirers here who will rejoice that she has "come back" and the Lyric is sure to have four wonderful days with the pretty actress.

ALICE JOYCE in "The Captain's Captain," a Vitagraph play, was the Lyric attraction on Tuesday, December 31. One of the features of this play was the appearance of several old timers in the productions with Miss Joyce. These included Arthur Donaldson, Maurice Costello and Julia Swayne Gordon.

"I'LL SAY SO," George Walsh's latest Fox production, threw Walsh admirers into the seventh heaven of delight at the Lyric on Sunday and Monday, December 29 and 30.

GUS KERASOTES had three big days with "The Kaiser's Finish," which started its run Christmas Day. Gus said that this was one of the best plays he has shown this year.

THE CHATTERTON is negotiating for "The Birth of a Race," the big photoplay that has been playing at the Blackstone theatre, Chicago, for the past month. It is understood that this picture will be sent on tour the same as was "The Birth of a Nation," with a big orchestra, and a crew of workmen. Just when it will be seen in Springfield has not yet been decided.

THE MAJESTIC is doing better each week with "A Fight for Millions." Gaumont Weekly and Allied Official War Review are used to open the show every week.

THE ROYAL has booked "America's Answer" and "Under Four Flags," to be shown some time during January. Eddie Polo continues to pack the Royal every Sunday with "The Lure of the Circus." On Monday, December 30, the Royal had Margarita Fisher in "The Primitive Woman"; Tuesday, "The Beloved Impostor" with Gladys Leslie; Wednesday, "The Beloved Blackmailer"; Thursday, a new Vitagraph picture; Friday, "Lawless Love," a Fox production, and Saturday, a Bluebird offering.

THE SAVOY showed "The Vigilantes," the Hampton special production, for Monday, January 6. For the week of December 29-January 4, the Savoy showed the following attractions: Sunday, "A Fight for Millions" and Helen Gibson in a two reel drama; Monday, "The Little Runaway," with Edward Earle and Gladys Leslie; Wednesday, fifteenth chapter of "The Brass Bullet," and Lyons-Moran comedy and Universal Weekly; Thursday, "Fires of Youth," with Ruth Clifford; Friday, "The Iron Test" and other attractions; Saturday, "Mother Love and the Law," with Dolly Ledgerwood Matters.

THE LYRIC played Madeline Traverse in "The Danger Zone" Sunday and Monday, January 5 and 6; Harry Morey in "Hoarded Assets" on January 7 and 8, and William Farnum in "The Rainbow Trail," sequel to "Rider of the Purple Sage" on January 9, 10 and 11.

THE VAUDETTE had Pauline Frederick in "Out of the Shadow" for four days, starting January 5, and Wallace Reid in "The Dub" for the three days following:

THE GAIETY had Fred Stone in "Under the Top," for four days, starting January 5, and Mae Marsh was seen in "The Racing Strain," Goldwyn picture, for the three succeeding days.

Late News of Fond du Lac

FRANK MINCKLER has tendered his resignation as violinist at the Orpheum effective on January 16 and will go to Center-ville, Iowa, where he has accepted a position at an increased salary. Mr. Minckler has made many friends among the Orpheum patrons and their best wishes will follow him to his new home. Manager Ainsworth has made a requisition for Sergt. Arthur Hastings, who was violinist at the Orpheum when he was drafted into service and who is now at Camp Custer. It is expected that Sergt. Hastings will be able to reach Fond du Lac in time to take up his duties when Mr. Minckler leaves.

"THE BIJOU has had the best holiday business in its history," declared Manager Smith the day following New Year's. "I am inclined to believe," he added, "that the 'flu' situation which gave us such a black eye for several weeks was indirectly responsible for this record holiday patronage. Ordinarily there are many counter attractions in the way of dances during the holidays. This year the Board of Health refused to lift the ban on public dances and as a result the moving picture houses got these crowds."

"THE HUN WITHIN," booked as a special New Year's feature at the Bijou by Manager Smith, met the fullest expectations of the management in the way of business and delighted the patrons. Large audiences attended both afternoon and evening performances.

ELSIE FERGUSON in "The Danger Mark," an Artcraft picture, was given a cordial welcome at the Bijou Thursday, Friday and Saturday, January 2, 3 and 4, in spite of the fact that the picture started on the coldest night of the winter.

MANAGER SMITH of the Bijou has booked Marguerite Clark in "Uncle Tom's Cabin" for February 13, 14 and 15. This is in fact a re-booking made necessary by reason of the "flu" ban, which made it impossible to show this picture on its original dates.

THE DAVISON THEATRE, at Waupun, opened on Thursday, January 2, after having been closed five weeks on account of the "flu" ban. The picture selected for the opening was Mary Pickford in "Melissa." The Davison had arranged an unusually attractive program for its patrons during the month of December, but everything had to be cancelled.

"WE set a new record for business at the Idea on New Year's Day," declared Manager O. J. Vollert. "It really looked like old times. I guess we have finally gotten the 'flu' germs on the run."

MANAGER VOLLERT of the Henry Boyle booked "The Shepherd of the Hills" for a three days' run, Friday, Saturday and Sunday, January 17, 18 and 19. He put on an aggressive advertising campaign, including large copy for the newspapers and lots of billboard work.

NAZIMOVA in "Eye for Eye" is to be the attraction at the Henry Boyle in the near future. In announcing the appearance of "The Shepherd of the Hills" and "Eye for Eye" Manager Vollert declared that he had no further fears on account of the "flu" and proposed to go the limit in the way of big pictures.

MANAGER AINSWORTH of the Orpheum has booked Louisa M. Alcott's "Little Women" for the latter part of February. In the event the weather at that time is unfavorable he may give it a later date.

ORPHEUM patrons were pleased with the two Dorothys—Dorothy Gish and Dorothy Phillips—during the week beginning Monday, January 6. The former was seen to advantage in "Battling Jane," while the latter made friends the last three days of the week in "The Talk of the Town."

In and Around Grand Rapids

THE LYRIC theatre, of which J. S. David is proprietor, presents a pleasing appearance, both as to interior and exterior, David taking advantage of a recent closing order due to the influenza epidemic, to remodel and refinish the theatre.

THE COLONIAL theatre which has been conducted by George C. Nichols for a number of years, has been remodeled and will be occupied by a serve self grocery, Nichols having given up the theatre business at this location. He will still conduct the Isis, the Superba and other motion picture theatrical enterprises in Grand Rapids.

WITH the lifting of the second closing order caused by the severe epidemic of Spanish influenza which visited Grand Rapids, Mich., during the latter part of 1918; exhibitors of the Furniture City are looking forward to a rather more prosperous business in 1919. The second closing did not affect the picture houses to the extent of the first order which closed the theatres entirely, the second order merely barring children under 16 years of age from the motion picture theaters.

THE advance showing of "The Wildcat of Paris," featuring Priscilla Dean, jammed the exhibition room of the Universal Chicago exchange. The consensus of opinion was that the picture would prove a big money getter.

A STEP forward has been taken in the matter of better pictures with the formation of a permanent parent organization of the Better Photoplay League of America. The purpose of the league is to aid in the development of better pictures—to stamp out all unclean and degrading pictures. James R. Quirk was selected president, Hiram Greene vice-president, and Mrs. Nina Barlow, a prominent worker in the Red Cross Ambulance Corps, secretary and treasurer.

"THE BREED OF A MAN," featuring Wm. S. Hart, is coming. Many of the scenes of this picture were taken in Chicago about two months ago, which will make it particularly interesting to all "fans" of the Central States.

NOW that cold weather is here, Harry Weiss is going South after business. Working southern territory in the winter and northern territory in the summer keeps the doctors away. Harry leaves for two weeks on January 6.

A. TEITEL, the well-known film renovator, is now cleaning all of the "Hearts of the World" prints for the Mid-West Amusement Company, located in the City Hall Square Bldg., Chicago.

J. S. GRAUMAN, branch manager of Milwaukee Metro exchange, offered on New Year's Eve a cash prize of $5 to the first salesman securing a Screen Classics contract in 1919. F. M. DeLorenzo was the lucky boy, securing a contract at 9:10 a. m., January 2, on "The Great Victory" from Fred Sieger of the Regent theatre.

Interesting Items of Elgin

FLU-TRIED, war-tried, tax-tried moving picture show managers start the New Year in Elgin determined to make the next twelve months the most significant in local filmdom history. When troubles finally ceased chasing one another in the late year, business took a spurt over the holiday season and gave prospect of a year of reconstruction that must offer improvement in economic situation that will relieve commercial depression, they believe. There is hope of building and remodeling, of improvements in service and convenience and in other ways, with the hindrances gradually being lifted nationally and locally. There is hope of progress in the motion picture world that will make for better local conditions and win over that small part of the public still indifferent to the amusement offerings of the screen. The best holiday record in history is registered here. Open weather until the day before Christmas helped trade. Special offerings kept it through the cold and zero weather and made it cheerful prospect for the future.

D. W. GRIFFITH'S "The Great Love" was the offering at the Grand theatre January 2, 3 and 4. Manager Newman offered it at popular prices and, despite below zero weather, played it to big matinee and night crowds. Patrons were considerably pleased with it.

EDWIN S. CLIFFORD, for the past twelve years connected with Elgin newspapers, has been added to the staff of the Exhibitors' Herald. He left the employ of the Elgin Daily Courier, where he has been an exceptionally valued member of the editorial staff for the past nine years, Saturday, January 4, and began duties in Chicago the following Wednesday. Mr. Clifford will continue to make his home in Elgin, commuting for a while, at least. His brother, George Clifford, recently left the Exhibitors' Herald to take a position with Swift & Co.

DUSTIN FARNUM, in "The Light of the Western Stars," the Zane Grey hit, is promised Star patrons by Manager Crocker for late January.

MARY PICKFORD'S "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," shown at the Grand a year ago, at the request of hundreds missing it then or wishing to see it again, was brought back to Elgin January 7 and 8 by Manager Crocker, of the Star. Mary Pickford enthusiasts still cherish recollections of it as the most appealing Pickford picture, and there have been repeated requests for its return.

WILLIAM RUSSELL, in "All the World to Nothing," opened the new week at the Star, January 5 and 6. The Thursday picture was Lillian Walker in "The Embarrassment of Riches." Harry Morey in the Vitagraph blue ribbon feature, "Hoarded Assets," was shown Saturday.

THE bill at the Orpheum for the week beginning January 5 included: June Elvidge, in "The Appearance of Evil;" Emmy Wehlen, in "His Bonded Wife;" Alice Brady, in "The Whirlpool," and Ethel Clayton, in "A Soul Without Windows."

"STELLA MARIS," the popular Pickford picture, was the feature at the Crystal theatre, Dundee, January 14. "The Zeppelin's Last Raid" is offered for January 2.

PROGRAM for the week of January 7 at the Crystal included showing of Wallace Reid in "Things We Love;" the Bluebird feature, "A Mother's Secret;" Episode 5 of the serial, "Hands Up;" the comedy, "It Can't Be Done;" Florence Reed in "Today;" Earle Williams in "The Soul Master;" the comedy, "Dubs and Dry Goods;" Gladys Leslie in "The Wooing of Princess Pat;" the comedy, "Telephones and Troubles;" and the Sunday children's matinee special, "Happy Hooligan" comedy.

THE TEMPLE held "open house" to soldiers and sailors on the afternoon and evening of New Year's Day, admitting free men in uniform. The picture was Mae Murray in "Danger—Go Slow," and it showed to 1,500 people at the two performances.

STAR patrons of New Year's Day shows liked the Harold Lockwood offering, "Pals First."

THE ORPHEUM showed "Riders of the Purple Sage" to good evening crowds that day, difficulties between the exchange and local management holding up the pictures so that there was no afternoon show.

AT 25 and 15 cents admission Manager Fay, of the Temple, offered "The Kaiser's Finish" the afternoon and evening of Saturday, January 4. Previous offerings of that week included Juanita Hansen in "The Sea Flower" and Monroe Salisbury in "The Winner Takes All."

FOR the first "whole" week in the new year the Grand offered Wallace Reid in "Believe Me, Xantippe," on Monday and Tuesday; Enid Bennett in "A Desert Wooing," on Wednesday and Thursday, and Constance Talmadge in "Sauce for the Goose."

"THE FIGHT FOR MILLIONS," a most popular serial, had its final chapter showing at the Star the last week of the year. The new serial, Pearl White in "The Lightning Raider," began Friday, January 10.

Film Flashes from Flint

"THE GREAT LOVE," which was shown at the Garden theatre as the special feature for New Year's and the next two days while not coming up to expectations as a drawing card, did a very fair business during the three days.

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS in "Bound in Morocco," was the special featured attraction at the Palace theatre during the four days, beginning January 5. It was a return engagement of this film, but was heavily featured in the advertising, being given preference over the five acts of vaudeville.

THEDA BARA in "When a Woman Sins," was the attraction at the Strand during the three days, beginning January 6.

EVERY woman who could measure up as a "perfect 36" was offered free admission to the Orpheum theatre January 5 and 6 to see the picture of that title with Mabel Normand.

Fond du Lac Children Adore Pickford

MARY PICKFORD'S popularity with Young America was demonstrated anew on New Year's Day when a six-cent matinee at the Orpheum at Fond du Lac made it necessary to put on more than three performances, making a continuous run from one o'clock till five-thirty.

During this time 888 picture fans, all but fifty of them being children, enjoyed that delightful comedy, "Amarilly in Clothesline Alley." This was 200 better than any previous matinee attendance.

The seating capacity of the Orpheum is 300. This was the beginning of a successful three days' run, the attendance being good in spite of the cold wave that sent the mercury to 17 below.

In this connection it is interesting to note that many of the Orpheum patrons considered "Amarilly in Clothesline Alley" better than Miss Pickford's other success, "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm."

New Motion Picture "Fund" Organized— Mary Pickford Honorary President

THE Motion Picture War Service Association, in its old form, is now a thing of the past, and most of the moneys held, outside of certain disbursements and expenses, will be returned to the donors. In its place has arisen a Motion Picture Fund, not yet named. This fund will take care of old and indigent Photoplayers, and perform other charitable and necessary functions.

One of the objects of the War Service Association was to build and dedicate a large hospital for wounded and sick soldiers to the Government, but certain difficulties with the Government made this impossible. It is quite possible that the new Fund will consider the erection of a Motion Picture Home in or near Los Angeles.

At a meeting held to disband the Association and create a new Fund, Frank E. Woods, Supervising Director at the Vine Street Famous-Lasky studios, was asked by the members present to act as Provisional President and Organizer of the new Fund, his name being put forward by David W. Griffith and unanimously agreed to by all those present. Mr. Woods agreed on the condition that Miss Mary Pickford act as "Honorary President," and Miss Mary said she would.

Woods suggested that those present donate to the new Fund, and David W. Griffith, Mary Pickford, William S. Hart, Dustin Farnum, Mack Sennett and Douglas Fairbanks each subscribed five hundred dollars on the spot.

Frank E. Woods is a splendid selection for the role of Organizer. He is one of those quiet men who do things, and he possesses the confidence and respect of every one connected with the profession.

The new Fund, whatever its name will be, should prove a credit to the Industry.

Director Sloman Leaves Santa Barbara

DIRECTOR ED SLOMAN will soon complete the feature in which Margarita Fisher is star, and his engagement with the American Company will have terminated.

He and Mrs. Sloman will have a passing regret at leaving so many good friends behind them at Santa Barbara, but as Sloman says, "Santa Barbara is only a hundred mile ride from Los Angeles after all."

Butte Exhibitor Favors Short Subjects

THE ANSONIA at Butte is running a serial, "The Lure of the Circus." To advertise the event a big cut-out of Eddie Polo, 12 feet high, and in bright colors, is placed on display in the lobby, with bright electric lights playing on it. It is made of compo-board and shows Polo holding a big sign with the title of the play written thereon.

"I think that the average theatregoer will agree with me that the short productions of the Universal can be used to wonderful advantage as fillers," said Mr. Taylor. "The Bison or Western series I find especially attractive."

"The titles are always the best and the paper is the kind that makes the passerby stop and take a second look. Often that is followed by a call at the box office."

"The Universal comedies and weeklies also come in mighty handy for the small exhibitor and always present something interesting. I try to arrange my program, with the aid of fillers, so as to give variety and spice to the bill."

"A heavy drama calls for a good comedy, while a weekly always interests and a western puts some "pep" and life into the bill."

Mr. Taylor believes in the use of printer's ink and features new stories to arouse the curiosity of the showgoer to the point of attendance, if possible.

Metro's Administration Building at Hollywood Is Nearly Completed

THE administration building of the new Metro studios, at Romaine street and Cahuenga avenue, Hollywood, is keeping pace with the speed that marked the construction of the three big stages, on which five companies have been at work since December 9.

The future quarters of Maxwell Karger, director general, and the entire Metro production staff under him will occupy a building virtually a block long.

The building has been roofed and shingled. Interior walls are being lathed and plastered and the large window sashes fixed into place. Joseph W. Engel, Metro treasurer, who is directing the building operation, assisted by C. P. Butler, studio auditor and R. C. Godfrey of the technical staff, had hoped to see the building ready for occupancy by Christmas.

Frequent rain, however, retarded the work a bit and as a result it will probably be January 18, before Mr. Karger and his organization take possession of their new quarters.

With Los Angeles Theatres and Exchanges

C. A. McVICKER, special salesman of the Paramount-Artcraft exchange in Los Angeles, has gone to Arizona where he will spend two weeks calling on the exhibitors in that territory. Mr. McVicker returned from Arizona last week, where he reported business as much improved.

H. J. SILER, proprietor of the Gale theatre at Whittier, was a visitor at the Paramount-Artcraft exchange in Los Angeles recently.

"ARIZONA," Douglas Fairbanks' picture, which opened the new palatial California theatre, continued at that house for another week. The announcement was made by Harry Ballance, branch manager of Paramount-Artcraft exchange. The new Los Angeles house since its opening has been drawing capacity audiences.

W. H. HEPBURN, branch manager of the Vitagraph exchange, Los Angeles, left for New York, where he attended a meeting of all Vitagraph branch managers, called together for a mid-winter conference by officers of the home office. Mr. Hepburn expected to be in the East until about January 15.

A PRE-VIEW of Tom Moore's picture, "Go West Young Man," was given recently by the Goldwyn exchange. It will be released in Los Angeles at an early date.

HAROLD NEIDES, who has been very successful as a booker for the Goldwyn exchange, has been appointed by branch manager Ben Fish as special road representative, and made his initial trip through the California territory recently. Neides has the best wishes of the Goldwyn forces in his new adventure.

BERNARD FISH, special road representative of Goldwyn, left recently for a two weeks' trip to Arizona. He expected to bag much new business, now that the theatres are virtually all open again in that territory.

JOHN CARNAKIS, proprietor of the C. & C. theatre at Bakersfield, Cal., was in Los Angeles recently and booked a number of pictures from the Metro and Triangle exchanges. He says that business is improving in Bakersfield and he looks for a profitable year in 1919.

MR. AND MRS. J. P. PENPRASE, who operate the Star theatre at Elsinore, were recent visitors at the Triangle exchange. They announce that they are renovating their house for the new year, and as a result purchased much new equipment while in Los Angeles.

W. H. KUHN, manager of the Triangle exchange at Salt Lake, visited relatives in Los Angeles during the holidays. He said the Utah territory was slowly reopening, and he expected that by January 10 the quarantine in that state would be lifted entirely.

W. E. KNOTTS, branch manager of the First National Exhibitors Circuit exchange, was ill the latter part of a recent week. He had a slight attack of influenza.

J. A. BUSH, of the Broadway Amusement company of San Diego, was a visitor in Los Angeles last week. He called on the Mutual, Metro, Universal, World and Select exchanges.

GUY DOUTHWAITE, well known Oxnard exhibitor, was in Los Angeles during the holidays calling on the exchanges.

B. E. LOPER, branch manager of Select, made a special trip to San Diego at the end of a recent week for the purpose of lining up some new business for Select in the City of the Southwest.

"THE MIDNIGHT STAGE," one of Frank Keenan's productions for Pathe, was given a pre-view in Los Angeles and the exhibitors present pronounced it a corking production. The picture is to be released in this territory at an early date, Branch Manager Tate announced.

R. O. PROCTOR, Western division manager of Pathe, has been visiting in San Francisco and Seattle. He will return to Los Angeles by way of Salt Lake. He writes to the Los Angeles exchange that business conditions generally in the Northwest are rapidly improving.

J. M. MORPHET, traveling auditor of General Film Company, left Los Angeles for Dallas, Texas, after a visit of several days in the film capital.

GUY GUNDERSON, manager of the Kleine System, which now has its offices with General Film, has survived an attack of influenza and is back at his desk on film row. H. M. Lentz, of the United Exchange, is back in harness again after a battle with influenza.

F. E. SAMUELS, special representative of General Film on the Pacific Coast, is in Los Angeles for an indefinite visit. He announces that the film business, especially from the exhibitors' point of view, will begin to steadily improve with the coming of the New Year.

"NINE-TENTHS OF THE LAW," All-Star Features release, starring Mitchell Lewis, will be shown at Clune's Broadway theatre at an early date, according to Louis Hyman, branch manager of the All-Star exchange. Mr. Hyman also announces that All-Star has purchased the rights to "Five Nights," taken from the book written by Victoria Cross and author of "Life's Shop Window."

"TOPICS OF THE DAY," from the Literary Digest, released in the Los Angeles territory by All-Star, are making a great hit at Grauman's theatre, it is announced. "Topics of the Day" have increased in popularity since the end of the war.

W. S. RAND, division manager of General Film, and H. W. Smidt, branch manager, went to San Diego last week where they called on a number of San Diego exhibitors.

CHARLES MEIGHAN, formerly manager of the Peoples Amusement company at Portland and former president of the Oregon Exhibitors' association, is in Los Angeles for an indefinite stay, where it is said that he intends to purchase a home.

LOUIS HYMAN, branch manager of the All-Star Features Distributors, announced that his company has secured the rights to "Mickey," Mabel Normand's production. He said that Sol Lesser, head of All-Star Features, will doubtless make a road show of the production, which, it is said, cost $250,000 to produce.

"UNDER FOUR FLAGS," the third, and possibly last, official Government war film, was booked for a week's run at the Alhambra theatre beginning Sunday, December 29. This picture shows the Allies in the final drive that caused Germany to sue for peace. The prices at the Alhambra during the run of the picture have been advanced to 25 cents, 35 cents and 50 cents.

Heard In Los Angeles Town

"THE CABARET GIRL," with Ruth Clifford, was booked for a week's run at the Symphony theatre, beginning January 5. It is a Universal production.

F. VAN MOURICK, owner of the Airdome and Lyric theatres at Phoenix, has leased these houses to J. Panis, beginning January 1, according to word received by David Bershon, branch manager of the Universal exchange, and C. J. Marley, manager of the Triangle exchange. Both Universal and Triangle pictures have been booked for the Airdome and Lyric under their new management.

GEORGE MAUK, of the Phoenix Amusement company, called at the Mutual exchange and signed a number of pictures for the new year.

H. J. COHEN, special representative of the New York Metro offices, was in Los Angeles a few days en route to San Francisco. He returned here later for a few days, when he will again go North, visiting Seattle and Portland, and from Portland he will visit Salt Lake and Denver. Mr. Cohen was radiating sunshine while in Los Angeles, being one of the most optimistic film men who have visited the West Coast this winter. He believes that with the beginning of the New Year the people throughout the United States will forget there was an influenza epidemic, and with the coming of peace, the motion picture business will not only resume its normal trend, but that it will be even better this coming year than in many seasons past.

NEWS pictures of the arrival of the 143rd Field Artillery, a California unit and composed mainly of Los Angeles men, in New York a few days ago were shown at the Superba theatre. This is a Hearst Universal reel. Because of the popularity of the regiment, the film was featured in the theatre's advertising, and large crowds attended the theatre to see the boys who have just returned from "over there."

DAVID BERSHON, branch manager of the Universal exchange, went to San Francisco to spend New Year's day. He returned to Los Angeles the middle of the week.

"THE WILD CAT OF PARIS," featuring Priscilla Dean, a Universal production, was shown at the Superba theatre during the week beginning January 12. A pre-view of the picture was shown in Los Angeles and it was pronounced by the exhibitors, viewing it, as one of the best Universal productions released recently.

PHIL LEVY, formerly president of the Montana State Exhibitors' League and owner of a string of theatres in Montana, has disposed of his interests in that state and has come to Los Angeles to make his home, it became known here. He is one of the best known theatre men in the West. He operated theatres in Missoula, Butte and Helena.

A BIG feature at Grauman's theatre for the week beginning Monday, December 30, was news films of the arrival of President Wilson at Brest, France, and in Paris, secured by the Hearst Universal. The negative of this film was not developed in New York but was rushed to Los Angeles so that quicker time could be made in getting the subject on the screen, Branch Manager David Bershon, of the Universal exchange, announced. A full page was utilized in the Los Angeles Examiner, Sunday, December 29, telling of the arrangement by which

"HOPE CHEST," Paramount picture, in which Dorothy Gish is the star, was the special attraction at Clune's Broadway theatre recently. Other downtown theatres in Los Angeles booking Paramount-Artcraft pictures for the same week, also, were Clune's Auditorium with D. W. Griffith's "The Greatest Thing in Life," and the California with "Arizona," Douglas Fairbanks.

FOREST McMANUS, formerly shipping clerk at the Metro exchange, and who was one of the many film exchange employes in Los Angeles to enter the service, has been discharged from the army and is back at the Metro exchange as booking clerk. Mr. McManus was in training at Camp Kearny, Linda Vista, Cal. Dwight L. Hill has been advanced to the position as special salesman for Metro, according to announcement Monday by branch manager A. B. Lamb.

Influenza Fluctuates Through Oregon

THE influenza situation in Oregon fluctuates like a stock ticker on one of those mad days of bared teeth and the bulls and the bears locked in conflict.

One day film distributors are joyous, the next discouraged, but despite the sudden closing of Salem, the capital, on December 30, the consensus of opinion among distributors is that the worst is over for film interests, and that but for a feeling of hysteria in some places the record of one-third of the towns of the state closed would be reduced to no more than ten per cent.

"There is no reason for the new scare," asserts C. M. Hill, manager for Famous Players-Lasky. People ate heartily on Christmas, caught cold as a result of the cold weather and physical congestion, and then decided to clamp the lid down tighter than ever."

Pendleton, Oregon, was closed last week, as was La Grand, but the latter town was immediately opened again. Baker, another Eastern Oregon town, is open, while Walla Walla, in Washington, and Astoria, at the mouth of the Columbia River, are also on the open list.

Medford is open, but citizens are forced to wear "flu" masks and the theatre business is at a standstill.

Idaho is in particularly bad shape, few towns permitting theatres to operate.

It is estimated that 50 of the 150 theatres in the state are closed.

Portland, having adopted quarantine, seems to have the situation well in hand and there seems no danger of a recrudescence that would force the second closing of theatres, as has happened in so many Oregon towns.

Fairbanks Leads Latest W. S. S. Drive Aided by 500 Salesmen

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS, the Artcraft star in charge of a flying squadron of 500 of the best salesmen the business houses of Los Angeles can produce, opened a Limit Pledge Campaign for War Savings Stamps.

If there was anyone in Southern California who had $1,000 hidden away in an old sock, or tied up in an old handkerchief, or held out to spend for anything besides War Savings Stamps, they took it out in the back yard and buried it, or it was doomed.

The campaign was opened with a big meeting for the salesmen only. G. A. Davidson, California State Director of the National War Savings Committee presided and chairman Motley H. Flint, for Los Angeles city and county, was in charge of arrangements for the big meeting. John T. McBean, assistant State director, was also one of the speakers of the evening.

But Manager Douglas Fairbanks was the star performer, and outlined his plan of the campaign to get every man, woman and child in the city who could afford it—and some who couldn't—to buy the limit of War Savings Stamps.

Denver Exhibitors and Distributors Encouraged over Improved Outlook

EXHIBITORS and distributors are much encouraged over the improvement in the general situation in Denver territory within the past two weeks. Curtis street houses have come back to a full normal business and all enjoyed an exceptionally good patronage during Christmas week. Manager Talbot, of the America, states that their receipts for the week were larger by 20 per cent. as compared with the corresponding week of 1917.

In territory tributary to Denver from 75 to 80 per cent. of the theatres are now open. While this is very gratifying, it is also stated that practically all of these houses are showing to small audiences regardless of the merits of the attraction. They must realize that they are facing the same experience as other locations throughout the country, where the return to normal process has been slow and gradual.

Curtis street exhibitors in Denver say they fully agree with the fellow that said life was one — thing after another. A few of them had actually begun to again enjoy the experience of playing to packed houses, when they were given another hard jolt.

The Curtis street managers will for a long time remember the night of Thursday, January 2. Early that evening hundreds of workers who had been nursing their anger for several weeks because the street railway company had advanced the carfare from 5 to 7 cents and an additional penny for transfers, decided to stage a real old-fashioned western protest.

This protest required much action, and there was plenty of it. When the workers left the factories in the outlying districts and boarded the cars, by agreement they tendered the nickel fare allowed by the company's franchise, which was refused.

When ordered off the cars they promptly ejected the conductor and motorman on many cars, took full possession and run the cars to the downtown loop district and abandoned them. Every street for many blocks in the business section was filled with empty cars and all traffic was suspended between 7 o'clock and midnight.

Fully 10,000 workers took part in the demonstrations, which consisted of cutting trolley ropes, removing fenders and putting the compressed air arrangement on each car out of commission.

Theatres did no business at all because of the excitement and for the further reason that the people in the residence section who do not own automobiles could not come downtown. The loss to Curtis street houses was approximately $3,000.

One enterprising exchange manager had pictures taken, but they have not been developed. It was "some wild night" for Denver.

Mt. Vernon, Washington, Exhibitor Wins Out Against Health Official

JUST because a man lives in a small town is no reason that he has no nerve. In fact, it takes nerve to live there. In a big town like New York or London, you're not noticed any way unless you were a spy.

Welle anyway this is about R. K. Dunham, his movie, "The Rex," the town of Mount Vernon, Wash., the "Flu" and his nerve.

The first time the "flu" hit the state, The Rex was closed for five weeks by the city fathers.

As soon as the order was given to re-open, the inspired city health officer thought he would close the show again.

This didn't please Dunham a bit. He thought it was a little too much, so he employed two attorneys, took them up to the city council, put his cards on the table and won the case.

Now the show is going full blast and others in other towns are sorry they did try this before. The "flu" ban is not entirely lifted in the Northwest states.

Idaho is undoubtedly the worst as some of the health officers have said that they will not let a show house open unless every case is wiped out forever.

All the News of Portland

"THE THEATRE BEAUTIFUL" is a title the Liberty theatre of Portland, Ore., is earning among Northwest motion picture men, such decorative effects as that which greets the public during the holiday season being responsible for such a reputation.

E. J. MYRICK, manager of the theatre, has always devoted much of his time to the beautifying of the photoplay house by the lavish use of flowers and plants, and this season, in preparation for the holidays and particularly the annual Children's Festival, he had achieved a result that has elicited many expressions of commendation.

FOR Christmas Manager Myrick banked the foyer fountain solid with a mass of real poinsettias, cedar and holly, used holly, ferns, etc., lavishly in wreaths and stringers, and gave the big stage Yuletide flavor with Christmas trees, special lights, and other pleasing effects.

J. J. PARKER of the Majestic theatre, Portland, and a squad of film men from the Northwest, including Jean Perry of Select, invaded San Francisco for the big New Year's celebration.

ART KOLSTAD of Hood River, Ore., was in Portland recently. He reports that business at his Liberty theatre was not back on a pre-"flu" basis but coming strong.

"VIRTUOUS WIVES," the Anita Stewart picture, was given an elaborate trade showing in Portland on the morning of December 28. Portland in this instance beat New York on pre-release showing, and First National officials presented the production just as it will be shown in the better theatres throughout the country.

MANAGER HOLTZCLAW of the Circle theatre not only staged a midnight matinee on New Year's Eve, but he pulled off a "Milkman's Matinee" at 2:30 a. m.

THE Portland theatres made merry on New Year's Eve with several surprise celebrations that contributed much to the "dry" state festivities.

FOR New Year's Week the Sunset theatre introduced a musical combination called "Sunset Theatre Victory Joy Jazz Band." The combination made a tremendous hit, particularly when Owner John A. Jennings offered an all-comedy bill for the band to work on.

THE Paramount re-issue of "The Virginian" broke all Sunday records for the Globe theatre, the Dustin Farnum picture drawing huge crowds to the Portland photoplay house on December 29.

C. M. HILL, manager for Famous Players-Artcraft in Oregon, has decided to remain with that concern, turning down the offer of another big concern after a talk with Herman Wobber, who was in Portland last week.

Doings of Denver Film Men

DISTRICT MANAGER RALPH O. PROCTOR, of Pathe's western division, has been spending several days in Denver as the guest of Local Manager Ward E. Scott. He "blew in" from Spokane on his way to Salt Lake City for a visit with Manager W. A. Cawkins. He was accompanied by Mrs. Cawkins. While in Denver they entertained Mr. Proctor's mother, who came from Chicago to enjoy New Year's dinner with her children. Incidentally Mr. Proctor knows the picture business from A to Z and has "done time" in every branch of its three divisions, including ownership and operation of theatres. Every local Pathe employe is unanimous in declaring Proctor a real fellow and is anxious to see him soon and often.

"WHEN A GIRL LOVES," with Mildred Harris Chaplin in the star role, was a first-run attraction at the Rivoli New Year's day.

JOHN MacMEEKIN is out on a long trip covering all of Wyoming and the Black Hills circuit, lining up on the "Lure of the Circus."

JOE YEAGER, who operates the Rex at Raton and the Rex and Isis at Trinidad, was a recent Denver visitor. He came to arrange service following the lifting of the "floo" ban at those places.

EARL NYE, manager for the Carl Ray Amusement Company, at Cheyenne, visited local exchanges last week.

S. I. SHAFFER has sold the Crystal theatre at Mitchell, Neb., to Harry Rodell. The latter formerly managed the Orpheum, at Scott's Bluff. He will now operate his Mitchell house and also the Ideal, at Morrill, Neb.

MANAGER CASSIDY, of the Exhibitors-Mutual, recently returned from Trinidad, where he placed all of the new Robertson-Cole productions with R. W. Davis, of the Palace theatre. Mr. Cassidy announces ten extra special productions for this year, among which are several choice offerings.

F. E. HINKLEY, a former well-known local exhibitor, has reopened the Bronx theatre, in South Denver. He is using Metro, Mutual and Triangle service.

E. P. BRIGGS, local manager for the American Film Company, has on exhibition at Pathe headquarters a fine collection of oil paintings of three leading stars. They are life-sized pictures of Margarita Fisher, Mary Miles Minter and William Russell. They must be seen to be appreciated. They will be disposed of to exhibitors at actual cost.

What They Do in Seattle

EUGENE LEVY of Levy's Orpheum rounded up all his employees on Christmas and all the members of his musical comedy company and tendered them a surprise dinner. While the principals and chorus girls, still in their war paint, were thus enjoying a feast in a restaurant, the patrons of the house were entertained with motion pictures.

J. VON HERBERG, manager of the Greater Theatres Company and a director of the First National, has returned from his trip to New York, where he attended a First National meeting. On his return he gave the Police Relief Fund $150 as a New Year's present. Von Herberg in an accompanying letter expressed appreciation of the capable manner in which the members of the force have handled the crowds at the Liberty, Coliseum, Mission and Strand theatres during the year of 1918.

PAUL E. JUDKINS, formerly shipper in the Goldwyn office, has returned from England, where he helped protect her coast for six months.

MR. PECK, who before going to Camp Lewis was a salesman out of the Triangle office in Seattle, was given a ten-day furlough and naturally spent a great part of his time on "Fillum Row."

MANAGER LANGERMAN of the New Grand, Portland, Ore., was a visitor on the row for a couple of days looking over some 1919 specials.

L. A. TODD, a well-known hustler along Film Row, is now out "amongst them" with the Four Square Pictures. He is well known in this territory and is sure to bring in a bunch of contracts.

SEI MUKOI, who one year ago sold out the Circuit and Electric theatres in Seattle and took a trip to Japan, has returned to Seattle. The first thing he did after landing from the boat was to run up to Film Row and pay his respects to R. R. Nave, Northwest manager of Triangle.

"THE CAPTURE OF THE GERMAN FLEET," a Universal scoop, has done a marvelous business at the Colonial, Seattle.

THE movies in and around Seattle are still discussing the advice and talk given them by Goldwyn and Rothapfel when they were in Seattle. Their advice has been taken in many instances, for some theatres that pay much attention to house decorations, ventilation, etc., have begun to keep their houses in better shapes.

DURING the holiday season the local houses did exceptionally well. All of the larger ones were elaborately decorated and their orchestras played special pieces. The Coliseum, which showed "Caruso, My Cousin," employed a well-known local tenor to sing "I Pagliacci" at each performance.

Many Christmas Events At Portland

AT the Liberty theatre, in Portland, Oregon, more than three thousand kiddies from orphanages, homes of wealth and homes of poverty were entertained by Manager Myrick in a Christmas Festival on the morning of December 24.

The Globe theatre was another Portland photoplay house to minister to the children and Manager Marquard staged a special Children's Matinee to more than one thousand youngsters from 11 to 1 o'clock.

John Stille, manager of the People's theatre, was the recipient of a beautiful token of good will from the employees of the company Christmas morning when they presented him with a magnificent solid gold match box with diamond setting suitably engraved.

Flickers on the Screens of Butte

WILLIAM R. CUTTS, associated with Frank Bailey in the old Montana Film exchange ten years ago and active in Butte theatre circles, has just returned to the city from Vancouver Barracks, Wash., where he has been with the Air Service, Spruce Department. He had the rank of captain, graduating from the second officers' training camp at the Presidio in 1917. However, "getting to Europe" he found a difficult thing, much to his regret, as he wanted to see active service.

BUSINESS is picking up with the Ansonia Amusement Company houses, according to the general manager, Merle Davis. "The bill headed by 'Odiva and the Sea Lions' started out with the biggest Saturday since I took the management of the house," he said.

EDDIE POLO, himself, starring in the Universal serial, "The Lure of the Circus," was in Butte Monday, December 30, when the first two episodes were shown at the Ansonia theatre. He made a big hit and many hundreds of Butte young people swarmed about him. Polo will appear at a number of the leading cities to help advertise the big serial.

H. B. MEYERS, manager of the new American house, now being built at Harlowton, was united in marriage December 26 at Lewistown, Mont., the bride being Miss Marie Will.

PHIL LEVY, former local showman and president of the Montana State Exhibitors' League, left this week for Los Angeles, where he will make his future home, with his wife. He has disposed of his theatre and other interests in Butte.

THE licensed sale of intoxicants came to an end in Montana the night of December 30, and Butte, the grand headquarters of Field Marshal Barleycorn through all the years since silver and copper were first found here, is now ranked among the dry cities of the nation. Showmen report good business since the demise of Bourbon and his allies and the expectation is that prohibition will increase box office receipts at theatres around 25 per cent. However, it is too soon to draw any conclusions here as yet.

PLAYING Metro, Goldwyn and Vitagraph as its headliners and using Universal fillers is the combination that is proving success at the Ansonia theatre. According to the manager, J. Marshall Taylor, business is steadily climbing and is much better than it has been in months.

Sid Chaplin Wakes Up San Francisco With New Scheme to Get Leading Woman

SID CHAPLIN, brother of the famous Charlie, has started something in San Francisco and only time will tell how it is going to finish. Sid arrived in San Francisco this week and gave out an interview with a local paper in which he announced that he had come to San Francisco to look for a pretty girl to become his leading lady. Los Angeles was unable to furnish the type of girl that Sid is looking for, but he has seen her on the streets of San Francisco and now he wants pretty girls with movie aspirations to send in their photographs to M. H. Kohn, president of the Consolidated Film Corporation, 90 Golden Gate Avenue. Afterwards Chaplin will select a number of them for personal interview. Two years ago, Sid says, his brother Charlie discovered his leading lady, Edna Purviance in this city, and he hopes to be equally successful as he finds that San Francisco is the home of America's most beautiful girls. The interview appearing in a morning paper caused something of a flurry among the fair sex, and a stream of photographs started at once in the direction of 90 Golden Gate. In the afternoon of the day of the published interview pretty feet began to wear a path in the pavement leading to the Consolidated Film headquarters. The girls evidently believed that a personal visit would bring quicker results than a mere photograph. Mr. Kohn was kept busy all afternoon telling the fair ones that Mr. Chaplin would not see them until after he had looked upon their photographs. Police protection may be needed by tomorrow to protect Film headquarters, for by that time the news will have reached every film struck girl in the city, and, as there has been no census of the feminine population of San Francisco since 1910, it would not be fair to the hopes of Los Angeles as to the results of the next census to hazard a guess regarding the number of applicants there will be after that position by tomorrow. It so happened that the local Pathe had advertised for a girl to inspect films and about 150 applications applied for the position. Mr. E. O. Child, manager of the local exchange, says that he had not heard that Sid needed a leading lady until the rush of applicants had left his establishment. Otherwise he would have been very happy to have sent up the 149 girls that he could not place as inspectors. It may be interesting to learn how Sid will come out in his search, but at present it may only be said that the end it not yet.

¶ The West Coast Edition of Motion Picture News costs us a lot of money. It costs just as much as would a separate publication published locally in Los Angeles or San Francisco. But it's worth it to us—Because it enables us to say that NO OTHER FILM PUBLICATION covers the West Coast as thoroughly, and with such intimate news and gossip as does Motion Picture News.

¶ We have often thought though—What a wonderful West Coast Edition we could get out, how much more money we could spend, how much more Service we could give—If every theatre manager in the West Coast territory sat down one night and wrote a twenty word note to his exchanges and the New York offices telling what the West Coast Edition meant to him because of its crisp, human, local items. Has it ever occurred to you? Why we could break speed limits in Service!

"HERE'S WHERE!"

A GREAT number of people have discovered a way of knowing a fine motion picture before seeing it!

It's like a conjuring trick, simple when you know how.

They have discovered that the greatest concern in the business, the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, makes the cream of all the different types of pictures.

—that these are always advertised and listed under the names Paramount or Artcraft.

—that they are the vehicles for the skill and genius of practically all the foremost stars, directors, writers, photographers, painters, craftsmen, etc.

—and that through the nation-wide distributing facilities of this great organization, millions of people in over ten thousand theatres see Paramount and Artcraft Pictures.

Pictures so marked, they have found, always take you out of yourself.

"Paramount" and "Artcraft" are handy names to identify in two huge groups, the best pictures made. Check it up for yourself.

WALLACE REID

"THE DUB"

A Paramount Picture

By Edgar Franklin Scenario by Will Ritchie Directed by James Cruze

Want To See A Good Rough House?

A LIVELY MESS that is all good nature on the surface, but dead-serious underneath?

A gang of "gentlemen thieves" notice that "Wally" jumps at the bursting of a paper bag. They think he's "yellow" and hire him to do a "bluff job" for them.

They picked a Kansas cyclone. He just romps home with the money and a girl for good measure—and he gets home CLEAN. You never saw such a scrappy boy in your life!

Music Had No Charms To Soothe HIS Savage Breast!

THE preacher was there, the witnesses were smiling, but Frederick Tile—felt like dropping dead!

The woman over whose finger he slipped the golden band was as homely as a scare-crow, and he didn't love her.

Still, by marrying her he would get $100,000. And he certainly needed the money! Isn't there some way that he could honorably get that money and still get the little girl he did love? Just leave it to John Barrymore!

HIS parents thought that his newly found wife was a questionable person because she came from "naughty" Paris. She helped to confirm their opinion when she appeared in a rather extreme gown.

But there was nothing questionable about her except her judgment in accepting his parents at their self-assessed value. The time came though—

You can always leave it to Elsie Ferguson to furnish a smashing climax. There's one in "His Parisian Wife" that you ought to see.

To Exhibitors Who Book D. W. Griffith's Artcraft Pictures

IT is necessary for the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation to withhold until release date the complete synopsis of D. W. Griffith's Artcraft Picture, "A Romance of Happy Valley." The dénouement of this extraordinary play is, I believe, a situation entirely new to the drama of stage or screen. The privileged few of us who have seen "A Romance of Happy Valley" believe sincerely that it probably is the tensest scene, the strongest in heart interest that Mr. Griffith ever has done.

Because of the novelty of this situation, Mr. Griffith naturally is anxious to protect it from any unscrupulous persons who might attempt to take it for their own use before the release of "A Romance of Happy Valley."

To help first run exhibitors, however, Mr. Griffith has permitted us to communicate in confidence a complete synopsis of the story to the managers of the exchanges of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

These managers have been instructed to divulge in strict secrecy the complete story to first run exhibitors who are entitled to know the entire plot—that they may arrange their exploitation accordingly.

After the first run showings, of course there will be no further need for secrecy as then the ownership of the plot of "A Romance of Happy Valley" will be established.

"U. S. A. Series"

2-Reel Official Films

FACTS and figures that had to be kept more or less "under cover" until the war was won are now available to the public.

The United States Government has prepared and is now ready to show through the Division of Films, a series of two-reel patriotic films, each featuring one phase of the war, one release to be made every two weeks.

The first film of the series

1—"If Your Soldier's Hit," released December 23rd, shows in complete detail the progress of the wounded soldier from battlefield through Field Hospital to Base Hospital and recuperation.

The other films in the U. S. A. Series are as follows:

2—"Wings of Victory"

A story of American achievement in the air—from the planning of the famous Liberty Motor to the day's work of an American Ace on the Western Front.

3—"Making the Nation Fit"

The story of how America took raw civilian material and converted it into A-1 marine and military stuff. The film shows also how this war-time physical fitness program can be employed with benefit in peace-time.

4—"Horses of War"

Despite the rapid development of the motor car for military purposes, the horse proved an indispensable factor in the Allied scheme of victory. A glorious chapter of war history.

5—"The Bath of Bullets"

This picture shows the part machine guns, hand-grenades, trench-mortars, and the artillery in general play in modern war—thrilling close-ups of how these destructive forces do their deadly work.

6—"The Storm of Steel"

$12,000,000,000! This film shows how the guns and munitions, for which this money was spent, were made. The Ordnance Department has a rattling good story to tell.

Available through the WORLD FILM CORPORATION, except FOR CALIFORNIA

Sol. L. Lesser,

State Council of Defense, San Francisco.

FOR MICHIGAN

Michigan War Preparedness Board, Lansing.

Goldwyn Pictures

Samuel Goldwyn presents:

Geraldine Farrar

We advise every exhibitor who has the Geraldine Farrar Star Series Goldwyn productions under contract to give his nearest Goldwyn manager increased playing time on this production.

"Shadows" is the biggest and most unusual Farrar production ever made. It is "a story of Eastern days and Alaskan nights," a stirring, exciting dramatic story of a woman swirled perilously close to the flame of the Yukon!

Millions of this great star's American and world admirers will be amazed and delighted to see her in the role of an Alaskan dance hall girl.

As in her other powerful Goldwyn productions; "The Turn of the Wheel" and "The Hell-Cat," she is supported in "Shadows" by a notable cast including Milton Sills as the hero-husband; Tom Santschi as the miner-villain and Frederick Truesdell. And there is the power of direction that you can always count on from Reginald Barker!

Goldwyn Pictures

in SHADOWS

By Willard Mack

Directed by Reginald Barker

The "Five-minute-whistle" has blown on the steamer that is to take the last passengers "outside" before winter closes in upon the frozen Yukon.

During this five minutes in the room of an Alaskan saloon-dance hall a hunted, desperate woman forces to a terrible climax the drama that casts its dark shadows upon her later life and happiness.

This woman is Cora Lamont—never before has Geraldine Farrar had such a role on stage or screen.

The man is Jack McGoff—and never before has Tom Santschi had such a role.

Willard Mack knows the mad, fevered, quick-on-the-trigger gold country—and he knows big drama that makes the pulses leap. "Shadows" in such a picture.

Prints of this exceptional production have been sent to all Goldwyn offices and we advise exhibitors to ask our managers for an immediate screening, for no one can see this without giving it more playing days.

"The Turn of the Wheel" and "The Hell Cat" justified everything we said about them for drawing power.

"Shadows" has just double the pulling power. Have you booked the Farrar series?

A Solid Chain Booking for the Entire Poli Circuit

Worcester, Springfield, New Haven, Hartford, New Britain, Meriden, Bridgeport, Scranton and Wilkes-Barre—from New England to Pennsylvania, the Poli patrons will see what the New York Strand Theatre management has pronounced "the greatest action drama of this year."

Booked by M. Kashin, the new exhibitor personality on Broadway at the Broadway Theatre as the first picture in the Symphony Theatre when that house also came under his direction.

The basic secrets of any really big and successful production are a great story made with strength and skill by a big director. With these assets the stars have a chance to show their fullest values.

Directed by T. HAYES HUNTER

is a remarkable, powerful story of the lawless West; a story of the West of romance and action; a story with "bite" and thrill in it. Filled with feats of daring horsemanship and gun-play; of reckless, bold adventure; stirring raids and romance and with the leading roles portrayed by two of the best known names in American amusements. On every hand it is acknowledged that Goldwyn in obtaining the exclusive distribution of this production has found one of the big winners of the year.

CAPITOL COMEDIES

They Nudge Each Other and Say : "Oh, Look! There Goes "Smiling Bill" PARSONS."

IN every city and town in America where "Smiling Bill" Parsons goes on his travels, to make a picture or to steal away for a rest, he finds that his reputation tips him off to the populace.

This is the penalty of popularity and the greatest distribution in the motion picture industry—the Goldwyn distribution.

"I saw you last night at the Temple," says the waiter at the breakfast table. "I like your picture this week at the Tivoli?" says the coat room maid. "Gosh, if it isn't Smiling Bill Parsons," exclaims the chauffeur. Hundreds of times a day this is repeated.

Creditable, clean, happy and worth-while comedies, 3,000 individual theatre contracts obtained by Goldwyn with the best houses of the nation—there's the answer.

Everything that Goldwyn touches is successful—but we are very careful about what we touch and indorse.

Capitol Comedies are worth and deserve the best efforts of a great organization. They have earned their place in exhibitor and public liking on quality and merit.

There are 26 Capitol Comedies a year—one every second Monday and the chief regret of the exhibitors who play them is that we do not have 52 of them, or one a week. Exhibitors advertise them regularly saying:

"This Week: Smiling Bill Parson in a Capitol Comedy."

FORD EDUCATIONAL WEEKLY

America's Biggest "First Runs" Booked Through Goldwyn the FORD EDUCATIONAL WEEKLY

LAST week's trade papers printed more than 300 names—in their news reports—of theatres signing during that period with Goldwyn to show The Ford Educational Weekly. We shall continue to announce each week as news the wholesale booking of this fine attraction that represents one of Henry Ford's great conceptions of public service.

But we wonder whether, in the vast number of names announced and to be announced, you will notice the powerful and nationally known first runs that are presenting The Ford Educational Weekly to their patrons?

The famous Stanley and the Mastbaum chain in Philadelphia; the Jones, Linick and Schaefer and Ascher Bros. chains in Chicago; the popular Majestic, Detroit; the Clemmer, Seattle; Alhambra, Toledo; Liberty, Youngstown; the million-dollar Graumann, Los Angeles; the entire Marcus Loew New York chain of theatres.

The Colonial, Buffalo; Parkway, Baltimore; Modern and Beacon, Boston; Strand, Rochester; Orpheum, Fort Wayne; Strand, Ithaca; Isis, Denver; Apollo, Omaha; Rialto, Minneapolis; Muse, Omaha; St. Regis, Trenton; American, Norfolk.

All the "big names" connected with the exhibition of motion pictures in this country are associating themselves with this attraction, assuring it under the Goldwyn distribution a bigger patronage and a greater quality patronage than it has had in the four years of its continuous and highly successful career as the stable educational of the industry.

Dear Sirs:

As a pronounced movie "fan", I was somewhat interested in the enclosed advertisement in the Boston Globe.

If you can stand a little constructive criticism, I ask that you read the last paragraph.

What kind of service is it when you "have to ask" when you can see a thing?

You should not have to ask WHEN you can see it; it should be possible to see the Pathe News just like you see your favorite newspaper—pay your money and get your paper; pay your money and you see the Pathe.

When I see it I figure my evening has been well spent; when I don't see it, I'm disappointed, no matter how good the program may be.

Now, gentlemen, it seems to me it is up to you to work up a scheme whereby the Pathe News will be shown as regular as a clock in whatever theatres you think best... Insert ads in the metropolitan papers showing where they may be seen and what will be shown, and the result will tend to make even more popular your splendid pictures.

Wishing the Pathe News a prosperous New Year, I remain,

Yours Very Truly,

PATHE NEWS

NOT a newspaper, not a magazine—yet it has the largest circulation in the world! Its circulation results from its phenomenal popularity. It now resumes the name under which it became famous—the Pathe News.

It is a motion picture. It has educated more persons to a fondness for the Silent Drama than everything else put together. Eight years ago when the word "movies" was used in contempt the great men of the nation were wont to visit the theatres where it was showing. Through it the uneducated were taught the personalities of the great men of the world; visited the great cities of the earth; by it were broadened, educated; ceased to be provincial and came to know the people of other lands.

Twenty Million Persons See Every Issue
It is shown twice a week in the best motion picture theatres everywhere. Just as it was the first of all motion picture news weeklies, so it always has been, and now is, the best. Twenty-two years of successful picture making are behind it.

Now it promises and will attain an even wider usefulness.

You should not miss a single issue. Ask the manager of your favorite theatre the days on which he shows it!

Colonel Roosevelt

The first reason why Colonel Roosevelt went in for this film—
Theodore Roosevelt was ever striving to make better Americans.

He was never above employing a popular means to that end. When he was convinced his life story would make a bully Photoplay, with plenty of punch and thrills galore and which would also breathe his gospel of Americanism, he said

“a film folks will enjoy”

“Go ahead—but no faking”

(He never could stand a fakir)

He cooperated with the producer, passed on the scenario, and one of his last acts was to approve the finished production.

If it entertains you,

Makes you see red—white and blue

More clearly than before, his purpose will have been achieved.

And remember, “The greatest fiction is truth.”

This was his second reason—

All profits whatsoever accruing to me personally until all the men are returned to their homes from the war, from the production of this scenario, will be given by me to the Red Cross and possibly other war organizations.

Exactly to the extent that the Motion Picture Public approves these pictures, it will help to provide additional means for backing the men at the front.

(Signed) Theodore Roosevelt

He wanted his profits to prove a worthy contribution to charity.

High rentals will be paid for "The Fighting Roosevelts"

Because—

In meeting Colonel Roosevelt's demand that the production be one with which his name might be associated without discredit,

and exposed over 40,000 feet of film

This required a heavy investment which the producer, Frederick L. Collins, cheerfully met in order that Colonel Roosevelt's wishes might be fulfilled.

That the production was approved by Colonel Roosevelt—one of his last acts—should be sufficient guarantee to exhibitors that the picture is really worth while.

There are 100,000,000 Americans eagerly awaiting this Heritage of the Screen

The space Newspapers have been giving Roosevelt's life and acts should convince of the public's interest.

THE PLEASURE IS MINE!!

Having passed victoriously the stress and tremendous pressure of launching my initial release, Anita Stewart in "Virtuous Wives," let me turn for a moment to what I feel is one of the genuine pleasures of my career: It is—to announce the advent in my organization of whose direction I have secured for my phenomenal star,

ANITA STEWART

I embrace this opportunity to express to the trade my admiration of Miss Weber's Genius. As an exhibitor I (and you, too) have had practical demonstration of her achievements, and the box-office is the last analysis—the acid test! In this, her record stands!

To combine with Miss Stewart's capabilities the high standard of Miss Weber's screen art, assures the trade of at least a maintenance of the record-breaking class of my first release. To me it means the realization of my ideals in production—and I am an exacting task-master!

And the first release of this magnificent director-star combination is the key to my enthusiasm—it is

from the pen of the clever Marion Orth, whose work you know—and what a cast—!

—But wait—my policy is to show you! I did and I WILL!

New Method Of Processing Film Gives Highest Quality

Mr. George K. Spoor spent years in having perfected a processing machine that would produce a uniform, high grade development throughout the length of the film, and which would at the same time eliminate the tremendous waste of the old processing methods.

He succeeded in obtaining a quality in prints that surpasses any yet produced. This has been proved not only by tests under the most exacting conditions, but through the actual processing of millions of feet.

The results of these years of work and experience are now offered to you.

National Advertising

When Exhibitors Shouted "Hooray"—The National Medium versus the Newspaper

EXHIBITORS threw their hats into the air over the article on national advertising, published recently in the NEWS and signed by John H. Kunsky, First National Exchange of Michigan.

And they cheered lustily over the address made recently by Ralph Ruffner before the film advertising men in New York.

The writer was in the field at the time and heard these expressions first hand. Approval was unanimous. It is safe to say that one thousand leading exhibitors—men who are advertising right along—would wholeheartedly O. K. each of these statements without a single reservation.

All of which would indicate that exhibitors to-day are not getting from the manufacturer the advertising co-operation they want—that something, indeed, is radically wrong.

The matter is of great importance.

Better advertising is as big and vital a factor as better pictures.

These are the two factors upon which rest, in greatest degree, the present and future stability of this business.

We are fully aware of the present obstacles in the way of better advertising.

Demand Overshadows Handicaps

THE rapid production of pictures—necessitating the preparation of advertising campaign books before the picture has been seen—results, of course, in machine-made advertising, advertising turned out like grist from a hopper, dealing similarly and superficially and altogether unsympathetically with all kinds of pictures, whatever their difference in quality and appeal.

Secondly, many exchanges won't co-operate, despite the earnest effort of the home office to establish an advertising contact with the exhibitor.

And, thirdly, many exhibitors don't appreciate fully the value of advertising.

But the point is this: Advertising the picture to the public is so necessary, it is so fundamental to the industry's success, that the present routine of production and distribution will have to be reordered to permit of better advertising.

And this reordering will happen. Demand for it will bring it about because this demand is more insistent than the obstacles now in its way.

We have contended—and we know—that some day pictures will be the most heavily and widely advertised commodity in the world. At that time, and only then, will the industry have the stability its potential size demands—namely, when it has secured a stable hold upon the great picture-going public.

This development will take time and patience. But there are ways in which it may be greatly hastened.

And the first step is to understand clearly just what the national advertising of pictures means.

* * * *

The "Why" of National Advertising

LET us approach it in this way.

The potential picture public to-day is fifty million strong—or more.

No other commodity, nationally advertised, has nearly so many possible customers. Therefore, first of all, we can't expect to reach all the public with one national medium, or a dozen or so, or with a selected string of newspapers—as is done with other advertising campaigns.

Secondly, the picture, unlike any other commodity, cannot be standardized; unlike an automobile, or a safety razor, or a package of breakfast food, you cannot make fifty-two pictures just alike in quality. Therefore you cannot employ general publicity as general publicity is used with other nationally advertised products to create steady, year-around customers.

Thirdly, the distribution of pictures is utterly unlike the distribution of any other nationally advertised commodity. Other commodities stay on the dealer's shelves; pictures don't. After you have decided to buy a safety razor—through advertising—you know you can buy it at the nearest drug store at your own convenience. But with pictures, if you waited a few days, you might have to chase one from New York to Chicago.

Fourthly, the advertising of pictures, unlike any other nationally advertised commodity, goes hand in hand, and should, with editorial news matter, designed to cater to and maintain a news interest in the greatest of all public amusements.

* * * *

Hit Directly—Through Newspapers

SO, to capitulate:

How can fifty millions of people be reached? Through newspapers. Not a limited string of newspapers, but through all good newspapers everywhere. Remember, the public is fifty millions strong.

How can you best advertise a product whose quality and appeal differ with each release?

Through newspapers which can take and publish advertisements within twenty-four hours.

How can you fit advertising to the peculiar distribution of pictures; how can you advertise them where they are when they are?

Through newspapers, or through billboards provided they tell where and when the picture is playing.

How can you secure that simultaneous news matter, which if properly done is of such force in maintaining public interest in pictures as an entertainer?

* * * *

Which Medium Can Cooperate?

THROUGH newspapers only, where the news matter can be timed with the appearances—the definitely stated appearances—of the pictures. Not through one newspaper, mind you, selected because of an agency rating, but through all good newspapers, because the selection of one is certain to destroy the editorial cooperation of all the others.

To sum up then: To reach so great a public, greater by far than that of any other advertised commodity; to tell this public about pictures which must be described individually, and to advertise successfully a product whose life at any given point is from one to seven days, you must, if you are after national advertising, make newspapers, all good newspapers, the very backbone of your campaign.

The selection of newspapers in this huge campaign should be made largely by the exhibitor.

The exhibitor should have some hand in the preparation of copy, or at least the selection of copy, best fitted to his sectional public.

The exhibitor, we believe, will gladly put his dollar against the manufacturer's dollar in support of such national advertising.

* * * *

Longer Runs in New York

CHAPLIN'S "Shoulder Arms" ran two weeks at the Strand and eight weeks at the Broadway. It is now admitted that the picture could have run much longer at the Broadway. It is even claimed that should Chaplin produce four such pictures a year, or three, that each could run continuously and successfully till the next appeared.

Week runs have been a settled policy at the big Broadway picture houses since the Strand opened in an era of frequent changes and made an immediate success with "The Spoilers" of week runs on Broadway.

The argument against longer runs has been that these big photoplay houses have definite clienteles which must not be disturbed. When the Rivoli opened with all seats filled and no falling off at the Rialto, Mr. Rothapfel felt that his former clientele had decided to go twice a week instead of once. This idea of the more or less regular attendance of a definite clientele and the fear of losing it is, of course, the very same factor that has always militated against longer runs. It seems to apply to New York as it does throughout the field. The same fear was in vogue, in fact, when the Strand first broke the ice with its week runs. There are some photoplay houses to-day, however, which are not afraid to extend the runs—and do so successfully—of these features to which Broadway only allows a week.

"The Heart of Humanity" is now in its third week at the Broadway, and apparently able to run several weeks longer.

Will we not produce this year at least twelve photoplays capable each of an average of four weeks on Broadway?

And in this connection arises the interesting question: Will the new Capitol theatre, at Broadway and 51st Street, decide to open its wedge with this longer-run policy? Isn't the time about ripe?

* * * *

The Star Combination

IMMEDIATELY following our appeal last week for better pictures as against the machine-made kind, comes, with coincidence, the momentous announcement that Griffith, Pickford, Fairbanks, Hart and Chaplin have united to produce and distribute pictures "to protect the great motion picture public—from machine-made entertainment."

We believe strongly, and reiterate that some advancement in picture making is highly imperative; and we believe that it will be made on a general scale.

Whether it has to come from the stars, remains to be seen. Stars are prime factors in motion picture entertainment, but they are not by any means the only factors. And we don't believe they will be the only factors.

Again, whether this advancement will be made by these particular stars, producing under new conditions as against present ones, remains also to be seen. That will, obviously, depend upon what these new producing conditions are; and also, as importantly, what the distributing arrangements will be, which can take care, with all around profit and satisfaction, of these new kinds of productions. The exhibitor would undoubtedly welcome the privilege of booking what he wants without taking what he doesn't want.

A great deal remains to be seen: and this discussion had best wait until the industry is assured that the star union, as definitely announced to us by telegraph, is an accepted fact.

* * * *

Big and Little Pictures

AN exhibitor prophesies that there will be a big demand this year for independent releases.

Of course he refers to what are termed "specials," meaning independent releases of exceptional box office appeal.

Other exhibitors indicate a somewhat sudden and large demand for two reel subjects. This is interesting, indeed, in view of the fact that feature dramas are supposed to have thrown the old two-reel length into the discard.

Then, we all know, of the fast rising popularity of the one-reel subject, the scenic, news reel and short length novelty in general. The demand for these subjects is particularly strong in the leading and largest theatres.

What does it all mean?

Simply this, it would seem: that program features will have to be better made. They will have to be based upon stories necessitating five reels and not upon stories which the public would rather see in two reels. Five reel subjects, despite the fact that for three years they have made up the backbone of theatre programs, will no longer attract the public just because they are five reels long.

Hence the exhibitor's anxiety for open dates and independent productions of big size and quality; and hence the demand for short subjects to strengthen a program that too often is weak in the middle.

W. A. Houston

Dealing in Personalities

Mixing the News with the Rumors

"Doc" WILLATT is back again on the Rialto. Asked how he found Florida's sunny clime, he replied, "It ain't."

To keep in style H. PATHE LEHRMAN went and got the "flu." Everything reported O. K. now.

Just for the sake of an argument—read "Two Sides—Who's Right?" on the page following this popular one. It's a peppery slam-bang battle over our old friends the High-Salaried Stars. Either side of the argument will make you sore as a bat, while the other angle will have you shouting "Them's my sentiments." And isn't that the sort of reading matter you want?

LIEUTENANT BERNARD FINEMAN is back—after a long engagement with the justly famed Treat-Em-Rough Boys. He is once more Paramounting. Welcome home, regular feller.

Hard luck just trails us. On our desk a note that BETTY SHANNON—more formally, Mrs. Perry Ramsaye—dropped in to say howdy while we were out.

JOHN H. TIBBETTS, British chief for Inter-Ocean, is expected in these parts any day.

Any exhibitor who misses the live wire idea on page 536 has no one but himself to blame. He certainly can't blame us for we are telling you here that it is the idea of the year. Comes from W. C. Patterson, manager of the Criterion, Atlanta, Ga. Tells of results he is having helping soldiers to get jobs. Suggests making the screen a national employment agency. Simply done, too. He tells you how. Go to it—boys.

Our sympathy is extended to LOUIS REID, managing editor of The Mirror, on the loss of his recently-born baby, a victim of the influenza.

JOE REDDY, formerly of The Telegraph, is back in our midst, wearing Uncle Sam's khaki, carrying an honorable discharge and receiving a royal welcome.

JAMES QUIRK, of Photoplay, was a visitor to THE NEWS office this week. All smiles and cheer after looking over Earl Hammons' reports on the Screen Supplement bookings.

W. G. RUDOLPH, eastern representative for Harry Garson, will be on his way to Los Angeles when this appears. Important conferences in the wind.

REMEMBER Kalem's "Midnight at Maxim's"? Just an ordinary picture, but it cleaned up a fortune because the hicks fell over each other to see what a real devilish Broadway cabaret was like.

Two men had prints of the picture in Australia. One played it as "a fillum," and it fell flat. The other changed the title for local consumption to something about the "Revels in a London Night Club," circumscribed his advertising, dressed his lobby with all the pretty gal pictures available—and made a record rivaling any of the later big specials.

The one fellow had "show brains."

And he still has them. The proof being that C. L. Yearsley, who had gone from America to Australia, was brought back again by J. D. Williams to preside as advertising manager of First National.

Yes, C. L. Yearsley was the man who displayed "show brains."

And C. L. Yearsley is the man—still displaying "show brains."

"He Likes to Keep Busy Right Along"

"WINNIE SHEEHAN is laid up with rheumatism."

Such was the burning text of a telegram from our Pacific Coast offices this week.

We know what caused it.

The war is over—and William Fox hasn't engaged in a charity drive for close to three months. Winnie has nothing but his motion picture worries on his mind just now. We'll bet he has at least an hour of free time in every twenty-four.

'Stoomuch—for a dynamo of energy like Winnie Sheehan. War or no war, William Fox will have to dig up some more charity drives so Winnie can get back to the old schedule of forty-eight hours' work in every twenty-four.

Maybe a campaign for Indigent Trade Paper Editors, or, after July 1, for Homeless Picture Reviewers.

Something must be done.

Just a Few Odds and Ends

HARRY REICHENBACH is another fillum person scheduled for a trip to Los Angeles. Oiling the machinery for the exploitation of the MacCauley League of Nations special.

H. A. SPANUTH, of Commonwealth Pictures, Chicago, was seen on the White Way on Wednesday.

It wasn't much of a week for rumors. With all the big fillum boys out in Los Angeles we were given a real rest in New York—but, oh boy, what a rumor factory the Alexandria must have been. We'll bet that Los Angeles heard of more near-mergers and almost star shiftings in the last two weeks than it ordinarily does in a year. A few of the wild ones drifted East, but quickly died of neglect and starvation.

EARL GULICK wants his name mentioned on this page. He won't get it until the bill-posters learn to advertise in trade papers. So there!

Received a cheery line from Ed. ROSENBAUM, JR., now out on the Coast for Fox. Funny how these former Broadway hounds all pull that "grand and glorious California" stuff.

Had a chat with ARTURO HERMANDEZ-MEJIA, inventor of the new Colorgraph—soon to reach the market. Real color with regular projectors is the proposition. Keep your eyes on it.

'The most interesting news story of the week concerns the fight of Arizona exhibitors against the attempt of authorities to close their houses because of the "flu." One court has upheld their claims, declaring enforced closing discriminatory. Now the State authorities propose to carry the fight further. A convention of exhibitors, with Los Angeles exchanges represented, is scheduled. Page 531 carries the story.

But out of all the Los Angeles rumors came the one big, smashing story of the year—the "Big Five." Pickford, Fairbanks, Chaplin, Griffith and Hart in one producing and distributing combination! Oh, boy!

World Film and United Pictures are talking business, we hear. It's a great life if you don't trip up on a merger.

"His Ideas Can Put 'em Over"

Put "WELCOME" On Your Screen!

W. C. Patterson, of the Criterion, Atlanta, Georgia, Comes Across with a Bang-Up Idea—Go to This One Quick!

WE can't imagine a picture trade paper without an Exhibitors' Advisory Board. There are thirty-six live showmen on the Motion Picture News contributing staff, each one of them working as diligently and unselfishly for our readers as any member of our office organization.

Just to prove it. Here's a bang-up idea received this week from Contributing Editor W. C. Patterson—manager of the big new Criterion Theatre, Atlanta, Ga.—that every showman in the country can hop to quickly with sure-fire results. Let Mr. Patterson speak:

"DEAR MR. JOHNSTON: The idea suggested itself to me that the exhibitors in Motion Picture News Family could be of great aid to soldiers that are being discharged from the service in securing positions. This is especially true of the houses that are near cantonments.

"Here at the Criterion we have tried the matter out a bit and have been successful to the extent of securing jobs for three discharged soldiers in this one week. We worked it by first running a slide reading:

Attention: Discharged Soldiers! The Criterion Will Help You Secure a Position. Leave Your Name, Address, Age and Occupation at the Box Office.

"Several soldiers took advantage of the offer and when we had secured this material we ran such slides as the following at the beginning and end of each performance:

*The Following Discharged Soldiers Need
Work: Traveling Salesman—Auto Mechanic—Carpenter. Inquire at Box Office*

We Are Trying to Secure Positions for Several Discharged Soldiers. If You Need Help Call Us Up

"The general idea of the whole thing is to make the theatres an employment agency throughout the country.—W. C. Patterson."

MAN ALIVE!—Hop to this quick! Don't hesitate because you are not near a cantonment, or there are not many returned soldiers in your town now. Go to it now—for the moral effect on your patrons. Let the mothers, fathers, sisters and sweethearts of the boys in khaki know that your theatre is ready to go the limit to help the Victory Boys.

The big question of the hour is—A Job For Every Soldier. If every exhibitor reader in Motion Picture News Family grabs this idea on the run the motion picture will go up sky-high in the public's estimation.

And you and your theatre? Say—you'll be the most popular man in town. Go to it boys—and just to prove to us our contention that News readers are the Live Ones—drop us a postal telling us what you have done and any further suggestions you care to make.

"Big Five" in Mammoth Combination

Pickford, Fairbanks, Griffith, Hart and Chaplin Put Up Half Million in Bonds Preparatory to Organization of Own Production and Distribution—Will Fulfill Present Contracts

LOS ANGELES (Special to Motion Picture News).—The seething rumor caldron has burst—and right plunk in the center of the picture arena has landed the United Artists' Association.

That title being the temporary name adopted by the "Big Five" of picture production—Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, William S. Hart, Charles Chaplin and David Griffith—organized to form their own producing and distributing machinery.

Rumors current here hint that the fine hand of Hiram Adams and Benjamin Schulberg is seen in the new organization and that these prominent film men will be later announced as the distribution executives for the "Big Five."

Backed by Real Money

The new combination of all the top-rung producers is backed by a half million in surety bonds, each of the units having put up one hundred thousand dollars as security that they would go through with any moves taken by the United Artists' Association.

It is believed in Los Angeles that the organization as now formed will be but the nucleus of still further ambitious efforts. It is hinted that other big stars will be included before the organization is definitely perfected, the eventual formation assuring one release each week.

Another camp of doubters has arisen out here who declare that too much faith should not be put in the ultimate carrying out of the "Big Five's" plans as now scheduled. These "doubting Thomases" see in the combination an ideal means of effecting producing efficiency, but at the same time dictating to distributing organizations already in existence, and in the past anxious to contract for the services of various members of the "Big Five."

Started Monday—Closed Wednesday

The plans for the new organization are said to have originated at a meeting in Griffith's Studio, on Monday, culminating in an agreement reached at Syd Chaplin's home on Tuesday evening. The official statement was issued on Wednesday evening.

Spokesmen for the combination are emphatic in their declaration that a complete new distribution organization will be formed and that the members will probably cooperate in one producing plant.

Coincident with the statement that the members of the new merger will fulfill all present contracts came the following information about those contracts: Douglas Fairbanks will complete his present agreement with Famous Players-Lasky in February; Hart's contract ends in July; Griffith has two more pictures to be delivered to Artcraft; Pickford is contracted for three productions to First National; Chaplin must deliver six more.

It is probable that David Griffith will be elected president of the amalgamation of talent as soon as a definite name has been selected and the schedule calls for the election of officers.

The Official Statement

Following is the official statement issued on behalf of the "Big Five" on Wednesday evening:

"A new combination of motion picture stars and producers was formed yesterday, and we, the undersigned—in furtherance of the artistic welfare of the motion picture industry, believing we can better serve the great and growing industry of picture production have decided to unite our work into one association, and after finish of existing contracts which are now rapidly drawing to a close to release our combined productions through our own organizations.

"This new organization is to embrace the very best actors and producers in the motion picture business—headed by the following well-known stars: Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, William S. Hart, Charley Chaplin and D. W. Griffith Productions, all of whom have proven their ability to make productions of value both artistically and financially.

"We believe this is necessary to protect the exhibitor and the industry itself, thus enabling the exhibitor to book only pictures that he wishes to play and not force upon him (when he is booking films to please his audiences) other program films which he does not desire. Believing that as servants of the people we can best serve the people.

"We also think that this step is positively and absolutely necessary to protect that great motion picture public from the threatening combinations and trusts that would force upon them mediocre productions and machine-made entertainment."

Merger Talk Forced It

Repeated reports that First National and Famous Players-Lasky were about to merge is given as the immediate cause for action of the five members. Adolph Zukor, Samuel Goldwyn and Winnie Sheehan are among the film men who held conferences with First National directors during the convention of the latter just concluded.

No statement regarding various rumors was issued by the First National directors at the close of their sessions. They first transacted business pertaining to franchise adjustments and then are said to have considered several stars. They completed their work on Thursday, then leaving for the East.

Clara Kimball Young has arranged to produce "Eyes of Youth," the successful

Al Woods play. It is said that Miss Young may be found in the final line-up of the United Artists' Association.

Much of the interest of the week was centered in the attempts to sign Douglas Fairbanks, whose contract with Famous Players-Lasky is so near its termination. Adolph Zukor, Samuel Goldwyn and First National were among the bidders before the United Artists' proposition spilled all the beans.

Mayer Plans Trip to the Coast

Louis B. Mayer, who has just launched Anita Stewart in her first production, "Virtuous Wives," is planning a trip to the Pacific Coast very soon. The object of the trip is twofold, first to rest up after a strenuous campaign, and second to get a closeup of Stewart's work under the direction of Lois Weber.

Speaking of the proposed trip, Mayer declared: "Of course (he explained), I really need a rest, for between my theatres, my exchanges and my producing, I've certainly had to go some during the past few months. On top of that the old 'flu' got me for a while, and it has left its effects on me. But I can frankly say that my real reason in making the trip at this time is to keep in touch with the production of the Stewart productions under the direction of Lois Weber. You know since arranging with Miss Weber to direct, I have as yet had no opportunity of seeing her and expressing personally the satisfaction I feel in securing her to direct Miss Stewart's—and I might add my own destinies—in the producing field. All my negotiations with Miss Weber leading up to the signing of our contract, were carried on by wire, as she was on the coast and could not come east, and it was not possible for me to jump out there at the time."

Important Changes Noted in Denver Theatres

An important change in the personnel of the Theatre Operating Company, of Denver, Colo., is announced. Messrs. L. B. Brown and A. F. Meghan have relinquished all connection with the Princess and Rialto theatres on Curtis street.

These two theatres are now operated by H. E. Ellison and George Greaves, and the Strand, the Isis and the Rivoli will be operated by Mr. Brown and Mr. Meghan.

For some time past all five theatres have been conducted by the Theatre Operating Company, which resulted in a greater strain upon Mr. Ellison than he could physically endure. This is understood to be the principal reason for the change.

Mr. Greaves' time and attention is largely occupied in connection with the Moore & Greaves Amusement Company, which operates a chain of theatres in Colorado and Wyoming.

Influenza Troubles West Coast

Many Studios Partially Crippled Yet and Theatre Owners Fear Another
Closing of Los Angeles Houses

ACCORDING to reports from the West Coast the epidemic of influenza manifests itself spasmodically even at this late date, and it is stated that a great many members of the film colony are ill, and that there is hardly a studio in Los Angeles that does not have one or more employees absent because of influenza.

The main topic at the weekly luncheons of the Theatre Owners of Southern California is the prospects of the theatres again being closed because of the reported increase in the number of persons ill with influenza.

Only recently, Chairman F. R. MacDonald called to the attention of the exhibitors the action taken by the City Administration in calling a special meeting of the advisory committee of the Board of Health which up to that time had not made reports or recommendations as to what policy should be proceeded with by the Board of Health to eradicate the epidemic of the disease.

Chairman MacDonald made a suggestion that every effort should be made by the exhibitors to prevent a repetition of the recent closing of theatres, and also that an effort be made to educate the people with respect to the sanitary conditions existing in the theatres.

The closing of theatres recently, MacDonald held, has caused many to believe the places of amusement were breeders of disease germs. To best carry on such work as this, he suggested the publication of a small newspaper that would give the program of all theatres to be distributed as programs by all theatres in the city. The plan met with approval of many of the theatre owners.

Judge Willis Brown, maker of the boy films released by General, was guest of honor at one of the meetings, and gave his views of what the people wanted to see on the screen. He claimed that they dislike treachery, and the triangle is more than threadbare. His experiences as a Chautauqua speaker for eight years, he stated, brought him to the conclusion that everyone wants to see life, and life portrayed with an underlying theme of joy and love. In other words, he believes that stories of youth are what the adults, as well as the youth desire.

W. B. Tuteur, president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association of Kansas City, and owner of the Troost and Empire theatres in that city, who spent a month in Los Angeles, was also a guest at the weekly luncheon recently, and spoke of the experiences of Kansas City theatre men in battling with the influenza epidemic and street-car strikes there.

When announcement was made recently that, Mary Pickford was ill with the disease, her illness became the most talked of subject at all studios. Frequent bulletins were issued, and newspapers were constantly in touch with the mother of perhaps the best known screen actress.

Others prominent in filmdom who were reported as ill with the disease were Winny Sheehan, general manager of the Fox Film Corporation, who went to Los Angeles to spend two weeks before going to Europe; Lou Seiler, assistant general manager; Henry Lehrman, vice-president and director general of Sunshine Comedies, Inc.; Ham Beall, head of the Universal City publicity department, and Mark Larkin, publicity writer for Mary Pickford.

E. J. LeSaint, Fox director, returned to the studios for work after an absence of two weeks, and Mabel Normand is now said to be able to resume work in "Sis Hopkins."

THAT JOB!

Give It to a Victory Boy and Win Two Ways

THAT job you have to get a man for soon—are you going to give it to a soldier or sailor? Are you going to win two ways—by giving yourself a cheery patriotic feeling and by getting a man who has proven his worth?

Motion Picture News has thrown its classified columns open free of charge to men discharged from the service seeking to re-establish themselves in the picture industry.

And we thus give you a chance to make good—with yourself and for yourself.

Turn to Page 586 and read the Classified Ads. Some corking good men are represented in that column this week. Perhaps just the man you want.

Adolph Zukor Confers in Los Angeles

Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, is reported busily engaged in conferences with Cecil B. De Mille, D. W. Griffith, Douglas Fairbanks, Thomas H. Ince, Mack Sennett and other allied producers for Paramount and Artcraft, at the California studios. This is Mr. Zukor's regular winter trip to the Coast.

"I visited a number of cities on my way to the Coast," said Mr. Zukor, "and found that conditions in the industry are improving generally following the period of uncertainty during the recent epidemic. This is subsiding everywhere, I found, and business is picking up generally. The future, as I see it, is most reassuring."

Mr. Zukor, during the early days of the influenza scare, was chairman of the committee which arranged for the cessation of releasing activities for a period of five weeks and thus saved the industry from chaos.

During his stay on the Coast plans for the big productions during the year to come are being discussed by Mr. Zukor and his associates, but no definite arrangements have as yet been announced.

Fred C. Quimby Recovers from Influenza

Fred C. Quimby, general sales manager of Pathe Exchanges, Inc., has practically recovered from the attack of influenza which has confined him to his home for some time. Mr. Quimby has had more than his share of bad luck lately, as Mrs. Quimby was seriously ill from the same disease for some weeks, and just as she was able to be about he was stricken.

However, his physicians pronounced his case a mild one, and he expects to be back on the job in a few days and busy at his task of speeding up the sale of the Pathe product.

Richmond Hopes to Keep Houses Open

With a daily average of only fifty new cases of influenza, with two or three deaths, the motion picture men of Richmond, Va., are still hopeful that the new cases will continue at a minimum rate so as to prevent the health officers from issuing a repetition of the October orders, which closed all the theatres, schools and churches. Some people in Richmond have contended that the public places were reopened too soon.

In Petersburg the restrictions on motion picture theatres preventing children under sixteen years of age attending performances were removed January 13.

Los Angeles May Close for Full Week

According to reports from Los Angeles, January 16, the Los Angeles City Council threatens to pass an ordinance closing everything, on account of the influenza scourge, for the period of a week. The ordinance would, of course, exclude necessary business, but the theatres would not come under this heading.

The influenza situation on the Coast is getting back to where it was during the previous closed period, according to reports.

Mary Pickford Recovers Steadily

It was reported by wire from the West Coast, January 16, that Mary Pickford is recovering from her recent attack of influenza, and will shortly attempt to take up her studio work. The studio is closed for three weeks, delaying the production of "Daddy Long-Legs."

Miss Pickford's brother, Jack, has been ill at a Los Angeles hospital, but is reported out of danger.

"Flu" Record on Closing in Illinois Town

At Arenzville, Ill., they feel that they have established the long distance record for keeping close because of the recent influenza scare.

The theatre there was closed on October 8, 1918, and remained closed until January 11, 1919, a total of three months and three days.

Arizona Exhibitors Win Out in Test Case

WESTERN exhibitors have won the first victory on record in connection with the forced closing of theatres due to the influenza epidemic.

Sitting in Superior Court on January 11, Judge Stanford of Arizona rendered a sweeping decision in favor of J. E. Rickards, of the Strand Theatre, and C. A. Dickerson, of the Columbia Theatre, both of Phoenix, in their appeal from Justice Court where both had been fined fifty dollars each for opening their theatres in opposition to the specially enacted ordinance prohibiting motion picture theatres running during the second influenza epidemic.

The case was decided on the plea of the defendants' attorneys that the ordinance was discriminatory and unconstitutional. Judge Stanford, in reviewing the testimony, said it was the most flagrant case of discrimination ever brought before him, and held that there was no evidence to show that theatres were any more responsible for the second epidemic than the crowded stores, badly ventilated churches or other public places not included in the ordinance. He scored the City Attorney and advised that he draft an ordinance covering all public places as well as stores and other spots where crowds gather if he wishes, but added that he did not think the means justified the end.

The theatres in question are now open, and hundreds of patrons have sent congratulations. No attempt has been made to enforce other closing measures in Phoenix, but Globe, Miami and other mining centers are fighting the same kind of battle with the Phoenix decision as their guide. Many spots in the west have wired for a certified copy of the ruling.

According to late reports, the theatre owners have called a meeting for January 20 at Phoenix to organize and prevent legislation detrimental to film interests. All Los Angeles exchanges which supply Arizona territory expect to be represented at the convention, and eighty per cent of the theatre owners intend to be present.

Illness and deaths from the third influenza epidemic have alarmed the country, but theatres have profited by the past and intend to stick together for mutual benefit in the future.

Mrs. Carl Laemmle Dies of Pneumonia

Recha Stern Laemmle, wife of Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Film Manufacturing Co., following a short illness, succumbed Monday morning, January 13, at the family residence, New York City. Mrs. Laemmle contracted influenza shortly after New Year's Day and despite efforts of physicians pneumonia, which caused her death, developed.

Mrs. Laemmle is survived by two children, Rosabelle, aged seventeen, and Julius, aged eleven. Funeral services were held from the Laemmle home, 378 West End avenue, Wednesday morning, January 15, and as a tribute of respect to the memory of Mrs. Laemmle employees in Universal exchanges all over the world suspended work for a period of five minutes. Employees of Universal exchanges subscribed to a fund to purchase flowers, but at the request of the family the fund was turned over to a charitable organization, for which Mrs. Laemmle was a devoted worker. Mrs. Laemmle was forty-three years of age.

Winnipeg Exhibitors Help the Employees

The exhibitors of Winnipeg, Man., met the Manitoba Cabinet in an important conference on January 7 for the purpose of presenting an alternative plan for the reimbursing of theatre employees of Winnipeg for loss of wages due to the influenza epidemic.

The Manitoba Government had planned to grant a rebate of the Amusement Tax to the exhibitors so that the latter could make special grants to employees in lieu of wages. The theatre managers have presented another plan to the Government.

No statement was issued by either side following the conference, which lasted upwards of an hour. Intimation was made, however, that the whole matter will be referred finally to the Manitoba Legislature.

Association Helps to Fight Evil

Reports Indicate Exhibitors Appreciate Aid in Educational Campaign to Keep Houses Open While Influenza Is Being Routed

ACCORDING to reports, the country-wide campaign of education instituted by the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry agitating in favor of keeping the motion picture theatres open as a means of combating the epidemic of influenza the sustaining of public morale and the prevention of panic has been received with favor and enthusiasm by the exhibitors of the country.

The material sent out by the Association, consisting of a copy of a letter by Dr. Royal S. Copeland, Health Commissioner of New York City, a reprint of a long article in a New York daily paper, a chart and statistics provided by the United States Department of Commerce showing the comparatively small death rate of New York where the theatres remained open and the high death rate of the other first-class cities where the theatres were closed, filled the requirements of the exhibitors to impress their local health authorities with the utter futility of closing down the motion picture theatres as a means of combating the epidemic.

The fact that the Spanish Influenza is a comparatively new disease, especially to this generation, left public health officials very much undecided as to the best means of combating it. In a condition of demoralized panic and feeling the necessity of doing something as a means of counteracting critical public opinion they picked upon the motion picture theatres.

That this procedure was utterly wrong and ineffective was conclusively proved by the experience of Dr. Copeland in New York, where the theatres were kept open and the death rate was next to the lowest of any first-class city in the United States.

The publication and circularization of this letter and the material that was sent with it by the National Association has had the effect of convincing other public health officials throughout the country that the well-ventilated sanitary motion picture theatre, if kept open, is one of the greatest and strongest forces that can be employed to combat the plague, sustain the public morale and prevent panic.

That the exhibitors of the country have been greatly benefited by the work which the National Association has done in this respect is evidenced by the numerous telegrams and letters that have been received from all over the United States requesting additional copies of the material which was sent out.

In many cases live-wire exhibitors realizing the importance of this material have worked in intimate co-operation with their local papers and have succeeded in having all of this material reprinted.

The Saenger Amusement Company of New Orleans were so impressed with the value of the material sent them that they immediately wrote requesting that the same material be sent to a long list of theatres in that State which they enclosed.

The Northwest Film Board of Trade of Seattle, Wash., telegraphed to the World Film Corporation a request for 500 copies of Dr. Copeland's letter, as well as 500 copies of the article reprinted from the New York Times, with a view to spreading the information contained in them throughout their territory.

Ventilation Ordinance

An ordinance aimed to secure ventilation in motion picture theatres, and other places where large numbers of people gather, was considered last week by the Council Committee on Public Buildings of Richmond, Va. Action was deferred in order to hear from property-owners.

Rothacker Makes Survey in Los Angeles

Watterson Rothacker of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company of Chicago, visited Los Angeles last week to make a thorough survey of the motion picture industry condition there with a view of establishing a branch of his big Chicago plant on the Coast to take care of the negative and trial print making for patrons of his plant.

"It is my desire to establish a laboratory out here that will give proper attention to negative and trial prints. Our laboratory experience has shown us that the industry needs such an institution," declared Mr. Rothacker. "Most producing companies treat their negatives as step-sons, and because of this, laboratories making the release prints are given a great deal of trouble with incomplete or badly mixed continuity. It is a strenuous task for the release print making laboratory to serve its patrons as we desire to serve them.

"With a laboratory at the producing city we can establish a better service and one that will insure work that is more prompt, and be of far greater service to our patrons. Since coming to the Coast I have visited many of the laboratories, but as yet have made no definite plans with respect to the West Coast laboratory for my company."

Mr. Rothacker went to the Coast with members of the First National Exhibitors' Association, and plans to spend a week or ten days among the producing studios.

West Coast Film Men Back from Service

Many former members of the West Coast film colony who have been in the war service are returning to Los Angeles each week. During the past week Wallace MacDonald, who has been with the Canadian troops, has returned to Los Angeles. Frank E. Lowry, who was with the 32nd Regiment Heavy Artillery, has also returned.

Eddie Gribbon is back from the navy, as is also Paul Dowling, now doing publicity for Jack Pickford. Carlyle Robinson, former publicity writer for Charles Chaplin, received a commission as second lieutenant, and reached the port of embarkation before the armistice was signed, and has since been mustered out and is back in Los Angeles.

Actors' Ball Looms Big

The Actors' Ball, which is scheduled for February 7 at Webster Hall, New York, promises to be one of the biggest affairs of the kind during the season. It is pointed out that because balls have been a scarcity owing to war conditions, this one should go down in players' history as a great event. All Broadway is eagerly awaiting the date.

The Actors' Ball this year is given in farewell to the Dixieland Jazz Band, Bee Palmer and a number of artists sailing for London to join the de Courville shows. The fact that the ball is under the personal direction of Frank Hale insures its success.

Few Changes in War Revenue Bill

The Senate and the House conferees on the war revenue bill agreed January 14 in Washington on tax rates on luxuries, semi-luxuries, amusement admissions and club dues. Virtually all of the Senate's rates on luxuries and semi-luxuries were accepted by the House conferees. Chairman Simmons of the Senate managers said:

"As the rates affect the motion picture theatres of the country very little, exhibitors are not expected to show much interest in the action. Under the agreement the amusement admission tax will be 1 cent on each 10 cents up to 30 cents and 2 cents on each dime paid in excess of 30 cents. As the majority of motion picture theatres do not go above the 30-cent rate, there will be no difference in that quarter. The 50-cent tickets, however, will demand a 7-cent tax in the future, in comparison with the 5-cent tax of the past. Dollar tickets will exact a 17-cent tax."

The House rate of 2 cents on each 10 cents paid for admissions to roof gardens, cabarets and similar establishments was adopted, as was the House rate of 25 per cent. instead of the Senate rate of 10 per cent. on theatre boxes.

It is estimated that about $75,000,000 in revenue will be derived annually from amusement admissions under the conference agreement.

Utah Theatre Managers Elect Officers

At the annual meeting of the Utah Theatre Managers' Association held at Salt Lake City the following officers were elected: Frank Newman, Pantages theatre, president; M. H. Hanaeur, Broadway theatre, and George L. Mayne, vice-presidents; George E. Carpenter, secretary; M. E. Mehese, treasurer.

Meetings are to be held on the first and third Fridays of each month at the Commercial Club, and an effort will be made to include every exhibitor in the State.

Quinn Heads Cooperative Association

Glenn Harper, secretary of the Theatre Owners' Association of Los Angeles, wired MOTION PICTURE NEWS under date of January 14 that the Motion Picture Cooperative Association was organized in that city January 13, with J. A. Quinn as president and director general.

The following committee has been formed from among the endorsers of Mr. Quinn's plan: F. P. Fay, R. D. List and D. D. Sayer, financial advisers; Mary Pickford, Frank Garbut, D. W. Griffith, Thomas H. Ince, Douglas Fairbanks, Charles Chaplin, Mack Sennet and Smith of Vitagraph, producer advisers; exhibitors' advisory board is composed of presidents of various exhibitor leagues of the United States and Canada; Rex Beach, Rob Wagner, Harry Garr and other writers are on the literary advisory board; Fannie Ward, George Beban, Mabel Normand, Florence Turner and other players include the artists' advisory board.

Mabel Condon, King Victor, Gus Inglis, casting advisory board; Frank Beal, Maurice Tourneur, D. W. Griffith, Thomas H. Ince, Lois Weber and others, directors' advisory; David Bershon, Charles Marley, R. E. Walsh, distributors; Philip Rosin, Dal Clawson, Eugene Gaudio, cameramen; James G. Sprecher, Mark Larkin, S. P. Trood, advertising and exploitation.

E. M. Nutting is statistician and manager of the exhibitors' service bureau.

Gives Luncheon to Drews in Buffalo

Manager R. C. Fox, of the Buffalo (N. Y.) Paramount-Artcraft Exchange, January 3, gave a luncheon of 100 covers in the ballroom of the Hotel Statler, in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew. The guests included local exhibitors and their wives, members of the press and a few friends.

At the close of the luncheon the first Paramount-Artcraft comedy, featuring the Drews, was screened for the entertainment of the guests, who were unanimous in their praise of the work of the stars.

Following the luncheon many of the guests were taken in automobiles to the Elmwood theatre, where Mr. Fox gave a trade showing of Louisa M. Olcott's famous story "Little Women," the stage dramatization of which was made by Marion De Forest, dramatic critic of the Buffalo Express. Harold B. Franklin, manager of Sheas' Hippodrome, announced at the luncheon that his theatre would show all the new Drew comedies.

American Studios Lose J. R. Crone

J. R. Crone, who for more than a year has been general manager of the American studios at Santa Barbara, has tendered his resignation and will enter the automobile business at Sacramento.

R. R. Nehls, general manager of the American, is at the Coast, and will personally manage the studio until a successor of Crone has been named.

More Service Men Now Back with Fox

Two more Fox employees returned to the employ of William Fox last week. This is in line with the William Fox policy of taking back all men of the Fox Film Corporation who left the organization to enter the army.

Leon Bamberger, formerly head of the contract department, who entered the army last September and was sent to Camp Greene, S. C., has been honorably discharged and is once more in the Fox fold.

Another to return is Sergeant M. G. Felder, formerly of the Fox Film Corporation's New York exchange, who enlisted in September, 1917. He was sent to Camp Upton, where he was placed in charge of motion picture entertainment at the camp theatre.

Later he was transferred to the photographic division, 48th Service Company, Signal Corps, where he served as personnel officer. Discharged last month, Sergeant Felder is now back at the New York exchange.

Mrs. J. F. Coufal Dies

Mrs. Joseph F. Coufal, wife of Joseph F. Coufal, secretary and general manager, Standard Slide Company, died January 8, at her late home, Forest Hills, L. I., after a short illness. Funeral services were held at the late residence Saturday. Burial was in Evergreen Cemetery, Brooklyn.

Mr. Coufal is well known to the trade and his many friends express their deep sorrow in his loss.

More British Films

Following up the agitation for more British or Canadian pictures, the Pathe interests have placed a special representative in Toronto to chronicle all news events of importance in and around Toronto for the Pathe Weeklies. The man who is covering the Toronto territory is Blaine Irish.

Cooper Scores Canadian Tariffs

Manager of General Film Company at Montreal Would Assist Governments in Settling Film Tax

T. S. COOPER, general manager of the General Film Company at Montreal, recently called the attention of the United States Tariff Commission at Washington, D. C., to many evils that might be corrected anent the importation and exportation of film by both the United States and Canada.

The following communication was received by Mr. Cooper in reply and was signed by F. W. Taussig, Chairman of the United States Tariff Commission:

"We are in receipt by reference of the Division of Customs of the Treasury Department of your letter of December 6th, in regard to the duty on moving picture films imported into Canada.

"The Tariff Commission is collecting information to be included in the Tariff Information Catalogue, which is described on page 11 of our First Annual Report, a copy of which is enclosed. The information contained in the catalogue will be for the use of Congress when it again considers tariff legislation.

"A catalogue will be prepared for moving picture films, and we shall be glad to receive from you any information which you think is pertinent."

Mr. Cooper's very illuminating reply follows, and may be the means of enlightening the powers-that-be in the two governments affected and goes into this important subject very deeply and intelligently.

Montreal, Canada, January 8, 1919.

Mr. F. W. TAUSSIG,
Chairman,
United States Tariff Commission,
Washington, D. C., U. S. A.

Dear Sir:

It gives me great pleasure to acknowledge your favor of January 4, which enclosed the First Annual Report of the United States Tariff Commission.

My letter of December 6, with reference to the duty on moving pictures imported into Canada was prompted by the fact that we are not acting in fairness to each other as countries by enforcing such a duty as now exists.

It is very interesting to learn that the Commission will issue a Tariff Information Catalogue and I certainly hope any information I give you below will be of some service to you in putting the proper facts before Congress when it is considering Tariff Legislation. Knowing, as I do, that you are interested in getting all details possible I have taken it on myself to write to the various manufacturers of moving pictures, asking that they furnish you with any additional facts that I may have omitted.

The facts of the case governing the importing of films into Canada are as follows:

For some time past, and up until a period of about eight months ago, moving picture film was taxed at the rate of 25 per cent and 7½ per cent of the invoiced value.

Although I am not familiar at the present time with the manufacturing cost of moving picture film in the United States I can say with a fair amount of accuracy that the cost is around 4 cents per foot. The Canadian authorities, however, require that this be invoiced at 8 cents per foot. So much for that. The rate looks wrong but there may be governing facts I am not familiar with.

As I was saying above, about eight months ago the Canadian Government attempted to place a duty of 5 cents per foot on all moving pictures coming into Canada. This, you see, would be at the rate of over 125 per cent of the manufacturing cost. Such a duty was prohibitive and only for the prompt action of the companies operating here, we would have been forced to pay this amount. However, we were able to reduce the amount to 3 cents per foot.

Just at this point it is best to explain to you that the majority of companies operating in Canada are under their parent companies in the United States and all moving pictures that are brought to Canada come from the United States; being manufactured there. There are no producing companies of moving picture film in the Dominion of Canada.

Knowing, as you do, that moving pictures must be advertised, you will probably realize that advertising must be brought in on every picture comprising lithographed posters, photos, press matters, slides, etc.

On this advertising we are required to pay 15 cents per pound, and in addition to the 15 cents per pound, 7½ per cent on the invoiced value, unless perchance the shipment is made by mail. Then we are not required to pay the 7½ per cent and are only charged the 15 cents per pound.

The moving picture business is not understood by many and a fact that must be borne in mind is that moving pictures are not a commodity or a regular stock of merchandise. Their life is very short and the same applies to the advertising that must accompany them.

Moving pictures are not sold in Canada. They are rented, and as they are constantly working they are depreciating in value. Their earning power and physical durability are depreciated just that much. The best simile one might give is to liken them to a railroad ticket which, as the journey of the passenger is completed, constantly becomes less in value and at the end of the trip nothing is left of the ticket but a piece of paper and in the majority of cases even this is taken up.

The viewpoint of the Canadian Government is one which will eventually crowd out a deserving industry from their country and one which is necessary for the welfare and expansion of the Dominion as a whole. The people must have amusement and there is no source of supply for pictures except the States and England; a very few come from England.

The population of this country is scarcely more than that of New York City and the territory is as large as the United States. Moving picture studios cannot be attracted to this country, even though the scenery is naturally adapted, owing to the severely cold seasons, sparsely settled territories and the scarcity of raw materials. There is no talent to be secured that would make manufacturing and producing moving pictures a success in Canada.

To get back to the subject of duty, as an example of how unfair the allotment is. Take, for instance, a one-reel subject (by this I mean one reel of moving picture film which is a story complete in itself, containing about 1,000 feet) and against this compare a five, six or seven-reel subject which required all of these reels to make a complete drama containing five, six or seven thousand feet. The duty on both the examples cited above is at the same rate (3 cents per foot), although the earning value is far out of proportion. The little one-reel subject will probably earn, for example, $50, just equal to the cost of duty, the first time it is run, the five, six or seven-reel subject will undoubtedly earn about $1,000 the first time it is run, yet the same rate of duty must be paid on each, regardless of earning value.

For this reason I say that moving pictures are not a commodity and cannot be governed by laws which handle merchandise. They must be given freer play and must be encouraged and not retarded by costs that are entirely disproportionate.

Then again, moving pictures are subject to condemnation in Canada. Commodities are not. After paying two or three hundred dollars in duty it is very disappointing to have the Board of Censors in Canada refuse to allow the picture to be shown for this or that reason. Some times we are able to get the duty back and some times we are not. Many cases result in a large loss.

Duty is only one of the burdens placed on our industry in Canada. It might be well in preparing your Catalogue of Information on Tariffs to mention that although the business is not competitive between the United States and Canada it is taxed to the utmost. We have property tax, license tax, business tax, tax on reels, censor tax, corporation tax, income tax and now they are putting on a Provincial Tax for the right of doing business in the Province.

As you know, such conditions cannot exist for ever. During the period of the war we have all helped with as little complaint as possible and now that there is to be a revision and a new basis established, I want to take this opportunity to present the facts to you in the hope that through this medium we will be able to re-adjust ourselves and have an equitable basis of tariff between the United States and Canada. With reference to moving pictures, I trust this will be free trade.

Thanking you for your very courteous letter and hoping to have the privilege of hearing from you again on this subject at no distant date, I am,

Yours very truly,
General Film Company (Canada), Limited,
T. S. COOPER,
General Manager.

War Pictures Still in Demand

According to Dennis J. Sullivan of the Division of Films the Public Desires More War Subjects

ANOTHER man prominent in the film industry has come forward with the declaration that the people want war pictures.

Dennis J. Sullivan makes the statement this time and he is the Manager of Domestic Distribution of the Division of Films of the Committee on Public Information.

While it is stated that Mr. Sullivan is not particularly interested at this time in forming a prognosis of the popularity of fictional war dramas on the screen, he is said to be in one of the best possible positions to know the pulse of the public on real war action pictures such as those taken by the United States Signal Corps photographers in France, such pictures as "America's Answer" and "Under Four Flags."

On the subject of war pictures, Mr. Sullivan writes: "I have noted that there has been much discussion in the industry on the subject of the popularity or non-popularity just at this time of war pictures. It might be worthy of comment, so far as war fictional dramas are concerned, that they are still being booked and still being shown to good business, so it would seem that they are still in demand and will be as long as the stories are good and the productions have the proper artistic merits.

"And I can say positively from daily observation and close touch with the subject, that the real war pictures, those of the Government showing scenes in France and the participation of the United States in the war, the several pictures released by the Division of Films of the Committee on Public Information, are still in great demand. This is evidenced every day by statistical reports on bookings. 'America's Answer' the second official war picture has already hung up an enviable record for bookings and they are coming in now at the rate of one hundred and fifty a week.

"The Domestic Distribution Department of the Division of Films is much gratified with the manner in which bookings are coming in for the third official war picture, the Government's great victory film, 'Under Four Flags.' Although it was released only January 6th, the bookings are coming in at rapid rate. This is due in a large measure to the remarkable success reported of the presentation in a number of the principal picture theatres of the country and from a number of pre-release showings.

"The Heart of Humanity" Press Book Out

The press book on "The Heart of Humanity" is completed by the publicity department of Universal and is said to have a great array of novel and unique suggestions.

One page is devoted to a complete description of the film and the object of its producer, and another points out to the exhibitor the many human touches, punches and angles of the film to the exhibitor. Two pages of different general advance stories for the press follow and the reviews of Gotham's leading critics are also included.

A page of notes for use in the press the week prior to the showing of the film and another for use the week of the showing follow, and two pages of special feature stories are added so that the exhibitor may have a wealth of good material for his editors.

Chandler Thanks Laemmle

Carl Laemmle, president of Universal Film Co., has just received a letter from J. A. C. Chandler, chief of the Division of Rehabilitation, Federal Board of Vocational Education, Washington, D. C., thanking him for his offer to take into Universal film inspection departments soldiers who have lost one or both legs in the war.

Mr. Chandler praised the spirit in which the offer was made and stated that if other film companies would adopt Mr. Laemmle's ideas that a difficult problem would be partially solved.

"Lion and the Mouse" Is Completed

"The Lion and the Mouse," starring Alice Joyce, and based on the Klein drama of the same name, has just been completed, according to announcement from the Vitagraph offices and will be released February 24 through all Vitagraph exchanges.

This special production was made under the personal supervision of Albert E. Smith, president of the Vitagraph Company, and is said to represent one of the biggest money investments this company has ever made on any single production.

Miss Hammerstein Gives Hearty Reception

While Elaine Hammerstein was making personal appearances at Loew's Lowe East Side theatres, last week, Harry F. Diggs, publicity director for Independent Sales Corporation, which is handling Harry Rapf's "Wanted for Murder," showing last week on the Loew Circuit, chartered a Packard limousine, and gave chase, with members of the trade press present. Mr. Diggs wanted to convince the copy writer that the accounts of Miss Hammerstein's reception at the various Loew houses where she appeared on the screen in the featured role of "Wanted for Murder," that the adjectives he employed were all merited.

And so they were. The limousine caught up with Miss Hammerstein as she was alighting from her car in front of Loew's DeKalb theatre on the Lower East Side. And it seemed as though all New York were there to receive her. The house manager of the DeKalb informed us that earlier in the evening, he had to call the police to disperse the crowd that had gathered in front of the doors, and we believed him. Mr. Diggs said that in every instance, Miss Hammerstein was given just such a reception, and that "Wanted for Murder" was received by packed houses over the Loew Circuit.

Lillian Hall, one of the members of Miss Hammerstein's supporting cast, in "Wanted for Murder" accompanied the party and was given a hearty reception at the theatres visited. The trade press was represented by Agnes Agnew, of the Telegraph, Helen Rockwell of the Trade Review and J. L. Kelly of the News. Harry Rapf, who produced "Wanted for Murder," accompanied Miss Hammerstein on her tour of the Loew houses.

Bert Barnett Buys Ohio on Houdini Serial

Houdini Serial rights for the State of Ohio has just been purchased by Bert Barnett. He is now at the Winton Hotel, at Cleveland, and arranging to open an office in both Cleveland and Cincinnati.

The Barnetts controlled the last Paramount franchise purchased by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation and operated for a great many years in the Minneapolis territory.

Bert Barnett is expected to bring in the same efficiency in handling the Houdini Serial for Ohio as he displayed so successfully through the many years he managed the Paramount offices.

$10,000 Films Burned in New Orleans

Films to the value of $10,000 were destroyed in a fire in the vault of the Metro and First National Film exchanges, New Orleans, which are both under the management of C. James Briant. Prints of Nazimova, Chaplin, Bushman and Bayne and other big features were destroyed. Spontaneous combustion was given as the cause. The films were in concrete vaults.

Films Division Answers Resolutions

Acknowledges Excellent Work Done by Motion Picture Interests —Declares No Profits Have Been Made, But Government Division Supports Itself—Department Not Separate

THE Joint Committee on Motion Picture Activities of the United States Government and Allied Organizations, composed of representatives of all Governmental and Allied agencies engaged in motion picture work, has, through its executive committee, issued a reply to the resolutions concerning the film activities of the Government which were presented by representatives of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry at the War Emergency and Reconstruction Congress recently held at Atlantic City.

This reply is supplemental to that already issued by the Committee on Public Information, and declares that although no profits have been made, the Division has been self-supporting.

Letter to Committee

The letter is as follows: "Messrs. Walter W. Irwin, John C. Flinn, William C. Smith and Frederick H. Elliott, representing the executive committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, New York City.

"Gentlemen: Copies of the resolution prepared and presented by you at the recent War Emergency and Reconstruction Congress and of the reply of December 12 from Marcus A. Beeman, Acting Director, Division of Films, Committee on Public Information, have been referred for consideration to the Joint Committee on Motion Picture Activities of the United States Government and Allied Organizations, composed of representatives from the Department of State, War, Navy, the Treasury, the Interior, Agriculture, Commerce and Labor, and the United States Food, Fuel and Railroad Administrations and the American Red Cross.

"In view of the fact that the films distributed by the Committee on Public Information are produced by these other branches of the Government and Allied organizations, that the services performed by the motion picture industry for several of these branches during the existing emergency are regarded as a preamble to your resolutions, and that a portion of the resolutions themselves refer to distribution by the Government in its entirety, it is felt that these resolutions came within the purview of the Joint Committee, as well as the Division of Films. The Joint Committee has therefore, after due deliberation, authorized its executive committee to make the following statement on behalf of its members:

"The monetary returns for the rental of Government films by the Committee on Public Information, to which your resolutions refer, cannot be properly regarded as profits since such returns are by law covered into the common fund in the United States Treasury, where they offset in part not only the cost of the production, editing and distribution of films by the Division of Films, but the much greater cost of production incurred by other branches, notably the Signal Corps of the Army.

"Obviously, in formulating the resolutions your committee failed to take into consideration the fact that original production constitutes a large part of the cost of film and that the rental charge made by one branch of the Government is meant to cover, as far as possible, the expenses both of handling by that branch and of production and other incidental expenses by other branches. The Division of films is acting not as an independent unit, but as an integral part of the Government service. Any financial return to the Treasury from the product distributed by this division should therefore be credited against the expenses not alone of the Division of Films, but also of all other branches of the service concerned.

Pays for Itself

"At a time when the appalling cost of war has placed a greatly increased financial burden upon the Government and people of the United States, it should be gratifying to us all as American citizens that through efficient management in the Division of Films, the distribution of motion pictures produced by the Government for the purpose of keeping the public informed of events, combating German propaganda, increasing and conserving food supplies, and in other ways helping toward victory and permanent peace, has been made to pay for itself and also to contribute toward the cost of production.

"The joint committee takes this opportunity of adding its acknowledgment to the acknowledgments already made by the President and the members of his Cabinet of the excellent assistance given by your industry to the Government in its time of need, so well summarized in your resolutions, and to express the hope that the mutual co-operation already established may continue through the crucial period of reconstruction and thereafter.

Very truly yours,

DAVID K. NILES,
DON CARLOS ELLIS,
RUFUS STEELE,
CAPT. C. ROY DICKINSON.

"Executive Committee of the Joint Committee on Motion Picture Activities of the United States Government and Allied Organizations."

Invites Rembusch to Canada

Announcement has been made by James Travis, of Toronto, Eastern Canadian manager, of the Exhibitors' Mutual Distributing Corporation, that he has invited Frank Rembusch, of Indianapolis, to visit the leading cities of eastern Canada.

Prospective Buyer of Theatre Runs Amuck

Tendered a check for $120 on the Liberty Trust Company, of Boston, in payment of three months' rent in advance for office space; stated that he was the representative of the Boston Producing Company which made a practice of buying run-down motion pictures and selling them after making them look like new; made deals with contractors for prospective renovations on theatres supposedly optioned to him; gave a check for $250 as option money for the theatre at 107th street and Third avenue, New York city; stated that last big theatre deal had just been completed in Cleveland.

These are a few of the many things Harry C. Cameron did according to Gus Balzer, a real estate man, at 500 West 239th street, New York city.

But the climax was reserved to the last. Mr. Cameron disappeared. Both checks came back marked "no funds," and there has been no white-washing done on the theatre.

Mr. Balzer describes the missing "promoter" as answering to the name of Harry C. Cameron early in January, and that he was about 45 years of age and of slight build, with mixed gray hair and smooth shaved, with dark complexion and an extremely slight impediment in his speech.

"Not that he couldn't talk fast enough," said Mr. Balzer, who gave MOTION PICTURE NEWS the information so that its vast army of exhibitor readers might guard itself against probable visits from the promoter.

Seven Episode Serial Is Ready for Release

The new Diando serial, "The Terror of the Range," featuring Betty Compson and George Larkin, will be released February 3, and is expected to be a welcome Western one.

This Pathe serial is in seven episodes and is from a scenario by Lucien Hubbard and directed by Stuart Patron.

It is described as a typical Western story, with its locale in the picturesque Sierra Nevada mountains and is peopled with the cowboy, Indian and Mexican characters so dear to the lovers of "Westerns."

Two Sides

In the Same Medium

AT the risk of being handed the moniker of Judas Iscariot, Benedict Arnold the writer proposes to jump on deck. Holding no brief for the manufacturer and distributor, nevertheless he asks, is it not time to take a survey of the currents into which the exhibitor's bark is drifting? Gaily have the majority been listening to the voice of the siren that promises fair sailing, with the big stars as passengers and a cargo of profits, everybody happy and basking in the sunbeams of the millennium.

Avast there shipmates, the dope is great stuff but there are rocks ahead to say nothing of a bold gay gang of buccaneer stars on the offing. That big reef straight ahead is charted as Finance, the big rock to port is known as Distribution, the several smaller ones to starboard poking their heads through the breakers of Rentals are known as Experience.

With the knowledge that the exhibitor abhors allegorical plots let us get down to brass tacks:

A big star in the film firmament has recently left the chief organization of manufacturers and distributors. A great agitation has been felt throughout the field that has produced a nation-wide discussion among exhibitors and manufacturers.

On the level now: Has not the company with which this star has been associated made, as a general result, the best pictures possible to create with this star? Have they not thrown their entire studios open to her and unstintingly spent unheard of sums of money to obtain scenarios for her, especially adapted to her personality?

This company in turn, has the reputation of the greatest development of any distribution agency in the business, one that took years and brains to build up. This great star's films have been rented to more theatres than the production of any star's attractions has ever attained.

To digress, the one big wail of our brotherhood has been and is that the rentals are too high, prohibitive in fact. Furthermore, we all agree that admission prices have reached the top notch.

Enters a competitive organization into the field. Its spokesmen paint a luring picture but admit that the distribution end of the proposition is somewhat sketchy. This organization promises to pay this star more for each picture than the company which made her could obtain from her pictures after attaining the intensive development they have attained and after seemingly having charged the exhibitor a maximum of rentals possible.

Once more enters the gay and festive word painter who leads us to believe that the organization which has signed her is actually going to reduce the film rentals on this star to many of the larger houses throughout the country. This can only mean one thing: having paid the star more per picture than her productions have produced to date, they must secure more income from her pictures. If they reduce the film rentals from the larger houses, it means that the film rentals must be increased to the smaller houses. The law of compensation cannot otherwise work out that result.

It is a matter of simple arithmetic that any exhibitor can work out for himself; but let's get back to the story.

The company that formerly had this star long since determined the value of the star to the industry. It refused to pay a larger amount for her pictures than the traffic of the industry would bear. It is common knowledge that the biggest company in the field of manufacture and distribution has not paid a dividend for eighteen months. In the face of these conditions a star is offered greater salary!

If under conditions already set forth her productions have not produced a profit how in the name of the pink-toed prophet can Friend Exhibitor expect to get by?

To my mind this policy of paying greater values for a production than right business methods have proven should be paid simply means that in the end it will make a first-class bandit out of every star of drawing power in the entire industry. It will be impossible to employ performers unless they are given virtually every cent of the income their productions derive.

On this End of the See-Saw a Man Who Believes We Are Raising Frankenstein in Mr. Get-It-All Star—A Dark Future Seen

By GEORGE E. CARPENTER

Manager, Paramount-Empress Theatre, Salt Lake City

The company that lost this star has been waging an incessant battle for five years against the incompetent manufacturer who is producing a type of picture that disappoints the public, thus damaging the house that has good attractions and thus eliminating to a considerable extent the confidence on the part of the public in the fact that they can go into a picture house and see a good production, something worth while every time.

Now some of us propose to tear down all this constructive work and raise a Frankenstein in the form of Mr. Get-It-All-Star. In other words: Does the average exhibitor of the nation want to see one organization obtain all the leading stars, paying them more than the income from the field represents and thus create the condition we are all fighting whereby the amount of mediocre and cheap films will be increased and the amount of good drawing cards decreased, thus losing the good will of the public that the best manufacturers and distributors have so long endeavored to build up through consistently creating and presenting photographic plays of such type that would please the greatest portion of the time?

We exhibitors owe a lot to the little group of honest-to-goodness producers at the top of the pile. Honest now, is it not better to support an organization which bats 85 per cent good pictures and which refuses to pay a star more than intensive development of the field and the highest rentals possible will obtain, and not support an organization whose policy is founded on the destructive basis of only employing stars whose drawing power is of the highest after other manufacturers and producers have built them up to their present drawing power?

Of course Friend Exhibitor can "show 'em where to head in," and in so doing eliminate the majority of intelligent manufacturers who are striving to create new material for the trade. But after all, what good will saddling the trade with a bunch of bandit stars accomplish?

The writer is neither a prophet or the son of a prophet but all he can see is chaos for the industry ahead. Already there are signs that the new organization is putting its wares up for auction to the highest bidder.

Higher salaries for stars and cheaper rentals! It is against all laws of film mathematics.

For the sake of argument, and the argument hews to the line let us suppose that an organization has signed up ten of the world's leading stars at, say, an average of $750,000 per picture. Fine and dandy, the world is ours! The contract stipulates that the price of the first picture must be paid in advance. Along comes Mr. Star, gets his check for the picture and starts to work. He makes two pictures and by the time he is at work on the third he has been paid somebody's money to the amount of two cold millions and a quarter. The returns from the first picture have not yet commenced to come in to any alarming extent because the big exhibitor's rentals have been cut and the little fellow's raised and the distribution scheme not worked down to the most intensive system possible. Multiply that by ten to cover the ten stars—oh, what's the use!

We all know what happened to the Kaiser when he tried to capture the world.

Some Opposing Views

¶ And on this End a Writer Who Sees Salvation in the Wide-Open Market Giving the Star What He Earns in Drawing Power

By E. R. PEARSON

Manager First National Exhibitors' Circuit Exchange, Minneapolis

THERE can be no increase in the quality of screen productions until the industry corrects the one great fault that is almost solely responsible for its lack of progress.

Motion picture artistry has not advanced appreciably in the last year. It could not. The giant forces of economic unsoundness have been tugging mightily at it, pulling and straining with tremendous strength to retard its advancement, to impede it along the only path it can travel to merit continuance of public favor.

The industry has been a brightly hued circus wagon, with motive elements hitched fast to either end. Up in front, in the harness of universal favor and economical appreciation, has been the public, urging progress with the strength of its collective pickles and dimes and quarters. Behind, in the collar and hames of inefficiency, and heaving on the tugs of perverted vision, has been the great form of Fault, in whose language the expression "giddap" is pronounced "get the sucker."

Distribution, as it has been carried on for many months, is the great obstacle to any improvement in the standards of story and direction. A great deal has been said, and much has been written about the absolute need of increased quality in screen production if the industry is to preserve its place in public favor. All manner of warnings have been sounded about the ultimate result if producers do not intensify the quality of their handicraft. Any form of progressive activity, any semblance of ambition and initiative that require action to consummate, costs money. And the fact is, the producers are not getting the money. Unless they raid a bank, or "get a sucker," they are without resources. They are not getting finances out of the exhibitors. They can't!

And the pity of it is that the exhibitor, in the great majority, is willing to give it to them for quality, if—Distribution again!

And the public is willing to pay good nickles and dimes and quarters to the exhibitors to give to the distributors to give to the producers for quality productions, if—Distribution again!

Why can Lyman H. Howe go into many towns in the Northwest with ten or twelve reels of motion pictures, and play engagements of from one day to a week to big business?

Why is vaudeville walking away with public favor and supplanting motion pictures in some of the larger cities?

Because Lyman H. Howe is not obliged to buy a lot of junk even ordinary film to get what he considers corking good footage; because the vaudeville circuit booking offices are not compelled to book three buck-and-wing "family time" acts to get the big headliners. They are privileged to contract with acts at their know will please the public. They are not compelled to m and cram a mess of dog town amusement down the public's throat as a prelude, chaser or salad to the big meal of quality entertainment.

Yell about the industry going to the dogs! Kick and wail at the producer! Call the exhibitors boneheads and ivory domes! Nap at the public for being a lot of damned fools who want a dollar for a dime, and who don't know picture values! Go ahead! It isn't getting the business anywhere.

Let's take one concrete example of the long present fog that has beclouded the industry. A moaning wail went up to the skies recently when First National signed Mary Pickford at what was described as a tremendous sum per production. She is not overpaid, and I can prove it, even at the figure she is to receive. I could cite a dozen other capable stars and producers who are underpaid, and who always will be, so long as the generally accepted methods of distribution exist. They'll never get any farther than they are now. They can't. They need money to extend themselves, and they're not getting it. They can't. They are hedged round with a dangerous protective system, so perfect that if the Kaiser had a similar one for himself he could tell the world to sit on its tail. Some of our best and most capable stars and producers are beautifully protected against their own best interests—profits to invest in progress.

But I started to make an example of Miss Pickford. I don't know much about what other First National exchanges are doing with her productions, but I do know that here in the Northwest several hundred exhibitors who have not shown her pictures for many months have asked this office for prices. And they will book. "Daddy Longlegs" will play to more theatres out of the Minneapolis office by one hundred per cent than any release she ever made on a program. That is why First National can pay her an alleged big sum for a picture. That is why she now receives enough money for every picture to make effort for greater quality not only a big incentive, but a profitable one. The same conditions apply to Chaplin. He has never done better work than he has in the last year. His standards have jumped tremendously. And the public and the exhibitors are making it possible for him to afford the time, patience and money that it costs to build up quality, just because he changed his releasing arrangement and opened up almost fifty per cent of a field which he had never before profited from.

Take the contract system restriction off the exhibitor. Relieve him of the necessity of running mediocre film as the penalty for the successes. Stop telling him what he can book and what he cannot book. Let each producer, each star, stand on his or her own individual merits. Give the public and the exhibitors the opportunity to show their preferences. The capable stars and producers will remain, and they will be able to advance their art because the theatres now closed to them through the arbitrary dictums of the program contract system will welcome them on an independent releasing basis, and give them the rentals which spell the difference between costs and profits.

The public wants better pictures. The exhibitor wants to give the public better pictures. The sincere producers and stars with ability are competent to keep pace with public demand—in fact, I say they can lead it—if they have the money to work with. And they can get it, with ninety per cent distribution, yes, even with seventy-five per cent distribution. A quality picture, offered to exhibitors without strings or the necessity of booking six or a dozen ordinary releases, will play to seventy-five per cent of the houses in the country. Roughly speaking, there are approximately thirteen thousand theatres. Give them an average of $15.00 a day for a six-reel special with merit. Seventy-five per cent distribution would return a gross income of approximately $146,000. How many of the big quality specials released on programs have earned anywhere near that sum? Mighty few, if any. Instead, they have received gross rentals of from $50,000 to $75,000 with production cost mighty near to the $50,000 mark.

Why don't the big producing-distributing companies take the curse off the industry? Are they so loaded down with contracts for the exclusive services of second-rate and third-rate producers and near-stars that they don't dare offer them to the field on merit? Slowly, but surely, they are squeezing the neck of the goose that lays the golden eggs. Already the faithful, patient, willing old bird is gasping for breath.

Make it possible for merit and ability to receive the moneyed tributes awaiting them, and we will have an improvement in production that will enable the industry to hold its own against any form of amusement competition.

A great deal of money is wasted every week that should go into

A. M. P. A. Hear de Montluzin

General Sales Manager, Poster Advertising Company, Speaks of Poster Advertising at A. M. P. A. Meeting at Wallick's

PA. PARSONS, president of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, Inc., presided at the meeting held by the Association at Wallick's Hotel, January 2, and heard a lively discussion on the subject of poster advertising. Albert de Montluzin, general sales manager, Poster Advertising Company, Inc., New York, was introduced by Paul Lazarus, advertising director for Vitagraph, as the principal speaker.

Mr. de Montluzin says, in part:

"The value of the 24-sheet, 6-sheet or 1-sheet stand is measured only by the message placed upon it. The best location procurable is not worth a dollar if the message flared before the eye of the public is not one of commanding force. The poster man himself has improved the physical side of the business.

"The advertiser is not keeping pace with this advance if he is not improving the quality of his message commensurately. The poster message must be strong and simple. Apply the law of elimination to the limit. Never approve a sketch until you have asked yourself the question:

'What's wrong with it?' And find out what is wrong with it before it is put up, for afterwards it will be too late."

A letter from Ralph Ruffner, manager of the Rialto theatre, Butte, Mont., was read by Mr. Parsons, in which Mr. Ruffner expresses appreciation for the reception given him a short time ago when he was in New York and addressed the Association. He wrote: "May I ask that you convey to the members of the A. M. P. A. the deep gratitude I feel over their kingly good fellowship extended to my humble self on the occasion of my recent visit? The boys may all be Easterners, but the atmosphere was so cordially Western in spirit that I felt 'all-fired' at home. We cannot get along without the loyal assistance of the gentlemen who compose your membership any more than you can get along without the exhibitor, and how much better we can work and direct our individual efforts when we understand the problems which confront both sides! If I gained nothing more on my trip, I established the conviction that my troubles in the past were due almost entirely to faulty distribution—that the stuff had been turned out by you gentlemen, but had become lost in the channels of faulty distribution, and for that you cannot be held responsible. A whole handful of good things to every last man on the ship, now and always."

"Doug" is Doing Gov't Series

Artcraft Star Completing First of Series of Pictures for Morale Division of Army—All His Time Given

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS is completing the first of a series of pictures for the Government in connection with its work through the Morale Division, of which Brigadier-General Munson is head, and the Committee on Training Camp Activities, of which Raymond D. Fosdick is chairman, it is announced by Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. Mr. Fairbanks is now at work on the final scenes for the first picture of this series and expects to have it completed within a short time. He announces that he has dropped all other work and is devoting all his time to the Government.

"After I finished the Fourth Liberty Loan," he said, "the Government asked me to make a series of pictures for use in arousing the men, women and children of the nation to the opportunities and duties war has brought.

"Presently we will have with us upward of two million men in the prime of life and the pink of condition, in whom war has developed a habit of thinking and an appreciation of the use and beauty of team work. The adventure from which they are returning will incline them to the new adventures opening up everywhere. We've got to feed the world for the next two years. We've got to supply most of the material and a good deal of the man power for restoration of ruined France and Belgium. We've got to be the leaders, and we can.

"And so to be ready for all these countless other things which must be done the War Department has established this Morale Division for educational purposes. The pictures I am to make are to be shown throughout this country, as well as abroad, wherever there is need for the particular lesson they make plain.

"The Government established four principles for my guidance and told me to get busy. These principles are 'purity of purpose,' 'cheerfulness,' 'steadfastness' and 'willingness to sacrifice.' That's what my pictures for the Government will represent."

Chicago Operators' Strike Is Averted in Time

A strike of six hundred motion picture operators called to start January 12, which would have closed all motion picture theatres in Chicago, has been averted by a wage compromise.

The operators had asked $1.25 per hour. They accepted a scale of 90 cents an hour with a minimum weekly guarantee of $30. The agreement was signed shortly after the operators had served notice of a strike.

Strand Shows Roosevelt

The Strand theatre in New York City will show "The Fighting Roosevelts," an authorized version of the life and works of the late Colonel Roosevelt, made by McClure and distributed by First National Exhibitors' Circuit.

Carl Edouarde will conduct the symphony orchestra, which will play Victor Herbert's "American Fantasie."

W. H. Rudolph Leaves the West Coast

With the intention of helping Me Garson and Neillan exploit the prelude of their ten-reel production starring Blanche Sweet, W. H. Rudolph left New York City January 16 for Los Angeles.

"The Unpardonable Sin" is scheduled to open at the Kinema theatre there on February 2 for a run before it is brought for its Broadway run in New York.

Mr. Rudolph, who is eastern representative for Harry Garson, announced Franz Lehar, the famous composer of "The Merry Widow," had prepared special music score for "The Unpardonable Sin" and that no other expense had been spared in giving the production proper atmosphere.

Second Keenan Film Now Under Way

The first production of the second Frank Keenan series for Pathe has been put into production and is at present known under the working title of "Emanuel Blake." The continuity was written by Jack Cunningham from the story by F. X. James, and the direction is by Ernest Warde, who has Charles Kaufman as cameraman. The tire cast includes Joe McManus, Harry Kirkland, Barney Sherry, Jack Brambley, W. V. Mong, Joseph Dowling and Joseph Ray, while Kathleen Kirkham is the leading woman and Lois Wilson takes the leading ingenue part.

production. Efficiency, system and common sense business principles would divert this to profit. The industry is dignified by the attention of many capable, intelligent people. But they do not seem to recognize the obvious. They do not reason down to a solution. Instead, they reason up to a theory.

Take off the lid of abusive practices; kick the obstacles of program contracts and the "clinging vine" tactics for putting over incompetent "stars" and inferior productions, out of the path of progress; let every production rest on its own merits; take the millstone of "these go with it" clause off the necks of exhibitors; give the exhibitors a chance to rest the judgment and likes and dislikes of patrons in their bookings; make it possible for the public to contribute its willing support to quality without choking it with inferiority as indemnity. Declare for the open market on every picture that is made, and you will get progress and improvement in production.

I would like to see MOTION PICTURE NEWS obtain a symposium of opinion from a hundred or more exhibitors, representative of every class and size of theatre, on their ways and means for improving quality in production. I do not mean opinions or suggestions for technical improvement, but rather, a general improvement along lines that are in keeping with the obvious demands of their respective clientele.

The comments I have made here, and the opinions that I have expressed, are not alone my own. They have been voiced by many exhibitors in the Minneapolis territory who feel a real concern over the future. To epitomize, I asked them recently why he did not book a particularly successful feature released through the exchange of one of the program concerns. "Because," he answered, "I would have a contract for twelve others to get it, and not of the other twelve is worth a dollar to me. Could I get the one I want, and which you suggest, I could afford to pay a big rental, and make money."

The star and producer responsible for that production thereby lost possibly $25 as the percentage of that one booking. Multiply instance by two or three thousand, and it is difficult to understand why the capable individuals are unable to reap the profits essential to the making of bigger, better pictures.

SUPREMACY!

With the Manufacturer

¶ The last four issues of MOTION PICTURE NEWS carried 60 more pages of advertising than the same issues of any other trade publication.

With the Exchange

¶ When a distributing corporation recently asked its twenty-six exchange managers their choice of trade journals the vote was almost unanimous for MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

With the Exhibitor

¶ More copies of MOTION PICTURE NEWS are read and filed by exhibitors than of all other trade publications put together, and any true test will prove this.

Hyman Gets Column in Newspaper

Arthur S. Hyman, of the Arthur S. Hyman Attractions, of Detroit, is apparently very popular in Michigan, judging by the columns of space the local newspapers give him when he visits town.

An Ishpeming newspaper of recent date gave Mr. Hyman a full column, scarce reads and all. On his present tour of the state, Mr. Hyman is booking "Woman," the Tourneur picture.

Toronto Theatres Advertise Heavily

The Daily News of Toronto, Ontario, broke its record for the number of local theatres using space in its amusement section on Saturday, January 4, when fifty-x houses used forty lines of space each in the Photoplay Calendar. The Calendar broke into a second page for the occasion. This does not include the several local vaudeville theatres which also used individual space.

Youngster Plays Lead

"Life's a Funny Proposition," Exhibitors' Mutual release starring William Desmond, presents in an important supporting character role little two-year-old Ernest Garrison. He has the part of a Belgian baby and is credited with carrying the character lead of the cast.

About New Pictures

Peggy Hyland, star of William Fox Excel Pictures, is now at work in "The Girl With No Regrets," at Fox's Hollywood studio. Charles Clary, Harry von Meter, Beverly Tragos, William Ellingford, Gene Burr, Betty Shade, Jack Nelson and Gordon Zacksville are in support. Harry Millarde is directing.

Jean Acker, formerly one of the best known feminine leads in the profession, has returned to the films as member of George Walsh's company, which is filming "Tough Luck Jones" for the Fox program.

"The False Faces," with Henry B. Walthall in the leading role of "The Lone Wolf" produced by Thomas H. Ince which was released January 12, as a Paramount-Artcraft Special, promises to be the most mysterious of mystery pictures, according to reports from Paramount. Irvin Willat directed. It is adapted from Louis Joseph Vance's novel.

Denman Thompson's popular old play, "The Old Homestead," which Paramount transferred to the screen and presented with a notable cast a few years ago, is announced by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation as the current Success Series release.

The late Paramount-James Montgomery Flagg comedy is "Perfectly Fiendish Flanagan," or "The Hart of the Dreadful West," produced by Town and Country Films, Inc. The author plays the leading role, a take-off on the Western delineations of William S. Hart.

George Walsh, William Fox star, is at work on a new Victory picture, under the direction of Edward Dillon. The working title is "Jinx Jones," from an original story and scenario written by Raymond L. Schrock. This is the second picture Mr. Walsh has made under the direction of Mr. Dillon.

In response to a request from David K. Niles, Chief of the Motion Picture Section, U. S. Department of Labor, calling attention to the seriousness of the food situation in America and the rest of the world, the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has attached to one hundred of its prints now in circulation trailers prepared by the United States Food Administration.

Pearl White Completes Last Episode of Serial

Pearl White completed the final episode of Pathe's "The Lightning Raider" last week. Following a two or three weeks' rest, Miss White will commence work on another serial. Miss White's director, George B. Seitz, and Warner Oland, William Burt and Frank Redman, members of her supporting cast, will also rest. Miss White will spend her vacation on her Long Island estate, recently purchased.

Dorothy Vamps a Deacon

Dorothy Dalton will be soon seen in her latest Ince-Paramount picture, "Hard Boiled," in which it is stated she vamps a deacon.

The story, by John Lynch, was scenario-ized by R. Cecil Smith and the picture will be released February 2. Miss Dalton's following picture will be made at the new Ince studios at Culver City under the working title of "The Accursed Town."

"Cupid's Day Off" Is Sennett's Latest

Mack Sennett's latest comedy for release on the Paramount-Mack Sennett program this week is titled, "Cupid's Day Off." This two-reeler is said to accomplish all that its makers intended it should, providing a good, full twenty-five minutes of wild and furious fun. Ben Turpin, Charlie Lynn, Alice Lake and Tom Kennedy are in it.

Exhibitor Service Bureau

S. BARRET M'CORMICK has just completed a campaign on Anita Stewart in "Virtuous Wives" that stands out in our estimation as one of the best on record anywhere. It embraces everything in the way of attractiveness and selling power that could be asked for. A first glance at the illustrations on the opposite page will show the splendid use that he has made of half-tones, and though the reproductions are too small to be read in detail the entire reading matter is prepared in the same attractive style, so that the public is really led to read it without the consciousness that this is an advertisement.

This campaign illustrates one thing very forcibly and that is that it pays to keep up your advertising during the entire run of the picture. Though Mr. McCormick did not use as large space all during the week as he did in advance of the opening of the engagement, he did use big space and he did make each one of his displays as attractive as possible. He probably used more different pictures of Miss Stewart and more scenes from the production than have ever been used in any other exploitation of a single picture. There was not a chance in the world for the interest in the picture to die down. In short, the showing of this picture was kept the big, dominant thing in the mind of every reader of the Indianapolis papers.

In another way that the exploitation is striking is the appeal that has been made to both sexes. Evidently Mr. McCormick set out to bring out the appeal to the women the strongest, but he got just enough of the bright and breezy stuff into the reading matter to make the men want to see the picture. For instance, on the Saturday before the opening of the engagement he used twelve inches, four columns in the afternoon Times. This carried a striking picture of Miss Stewart and then a scene at the upper left with a fanciful design in the lower right hand corner and the sentence, "No woman really appreciates a man until the other woman catches him in her noose," and then the drawing shows a chorus girl on a hobby horse lassoing the husband. The entire display is captioned "An eye for an eye, a tooth for a man for a man."

And then here is the selling argument that follows, set in small type, which in most cases we would call too much, but which is so interesting that it will be read, as we have observed without the consciousness that it is a selling talk:

"The old Mosaic law has been improved upon by our modern society.

"It now includes a new rule for revenge, 'If a wife steal another wife's lover, then steal that wife's husband.'

"The 'set' to which Mrs. Forrester and Mrs. Delabarre belonged was that ultra modern, jaded society of New York's four hundred, where, as Owen Johnson says, in his most widely read book, 'Marriage is simply a legalized excuse for couples to circulate in society.'

"As a result the modern wife has her score or more of admirers, she flirts quite openly, skates on thin ice, skirts the risky precipice and satisfies her acquired thirst for sensation and admiration and calls herself a 'Virtuous Wife.'

"Amy Forrester and her husband were devoted to each other, almost so much so that they hardly belonged in the 'set.' But, of course, eventually the husband became money mad and the wife socially mad and Forrester went away for a year to amass a fortune.

"'I must work, you do the playing for both of us,'" he said. "I won't be jealous.

"And Amy plunged into her campaign of social conquest and heart snatching.

"But, oh! When the man who pays the rent comes home."

On the same day a different display was used in the morning

paper, this being eleven inches across five columns, and carrying another striking picture of the star and another scene from the picture as the main design, with another one of the clever designs at the bottom showing a young woman in a much abbreviated bathing suit with a man seated on a pile playing a guitar and another in the background evidently much shocked by her attire and then we have the lines, "Virtuous wives, household pets, handier and no more danger than a Pekingese." Of course, after reading those lines the patron will want to know what all this is about and then he will read the remainder of it. And McCormick has gone the limit here and has set a considerable part of the display in AGATE type. But the point is that he has made the whole display so attractive that it cannot be gotten away from.

But the campaign on this picture actually started the Thursday before the showing when nine inches across four columns were used with the caption, "Is virtue a lost art?" And then there was a selling talk, but the secret of the campaign was given away with two italic lines, reading, "The play serves to return to the screen one of its most beloved and charming personalities, Miss Anita Stewart." That's it, PERSONALITY. And personality is the big dominant thing all through the displays.

On Friday the displays were seven inches, three columns, and just as convincing.

McCormick has made special arrangements with the Star, the only Sunday paper by which he is able to carry his display in colors on the last page of the dramatic section. This gives the paper a chance to print the front page of the same section in colors and so make the layouts and lettering of the news matter the more attractive. On the opposite page we have illustrated the display as it appeared in the paper, though of course the colors are missing and we have also shown the black plate. Red was used around the border and in the white space between the rules and to give coloring to the picture of Miss Stewart. This display was captioned, "When the man who pays the rent comes home," and then it went ahead to tell a portion of the story. The object of this advertisement was to give full information about the picture.

You will note that the name of Miss Stewart is used in surprisingly small type, but the illustrations have been made so dominant that there is no requirement for mere type display here. The fact that the picture was made from the novel by Owen Johnson and the members of the supporting cast are brought out in a few lines.

Having had the benefit of the smashing opening and the three days preceding advertising, and also counting on the effect of the reviews to appear in the Monday issued there was smaller space used on that day, nine inches across three columns, but here again the same artist was shown in the preparation of the display. There is a full-length picture of Miss Stewart, and still another scene from the production and at the bottom of the display there is a clever line: "There are two kinds of women—the parlor furniture variety and the kitchen cabinet." The rest of the display consists of excerpts from the story. In another display the same day the word "Judas" was used for the catch line and again there were pictures from the film and of the star. And then here are the lines:

"Mrs. Delabarre had taught Mrs. Forrester the gentle art of flirting.

"But the pupil soon became more expert than the teacher, and Mrs. Delabarre lost her chief male admirer.

"Of course both of them were 'Virtuous Wives,' that is, according to the code of the ultra-modern 'set' in which they moved—

"—but, when a woman is defeated at her own game she is very likely to want to change the rules." (Continued on page 542)

On Wednesday he came back with large space again, the display being remindful of one used on the previous Saturday. In other words, here was the middle of the week at hand. Many of the theatres were changing their bill, but the Circle was not. Therefore, the obvious thing for the Circle to do was to dominate the Wednesday papers just as much as if he had a new offering. By doing so the impression was left that here was the one picture of the week that the patron could not well afford to miss.

Most exhibitors in cases like this would be well content to make the Sunday splash put over the picture and they would expect to do big business all of the week on the strength of their Sunday advertising. And probably they would have done a big business, but the McCormick plan of advertising does not bank on things like this, on merely taking chances. He wants to sell the picture to the most possible people, and there is not the slightest doubt in our minds that this is the sort of advertising that pays the best. It is not waste in any way. It is really insurance for your theatre, keeping its seats full.

This same sort of advertising, with the space varying, was kept up to the very last day of the picture. The personality of Miss Stewart was kept dominant in all of these through the many different and striking pictures of her that were used; and there was personality in all of the selling talk, of the intimate chatty nature, that we can well imagine one had already seen

This was employed Wednesday during the engagement in the afternoon paper

Friday before the opening this started the interest. It was seven inches four columns the picture reading these day after day because of the interest in them.

There is one other thing to be remembered in every campaign on an individual picture. You are not running your theatre for today or merely this week, but you are running it as an institution, and the main thing that you want to do is to convince the public that you have the one theatre of the community and that the pictures that are worth showing you show. If you simply made that statement and kept repeating it no one would believe you. But when your advertising, day after day, carries this message by inference, because your advertising is dominating the field, that can be the one impression left on everyone.

Kashin "Entertains" Patrons on Taking New Theatre

Maurice A. Kashin, who is so well known to exhibitors for the lobby display work that has been recorded in the MOTION PICTURE NEWS, and who has attracted new attention as the manager of the Broadway theatre, has just taken over the direction of the Symphony, Broadway and 95th street.

For his opening bill he has "The Border Legion" and made it a real special occasion. He was able to secure the personal appearance of Miss Blanche Bates, the star of the picture, and he capitalized that to the fullest. To a carefully selected mailing list he sent out letters signed by Miss Bates which read:

"I would greatly value your opinion of my first photoplay at the Symphony theatre on Friday afternoon. Tea will be served in the Boudoir from three till five, and you may then let me know what you think of 'The Border Legion,' which is my vehicle and is adapted from Zane Grey's novel of the same name. Incidentally, I might also say that I will address the audience from the stage in the evening at 8:30."

Hundreds of women were the guests of Miss Bates in the afternoon, and over the tea cups she heard many nice things said of herself and the production, the first motion picture in which she has appeared. In the evening thousands packed the theatre.

JUST ASK US

We'll Be Glad to Help You on Any Picture

THIS week we had a letter from an exhibitor who had bought a "special" for a run at his house. He complained that he did not get from the exchange the matter that he had been promised. He asked us for the material with which to do his advertising. What was the operation?

A phone call—and the man who answered told us about the stuff that he had prepared and had sent to the exchanges. Then we got the exchange on the long-distance wire and asked the manager why this exhibitor had not received the matter that he had ordered. There was no coherent answer. He had sent "something else."

The exhibitor is willing to pay twice as much for a real "special," that will bring him extra money, but he wants to have the chance to put it over. He has to have the steam behind him.

On many pictures we have printed special service sections and their wide use is evidenced. But whether we have printed one of these or not, we are mighty glad to help you out in exploiting the picture that you have bought, even if the man who sold it to you should have done that service.

Franklin Calls For Better Film Stories

By Harold B. Franklin

Manager, Shea's Hippodrome, Buffalo

THERE is considerable criticism amongst exhibitors and others that photoplay stories are not what they should be. Experience has shown that the producer cannot "manufacture" good photoplays the same as a commercial article. Good stories are built on ideas, ideals and emotions. They cannot be manufactured by formula. Most of our features are not the glow of inspiration, but eagerness to set a pace in quantity.

Hence, while some of these features have decided merit, the great majority does not measure up to expectations. They are without the spirit that works from within. These pictures that are fairly hurled at us by the hurrying laboratories are merely echoes from some familiar theme or plot. They are like a machine—each made from the same castings.

The same need for new material existed years ago in every form of literature and drama. It cannot be expected that every picture that is produced should be successful. The chief trouble is that the producer is inclined to lead exhibitors to believe that every feature he produces is a winner. A glance at the advertising of the manufacturers clearly shows this tendency of exaggerating the value of some of their offerings. Naturally the exhibitor is disappointed when he sees the result.

There is a common opinion that the motion picture industry has reached the stage where manufacturers are producing more features than can be consumed. If the manufacturer will produce less features, he will have more time to develop his productions and the result will be more satisfactory. The great success of Griffith, Chaplin and a few others shows conclusively that if the producer takes more time in the making of a picture the result is likely to be more satisfactory. Eventually such a policy would mean longer runs.

What we need in the motion picture industry more than anything else is an infusion of new red blood amongst our scenario writers. Is anything being done to encourage creative genius amongst writers? Do producers go outside of the "chosen few" for material. Is it not true that the producer depends entirely too much on the staff scenario writer? Why not develop a field amongst scenario writers?

We have our novelists and playwrights who have won fame in their profession. How many scenario writers have we that are actually famous? It is natural that the "staff scenario writer" is likely to become mechanical. The fusing together of a certain number of situations does not make a good photoplay.

It is natural that good material would be scarce as long as ten to sixteen new features are released each week.

However, we must look upon our present output of stories as a forerunner for better things, while at the same time, judging from the progress made in recent years, we can value the present output for their superiority over much that preceded them.

Pastor Drops Sermons for Sunday Night Picture Shows

found the moving picture theatre a serious rival for his Sunday evening sermons. But the Rev. Breed was not to be outdone! "If people are determined to go to movies, the best I can do is to furnish good ones for them," he reasoned. Accordingly, he closed his usual Sunday morning sermon a month ago with the statement that his congregation could all come round to the local opera house that evening and see a movie show; no admission charged. His congregation was there en masse, with a liberal addition of other movie fans, and the Rev. Breed has inaugurated a custom that promises to be kept up through the winter months. His first two pictures were "The Sign Invisible" and "The Passing of the Third Floor Back," booked from the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, Milwaukee.

Last week H. J. Fitzgerald, manager of the Milwaukee branch, received the following letter, written by the Rev. Breed:

"Have the new Mary Pickford productions 'Daddy Long-Legs' and 'Pollyana' been released yet? If so, what arrangements could we make to secure them?"

Your Idea and Ours

OUT in San Diego, Cal., C. J. Quinn, manager of the Pickwick theatre, is setting a strong pace for a city of medium size. He is devoting most of his attention to the exploitation of Fox productions and believes in putting a wallop into his displays, and he is doing this by using considerable space and striking half-tones. He knows, the space dropped to four inches double column, but the line effect was retained and there was only a few words of reading matter, but the essential things were said. In the case of the one that we are reproducing, there could be nothing stronger than the sentence: "It fairly brought them to their feet yesterday at the Pickwick."

Use of a name plate or general name design would improve the displays of the Pickwick and make them all the more distinctive, but still this is a house to be watched for its good work.

The difference between a gamble and an investment is the guidance of common sense and the success of others.

TUDOR theatre, Atlanta, Ga., makes almost every portion of this quarter page display bring business to the theatre, though there is a minimum of words used. Yet the one bad thing about it is the temptation to get a little too fancy, which results in the name of the star failing to stand out as it should. As a matter of fact, it is about the last thing that you will see. It would have been better to have used a little more space and to have used the name of Priscilla Dean in white on the black background with the expres-cannot understand the selection of the faces for the names of the two stars unless the printer simply used the first thing that he got his hands on. At least why the names of the two players should be in different styles, unless the printer simply figured that one was longer than the other we do not know.

In this case we would have much preferred to have sunk the cut in the lower right hand corner and then have used Ben Day border breaking into the cut a top and left. Alongside this could have been given the announcements of the remainder of the bill and the offerings for the next two days. Then there would have been space across the two columns to have featured the names of the stars and the title of the picture without breaking the word "Honey-Moon" as it is done. It appears to us to be largely a case of where it was "left to the printer," and the printer did it in the easiest way.

Let's all think IN and FOR 1919 now.

EXHIBITORS can generally pick a mighty good idea for use in the newspapers by watching the advertising done by the producers in the MOTION PICTURE NEWS, but it doesn't follow that a of this advertising is good for newspaper use.

Here is a case where the Muse theatre Omaha, got mighty little pulling power with six inches double column. It reproduced a Goldwyn page calling attention to the criticisms of some of the New York papers on "A Perfect Lady." That was all very lovely but the theatre failed to get anything striking into the display telling what it was about. The script line "A: other Madge Kennedy Success" would get much attention and then the title of the picture itself is so small—about 10 points—that it would be passed over by the average reader.

of course, that it costs him a little more to get these cuts especially made, but the results have been justifying the expense, and certainly his advertising stands out as dominating the pages of the San Diego papers that we have seen.

This quarter of a page on "The Caillaux Case" appeared in the Sunday papers. Mr. Quinn writes that his instructions were not carefully prepared by the printer, but still it is a mighty good display, and one that is so unusual that it can well be followed by others. He had made a striking cut of the head of Madeline Traverse, who has the role of Mme. Caillaux, and then he lists the cast in this international drama. Then there is a statement signed by William Fox telling the character of the picture. As a general rule we are opposed to the use of a bunch of small type, but we believe that this is a display that will be fully read because of the display given by the city and the title and the attractive arrangement of the remainder of the matter.

In the advertising during the run of the picture the same style cut was used, but

There have been two good selling lines employed here with "A little spice, lots of love and a thousand thrills," and then "She purr—she scratch; but, mon Dieu, how she love!" Down in one corner is another added inducement with "Paris to the very life."

This display has come out well here, but we would not advise the average exhibitor to experiment with black and white and half-tone. In most newspapers the result is very poor.

If there is no "heart" in your advertising, you can't expect much of a thrilling response.

STRAND theatre, Altoona, Pa., could have improved considerably on this display on "The Accidental Honeymoon" by a better choice of type. As it stands it appears to us to be a mere mass of matter. We what you want to get in your displays is the selling punch right off the reel. Certainly the attractive title of this picture and the name of the star, and preferably a picture of her should have been played up as fully as the space at hand permitted.

The time to get that smile into your theatre's business is NOW.

THIS is a mighty good "teaser" display. Far the larger part of the people who read this will fail to get an idea of what the picture is about, but the most of them will go to the theatre to find out. It tells you just enough—that a husband mortgages his wife and then, practically, invites you to come to the theatre to learn why he did it and how the experiment works.

There is one thing that we do not like and that is the use of the superlative. We have never yet seen a case where its employment did not work to the weakening of the argument. "The Mortgaged Wife" may possibly be the "most sensational photoplay ever screened," and you may be using the expression in all good faith, but if for no other reason, you don't know what you have coming still, and there is no use in going the limit of language just because that is the temptation of the moment.

Holman theatre, Montreal, has made a good use of the reproduction of the "Mortgage" in this nine-inch, three-column display.

Generalities in your advertising usually mean that you do not know yourself what you are talking about.

DAYTON theatre, Dayton, O., reports that Lila Lee scored a big hit there in her first offering, and that it is for that reason that practically all of the space in the announcement of her second offering was devoted to her personality. We regret that the half-tone did not print better, as there would have been much better effect, for with the heavy border that is employed there is something of the too black effect. But the Dayton did well to bring out the personality element strong and to take full advantage of what she did with her first picture. It is mighty important to figure in every element in your exploitation, and certainly none is more important than the appeal of the star herself.

There is just enough of the story of the picture told to supply a selling talk and then the spirit of the picture is carried through the designed matter at the bottom with a pirate ship in the offing and pirates on shore burying their treasure. No one will miss reading the whole thing.

Anyone Know Where 735 Peckam Block Is?

THIS is a rather unusual display and was used by the American theatre, Butte, Montana, immediately after the "flu" ban on the theatres was lifted. Because it is different it will attract attention, though we wouldn't advise the use of such except for the purpose of getting away on a new trick once in a while.

Perhaps it is excusable on account of the fact that the ban that had been on the theatres had been lifted, but all of this type doesn't tell a thing about the Alice Brady picture. In fact, it is a bunch of generalities until one gets down to the announcement that "Hands Up," the serial, will be resumed at the point where it was broken off when the closing order came.

But the display does deserve commendation for one thing, and that is the use of white space, which made it stand out so that no one who looked at the page could get away from it, even if they never suspected it of being a motion picture advertisement. We do not believe in sinking the name of the theatre as has been done here.

WHAT HE DOES

This Exhibitor Believes in Getting Most Out of Service

ONE of the staff of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS recently walked into the office of a prominent exhibitor. On his desk there was a stack of copies of the issues for the various weeks, and inserted in most of them were yellow slips. The visitor asked what these meant.

"They represent your Special Service Sections. I don't want to miss any of the ideas that are recorded there, and I keep them before me all the time," was the reply.

There is another Special Service Section this week—and another next week.

Now New York Stages the Show

THEY certainly put a lot of music in the Animated at the Rialto this week. When we saw the offering, Dr. Riesenfeld, who has succeeded Mr. Rothapfel as the director of the two theatres, was not in charge of the orchestra, and so we missed some of the touches that he always gives with his baton. But to those who want to put on news events and want to get them over with a hurrah, there is something in this arrangement that is mighty worth following.

"La Forza del Destino" is the overture. This work of Verdi's is one of the favorites at the two theatres and it has never been rendered more brilliantly. It is followed by a couple of subjects from the Educational Film libraries, including "The Woods of Paris" with some particularly striking shots and then some pictures of Dutch kiddies in their wooden shoes. There is a laugh almost every minute with the latter subject. A gavotte is first used and then "Mignon" until the picture of the Holland children, when the orchestra turns into "In Holland."

With the lights all in red, Miss Annie Rosner then sings "Love Is Divine." She is dressed in white, and right here we want to make a little suggestion to exhibitors. The other day we walked into another theatre where there was a soloist who had been probably paid a large sum for her appearance. But she was manifestly COSTUMED. She had on her all the plate glass that Pittsburgh has turned out for years, and she was "dressed up to go to a party." There was a gasp at first, but after that there was nothing more than plain resignation. They applauded, but they did not mean it.

If you are going to have soloists keep their appearance pleasing but simple. If one of them keeps on moving around to show her diamond tiara or her wonderful ring, get one of your best stage hands to take it away from her before she appears again. People in the audience do not want to be reminded of what other people have when they go to a motion picture presentation. They want amusement without your saying to them: "Here this is. Now come and admire it." And the simple dress that most of the soloists at the Rialto and Rivoli wear make their songs all the more convincing.

Then follows the Animated. It opens with Gaumont pictures of Mary Pickford welcoming her own regiment home. There is vigorous applause as she kisses one of them, and the khaki dress that she wears for the role brings a lot of comment from the women sitting alongside. From the same source come pictures of Gen. McClernand being honored in San Francisco, with the poilus marching in review to the applause of the crowds and the audience, and during all of this "King Cotton March" is used. Then the music switches to "Oui, Oui, Marie," with Gaumont pictures of the poilus watching our fighters of fire at work. And straight after that come pictures from the same source of the

WORTH WATCHING

There's a Different Heading Here, But the Accounts Will Continue

WITH this issue the head with which you have been so familiar, "Seeing the Rialto and Rivoli With Rothapfel," has gone into the discard. Last week we told you that Mr. Rothapfel had resigned as managing director of the two houses. Originally this was to take effect on February 1, but he decided that he would surrender the double post at once. He has been succeeded by Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld, musical director of the two theatres.

Accounts of the presentations at the Rialto and Rivoli will continue to appear here. We will have the same facilities for giving the complete accounts of the presentations as we formerly had, and these will continue to be available to exhibitors only through the MOTION PICTURE NEWS. We have been told many times that these accounts of New York presentations are of great value to exhibitors through the country, and so they will be made a permanent feature.

Some further announcement will be made next week.

fire in Cleveland, and here an agitato helps along the effects.

Then we have the scene changing to Kelly Field, Texas, where we have the most wonderful pictures of airships that we have ever seen. There are literally hundreds of them flying in all sorts of formations, and while the smaller but exact reproduction of the sputtering motor behind the scenes gives the sounding of the motors, the orchestra plays "Give a Little Credit to the Navy," a rollicking song, for about sixteen bars, and then follows through with the effects, with the musicians silent, except for the rumbles of the drums.

From the Rialto library, a place where they gather together and save little bits of pictures until the time for their use is ripe, there come scenes with "Alkali Ike at Glacier Lake," and here we have the organ carrying the music in adagio. Current Events then supplied pictures of the skating carnival in Chicago with a couple of mighty nice looking girls doing some wonderful stunts, and here we have "Heart and Hands," the orchestra starting this slowly and working it up to rapid movement according to the action. From Current Events then come pictures of the boys at Camp Devens enjoying coasting and we get a lot of laughs to "Furore Galop." Then Gaumont comes along with pictures from Camp Logan, Texas, of the wild west show staged by the soldiers, and here we have eight bars of "Hail, America" used with "Wild and Woolly" following through for the stuff.

Pathe then comes along with pictures showing that we want all the sports back again, with horse-racing being renewed in Los Angeles, and the music for this is "Saddleback," with Gaumont pictures of the Russian Commission visiting Mt. Wilson Observatory, where we have "Nocturnal." Now here comes the punch, with England "mighty welcome to Wilson," as the title tells us. First we have "Sons of Britain" played by the full orchestra, and then the title, "This Bedlam of Greeting," the music switches to "We'll Never Let the Old Flag Fall," with "Yankee Doodle" followed through, and then "We'll Never Let the Old Flag Fall," the chorus being used to the finish, coming in for the first big punch.

Edouardo Albano, baritone, then sings the prologue from "I Pagliacci" with lights in red, and then follows the feature Pauline Frederick in "Out of the Shadows," another one of those tense pictures. "Romance" is used for the opening, a then after an effective pause we have Rachmaninoff's "Melody," with "Elegiac" at the title "Won't You Look." Some of the other music used includes "In the Shade," "Fleur de Lis," "Silence of the Night," "Festival Dance," and "Valse Doris." "Contemplation" is the then but it is only used twice, once with the title "The Passing Day," and then with the fadeout of the newspaper man. With the title, "The End of a Perfect Day," we have the chorus of that favorite used.

With the lights all gold we have Brahms "Hungarian Dances," and then follow "A Photoplay Magazine Little Journey Filmiland," which has been produced by James R. Quirk, editor of Photoplay Magazine, and which is being released through Educational Films. First we have shots of the beautiful American Films studios Santa Barbara, and then we are taken aside and get a lot of pictures of the players, including Mary Miles Minter, who smiles just as well as the Photoplay camera as she does when she is making features. Then we are brought back closer to New York to the Fort Lee, N. J., studios, where Montague Love is the chief character presented to our gaze. Then we have pictures of Mr. and Mrs. Sydney Drew, showing how they write and produce their pictures and after that we are taken back to the Coast and get Fairbanks, Anita Loos and John Emerson before us all at once.

Then we go to the wonderful Rothapfel studios in Chicago, where so many of the pictures that you see and show are put their final touches, and here we are shown just the way that the "double stuff" is made. We are completely disillusioned with the same man talking to himself analyzed and shown how it is done.

But there is a cartoon at the end that pleases us more than anything that we have witnessed in many a day, and that is the fellow who insists on reading the title. There had been a very fat old gentlem sitting next to us, with a young wife by his side. She undoubtedly had a whole lot better eyesight than he, but he had insisted on reading everything that had appeared on the screen until this one came. Then he was STRANGELY silent. We would recommend booking this picture if for no other reason than to close up the boys who make half of your people miserable.

With the orchestra bathed in blue the overture at the Rivoli this week is the "Second Hungarian Rhapsody." The lighting effects are well worked here with the colors becoming pink toward the end and then blending into purple, and finally to gold. Then follows another one of Prizma color pictures, this one recording a trip to Catalina Island. All of the colors of the rocks, the land and the sea are perfectly portrayed in this, and there are some striking shots of the fish and fauna of the sea that get exclamations from the audience. "Ballet Music" is used here.

Then follows David Mendoza, violinist, playing "Meditation" from "Thais." Here the lights are all down with only the spot on the soloist who stands in the director's box.

Rivoli Animated opens with the Official War Review, the first scenes showing the King of Italy reviewing the Americans who have been fighting on their front and the marching men get a huge amount of applause. "Spirit of Pageantry" is the opening selection and there follows through "Italian Royal March" and then "Garibaldi March." Following this are striking pictures of three divisions of the American army in France being caught in galling fire. You see shells exploding all around the advancing men, and at one point it seems that a group of them has been wiped out. "Battle of Ypres" is played with these.

Then there is interposed one of the very funny Mutt and Jeff cartoons, "The Hula Abaret," and here the selections are "Kuka Ula," "Russian Rag," and then as the prize fight begins it turns to "Azeo lan."

Then we come back to the war and have Belgium's Day of Days, with the entry of the King and Queen into Brussels. The first picture is of a statue that has been saved in secret during the German occupation to celebrate just such an occasion. "Brabaconne" is used here, and then with pictures of the wrecked Yser canal and the marching soldiers. "Plattsburg March" is used. Next we have the King on his white charger entering the city and viewing the troops, and "Brabaconne" is again used with "Entrance of the Guards" being played for the Belgians. Then when the title comes telling us that here are important points the introduction and trio of La Pere de la Victoire are played by the full orchestra. The next title introduces us to "The ladies from hell," Highlanders, and with the orchestra giving the bagpipe and drum effects. "The Campbells Are Coming" is used. Finally there are "America's Own," and the audience, of course, goes wild with enthusiasm while "Over There" helps along the enthusiasm.

After a few bars from the organ the curtains then part revealing one of the John Wenger settings that has been used before. In the center there is a very long window and at either side a Madonna medallion with two hanging red lights. Miss Gladys Rice is in white, and a harpist to the left. "The Rosary" is the number, the curtains closing just as the final notes are dying away. Harp and organ carry the accompaniment.

Most of the music for the feature, "The Silver King," consists of numbered selections. "Merry England" is the opening number and this is followed by "Morris Dance."

Selections from "The Three Twins" form the second orchestra number and then we have a clever Christie comedy, "Five Hundred or Bust," featuring Earl Rodney and Ethel Lynne. It gets a lot of laughs after the tense feature.

Special Lobby Display Made by Universal for "Hearts of Humanity"

PART of the big advertising campaign on "The Heart of Humanity" being prepared by Universal is the making of special lobby display frames holding photos of scenes from the production and portraits of the principal players.

The special lobby frame is of stained oak and stands over seven feet high and has a width of about nine and a half feet. The center panel of the big frame is shaped like a heart, a heart design painted red containing a title card and portraits of Dorothy Phillips, star of the production; Robert Anderson, Erich von Stroheim, William Stowell and Margaret Mann. Below these portraits, arranged in a painted background of poppies, are three 11 x 14 openings for still photos of scenes from the photoplay. The right and left panels contain four 11 x 14 scene photos and each panel is topped by a title board of semi-circular design.

The photos that make up the standard lobby set on "The Heart of Humanity" have been selected from over two hundred photos which express in the best possible way the basis theme of the film drama.

A large number of these special frames have been ordered and within a short time all Universal exchanges will be able to provide exhibitors with them at a reasonable rental.

Richards and Flynn used the full set of posters and pictures in making this lobby display on "The Light of the Western Stars," with Dustin Farnum

This Exhibitor Refused to Allow Missing Stills to Interfere With His Advertising

VAGARIES of presentday railroad transportation, as they affect the prompt delivery of mail, last week necessitated quick and unusual action on the part of the publicity department of Moore's Theatres' Corporation in Washington.

The Sunday theatrical sections of the Washington papers print on Friday night, which obviously makes necessary the submission of Sunday advertising copy prior to that time. The week's booking at Moore's new Rialto theatre, which it was especially desirous to give unusual display, was "Woman," Maurice Tournour's spectacle. Of press photographs there were none in the Capital. Long-distance telephone communication with New York established the fact that 30 "stills" had been mailed days in advance of the proposed run of the picture. There was nothing to do, apparently, but await the pleasure of Mr. Burleson's uniformed bearers of the written and printed word.

When Friday morning arrived and the anxiously awaited pictures of one of the most gloriously artistic features the screen has known, did not, action became imperative.

As a last resort the first reel of the film was placed upon rewinders and minute examination of the Garden of Eden scenes was made before a high-power tungsten light. When a sufficiently sharp piece of film, with the figures concerned in the episode centered, was found, three frames were clipped and rushed to an expert enlargement. After several unsuccessful efforts the photographer succeeded in running the film view— $\frac{3}{4}$ -inch by 1-inch, up to a 5-inch by 7-inch size—in which the detail of the picture was fairly well preserved. A contact print was immediately made, rushed to a retoucher and then passed along to the art department of the Washington Post, where another expert prepared the copy for reproduction to proper dimensions for a three-column ad. allowing space for a distinctive border.

The cut was delivered by the engravers after the ad. was set and the page of the paper on which it was carried made up, but the forms had not been locked, nor mats thrown, with the result that "Woman" was advertised with a three-column cut of the Garden of Eden episode in all four of the Washington papers.

The success of this more or less involved method of acquiring photographic copy of an important and significant scene in a picture abounding in artistic "shots" was complete.

Big Exploitation Is Given "Wanted for Murder"

In exploiting "Wanted For Murder" the Old Mill theatre, Dallas, Texas, followed pretty closely the plan that was originated by M. Kashin when he showed the picture at the Broadway, New York City. From the top of the highest buildings in the business district there were distributed thousands of circulars bearing pictures of the Kaiser and the title of the picture. Then further thousands of paper bags bearing the title were used in grocery stores and fruitstands.

In addition to this the Old Mill carried one-line advertisements reading "Who Is Wanted for Murder?" on every page of the Dallas newspapers and then plastered the whole town with posters.

Eighty-five 24-Sheets Used in Advertising Dustin Farnum in Kansas City

EIGHTY-FIVE 24-sheet stands were used by Richards and Flynn in advertising the showing of Dustin Farnum in "The Light of the Western Stars," at the Twelfth Street theatre, Kansas City, Mo. Large advertising was used in the local papers to announce the picture and the lobby display was devoted to a complete set of stills and a number of large pictures of the star.

Besides owning the franchise for the First National pictures in western Missouri, the company has not acquired the right to all of the product of United Picture theatres and intends to give the product of both of the distributors a full week's run at the Twelfth Street. Immediately after opening with this Dustin Farnum picture, Mr. Richards wired: "We opened Sunday with Dustin Farnum in 'The Light of the Western Stars' to capacity business despite bad weather and the street car strike. It is the most pleasing picture that we have ever played."

There is a wide lobby in the Twelfth Street and this is used to the limit to boost the current offerings, but the management makes it a point never to resort to anything of the freakish, but to attempt to exploit each offering on its merits. So in the case of this offering a six sheet was used at either side and attached to the pillars were frames carrying scenes from the film. On the inner walls were large pictures of the star, and another one was placed on an oval frame, studded with electric lights. This made it stand out very strikingly. A twenty-four sheet was used projected across the sidewalk.

It is worthy of note that this theatre is probably the only one in the country that has a clock in the lobby instead of the regulation affair alongside the screen. You know for yourself how you get the idea of looking at certain clocks as you walk along the street, whether you are really anxious to know the time or not. Richards and Flynn believe in the policy of encouraging people to look into their lobby, and it has been their experience that a big share of those who pass the house give "glance at the time" and then give their attention to the lobby display.

Postcards Help Tie-Up with National Advertising

Famous Players-Artcraft has started a new plan with postcard reproductions of one of the advertisements that it used in the Saturday Evening Post, title, "You Wouldn't Know the Old Town Now." There is room left on the postal for an announcement that the theatre to which these are supplied may make. It is suggested that this makes an excellent tie-up of the theatre with the national advertising of the producers.

If you can put eight days in your week ideas, all the better.

Three of the striking 40 by 60 paintings supplied to advertise "Mickey" in theatre lobbies

Star Paintings of Mabel Normand Praised by Exhibitors as Aiding in Boosting Picture

EXHIBITORS who have been complaining about the poor quality of the matter which they are offered for their lobby displays will have to make an exception in the case of "Mickey." Here there is a real chance offered to portray the charms of Mabel Normand through a series of 40 x 60 and 30 x 40 paintings of the star and scenes for the picture. Three of the latter are illustrated here.

These enlarged pictures work a great deal better for display purposes in keeping with the dignity of the theatre than do the ordinary printed matter. Two of these are figures of Miss Normand in boy's clothes and another is a silhouette scene from the picture, while still others illustrate some of the most interesting moments in the offering. Theatres that have used these have reported that they attracted unusual attention.

Most exhibitors cannot go to the expense or the trouble of designing distinctive lobby displays for each picture. In the first place, the most of them do not get a chance to see the production in advance of its actual showing, and any display that would be made would have to be largely designed from the account of the production that they get in the publicity matter. An idea of what can happen is voiced in his letter, from which the names are omitted:

"Never again! I have just had my first experience with designing a lobby display. It cost me fifty dollars, and I wouldn't kick a bit about that, for it certainly did its work and brought me increased business, but the trouble about it was that it left every one of my patrons sore and is going to keep me explaining for the next six months. I had the so-called plan book that was issued by the company, read over the story and then carefully built the display around what I thought was the big scene.

"I got a smashing effect out of it. The display literally stopped traffic in front of my house and soon there was a line in front of the ticket window. That was all very nice, but that display came down just as soon as I had had time to see the picture through. Why? Because the scene that I had taken the trouble to bring out so strikingly was not in the picture at all. It may have been there the way that the story was written, but it had been cut out later. I should not have been caught in this trap, for I have seen that a great majority of the advance 'stories' of the pictures are far different from the finished product."

Where you have a star production it is wise to play up the pictures of her prominently. In these pages we have suggested several times that it is well for exhibitors to save every photograph of players that they get and then to arrange attractive displays on each one. With a nucleus of half a dozen pictures of the players, which can be added to with cut-outs of the star in roles that she plays later, you can generally cause a lot of comment. One exhibitor, who has been in the business only a little over two years, has as many as three hundred pictures of some of the players. He has carefully saved the star pictures that have been sent him and he always buys outright the stills on each offering and preserves these after he has made use of them in the newspaper and his lobby.

For instance, in the case of Mary Pickford he has illustrations showing how she has appeared in every role during the last couple of years. These are cut out from the scenes and mounted on gray cardboard, and under each one is hand lettering giving the name of the character and the title of the picture. These frames stand in the same place regularly, and, as the exhibitor in question changes his bill three times a week, there is a succession in the displays that keep up the interest. The patrons look for this just the same as they expect to be handed a program when they enter the theatre. He reports that he does a lesser amount of business on star pictures than usual when he is using some player of whom he has no collection of photographs.

Many of the producers are providing stock one-sheets of the stars, and these should be preserved by the theatre manager just as carefully as he does the first dollar that he took in, which you probably have framed and hanging over your desk. Simply because you are not showing this same star today or next week there is no reason why you should cast aside a chance to make money in the future. One live exhibitor estimates that ten per cent of his increased business has come from the "Morgue" that he maintains. He never throws anything away that he thinks he can use again. His collection started with one of the series of drawers that are used by small stores for carrying their thread stock and with which you were familiar in the country emporium days. Now the "Morgue" occupies the whole of a room 28 x 27 feet.

Several of the companies are now arranging to provide lobby displays on each of their big pictures, and the example set by W. H. Productions with "Mickey" is likely to encourage this. Such theatres as Keith's Boston reports that unusual attention was attracted with these paintings.

"Rubberneck Wagon" and Music San Francisco Novelty

Rialto theatre, San Francisco, is giving its patrons a novelty since the appointment of J. Harry Lewis is leader of the orchestra. This novelty is called "Smiles on a Rubberneck Wagon." Slides are thrown on the screen showing scenes about the city, while the orchestra plays appropriate music. For instance, during some Chinatown scenes Chinese airs were used, and pictures of Fisherman's Wharf brought out a rollicking sea tune.

Sunday Morning Symphony Concerts Score Great Success at the California Theatre

SUNDAY morning musical concerts in a motion picture theatre are something new, but they have just been started at the California theatre, San Francisco, and the idea of Eugene H. Roth, the managing director of that house and the Portola, appears to be a great hit if one may judge from the columns of newspaper space that the accounts have received.

The California has one of the finest orchestras in the country and every effort has been made to develop it to the fullest. It is under the direction of Herman Heller and includes 55 musicians, making it the largest musical organization playing in any motion picture house in the world. The first program included "Sakuntala Overture," "Peer Gynt Suite," Liszt's "Second Rhapsody," Herbert's "Algeria" and "War March of the Presiests" on the organ.

Here are some extracts from the article about the first concert, as written by Walter Anthony, in the Chronicle, where he gave three columns of space to the concert in the course of two days:

"A New Year's gift it was to the people of San Francisco by the management of the California theatre, where there is resident in the person of Manager Eugene H. Roth a fixed conviction that the people of San Francisco want symphony in its best manifestations at a price commensurate with the meagerest income and offered in an environment of comfort, luxury and acoustical kindness.

"So yesterday morning's concert was given, and pleased smiles wreathed the managerial countenance of the California and its capable musical director.

"The affair was a success. Though but brief notice had been given the public concerning the concert, the audience was large. Next Sunday, if it doesn't clamor at the doors of the theatre at 11.30 in numbers to fill the big building to overflowing, it will be because there isn't the appreciation for good music in town that we are pleased right now to believe there is.

"One takes the playing of this organization for granted. The members of the orchestra are trained and carefully selected instrumentalists, accustomed to symphony in its most pretentious moods. * * *

"It is a genuine pleasure to speak of the acoustical advantages of the California theatre, though there is irony in the thought that so excellently designed a building should be devoted mainly to the silence of pictures. We have not heard a symphony orchestra in San Francisco so congenially located as is the one now to be heard every Sunday morning at the California. Sharpness without echo, clarity without shrillness, carrying power without undue endurance of tone and a resonance to respond to the different timbre of the various orchestral choirs are qualities bestowed on the composite tone by the nice architectural adjustments of the California theatre's proportions.

"The California theatre's symphony orchestra, the management and the director, Herman Heller, merit the best wishes for a prosperous new year—their faith and

KEEP IT BOLD

Don't Stop Because You Have Had a Few Days Bad Luck

THREE months ago we received a letter from an exhibitor, who said:

"I have been following your advice and have been advertising for two weeks. I cannot see where it has brought me any business. I am sending you some of my advertising, and I want to know what is the matter."

There were some ways that his advertising could be improved and we wrote him a letter about it—as we are ready to do with any exhibitor. But the main thing that we told him was to forget all about the two weeks.

Once upon a time the man who is writing these pages was an advertising man on a newspaper, and he shocked an exhibitor very much by refusing to accept purely occasional advertising on the ground that the man was wasting money. We told him that he could not get results from this sort of stuff. It's true.

Don't advertise one day and expect them to stream into your theatre that evening. They won't. You have to keep your message up day by day.

How many years ago did you first hear of Ivory Soap?

enterprise justify the hope that San Francisco will not be defeated by this fine and economical opportunity to enjoy the menu of music's best."

Such things as this go far toward making a motion picture theatre a civic institution. We haven't the slightest doubt that it will bring a lot of people to the California regularly who have not been anything of motion picture fans and that it will send them away with a higher opinion of the photoplay.

Music is one of the biggest elements in popularizing the success of the picture, because there is a chance for music that is not accorded even the average stage production. Certainly it has been one of the secrets of the success of Samuel L. Rothapfel and managers everywhere during the past year have been putting more and more emphasis on this phase of their program.

Merely better pictures do not get more people into your theatre. You have to go something beyond this, and managers who do not think that they can afford to have an orchestra will do well to figure out the Roth plan and see if they cannot add to their revenue with such concerts as he is giving at the California, even if yours has to be on a limited scale and with but a few musicians.

It is likely to make your theatre the theatre of the section.

Praise and flattery are as different as they are spelled.

Two Pages Used to Advertise News in Newspaper

Full page advertising was devoted to Hearst News and Universal Screen Telegram, news weeklies, in the Los Angeles Examiner on Sunday, December 29. The feature of the copy showed a huge battle ship from which the muzzles of three gigantic guns pointed, and the advertisement was entitled "Three Big Guns of the Screen." The display was signed "the only tri-weekly news film service in the world, issued by the International Film Company, Inc., and released by the Universal Film Manufacturing Company." This page was followed by another page in which some of the scenes in the news reel were reproduced on the page of the newspaper.

"Home Coming" Used for 1919 New Year's Celebration by McCormick

By Davis Hampton

Among the many tableaux and scenes presented at the Circle theatre, Indianapolis, to celebrate special events and to mark holidays and historic days perhaps none has been more effective than S Barret McCormick's 1919 New Year's tableaux entitled, "The Home Coming."

The scene was one symbolic of peace and pictured the new year as a great golden ship with a huge white sail bending before the winds and steered by a tiny and beautiful cherub racing away from the troubled waters and carrying a Yankee fighter back to his home. The effectiveness of the scene lay in its simple and direct appeal to the heart.

Another very striking stage picture is being used this week as a setting for vocal number. It shows a forest of straight young trees against a deep blue background with really gorgeous light effects. In order to secure the realism wanted for his scene Mr. McCormick had over fifty trees cut down and transplanted to the Circle stage period. They were then painted in silver and with changing lights made a startling effect.

"Hawaiian Melodies" was another song and scenic picture recently offered at the Circle and which formed a beautiful scene stop. This pictured a night on the islands, with a bright moon casting its glow over the sea stop. On a large rack sat a Hawaiian girl, while at her feet were grouped three native men, and together they sang the plaintive melodies of the islands.

This Teaser Advertisement Brought People to the Theatre

Manager Jules Rosenthal of the Majestic theatre, Dubuque, Ia., is constantly using new advertising methods, but one of the best that he has employed came with the showing of Mildred Harris (Mrs. Charles Chaplin) in "Borrowed Clothes." He played this picture on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, but the Sunday previous he inserted a display in the papers reading:

"Shame on you, Charlie! What do you think of a million-dollar comedian, Charlie Chaplin, to allow his charming young wife appear at the Majestic in 'Borrowed Clothes?'"

MAYBE SO

But This Exhibitor Found He Wasn't Too Busy

THERE came into the office the other day a letter postmarked a town that you probably never heard about. Here's the way it read:

"I've been taking the NEWS for a long time and I have been reading your splendid suggestions, thought that they were mighty good, and then forgot them. I was 'too busy' to give them real attention. Last week I failed to get any material on a production that I had booked, and I spent 60 cents in sending you a wire. I got it. You saved my life."

We didn't do that, but we gave him the service that he asked for. And this is the sort of service that is ready for you at any time, in any quantity, and no matter how much trouble it makes.

We try to keep busy, but we are never TOO BUSY to grab the hands of the clock and hold them back while we attend to what you want.

Just try and see! The only expense is the postage stamp that your home postoffice cancels.

Beeman Joins Robertson-Cole

Former Assistant Director General of the Government Division of Films to Open Office in London

ROBERTSON-COLE COMPANY gave another indication of its world-wide activity in films when it announced that the services of one of the Government's war film experts had been secured as European manager for the Division of Films of the Robertson-Cole Company with headquarters in London.

Marcus A. Beeman, former assistant director general of the Division of Films of the Committee of Public Information, is the man selected. He will leave for London January 29 on the "Coronia" and open the office early in February.

Robertson-Cole Company's list of stars signed up for the last two months for distribution throughout the world, as well as in the United States and Canada through the Exhibitors' Mutual, has entailed such an increase in foreign business as to require the opening of the London office.

For nearly a year the firm has marketed a large number of independent productions in foreign countries. A tremendous impetus to this business comes with the addition to the offering of such names as Henry B. Walthall, Billie Rhodes, Bessie Barriscale, William Desmond, Sessue Hayakawa, Carter De Haven and H. B. Warner.

Mr. Beeman is deemed particularly fitted for the work by his experience in the Division of Films, a large part of the activity of which centered in foreign educational work in support of our doughboys, especially in the two neutral countries, Holland and Switzerland, where the battle with the Hun for the winning of public opinion was waged with great success.

In addition the committee supported the advance into Russia by disseminating accurate information among the Russian inhabitants to counteract the far-reaching propaganda of lies carried on by the Germans.

Films showing the industrial and military effort of the Americans were scattered through the territories about Archangel and Vladivostok to convince the people of America's true part in the war.

Elsie Ferguson Goes South for Exteriors

Elsie Ferguson, accompanied by her director, Emile Chautard, Assistant Director Al Lena, Jacques Bizeul, cameraman; Wyndham Standing, leading man, and other members of Miss Ferguson's company have gone to Miami, Fla., to film a number of exteriors for the new Artcraft picture, "The Salt of the Earth." They will remain in the South about two weeks.

Miss Ferguson's recently completed Artcraft picture, "His Parisian Wife," by Eve Unsell, will be released next week. It was directed by Mr. Chautard. Miss Ferguson plays the part of Faunette, a girl reporter in Paris, who weds Martin Wesley, a Boston lawyer, after a brief courtship. She is received with coldness by his Puritanical parents. Fauvette finally goes to New York, writes a novel and wins fame and later is reunited with her husband. David Powell appears opposite the star. Courtenay Foote, Frank Losee, Cora Williams, Captain Charles and Louis Grizel are others in support.

"Every Mother's Son" Is "Standard" Release

William Fox announces that the R. A. Walsh production of "Every Mother's Son," one of the Fox "Big Timely" pictures, will be given to the exhibitors as a regular "Standard" release early in February.

The featured player is Charlotte Walker and Mr. Fox announces that by including the strongest attractions as regular Standard picture releases he is giving the exhibitors an excellent opportunity to cash in strong.

Vitagraph Values Locale in New Serial

URGING the necessity of providing the proper background for every scene in its many serials, Vitagraph announces that it takes particular pride in the locale arranged and provided for the many changing scenes in its newest serial now being completed.

"The Man of Might" stars William Duncan and is in fifteen episodes. In search of the proper locations, it is said that the company has been taken through many picturesque sections of Southern California, Lower Mexico, the Arizona desert, and as far north as San Francisco.

It is declared that Vitagraph has insisted that Mr. Duncan spare no expense in securing the true backgrounds and banish all of the so-called trickery. The fights are said to be fast and furious and life and limb has many times been placed in jeopardy according to statements.

Vitagraph feels that when it announces that "The Man of Might" is a world beater that it means something to the fans.

"The Fighting Trail," "Vengeance and the Woman," and "A Fight for Millions" have all been filled with thrills, say Vitagraph officials, and "The Man of Might" will go them one better.

Lloyd-Pathe Bookings Climb Steadily

Company Begins National Survey to Analyze Increasing Popularity of Comedy Star—Improvement of Subjects Is Main Point in View—Criticism Invited

PATHE this week announced that the bookings of the Harold Lloyd comedies have shown such an unusual increase during the last few months, and exhibitor comment has been so highly favorable, that Pathe has started through its branches a census as to the number of theatres at which the comedies are booked on standing orders, the estimated number of days that comedies are shown in certain territories, the number of persons who see them and all individual newspaper and exhibitor comment that can be collected.

The move, it is made known, is in preparation for a country-wide drive in promotion of these one-reel features. The aim is to secure as much helpful criticism as possible to show which particular features are most admired in the comedies.

Ask for Frank Opinion

It will also be the aim of Pathe to ascertain if the work of the players individually or the method of handling situations is best liked. The most frank criticism will be invited to aid in the further improvement of what Vice-President and General Manager Paul Brunet of Pathe Exchange, Inc., considers to be one of the exceptionally good things of the year. For, he declares, the Rolin Film Company, in fashioning the comedies featuring Harold Lloyd, with Bebe Daniels and "Snub" Pollard, has contributed an entirely new comedy spirit, an evolution from the broad, coarse and oftentimes messy slapstick pioneer work. It is clean, wholesome, not offensive to good taste, and while it is broad in its farcical treatment, it is still clever in its satire upon men and things.

Mr. Brunet is apt to attribute the increasing success of the Lloyd comedies to the fact that they are a clever mixture of the new and old and while holding those who delight in the humor of strenuous work, are at the same time gaining thousands of new friends by the clean comedy and burlesque idea which is the expression of the new order of things. As proof of this widespread appreciation, it is significant that the Strand theatre, New York City, signed for the largest amount ever paid for a one-reel feature when it obtained for the week of January 4, the Lloyd comedy, "Wanted 5,000," which Hal Roach, president and general director of the Rolin Company declares is a good sample of them all. Samuel L. Rothapfel recently featured "Take a Chance" at the Rialto theatre, New York, and the Lloyd comedies have an enormous following in the New York circuits of Marcus Loew, William Fox and Moss and Stoll.

Mr. Roach, in sanguine anticipation of just such a favorable development, has, in his own words, "bed-rocked these smile-lams, with hilarious Harold," which is characteristic comment on the fact that the Rolin Company, up to the present, has produced and delivered to Pathe a sufficient number of Lloyd comedies to supply the program for the entire year.

Reform in the Drama Seen

with all of the palpable absurdities so satirized as to create a constant source of merriment. Not a few individuals and organizations interested in the betterment of the motion picture, as regards the story and the faithful picturing of life, have commended Mr. Roach for this innovation, which, they indicate, will bring about a reform in the use of wild-eyed impossible melodrama by showing how utterly absurd it is.

"This is a most effective method," comments George Arthur Gray, magazine writer and reviewer, "for by it you may literally laugh the blatant, old stuff off the screen. The villainy villain and the angelic heroine have passed their usefulness on the speaking stage—they are discarded puppets—and there is no reason at all why they should persist on the screen.

"Hal Roach and Harold Lloyd are really active reformers in their happy, irresponsible, carefree way and should earn the gratitude of the entire country in thus holding up the distorted mirror of frantic melodrama to the eyes of the world. These travesties I consider not only farce comedy of the highest degree, but some of the most delightful satire I have ever seen either on the screen or the stage, or that I have ever read, not even excepting Jerome K. Jerome's delightful 'Stageland.' Therefore, these Lloyd comedies have a distinct, individual place in motion pictures—and though I may lay myself open to protesting assault from some quarters, I nevertheless will have the temerity to say that they, to a certain degree, conserve definite standards of real art."

Two "Hals" Make Good

Hal Roach is still under thirty and was born in Elmira, N. Y. Harold Lloyd is twenty-five and Pawnee County, Neb., claims him as one of her famous favorite sons. The conjunction of these two Harolds has brought a mutual reward of fame and success and the story of the founding of the Rolin Company and the hardships that nearly overcame it, until, by a last despairing effort it became strong again, makes one of the romances of the motion picture industry. Mr. Roach, now president and general director, personally supervises the making of the comedies and he is especially proud of the fact that he personally selected and trained Harold Lloyd, Bebe Daniels, Snub Pollard and other members of the cast.

Roach was a mail carrier in Alaska when he actually got frozen feet and quit the North for the congenial climate of California. From the time he obtained a job as an extra in a Western picture his progress was rapid and he was soon an assistant director. Later, with friends, he formed the Rolin Company and produced several pictures, for which he received no return on account of the successive failures of the distributing companies. He finally determined to put all the funny stunts he could think of—crazy, whimsical and daring—into one picture, which he called "Just Nuts" and sent it to Pathe on speculation.

What might have been his slapstick swansong proved to be a pean of triumph, and of salvation. Pathe asked for more pictures, and to continue further operation, Roach enlisted the interest of Dwight Whiting, well-known resident of Los Angeles, who acquired a one-third interest in the company. Mr. Whiting organized the business on a sound basis and made W. H. Doane his assistant. Messrs. Whiting and Roach later became sole owners of the concern when Dan Linthcum, the third partner, jointly sold them his interests.

John Barrymore is starred by Famous Players-Lasky in "Here Comes the Bride," which is expected to create unusual interest

New Directors and Plays Added

Famous Players-Lasky Announces Screen Rights Purchased for Four Stage Plays to Be Produced at Once

BESIDES obtaining screen rights for four stage plays, Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, in charge of production, has secured three new directors.

George Fitzmaurice, Kenneth Webb and Irvin Willat have been engaged as directors and the screen rights have been secured for "Come Out of the Kitchen," "Girls," "The Witness for the Defense," and "The Malefactor."

Mr. Fitzmaurice has directed a great many successful films during the last five years, and at the head of his own organization he produced the Astra pictures for Pathe release.

Among the most successful of his many productions are "Innocent," "Common Clay," "The Japanese Nightingale," and starring Fannie Ward, and his many screen presentations of Al Wood's plays, particularly "New York," starring Florence Reed.

His first direction under Famous Players-Lasky auspices will be Elsie Ferguson in "The Witness for the Defense," from the play by Alfred Edward Woodley Mason, and in which Ethel Barrymore starred during its New York stage presentation in 1911.

Kenneth Webb directed the O. Henry pictures. He will stage Eastern made films for Paramount in the very near future.

Irvin Willat will produce, in the Famous Players-Lasky Western studios, a Lila Lee subject, "Judy of Rogues' Harbor," which is an adaptation of a novel by Grace Miller White.

Mr. Willat is well known as a director and one of his latest was "The False Faces," an Ince production released as a Paramount-Artcraft Special and which starred Henry B. Walthal.

Of the plays recently secured, "Come Out of the Kitchen" is a comedy by A. E. Thomas, founded on the novel of the same name by Alice Duer Miller and produced on the stage by Henry Miller and Ruth Chatterton and Bruce McRae.

"Girls" as a stage play was a Clyde Fitch farce, and "The Malefactor" is from the book written by E. Phillips Oppenheim and published in 1916.

This story was bought for John Barrymore and is said to suit his style admirably. In both the East and West studios the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation report great activities.

Sample "Extra" Introduces World News Reel

AS a sample copy of what the news reel will look like when it is released regularly an "extra" is being issued by World Film Corporation and all the exchanges will have it to show by February 1.

The advanced extra sample contains pictures from the local field and abroad, and, according to description, several remarkable news scenes are shown from the Italian Alps.

It is said that a part of this first reel is devoted to a description of the title and typographical make-up and this new news reel distributed by World exchanges will be called "Kinograms."

Views of the Kinogram concern's laboratories at 71 West Twenty-third street, New York City, show that the editorial rooms are operated in the same building and as this is the only outfit on Manhattan Island they figure that quicker service will be the result.

Charles Urban, Ray L. Hall and Terry Ramsaye make up the executive and editorial staff of the Kinogram and all this information is featured in the first sample or introductory copy published as the "Extra."

The name "Kino" means motion pictures in probably the largest part of the globe, it is said, and "Gram" is taken boldly from cablegram.

Exhibitor shows are set for Feb. 1.

Merrick Now Assistant Sales Manager

Joe Merrick, prominent exchangeman on the Pacific Coast, has been promoted from Pacific Coast supervisor to assistant sales manager of the Exhibitors' Mutual Distributing Corporation and transferred to New York, Exhibitors' Mutual announces.

Mr. Merrick came East with the removal of the executive offices of 'Exhibitors' Mutual from Chicago to New York City and has begun his duties in the new Mutual general offices at 1600 Broadway.

Joe, as he is called by his many friends, is a pioneer in the industry. His connections date back twelve years. His experience covers all angles of the business—exhibition, distribution and production.

Mr. Merrick started at Missoula, Mont., where he was the owner of three theatres, the Isis, the Bijou and the Grand. After five years as an exhibitor he entered distribution as a member of the staff of the old General Film Company, in Portland, Seattle and San Francisco. He was connected successively with Blue Bird and Universal, leaving the latter to enter the service of the Mutual Film Corporation, first as branch manager at Seattle and then as branch manager at Los Angeles. During his long service as branch manager of the Mutual Los Angeles office he built up a wide acquaintance with the studio folks and there are few stars, and few minor actors who do not know him well enough to call him "Joe."

Lauds Faversham Cast

Famous Players-Lasky takes great pride in the cast which it gave William Faversham in the fifth of its Paramount-Artcraft specials released January 12.

"The Silver King" stars William Faversham, and Barbara Castleton is the leading woman. Others prominent in the cast are John Sunderland, Warburton Gamble, Daniel Pennell, Cecil Yapp and William O'Day. George Irving directed the picture, which is from the original stage play by Henry Arthur Jones and scenarioized by Burns Mantle.

Select Establishes New Sales Record

Declares High Mark Has Been Passed in Five Out of Last Six Consecutive Weeks—Branch Managers Work Hard for Results—Starts Year Satisfied

ACCORDING to an announcement which this week came from the publicity department of Select Pictures, most remarkable results have been attained by that corporation in the matter of business done by the company, as a whole, throughout the United States in the period extending from the last week in November until the week ending January 4, inclusive. The announcement declares that in five of the six weeks mentioned net film rentals broke all previous records of Select. That this was accomplished in the face of the fact that during these six weeks about 1,200 towns having theatres were closed on account of the epidemic is considered remarkable by officials of the company.

Select's achievement is considered so noteworthy by members of the organization they felt it would prove of interest to the industry to make an announcement.

It will be recalled that when the influenza epidemic caused a shutdown throughout the country, the large producing companies and distributing organizations got together and agreed that it would be wise not to release new productions during a certain period of weeks. How conditions gradually righted themselves in various districts here and there throughout the country, how the theatres opened up, one by one, all this has become film history.

Arthur S. Kane, general manager of Select, was ambitious that the sales force of his company should get on its toes quickly and during the entire closed period was bending every effort to this end, being enthusiastically backed by Select's branch managers in the twenty-one cities in which the company maintains exchanges. It has been already recorded how Select staged a "Re-open with Select" campaign and achieved results in getting managers of houses everywhere to use some Select feature as the attraction with which to re-open their houses after the dark period. Branches strained in their efforts to get opening dates. The argument was used that managers could find no surer way of winning back their patrons after a long period during which they had got out of the habit of coming to the playhouses than by offering them Select Pictures. The very first week after the general resumption of business, the week ending November 30, Select's net film rentals broke all records established prior to the shutdown.

Books Houses to Keep

But having got into the houses, Select was determined to stay in them, and efforts were concentrated to this end. And so the week ending December 7 broke the record established by the week ending November 30. And again, for the third consecutive week, that ending December 14, broke the record of the prior week.

The week ending December 21 was the week before Christmas, and it was hardly to be expected that this would prove a record-breaking week. Nevertheless, the net film rentals secured by Select that week are said to have compared very favorably in amount with some of the past weeks of the period prior to the shutdown.

Taking advantage of the week of Christmas holidays, and with the fact in their minds that this was their very last chance to again break a record in 1918, Select's entire force, from branch manager to road salesman, concentrated upon doing an eye-opening business. And so the week ending December 28 broke all records previously established by Select.

Good Work Appreciated

Select officials were naturally especially elated at this achievement, and General Manager Kane sent congratulatory telegrams to the various branches, acknowledging the wonderful work done and voicing the home office's appreciation of it. A day or two later, however, Mr. Kane followed this with a letter to branches in which he said: "During the year we have got to do greatly increased hustling to keep out of our own way, or the shadow of the closing weeks of 1918 will envelop us." Evidently this fear was in the minds of the branch managers. Having attained the peak, were they to rest in the shadow on the other side during 1919? Determined that 1919 should not be threatened in this manner, Select's twenty-one branches outdid themselves and in another burst of speed shattered at once, in the first week of the new year, the record established with the last week of the old. Net film rentals for the week ending January 4—the last report to be received—are declared to be the greatest in Select's history.

This sequence of five record-breaking weeks out of six has been very gratifying to everyone concerned in the business of supplying Select Pictures to the country. A consistent series of record-breaking weeks, one after another, maintained in the manner that the Select record was maintained during the six weeks just closed, can mean but one thing; that the product that Select was offering to the exhibitors was in demand, first, for the purpose of attracting patrons back to the picture theatres, and, second, for the purpose of holding this patronage once it was obtained. The records secured also imply the most sincere of compliments to the alertness and ability of the members of Select's sales organization—that compliment which is best expressed in results. Select is particularly proud that at a time when officials of other large companies are openly complaining that their business is off 15 or 20 per cent, due to the abnormal conditions obtaining by reason of partly closed territory, the demand for Select attractions has been so strong that the company's business has risen to a higher mark than ever before in its history.

Anita Stewart Would Form Soldier Organization

Anita Stewart, star of Louis B. Mayer's production of "Virtuous Wives," has started a movement for the organization of a body similar to the Grand Army of the Republic. A letter written recently by Miss Stewart to Secretary of War Baker, explains Miss Stewart's suggestions. The letter addressed to Mr. Baker, follows in part:

"May I be permitted to offer a suggestion concern a matter which I cannot but believe will meet with your hearty approval. I refer to an organization of our Soldiers of Freedom similar to our glorious Grand Army of the Republic.

"Perhaps the starting of such an organization before all our boys are back from overseas may seem a bit premature, but how much easier it would be now while the nucleus of our splendid army is still together, than to wait until it is scattered to the four corners of the country. And what a fine thing it would be for the boys still in service to find on their return, the movement well under way. That a mighty organization of World War Veterans will some day be formed is a certainty, but a word from you now would hasten it, and prevent countless delays later on.

"Ravished Armenia" Has Its Premiere

"Ravished Armenia," the new eight-reel production directed by Oscar Apfel in the Selig studios, had its premiere at the Majestic theatre in Los Angeles the week beginning January 19th.

The story was adapted from a serial which ran in the Hearst publications, and Irving Cummings is seen in the leading role with Aurora Martignian. The film will provide funds for the Armenian War Relief Association.

Viola Dana is completing "Diana Ardway," a comedy for Metro. Hale Hamilton is busy on the West Coast on "Johnny on the Spot."

Fourth Nazimova Is Completed

Metro Will Distribute "Out of the Fog," a Nazimova Production, Beginning Early in February

WHAT is announced as a vital and powerfully absorbing drama of life along the New England coast will be distributed early next month by Metro exchanges.

It is the fourth of the special Nazimova productions presented by Richard A. Rowland and Maxwell Karger and entitled "Out of the Fog."

They consider Nazimova's attraction on the screen seems to be cumulative and getting greater every day. Both Mr. Rowland and Mr. Karger cite what they declare to be her tremendous success in "Eye for Eye," and also "Toys of Fate" and "Revelation."

Metro officials declare that the new production of "Out of the Fog" will surpass her past successes and that it is finer and superior from every standpoint.

It is stated that the filming of the light-house scenes was done at the very place the story calls for and that all the realism was injected by Director Albert Capellani and Eugene Gaudio, the cameraman, by close, capable co-operation.

This production was adapted from the stage play, "Ception Shoals," by H. Austin Adams, and Mme. Nazimova is said to have scored a great triumph when she appeared in the stage production at the Thirty-ninth Street theatre in New York City.

In the supporting cast Charles Bryant appears as Phillip Blake and Henry Harman as Job Coffin. The balance of the cast is declared to have been selected with every care and includes Nancy Palmer as Maude Standish, George W. Davis as her husband, T. Morse Koupal, Charles Smiley, Tom Blake, Hugh Jeffrey, Dorothy Smoller, J. O'Connor, Harry Weiss, Ada Scovill, Marie Gynt and Lydia Wellmore.

The production was under the personal supervision of Maxwell Karger and Nazimova's versatility is said to be artistically demonstrated in her portrayal of Faith, Job Coffin's unhappy sister, and again as Eve, her oddly reared daughter.

Joe Coffin is the grim keeper of a lonely surf-swept lighthouse off the Massachusetts coast and there are said to be many thrilling scenes as well as intensely dramatic moments in this production.

Many Popular Favorites in Houdini Serial

SUPPORTING Houdini, the Handcuff King, featured in "The Master Mystery," the fifteen-episode serial, produced by B. A. Rolfe and distributed by Octagon Films, Inc., are seen popular stage and screen favorites.

Houdini brings to the screen for the first time not only an elaboration of those feats of escape from restraint which earned for him the title of "the handcuff king" and made his name a household byword all over the world, but a line of stunts he has never done before. Appearing with Houdini are Margaret Marsh, Ruth Stonehouse, Edna Britton, William Pike, Charles Graham, Floyd Buckley and Jack Burnes.

Miss Marsh's name has been featured in many pictures, as has that of Miss Stonehouse. For five years Miss Stonehouse was an Essanay star. She was also a Bluebird star for a year and a half and a Triangle star for eight months. Edna Britton, in a vampire role, has established a reputation by work in Lew Field's shows and Winter Garden productions. She was also the star of several of B. A. Rolfe's musical acts in vaudeville.

William Pike and Charles A. Graham both have had many years experience on the legitimate stage. Jack Burnes and Floyd Buckley are known for their character impersonations in serials.

Erie Theatre Magnates Visit New York

O. A. Potter and G. E. Newton, owners of the Majestic and Columbia theatres at Erie, Pa., spent several days in New York City last week arranging bookings and securing some necessary accessories.

Incidentally while paying a call on MOTION PICTURE NEWS anent some very enlightening articles they had read on picture projection they told of the success of their recent opening of the Columbia at Erie after it had burned to the ground last May.

The Columbia was immediately rebuilt and then the "flu" epidemic arrived as it was ready to be opened. However, when it was opened with a 1,200 seating capacity November 10, it did a "turn 'em away" business at admission prices, matinee twenty cents and evening thirty cents.

Messrs. Potter and Newton said that the Majestic seats 1,700 with admission prices of fifteen and twenty-five cents. Paramount and Select and open market for the big specials is the policy of both houses and they have only one competitor in pictures in Erie—the Strand.

A full orchestra and pipe organ is installed at both the Majestic and Columbia theatres.

Capitol Film Contracts for Laboratory Work

Ike Schlank, president of the Capitol Film Company, Inc., of Indianapolis, Ind., has contracted with the Spoor-Thompson Laboratories for the developing of film for all pictures released by that company. Capitol Film has now started the release of pictures. Spoor-Thompson announces that this is the second big contract secured within the last two weeks, the first having been signed by J. A. Berst for processing all of the film of the United Picture Theatres of America.

Select Buys Norma Talmadge Pictures

It was announced this week by Select Pictures that it has acquired by purchase exclusive ownership in all Norma Talmadge pictures. This includes not only all past pictures made for Select, but all Norma Talmadge subjects to be released during 1919.

It is cited that this action has been taken by the Select Company in order to protect the exhibitors who hold contracts calling for the delivery of Norma Talmadge features. It is felt that this purchase by Select of the Norma Talmadge pictures will entirely remove any doubt in the minds of exhibitors as to the ability of Select Pictures Corporation to deliver Norma Talmadge pictures without interruption until 1920. Not only will Select be able to deliver to its customers all Talmadge productions during the current year, but these are declared to be the only Talmadge pictures which can be put out during the period named.

May Allison Starts on New Metro Picture

May Allison, under the direction of Henry Otto, has commenced work on her next starring vehicle for the Metro program, "The Island of Intrigue," adapted from Isabel Ostrander's novel of the same title by A. S. Le Vain. "The Island of Intrigue" will follow "Peggy Does Her Darndest" on the Metro program. It is being produced under the personal supervision of Marshall Karger, director general. The scenario calls for a number of exterior "shots." For these the company will go to Santa Cruz.

Exhibitors' Mutual Active

Frank MacQuarrie, supporting Billie Rhodes in her Exhibitor's Mutual release, "The Girl of My Dreams," was for many years in support of Nance O'Neill and Henry Miller on the legitimate stage.

Leo Pierson is also in the Rhodes cast and has appeared formerly in many Orient and South Sea Island pictures. Others in the cast are Golda Mawden, Jane Keckley, Benjamin Suslow, Lamar Johnston and Jack Macdonald.

"U. S. A. Series" Makes Good

"Horses of War" Released January 20 Through World Film—Fourth Will Follow on February 3

THAT the American public is tremendously interested in the intimate details of many secrets concerning the participation of the United States in the world war, secrets that were closely guarded until the armistice was signed, is evidenced by the popularity of the U. S. A. Series of two-reelers, produced by the Government and released by the Division of Films of the Committee on Public Information through the World Film Corporation. In answer to public demand expressed on many sides the Government had the films made by Signal Corps Photographers. They show many phases of the war that are of great importance in connection with the participation of the Nation in the conflict. By reason of the demand for the pictures they have proven popular with exhibitors and are regarded as of high box office value.

The third picture of the series, "Horses of War," is now ready for release and will be available at World Film Exchanges, January 20. This picture is said to be one of the best of the series, showing the tremendous part played by the horse in modern warfare in spite of the tremendous utilization of the motor in connection with trucks, tractors, lorries and tanks.

The first picture of the series, "If Your Soldier's Hit," was released December 23d, and is sharing the popularity of the other various films released by the Government. It tells the story of the American Medical Detachment and Field Hospital Corps, showing the rescue of wounded men from the battle field and how they are treated at the first dressing stations and removed to the hospitals, taking them right through the entire hospital system to convalescence.

The second picture of the series, "Wings of Victory," which was released January 6th, is following close in the footsteps of the first release of the series and gives promise of meeting with the same popularity.

Following the release program of the U. S. A. Series, the Government will release the fourth picture February 3d. "Making a Nation Fit" is the title of this two-reeler, showing how the men of the Nation were made fit for war.

Promotions Announced for Universal Men

FOLLOWING a re-organization a few weeks ago in the Universal offices the Sales Department announces two more promotions, through H. M. Berman, general manager of exchanges.

Gus A. Metzger, for the past half year manager of the Jewel exchange in New York City, has been made district manager for the Universal exchanges located west of the Rocky Mountains.

These exchanges which come under Mr. Metzger's supervision are located in Denver, Salt Lake, Butte, Spokane, Seattle, Portland, San Francisco, and Los Angeles.

According to further announcements Hal Hodes, formerly with Vitagraph and Kalem previous to entering the service of Universal in a publicity capacity, is now assistant general manager of all Universal exchanges.

Mr. Hodes is said to have made a great success in exploiting Jewel productions.

During the absence of Joe Brandt, who is now in Universal City, Cal., Mrs. M. F. Todd, his assistant, and Blanche Wallach, his secretary, will do a good share of the work required to properly exploit the serials and news reels distributed by Universal.

J. A. C. Chandler, Chief of the Division of Rehabilitation, Federal Board for Vocational Education, in a letter to Carl Laemmle, commended the Universal executive for his patriotic spirit in providing positions for soldiers who had lost one or both legs.

The Inspection Departments of President Laemmle's various film exchanges are said to be open for these heroes and those who have in charge the caring for wounded and crippled soldiers expressed themselves as being very appreciative of the Universal's co-operation in such a laudable work.

Vitagraph Claims an All-Star Cast for the William Duncan Production Called "The Man of Might," a Fifteen-Episode Serial Billboard Campaign For Serial

Vitagraph Announces That Plans Have Been Completed for Intense Exploitation on "The Man of Might" Serial

NEW twenty-four sheets carrying heroic figures in groups showing William Duncan in a furious fight with one of the villains while the heroine looks on helplessly, tied to a mast of the ship, shows that Vitagraph is prepared to launch its billboard campaign featuring William Duncan in the newest serial, "The Man of Might."

The atmosphere surrounding the situation gives the opportunity for some wonderful color work and as striking a 24-sheet as has graced the boards of the country for many a long day is promised.

Beginning with "The Fighting Trail" and through every serial thereafter, Vitagraph has made its billboard campaigns the pivot on which its serial exploitations have turned.

These 24-sheets have girdled the continent in campaign after campaign, and the every-growing success of Vitagraph serials is the best reason in the world for the continuation of the billboard campaigns.

William Duncan is the star of "The Man of Might," which was written by Albert E. Smith and Cyrus Townsend Brady, and Duncan also directs the production. He is supported by a star cast which includes Edith Johnson and Joe Ryan, and the hundreds upon hundreds of thousands who have seen this trio in Duncan's last serial, "A Fight for Millions" are expected to feel the compelling impulse to hustle to their favorite theatre when they cast their eyes upon the new 24-sheet.

While Duncan's fights are much in evidence throughout the fifteen episodes of "The Man of Might," each episode is loaded with the kind of thrills Vitagraph has taught exhibitors to expect in its chapter-plays.

Duncan carries his nerve with him and risks his neck time after time in each episode. For example, in the fifth episode, he drives an automobile at better than sixty miles an hour against a pile of railroad ties that are blocking the road.

The machine bounds over the ties and one of the occupants is thrown out over a distance of over twenty feet and in landing, the two rear wheels of the machine are seen to snap off. There is absolutely no trick in this scene, for Duncan and his company took big chances in the filming of it and the screen records faithfully how close they came to a disastrous accident.

Duncan's company is well beyond the half-way mark in its production of "The Man of Might," and the entire serial will probably be filmed by the time the first episode is released throughout the country.

Boston Film Club Lauds Post Scenics

After the Boston Film Club witnessed the Post Scenic films, "Come, Watch With Me the Passing Night," and "When Nature Smiles," at the Temple theatre, the members passed a resolution advising every exhibitor in New England to carry at least one Post Scenic on their program.

Mrs. J. Wentworth Brackett, president of the club, wrote to the Post Film Company, Inc., of New York City, as follows:

"Your nature films are the most marvelous productions we have ever seen on or off the stage or screen. Your films seem to surpass nature."

The company announces that it may produce a multiple reel picture to take the place of a regular feature on the program in connection with the single reel scenics

De Haven and Parker Join "Smiling Bill" Parsons

Carter De Haven, musical comedy and film star, and Flora Parker, his wife, have been signed by "Smiling Bill" Parsons for a series of two-reel comedies built on the newly-wed idea. The two De Haven babies will be permanent features of the cast.

Through the Robertson-Cole Company Mr. Parsons has arranged for distribution of these new comedies by Exhibitors' Mutual exchanges.

The initial subject will be released in March and one two-reeler a month thereafter for thirteen months. Carter De Haven was with Weber and Fields in the old days and for many seasons thereafter he appeared on the stage of the leading vaudeville theatres.

The brand name will be "Feature Comedies" and Mr. Parsons promises that they will be real features in every sense of the word.

Says "The Big Six" Scores

Reports show that good pictures never grow old. At least that is the way the Fox officials view it as they point to hundreds of theatres which they declare are scoring heavily by playing "The Big Six."

These are the productions which Mr. Fox considered brought the stars in the limelight and was their big success of the day. Three of them feature Theda Bara and three of the "big six" star William Farnum.

Mr. Farnum is seen in "The Plunderer," "The Bondman" and "The Soldier's Oath," while Miss Bara is seen in "The Two Orphans," "A Fool There Was" and "The Clemenceau Case."

Cecil B. De Mille Starts on New Picture

Edgar Selwyn's play, which was obtained by Famous Players-Lasky for screen purposes before being produced on the stage, is now being filmed under the personal direction of Cecil B. DeMille.

The script was prepared by Mr. Selwyn and William C. DeMille and the picture will be released after the director's latest, "Don't Change Your Husband," scheduled for January 26.

Baltimore Exhibitors Are Hosts to Drews

When Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew played Baltimore in their stage production of "Keep Her Smiling," the motion picture exhibitors there hastily planned a reception and dinner for them.

The pleasant surprise was conceived by the local Paramount exchange manager and the banquet was held in the grand ball room of the Hotel Belvedere.

When the coffee was served a camouflaged screen was discovered at one end of the ball room and "Romance and Rings," the first Drew comedy under the Paramount banner was run off in two reels.

This was followed by the second subject, "Once a Mason," and it is said that the many exhibitors present gave Mr. and Mrs. Drew a tremendous ovation. It is declared that the exhibitors present all hastened to book these Drew comedies at once and that pleasure was combined with business on this particular night.

St. Louis Exhibitor Books "Virtuous Wives"

S. J. Baker, manager of the St. Louis branch of First National Exhibitors' Circuit, announces that he has just closed a contract with Mrs. J. C. Cornelius, owner of the downtown Lyric and Royal theatres and the West End Lyric in St. Louis, for all First National releases.

The West End Lyric is reported to be a very successful neighborhood house and maintains admission prices of fifteen and twenty-five cents. "Virtuous Wives," starring Anita Stewart, is the first feature under the new contract.

Alice Brady Progresses

Alice Brady, the stage-screen star, has passed her 157th performance on Broadway in the stage production of "Forever After," which is now at the Playhouse. Regardless of her legitimate venture, Miss Brady is continuing in pictures, and the New York public sees her either way it desires—or both.

New Booking Plan In Practice

New Angle in Booking Is Evolved and Discussed by Manager of New York Fox Exchange

MANY new angles of booking feature pictures have been discussed during the past twelve months and Manager Louis Rosenbluh of the New York exchange of William Fox has advanced several new ideas in the following interview issued by the Fox offices.

"The nationally known feature photoplay," said Mr. Rosenbluh, "should bring about a new angle in booking and in picture showmanship. In the matter of booking the old methods lead to an immense loss of possible profits to both exhibitor and producer. It has long been the theory that I am now putting in practice with the booking of 'Salome' in my New York territory. It is working out to marked advantage both to the exhibitor and to my company.

"I contend that great features should be shown at the same time in all the houses of a town or neighborhood where the admission price is the same. Think of the cumulative weight of the combined publicity of five or six houses—of all their mailing lists, of all their advertisements, of all the word-of-mouth praise by their regular patrons!

"Not a person who could read or see or hear but would make an effort to see the feature thus exploited. Its attraction would overwhelm everything else in sight; it would crowd every theatre; it would win for screen entertainment thousands of new patrons. The picture houses would reap its benefits for months to come.

"In the first place, the production of such spectacles as 'Salome' form a new precedent in the amusement business. Before the advent of motion pictures no such sums ever were spent on a production—no theatrical entertainment could spend upwards of $100,000 on a single attraction and hope to get it back—much less show a profit; $50,000 was a remarkable expenditure to be widely heralded by the press agents.

"Motion pictures have advanced far beyond that in expenditure—why should we not advance in a corresponding degree in booking methods and showmanship?

"I mean that, under the old booking methods, with an attraction like 'Salome' it is impossible to take advantage of that important factor, cumulative publicity. For the laws of competition are upset—more people will want to see such a film than can possibly crowd into one picture house in any town or city for the limited number of days of the usual picture showing.

"If a single house wished to meet the demand it would have to run the film indefinitely. No single house will do this because their regular patrons demand a change of program at least once a week—in most houses every few days.

"You can see what happens under the customary plans, where a leading exhibitor is given an exclusive showing for his town or neighborhood, with the idea that he thus is going to secure a maximum box-office return for himself and for the producer. He runs the feature for three or four days, or a week. He gets his regular patrons and some of the general outside public—as many as his mailing list and individual billboards and advertising can reach. He reaps a good profit, sits back satisfied and goes on with his new releases.

"But what about the feature whose possibilities in his town have hardly been touched? Shall it be shelved? Because of the low admission prices of picture houses, practically the entire population of that town or section are possible patrons for the feature. Something is wrong—somewhere."

Houdini Serial Scores at Washington, D. C.

According to A. Dresner, manager of Exhibitors' Film Exchange at Washington, D. C., the Houdini Serial produced by B. A. Rolfe, broke all records at the Virginia theatre there.

This is the first serial that ever played the Virginia theatre and this is considered as significant of the immense drawing possibilities of "The Master Mystery."

Pearl White paused after finishing her work the other evening to let the photographer "shoot" her gas-cart. Miss White is in the midst of a Pathe serial

Pearl White Heads Boy Cadets

Pathe's Serial Queen Is Honorary President and Commander in Chief of the American Cadets

THE military organization known as the American Cadets is reported to have units in all the principal cities of the United States and Pearl White is not only their honorary president but is commander-in-chief, according to reports emanating from Pathe headquarters.

If an exhibitor is visited by a delegation of these Cadets and requested to run "The Lightning Raider" serial featuring their chief, and he refuses to do so the Pathe officials fear what the results may be.

For it is stated that all the members are dead anxious to see their commander-in-chief, not only in this latest serial, but at any and all times, and various units of the American Cadets are said to be instituting a campaign to see that "The Lightning Raider" is shown in every theatre that happens to occupy a site near any of the Cadet units.

In New York City there are reported to be two Pearl White units of the American Cadets and one Pathé unit. In one section of Brooklyn where there is a company of Cadets the boys called on the owner of the principal theatre and by showing him how they were prepared to work up business for him, induced him to play the serial.

This same situation is declared to prevail in all parts of the country and Pathe officials urge the exhibitors not to overlook the value of these boys as business boosters.

Some of the boys are said to take such an interest in seeing the serial successfully launched in their particular territory that they are prepared to make a house to house canvass in behalf of Pearl White if necessary.

The third episode of "The Lightning Raider" scheduled for release January 29, and entitled "Underworld Terrors," is said to be more exciting than either of the previous episodes; is expected to take the audience through a maze of intrigue that is thrilling, and centers around the Lightning Raider and her arch enemy, Wu Fang, the Chinese criminal.

Grace Darmond Announced in Six Reel Drama

Jesse D. Hampton announces that Grace Darmond will be seen in a six-reel drama entitled "What Every Woman Wants," and that by special arrangement with Robertson-Cole it will be distributed through Exhibitors' Mutual exchanges.

Grace Darmond is described as possessing that rare combination of beautiful blond hair and dark eyes. It is declared that Mr. Hampton has spared neither time or expense in making the picture equal to the title in every respect and that the title has already evoked many favorable comments, as having great box-office value.

Wilfred Lucas, Forrest Stanley, Bert Grassby and Barbara Tennant support Miss Darmond and others in the cast are Percy Challenger, Mildred Reardon, William De Vall, Mary Warren and the Russian actress, Hedda Nova.

Houdini Serial Opens on Keith Circuit

"The Master Mystery" serial, with Houdini starred, opened in New York, January 6, when the first episode was shown in the Keith and Proctor houses. The opening was to have been December 30, but a postponement was had at the instance of the United Booking Office. Sixteen of the Keith and Proctor theatres are playing the serial, each one for a three or four days' run.

New Quarters in St. Louis

First National Exhibitors' Exchange in St. Louis has moved to much larger quarters at 617 North Grand avenue and now has ten persons attached to the office, it is reported.

S. J. Baker, manager, reports that business is mounting forward in leaps and bounds.

Mae Marsh Completes "Bondage of Barbara"

BARBARA GRAY is a cashier for a lumber company in a small town and the sole support of her wayward brother.

Mae Marsh appears as Barbara Gray in the Goldwyn production, released February 2, which was written by Burk Symon and is entitled "The Bondage of Barbara."

As a plucky girl who becomes a "boy" to save her brother from prison Miss Marsh is said to give one of the most appealing performances of her career.

Tony, the brother, hoping to raise quick funds to take him to New York, stakes—and loses—his money in a gambling den operated by "Slick" Simmons.

Jack Newton, the dissolute son of the president of Newton & Company is heavily indebted to "Slick." Luck is against him and he makes a dupe of Tony. Feigning interest in the boy's welfare, he offers him a loan. Tony accepts and goes to New York, where he gets a job as taxi driver.

Tony is unaware that Jack robbed his father's safe to make the needed haul to pay his own obligations and that he had dropped Tony's scarf pin near the safe to fasten the blame of the theft upon him. On the night of the robbery, Barbara, searching for her brother, had entered her office, and, discovering the looted safe and her brother's scarf pin, believed Tony guilty of the theft.

Minter Commences Another

Mary Miles Minter has just started another picture at Santa Barbara and the American studios are said to be continually humming with great activity.

Lloyd Ingraham has directed her in "Rosemary Climbs the Heights," "Wives and Other Wives," and "My Lady of Mischance," already, which latter may be renamed, and officials of the American Film Company pronounce these features to be splendid offerings.

Dittmar Presents Sample of Color Process

After five years of experimentation, the initial experiments having been made by Kinemacolor in 1913, the Artcolor Pictures Company, of which Louis J. Dittmar is president, have produced a series of pictures following the color process as perfected by W. Francis Fox and A. C. Wadingham, of England.

Chemical action on emulsion produces the coloring. There are no dyes or coloring used and the color appears both in texture and fabrics. A two-reel comedy drama which had undergone Artcolor's process was shown to a representative of the NEWS and if it is an example of all Artcolor productions it should meet with immediate favor. The colors are, as far as the eye can detect, perfect. There is no evidence of a blend in the colors, excepting where such is expected. The complexion of the characters stands out in all naturalness and the black and white effects would defy improvement.

The picture can be operated on any machine without additional attachments. Mr. Dittmar states that the capacity of his plant is now about ten thousand feet daily. This is to be increased. Mr. Dittmar has a two-reel comedy-drama and a six-reel subject ready for release and will give a private showing of this subject in the near future.

Otto Directs May Allison

Henry Otto directed May Allison two years ago when she was co-starring with Harold Lockwood in "The River of Romance" and "Mister 44."

He is now at the Metro studios at Hollywood and will direct Miss Allison again. The first picture will be "The Island of Intrigue," adapted by A. S. Le Vino from the novel by Isabel Ostrander and produced under the personal supervision of Maxwell Karger, director general.

First Selznick-Olive Thomas Now Titled

"UP STAIRS AND DOWN" is the title of the first picture to be produced by the Selznick Pictures Corporation starring Olive Thomas, and work is already said to be started in the Pacific Coast studios with the production scheduled for release in March.

Although the marketing arrangement has not been announced the company is said to be in receipt of many applications for franchises for the series of eight productions featuring Miss Thomas and scheduled to appear six weeks apart.

Charles Giblyn, director general, is in personal charge of the productions and Myron Selznick, president and general manager of the company arrived at Los Angeles last week for a stay of several months, it is said.

"Up Stairs and Down" is based upon the play by Frederic and Fanny Hatton, which was produced by Oliver Morosco in New York last season and described as one of his biggest hits.

It is a society comedy-drama and is said to deal with the romance believed to exist everywhere above and below stairs.

Selznick Pictures policy will be known by the keynote struck with this first production, according to the officials, and they consider that as their star has shown her talents many times in society roles, she has shown that she is ideally fitted by a very chic personality.

Believing also that the widest appeal is always found in the stories that possess great dramatic emotion, lightened by frequent comedy touches, Director Giblyn is said to be securing several stories along that line.

Reports on Tourneur's Production, "Woman"

ACCORDING to reports received at the offices of Hiller and Wilk, Inc., which firm is handling the sales for Maurice Tourneur's production "Woman," the picture is meeting with unusual success. The picture started a week's engagement Monday at both the Parkway and New theatres, Baltimore, and it is said that it is the first time that the two leading theatres of Baltimore have booked the same picture simultaneously.

The booking was made through Boyd Cunningham, manager of the First National Exhibitors' Exchange, of Washington, D. C., which controls the right to "Woman" for Maryland, Delaware, District of Columbia and Virginia.

Bookings have been reported by the following exchanges who are ordering additional prints to take care of the demand for dates: Frank Gerston, New York, controlling Northern New Jersey; Independent Sales Corporation, New York, controlling New York; Paragon Pictures Corporation, Boston, Mass., controlling New England States; Arthur S. Hyman Attractions, Detroit, controlling Michigan; R. M. Savini, Atlanta, controlling Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Tennessee, North and South Carolina.

The Detroit critics, in reviewing "Woman" on the occasion of its initial showing in Michigan at the Colonial theatre, Detroit, were unanimous in the opinion that it is an epoch-maker in film history.

"A Romance of the Air" Scores at Boston

General Sales Manager L. S. Card of the Independent Sales Corporation phoned the home office in New York that the Boston exchange was simply swamped with bookings for the Carle E. Carleton production, "A Romance of the Air," starring Bert Hall, an American Ace who is making personal appearances with the feature.

Manager Plimpton of the Tremont theatre at Boston is declared to have stated that this feature was breaking all records there. Lieut. Bert Hall wired Frank Hall, general manager of Independent Sales Corporation, as follows:

"Boston critics unanimously acclaim 'A Romance of the Air' the most thrilling serial production, devoting as much as three columns to interviews and criticisms. Thaw and myself guests of honor at special banquet for Allied Aviators and Radio Operators at Boston City Club Thursday night."

Cites Many Theatres Booking "Cleopatra"

FROM the many Fox exchanges throughout the country it is reported that the William Fox production of "Cleopatra," starring Theda Bara, is being rapidly booked in practically all the leading picture theatres.

Eighteen Milwaukee theatres have contracted with C. W. Eckhardt, Fox District manager with headquarters in Chicago, for a thirty-days' consecutive showing.

F. G. Hartwick, manager of the Strand at Pawtucket, R. I., has booked the feature for a three-day run and is extensively advertising it.

The Standard Amusement Company operate the Palace theatre at Newport News, Va., and will send "Cleopatra" out as a road attraction augmented by a large orchestra, according to B. P. Rogers, Fox branch manager at Washington, D. C.

In St. Louis, the New Central, in the downtown district, operated by William Sievers, has booked the "Super-production" for a seven-day run.

J. C. Christopher, of the Jewel theatre at San Antonio, Texas, booked "Cleopatra" for a three-day run, which makes the third run for that city.

In the many "repeat" dates being reported is the Wonderland theatre at Lorain, Ohio, which has booked the attraction for a three-day run and which means the second showing in that town, according to branch manager of the Cleveland Fox exchange.

Mrs. Wayne Foohey, of the Empire theatre at Lima, Ohio, has also booked the Theda Bara picture after it had already played the Opera House there as a road attraction.

Reports from the Pacific Coast are said to be coming in fast. The Strand at Pasadena, operated by J. M. Root, will show "Cleopatra" for an extended run.

A four-day run is arranged by A. Sotile, manager of the Pastime theatre at Charleston, S. C., after it had already played the town. Although "Cleopatra" had originally played Springfield, Ill., as a road attraction it has just been booked by H. T. Loper's Lyric theatre there for a three-day run, according to the Fox exchange at Chicago, Ill.

Norma Talmadge to Appear in Walter's Play

The screen rights to Eugene Walter's stage drama, "Nancy," which ran successfully for two seasons at the Hudson theatre, have been purchased by The Norma Talmadge Film Corporation. The title role which was presented on the stage by Charlotte Walker, will be portrayed by Miss Talmadge in the screen version, production of which will be commenced immediately following "The Probation Wife," now in the cutting room. "The Probation Wife" will be released following "The Heart of Wetona," which had its initial New York showing at the Rivoli theatre last week.

Owing to the illness of Chester Withey, and the absence of Sidney Franklin, who, with his assistant, Ward Lascells, has gone to Los Angeles by special consent of Joseph M. Schenck (to whom he is under contract to alternate with Mr. Withey in the direction of Norma Talmadge productions) in order to direct Mary Pickford in one picture only, it is likely that "Nancy Lee" will be the picture selected for Robert Leonard to direct. Miss Talmadge's new leading man and other members of the cast are now being selected and will be announced soon.

Holiday Declared for Opening Ince Studio

SPECIAL preparations are under way to greet the opening of the new Thomas H. Ince studio at Culver City, it is announced by Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. The opening of the new $250,000 studio, which is announced for the near future, will be marked by spectacular demonstrations of an unusual order.

The day on which the studio where Paramount and Arcraft pictures will be produced, is thrown open will be filled with celebrations and festivals of various sorts. A general holiday, with all schools closed, has been declared for Culver City. During the day the mayors of four cities—Culver, Los Angeles, Ocean Park and Venice—have arranged to visit the studio and present to Mr. Ince some fitting token of esteem.

The street which runs on the north side of the studio has been officially named

Ince Boulevard. The city has already passed an ordinance for paving and lighting this roadway.

The new Ince plant is located on Washington Boulevard, the main thoroughfare running from Los Angeles through Culver City and on to the ocean resort towns of Venice and Santa Monica. The administration building occupies an imposing site and in architecture is in the style of an incidental building of the plant. During the festival day this building will be open for public inspection. In the evening spectacular display of fireworks is planned. This will be staged in the mountains at the rear of the studio. Al Wilson, the famous aviator, will be present and will drop rockets from his machine. Dancing and a general carnival will take place on the big stages during the evening. These stages are 75 feet wide and 180 feet long.

Penser to Take Charge of Laboratory Work

Charles Penser, one of the best known laboratory experts in the film industry, has been engaged by the Independent Sales Corporation to take complete charge of its laboratory work. During the past two years Mr. Penser has had charge of re-editing and the laboratory work in connection with the Whartons and Goldwyn.

Independent Sales announces that all prints and negatives of the 10-20-30 series and the other specials handled by it will have the personal attention of Mr. Penser.

Mr. Penser has inaugurated a system whereby each unit of the Film Clearing House, which company has the exclusive distribution of all pictures booked by the Independent Sales Corporation, will be supplied immediately with any scenes or parts that might be damaged or ripped out in the projection rooms of exhibitors, which means exhibitors will always get full reels on all the Independent pictures.

Hunter Bennett Represents Independent Sales

Frank Hall, president of the Independent Sales Corporation, announces that Hunter Bennett, known to the exhibitors throughout the country, has become identified with the above mentioned concern and the Film Clearing House, which company has the physical distribution of all pictures booked by the Independent Sales Corporation. Mr. Bennett will be special representative to all the units throughout the country. For a number of years Mr. Bennett acted in a like capacity for the World Film Corporation and the Mutual, during which time he covered every section of the United States and learned from them first-hand the conditions they have to meet.

Mr. Bennett is now on a trip covering the entire country and besides visiting all the Film Clearing House units, will see personally many exhibitors.

Initial Paramount-Drew Comedy February 2

Walter E. Greene, vice-president in charge of distribution for Famous Players-Lasky, announces that the first Paramount-Drew Comedy will be released February 2 and one a month thereafter.

"Romance and Rings," written by Emma Anderson Whitman for the V. B. K. Film Corporation, is the title of the first release which brings back to the screen Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew.

They direct and produce one two-reel comedy subject every four weeks besides playing continuously on the legitimate stage. After a long run in New York with their stage play "Keep Him Smiling," they opened in Chicago, January 13 at the Garrick theatre.

Their second Paramount-Drew Comedy, released in March, is entitled "Once a Mason," by Albert Payson Terhune.

Release Date Advanced for Kerrigan

"Come Again Smith," starring J. Warren Kerrigan in the J. D. Hampton production released by W. W. Hodkinson service through Pathe exchanges, will be released February 10 instead of the week previous as originally announced, according to advices this week.

The picture was directed by E. Mason Hopper under the personal supervision of Jesse D. Hampton from an original play by John H. Blackwood. Lois Wilson is the leading women and the cast also includes Winnifred Greenwood, H. A. Barrows, William Conklin, Charles French and Walter Perry.

Many Inquiries Concerning "Scarlet Trail"

N. R. Greathouse, general manager of the G and L Features, Inc., handling "The Scarlet Trail," a propaganda picture, exposing a social evil, reports that many inquiries have been received at the G and L offices, 729 Seventh avenue, from exhibitors asking about bookings. "The Scarlet Trail" completed a successful run at Shubert's Thirty-ninth Street theatre. The story was written by and the production made under the direction of John S. Lawrence with Beth Ivans, Vincent Coleman, Margaret Blanc and John Costello in the principal roles. It will be distributed through the offices of the G and L Features, Inc.

Pathe Films for Wilson

When President Wilson returns on the George Washington from his trip abroad he will have the privilege of seeing a great many Pathe film offerings, according to a statement issued from Pathe Exchanges, Inc.

The Committee on Entertainment aboard the George Washington has already made a special request to the Pathe Company, and as the President is known to be an ardent picture fan he will be shown four of the latest numbers of Pathe News and some Harold Lloyd comedies.

Two features, Frank Keenan in "The Midnight Stage," and Babie Marie Osborne in "Dolly's Vacation," will also be shown to the President and his large and distinguished party.

Katterjohn Makes Casting a Feature

The feature of the four special productions announced by Monte M. Katterjohn will be his particularly announced hobby of providing each story with a perfect cast.

"Hearts of the Stampede" will be the first one completed, and it is stated that great interest has already been aroused among exhibitors who have played such of his former productions as "The Flame of the Yukon" and "Carmen of the Klondike."

Mr. Katterjohn expressed himself as confident that when he announces the entire cast that will appear in his first of the four productions scheduled it will deeply and intensely interest every exhibitor.

Elaine Hammerstein Under Rapf Management

Elaine Hammerstein will remain under the management of Harry Rapf for a series of special productions, according to an announcement made by Mr. Rapf this week. Miss Hammerstein has appeared in several productions for Mr. Rapf. Under his management she supported Robert Warwick in the "Argyle Case," "The Mad Lover" and "The Accidental Honeymoon." Following these engagements she was starred in "Her Man" and the "Co-respondent," and her last work was in Mr. Rapf's production, "Wanted for Murder," now showing first runs.

Spanuth in New York on New Enterprise

H. A. Spanuth, of Chicago, has arrived in New York and will soon open offices to attend to the marketing of his vode-vil movies, a single reel novelty which the trade in the Middle West has accepted eagerly according to report. Mr. Spanuth will be remembered as the producer of the picture "The Frozen Warning," in which Charlotte, the famous skater, was starred.

His new enterprise consists of a weekly reel featuring a number of vaudeville acts. It has gone well in several of the large Chicago houses and Mr. Spanuth is enthusiastic regarding its prospects here in the East.

Universal to Enlarge Its Industrial Department

Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Film Company, has ordered an enlargement of the industrial forces of the organization during 1919. In its first year the industrial department under the direction of Harry Lovey has made such rapid strides that Mr. Laemmle is appointing special industrial representatives among Universal exchanges all over the country. Among the most recent productions prepared by the industrial department is "Keep the Home Fires Burning," produced under the supervision of the American Defence Society.

Bert Lytell Starts Work on Newest Metro

"The Blind Man's Eyes" is the title of the newest Metro which Bert Lytell has started at Hollywood and which is his first picture since he was mustered out of the officers' training camp.

"Faith" and "The Spender" were finished just before Mr. Lytell tried for a lieutenant's commission last October.

"A Man with His Money," Tom Moore's Latest

Goldwyn announces that Tom Moore's latest picture is nearly completed and is entitled "A Man with His Money," written by Frederic S. Isham.

Harry Beaumont directs it and the cast includes Seena Owen, Sydney Ainsworth, Claire Du Brey, Kate Lester, Sydney Deane, Edwin Sturgis, Clare Gersia and Bobbie Bolder.

Mr. Moore is said to have a very likable part and the story is pronounced a wholesome consistent comedy drama. When his girl breaks with him because of his fondness for the cup that cheers he becomes a street demonstrator of popular songs and sings ballads with such touching titles as "Don't Let Your Heart Grow Cold," and "What's the Matter with Mother."

Extremely laughable scenes are said to run all through the film.

Osso Completing Distributing Arrangements

Adolphe Osso reports that following the private showing of Leonce Perret's "Stars of Glory" to a representative body of releasing organizations, he is now completing plans for the release of this picture, the plans for and the medium through which it will be released to be announced later.

"Stars of Glory" is Leonce Perret's latest independent production. E. K. Lincoln and Dolores Cassinelli are the featured members of the cast. The story was written and the picture produced by Mr. Perret, and he reports that all who have seen it have praised it as an "after-the-war" story of merit. The picture opens with the signing of the armistice and the cessation of hostilities, followed by a series of adventure with the love element playing a prominent part.

Connolly in Character Role with Nazimova

Edward J. Connolly, whose characterization of Rasputin in Herbert Brenon's "The Fall of the Romanoffs," placed him in rank with the screen's best character men, left last week for the Coast to assume the principal character role in Mme. Nazimova's latest production, "The Red Lantern," presented by Richard A. Rowland and Maxwell Karger. Mr. Connolly was in the support of Nazimova in her screen production, "Toys of Fate," and on the speaking stage supported the Russian star in New York in a series of Ibsen plays at the Plymouth theatre.

Pearson Gets New Studios

Virginia Pearson Photoplays, Inc., has taken over the Thanhouser Studios at New Rochelle, according to Louis S. Meyer, president of her company.

The director general, John B. O'Brien, announces that Miss Pearson's next picture will be the most elaborate that she has ever appeared in.

The Roosevelt picture called "The Fighting Roosevelts," shows the Colonel succeeding McKinley to the Presidency. The film is distributed by First National

Gets First National Contracts

Lee L. Goldberg, Louisville Exchange Manager, Successful in Landing Several Big Bookings in Kentucky

GODFREY KOTZEN, manager of the Lyric theatre at Covington, Ky., is one of the many exhibitors that contracted for First National attractions when Lee L. Goldberg, manager of the Big Feature Rights exchange at Louisville, visited him on his recent trade jaunt.

Mr. Kotzen booked "The Romance of Tarzan," "Italy's Flaming Front," "The Passing of the Third Floor Back" and "The Panther Woman." He had been so delighted by the results he secured on "Shoulder Arms," according to report, that he again secured it for a repeat engagement of three days.

J. Frankel, manager of the Temple theatre at Newport, Ky., besides booking "Virtuous Wives" and the Petrova pictures, will also play a repeat date on "Shoulder Arms."

In addition to managing the Temple and Hippodrome at Newport, Mr. Frankel is also manager of the Alhambra, a large downtown Cincinnati theatre. Lee Goldberg, who has the Kentucky and Tennessee franchise for all First National attractions, reported many new bookings and called attention to the tremendous increases in bookings as compared to a year ago.

Pete Smith of the Avenel theatre at Bellevue, booked all the First National attractions that he had not already played, and is said to have a standing order for all First National attractions as fast as they are released.

Another theatre in Covington will have First National attractions. Mrs. Meyers of the Family theatre there has booked all second runs after Manager Kotzen has played them first.

Mr. Goldberg also reports that Latonia and Dayton theatre managers are very enthusiastic over First National attractions, and altogether he points with pride to what he terms the natural trend of the exhibitors towards First National productions.

According to Manager Goldberg it is many times easier to book big features like "Virtuous Wives" and "The Romance of Tarzan" than it is to sell the ordinary run of program pictures.

Select Film Gets Four Star Parts

Clara Kimball Young's forthcoming Select picture, "Cheating Cheaters," with practically four stars in its personnel—Miss Young, Anna Q. Nilsson, Tully Marshall and Jack Holt—contains, according to the announcement made by Select Pictures Corporation, many star bits which lend this attraction a distinctive atmosphere; and while it is true that for this reason "Cheating Cheaters" might easily have been scheduled for release as a special attraction, it is, nevertheless, being retained by Select as the second in Miss Young's Second Star Series.

In "Cheating Cheaters" Miss Young has the dual, or rather, triple role of a clever secret service operative. As the story opens she is seen?

Miss Britton, a "Find"

Edna Britton, who has the vampire role in "The Master Mystery," starring Houdini, is designated as a "find" by B. A. Rolfe, who produced the serial. This marks Miss Britton's initial appearance in the silent drama, and it is said that her work stands out with all the prominence of a seasoned star. Prior to this she had been in musical comedy and in the Winter Garden productions.

"The Heart of Humanity" in Three Cities

Beginning January 26 for an indefinite run, "The Heart of Humanity," Allen Holubar's Jewel production, will open at Loew's Palace theatre, Washington, D. C., at Loew's Hippodrome theatre, Baltimore, and at the Stillman theatre, Cleveland. Each of these showings will be patterned after the premier at the Broadway theatre, New York. Negotiations for showings in other large cities of the country are pending and it is expected that the picture will be shown in Chicago, St. Louis, Los Angeles, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati and Indianapolis. The Marcus Loew circuit of New York and Brooklyn theatres has contracted for "follow-up" showings of "The Heart of Humanity" in all houses. Arrangements are also being made for its presentation in Canada.

Captain Bailey to Exploit "Wanted for Murder"

Capt. Harry A. Bailey has been engaged by the Independent Sales Corporation as its special representative to cover the country in the interest of Harry Rapf's production, "Wanted for Murder," Frank Hall, its president, announces.

Capt. Bailey, recently released from the army, was for a number of years associated with the Anderson and Ziegler interests and later with the New York Hippodrome, and for the past eight years was associated with the Keith interests as manager of the Alhambra and Colonial theatres.

Mr. Hall announces that Capt. Bailey will give his services to the exhibitor free of charge, and that he has some new advertising angles that have never been followed in exploiting a picture.

Ruth Roland Starts New Pathe Serial

Ruth Roland has commenced work on the first episode of her new serial for the Pathe program, according to an announcement from Pathe Exchange, Inc. The serial is being made by Astra at its Glendale studio.

This serial was to have been started some weeks ago but Miss Roland's illness necessitated a postponement. The original title of the serial which is to be in fifteen episodes was "The Long Arm," but this will probably be changed, Pathe announces. The story is by Arthur B. Reeve and Charles Logue and will be directed by Louis J. Gasnier. Pathe expects to release this serial some time in the early spring.

Hugo Ballin Writes Story

The next production starring Madge Kennedy will be from a story by Hugo Ballin, art director for Goldwyn. The title or release date has not been announced.

Nearly every one of the cast is said to be provided with a dual role, and the theme is described as a modern fantasy. It is directed by Clarence C. Badger.

Paramount-Flagg Company Moves to Florida

To be favored with the sunshine so essential to film footage, the entire organization of Town and Country Films, Inc., has moved to Jacksonville, Fla., for a four-weeks' stay.

By that time the company expects to finish filming the three scripts which were taken South. This is the company that produces the James Montgomery Flagg Comedies for Famous Players-Lasky.

The Florida party consisted of Mr. and Mrs. James Montgomery Flagg, Jack Eaton, Mr. and Mrs. Saul Harrison, Harry Gripp, Olin Howland, Beatrice Tremaine, Dorothy Fitch, Joe Burke, James Harris, Harry Squire and Charlie Smith.

The first production to be started in Florida is entitled "Beresford of the Boboons."

Levey Host to Trustees of Defense Society

Harry Levey, manager of Universal's Industrial Films Department, gave a private showing of "Keep the Home Fires Burning" January 11 to the trustees of the American Defense Society and their friends.

This five-reel feature was produced under the supervision of the Society and will be distributed for the purpose of demonstrating the unanimous co-operation of both capital and labor in war activities.

New Selznick Offices at 501 Fifth Avenue

At 501 Fifth Avenue, New York City, the headquarters of the recently organized Selznick Pictures Corporation headed by Myron Selznick, is being installed. Randolph Bartlett will be in charge of the Publicity and was formerly press agent for Lewis J. Selznick, leaving that company at the time Select was organized.

President Myron Selznick announces from Los Angeles that production work has already been started there with Charles Giblyn as director general and Olive Thomas as the first star under the Selznick banner.

Select Names Talmadge Production

"Who Cares?" has been named by Select Pictures as the January attraction in which Constance Talmadge is the star. With her in this production is Harrison Ford, who appeared with her in "Good Night, Paul" and other Select features. The director is Walter Edwards, who has directed many of Miss Talmadge's subjects.

"Who Cares?" has been filmed from the story by Cosmo Hamilton.

On His Recent Trip West Winfield Sheehan, General Manager of Fox Film Corporation, Was Initiated Into the Mysteries of "Chuck" as Spread by the Tom Mix Outfit. Mr. Sheehan Is Reaching for the Coffee Cup

Points to Value of Expert Lithographing

WALTER E. GREENE, vice-president of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, in charge of distribution, points out, in the following interview, the advantage of expert workmanship on posters and lithographic work, prepared for Famous Players-Lasky:

"Coincident with the improvement in motion pictures during the last few years, has come a demand for better and more striking poster paper to advertise these motion pictures, with the result that today these outdoor advertisements offer to the public some of the best examples of decorative art to be found outside the great galleries. The public taste for motion pictures has developed to such a point that only the best will please, and it is natural that only the finest lithographic advertising will attract. An excellent picture may be killed by poor lithographic daubs.

"The policy of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation is and has always been to obtain the best work of the best artists available in the designing and production of lithographs to advertise Paramount and Artcraft pictures, with the result that advertising paper on these productions ranks today as the finest that is displayed out of doors for any class of amusement or entertainment. Every step in the production of a lithograph is taken most carefully.

Metro Names Both Dana and Hamilton Casts

VIOLA DANA was provided with a splendid cast for her "Diana Ardway" and Hale Hamilton has a strong aggregation to support him in "Johnny-on-the-Spot," according to announcements.

Both of these productions are now being completed at the Hollywood studios in California, which studios recently erected by Metro are said to have cost $1,000,000.

Milton Sills, who played the leading male role in "The Honor System," is Miss Dana's leading man through the courtesy of Goldwyn.

Frank Currier, Floyd Hughes, George

King, Lilie Leslie and Alice Knowland also appear in the cast of "Diana Ardway," soon to be released as a Metro All-Star Series Production.

With Hale Hamilton in "Johnny-on-the-Spot" Louise Lovely appears as leading woman. Harry E. Franklin directs this picture and thinks that it will eclipse Mr. Hamilton's recent release of "Five Thousand and an Hour."

In support of Mr. Hamilton and Miss Lovely are Lilie Leslie, Ruth Orlamond, Edward Connelly, Philo McCullough, Hardee Kirkland, Fred Warren, Neal Hardin and Oral Humphreys.

Details Are Promised for Lincoln Special

MESSRS. SAWYER AND LUBIN promise full details concerning their first S. and L. special, starring E. K. Lincoln, within the next few weeks.

"Our purpose in not divulging the various particulars regarding the story which forms the subject of the film starring E. K. Lincoln and directed by Ralph Ince, has been twofold. After a study of the usual publicity campaign accorded a production while it is in the making and during its distribution process, I have discovered that all of the available ammunition in this line is usually exhausted long before the picture is completed. The result is that much valuable publicity is lost. The facts are cold by the time the film reaches the exhibitor.

"The second and very important reason is because of the nature of the story and its world-wide appeal. We have purposely kept this information back in order that when the details concerning the story are released they will come in the nature of a startling surprise.

"Nothing Escapes Pathe News," Says Brunet

"NOTHING is 'Exclusive' from Pathe News," declared Paul Brunet, vice-president and general manager of Pathe Exchanges, Inc. He stated that he wished to take exceptions to a film news agency announcing as "exclusive" subjects that have been covered thoroughly in current issues of Pathe News.

"Pathe News covers the entire field very thoroughly," said Mr. Brunet. "Our cameramen go everywhere there is any happening of importance, and not a single big news event in any part of the world escapes their attention."

"The record of Pathe should be sufficient guarantee that no other film news agency can secure news that is not thoroughly covered by Pathe."

"Only recently the manufacturer of another news reel announced that 'exclusive' pictures had been obtained of the grounding of the big transport outside New York harbor with 2,500 soldiers on board. On the same day the Pathe cameramen were at Fire Island, and the graphic scenes of the grounded transport were reproduced that very same night upon the screens of the principal New York theatres."

"The same advertisement of 'exclusive' pictures was published at the time of the surrender of the German Fleet, and later, when President Wilson arrived at Brest. And yet Pathe News had covered these events in a thorough manner."

Mr. Brunet concluded by urging that picture patrons and exhibitors look at the Pathe News before they believe any of the recently or prospective forthcoming announcements of "exclusive" pictures, and they will find it in Pathe.

Film Said to Appeal to Returned Soldiers

THE eight one-reel episodes bearing the general title of "Made in America" are said to possess qualities that will appeal strongly to the returned war heroes. The series is published and distributed by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation through Pathe Exchanges, Inc.

These pictures are described as a close-up intimate story of the life of the American soldier, and are said to afford sidelights upon the great world conflict that open up a new world to millions to whom the life of a soldier has always been as a closed book.

It is asserted by the Hodkinson officials that no complete and authoritative picture of life in the American training camp has ever been undertaken and that "Made in America" has a splendid realism and wealth of picturization that will appeal with peculiar force at this time.

This is held to be particularly true when so many thousands of soldiers are returning to civil life from training camps and overseas duty.

Each episode is described as being full of great pictorial interest and presents with great variety and wonderful realism the many phases through which the young draftee passed in his development into a first-class fighting man.

The fact that many re-united families are now hearing or soon to hear the stories of the soldiers' life in camp and field, replete with personal experiences of the returned heroes, is counted upon heavily to bring them into the theatre to see the stories enacted upon the screen.

Press Book Is Finished for Phillips Picture

"THE HEART OF HUMANITY" is now ready for an intense exploitation by all exhibitors, as the Universal publicity department has just completed the press book on this nine-reel production of Allan Holubar starring Dorothy Phillips.

And the premiere showing of this Jewel production at the Broadway theatre in New York brought forth some advertising ideas that were considered very keenly by the Universal men, and it is announced that an extremely novel and unique campaign will augment the pulling powers of this production when it was regularly released a few weeks hence.

Members of the Universal family declare that "The Heart of Humanity" is one of the three greatest films in history and worthy of the most elaborate press book of advertising aids that it is possible to compile.

Many of the advertising suggestions contained in the special service section produced by MOTION PICTURE NEWS a few weeks ago will no doubt be utilized by the exhibitors who book this production, and a great many of these same valuable ideas have found their way in the new press book just completed by the Universal staff.

One page contains the musical score especially arranged by James C. Bradford, musical director of the Broadway theatre in New York. The various styles of posters are displayed in the form of cuts and one page is devoted to matter that can be used a week prior to the showing and another page displays matter which can be used in the newspapers the week of the showing.

Aechtler and Farrell Form New Firm

Major Film, Incorporated, with offices at 10 Piedmont Street, Boston, capitalized at $90,000, has been incorporated under the laws of Massachusetts. E. J. Farrell is president and general manager and W. W. Aechtler is treasurer and secretary.

Both Mr. Aechtler and Mr. Farrell are well known in the New England district. Mr. Farrell has been connected with the picture business, in various capacities, for eleven years and was formerly exchange manager for General Film, Pathe Exchange and Select Pictures. Mr. Aechtler formerly owned the Winthrop, Revere, Peabody and Cambridge theatres in the New England district. He sold his interests two years ago to form the Major Films Company. The new firm will be in the market for all independent productions.

Additional Prints on Rapf Productions

"The Struggle Everlasting," Harry Rapf's production starring Florence Reed, is going big in New England, according to reports from Herman Rifkin, Eastern Feature Films Company, who is handling this production in this territory. Mr. Rifkin has ordered additional prints, reports Mr. Rapf. Mr. Rapf reports, also, that Harry Grelle, independent distributor in the Pittsburgh territory, has ordered additional prints on "The Accidental Honeymoon," featuring Robert Warwick and Elaine Hammerstein. "The Accidental Honeymoon" is also a Rapf production, produced under the direction of Leonce Perret.

"Gentleman" Jim's Serial, "The Midnight Man"

James J. Corbett's Universal serial which was started last week at Universal City is titled "The Midnight Man." Work has been begun by Universal's publicity and advertising departments and a "booster" campaign for "Gentleman" Jim's first serial. No release date for the first episode of the serial, which will be completed this week, has been set.

C. A. Metzger Goes West

C. A. Metzger, formerly an exhibitor in Portland and for many years manager of Universal exchanges at Portland, Spokane and Seattle, and later manager of the Jewel exchange in New York City, has been made district manager of the Universal exchanges west of the Rocky mountains.

He left New York to make a tour of the Pacific Coast exchanges now under his supervision.

Poland Joins American

Four original comedy dramas will be furnished to the American Film Company by Joseph Franklin Poland, fiction writer of Santa Barbara, Cal., it is announced.

Mr. Poland is reported to have already many photoplay features showing, among them being "The Mating of Marcella," "The Girl Question," "Set Free," "Love's Law," and "Wild Primrose."

Mabel Normand Recovers

Attacked by influenza, Mabel Normand has nicely recovered, according to reports from the Goldwyn studios, and is now back at Culver City, Cal., and active in completing the screen version of "Sis Hopkins," which will be her next Goldwyn release.

Burton, Publicity Manager

Henry K. Burton has been appointed divisional publicity manager for Universal exchanges at Indianapolis, Cincinnati and Louisville, it is announced. Mr. Burton, well known in Central States newspaper circles, will make his headquarters at the Indianapolis exchange.

Gaumont Completes "Satan on Earth"

After weeks of preparation the Gaumont Company has completed what is said to be an artistic photo-drama, "Satan on Earth," which it terms a "photo-novelty." Like all Gaumont productions, this feature will be distributed through states-right exchanges. It is anticipated that exhibitors will hail with delight, for it is claimed that it will make any program a success, no matter what the other pictures on the program may be.

Starting with the downfall of Lucifer, the struggles the Devil has made for the mastery of the world up to the present day are clearly shown. The natural barriers which the Great Creator placed to keep Satan in a restricted portion of the earth are shown by pictures and animation. The first republic, the Roman Empire; its patrician nobility in the days of the Caesars; the spread of its civilizing democracy to the westward, and the resistance to it offered by older civilizations to the eastward; the classic dances which beguiled the rulers of Palestine; the bacchanalian banquets when Cleopatra ruled; with these and many other big scenes which defy description, this drama is spectacularly begun.

Territories Sold Fast for Mix Films

It is announced that Exclusive Features, Inc., of 126 West Forty-sixth street, New York City, has sold the rights to the series of sixteen Tom Mix two-reel comedy-dramas for Greater New York and New York State territory to Inter-State Films, Inc., of 729 Seventh avenue.

The Interstate Company is now receiving bookings for this series of two reels and reports that exhibitors are not slow to take advantage of the opportunity offered to build up their programs by means of these "big, little features."

The rights for the State of Wisconsin have been sold to the Mid-West Distributing Company. The offices and exchange of this company are located in the Toy Building, Milwaukee, Wis., where Mr. Ralph A. Wettstein is the general manager.

Raver Plans to Intensely Exploit Maciste

Maciste will be intensely exploited by Harry Raver, who announces the completion of his arrangements for the lithographic posters to be used for "Maciste" in his new serial production, "The Liberator."

The line comprises forty-eight styles. More than two hundred tons of paper will be used to fill the order.

Mr. Raver has always been an advocate of fine posters and is particularly happy when the subject matter at hand permits of making up a large variety of styles, it is not unusual that in the case of The Liberator he believes in going the limit.

One sheet, three sheets, six sheets and twenty-four sheets will be used exclusively. The Riverside Press, with its modern, two-sheet presses, will execute Raver's big order.

Extended Runs on Johnson Film

"Cannibals of the South Seas" Reported to Have Duplicated New York Run in Many Other Cities

EXHIBITORS MUTUAL DISTRIBUTING CORPORATION is receiving reports from its many exchanges throughout the country, and announce that Martin Johnson's pictures, "Cannibals of the South Seas," are scoring extended runs in many other cities that equal the New York run.

The officials express no surprise at this, as they consider the pictures so refreshingly original that box-office records were expected to be broken by a film that had such advertising possibilities.

In New York City, the Plaza, Symphony, Concourse, Dyckman, Adion and Annex theatres enjoyed the advantage that the Rothapfel exploitation had given the pictures, and many Brooklyn theatres also reaped the benefits of this augmented exploitation.

Among the leading Brooklyn theatres that took advantage of this added exploitation campaign and are said to have showed the Cannibal pictures with immense results are the Halsey and Park, and the Park theatre at Corona, Long Island; the Palace at Passaic, the Pastime at Union Hill, the Colonial at West Hoboken, the Star at Newburgh and the Playhouse at Mount Vernon, all in the vicinity of the New York City theatres.

The Stanley theatre of Philadelphia made the largest booking with Exhibitors' Mutual for Martin Johnson's "Cannibals of the South Seas." The Stanley Corporation played the pictures in eight houses in Philadelphia from three to five days each.

In Minneapolis and St. Paul the Rubin and Finkelstein interests booked the pictures for many of their handsome theatres, and the A. J. Small circuit in Canada booked the pictures at first sight.

Washington, D. C., will also see the Martin Johnson pictures at the Tom Moore theatres, and the Cannibals were shown at the Circle theatre in Indianapolis beginning January 12.

The Exhibitors' Mutual point with pride at the great number of first class downtown theatres that have booked the pictures, and cite among others the Doric at Kansas City, Washington and Crystal at Dallas, Miles at Detroit, Majestic at Grand Rapids, Alhambra at Milwaukee, Orpheum at Akron, Royal at Des Moines, Strand at Canton, Alcazar at Birmingham, Ala., and the Broadway theatre at Charlotte, N. C.

Developments Mature in Industrial Films

GR EAT strides have been made in the development of industrial films and Universal prides itself on its Industrial Department under direction of Harry Levey.

It is announced that President Laemmle has ordered that a special representative be placed in each Universal exchange throughout the entire country to give personal attention to this branch of the work.

"While industrial films have been made for many years by free lances," said Harry Levey, "the Universal is the first big company to make such a big success of the so-called 'commercial-educative' picture."

"These films are all named 'industrials' and are specially booked and we weave an interesting photoplay around each subject so that the manufacturer's product might be popularized via the screen.

"These films are of such general interest and brimful of information, that many exhibitors ask for return dates. Now that Mr. Laemmle has greatly enlarged the resources of my department I expect this year will see the so-called 'industrial' picture recognized by every exhibitor as a necessary part of his program.

"Just consider how flat, stale and unprofitable the popular magazines would be without the pages in the back carrying attractive business announcements so artistically illustrated," continued Mr. Levey.

"The screen has followed in the footsteps of current literature and these 'industrial' pictures have an artistic appeal as well as entertaining value and these facts are rapidly becoming known."

Valuable Co-operation Is Noted in Omaha

WHEN the newspapers co-operate with the theatres it is considered a very strong combination and an incident of this is noted in Omaha by the Fox Film Corporation.

In the Sunday edition of the Omaha News, "The Journal Junior" section is made up of contributions by the youngsters. When the editor wanted a prize offered that would be of special value to his young readers in solving puzzles, etc., Manager Robert Shirley of the Muse theatre volunteered to supply the prize.

A special showing of the Fox extravaganza, "Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves," was arranged for the prize winners, who were admitted to their own private party at the theatre one Saturday morning.

It is said that the applause was tremendous when the tale of the "Arabian Knights," which William Fox brought to the screen, was shown to them.

Manager Shirley not only delighted the young people and received a lot of excellent press comment through the newspaper, but the army of youngsters that witnessed the production were enthusiastic advertisers by word-of-mouth.

The value to the newspaper was also said to have been great and it is reported that the youthful readers are more eager than ever before to solve these instructive riddles, etc., that may possibly bring them a free ticket as a prize to see some motion picture that will interest them as much as "Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves" did.

Coming Program Offerings

February Goldwyns Number Four

Marsh, Normand, Frederick and a Rex Beach Production Is Scheduled for Release During That Month

ON February 2 Mae Marsh will appear in "The Bondage of Barbara," by Burke Symon, directed by Emmett J. Flynn. "Sis Hopkins," starring Mabel Normand, will be released by Goldwyn February 9, and Pauline Frederick will star in the release of February 16, directed by Hobart Henley.

Rex Beach's drama of the Yukon, "The Brand," featuring Kay Laurell and Russell Simpson and directed by Reginald Barker, will be the fourth Goldwyn release for February and will make its appearance on the 23rd.

Goldwyn is keeping secret the name and authorship of Pauline Frederick's first starring vehicle under its banner with the intention of presenting the production as a surprise. Suffice it to say, it is based on one of the successful Broadway plays of the last year and was written by two of America's foremost dramatists.

It is described as a play that affords its star opportunities for achievements hitherto unexcelled.

"The Bondage of Barbara" is from the pen of Burke Symon, for many years stage director for David Belasco. It tells the story of a girl who becomes a boy to clear the honor of a wayward brother led astray by the son of the rich. In its dramatic possibilities it is a remarkable vehicle for Miss Marsh.

"Sis Hopkins" is Mabel Normand's newest vehicle, completion of which was interrupted by the star's illness of California's "prevailing"—Spanish influenza. Every one knows the vehicle Rose Melville made famous on every stage, big and small, throughout the land. Miss Normand is supported by John Powers as leading man, and by Sam de Grasse, Thomas Jefferson, Nicholas Cogley and Eugenie Ford.

Prominent in the cast of the Pauline Frederick play are Willard Mack, Wyndham Standing, Jere Austin and Tammany Young.

"The Brand" tells the story of the love of Alice Andrews for two men, one who throws her off after she has served his purpose, the other of whom really loves her. She goes to the Klondike in a gold rush with Bob Barclay, a small time vaudeville actor, yielding to his promise of marriage.

Vitagraph Names Comedies for Six Weeks

FOR the six weeks consecutive beginning January 13, the Vitagraph Company announces that the two-reel comedies released each week under the brand known as "Big V Special Comedies" are exceptionally big laugh producers.

The schedule shows that "Boobs and Bumps," featuring Walter Hall and Don Barclay, was released January 13, and "Traps and Tangles," featuring Larry Semon, was scheduled for release in the following week.

Releases of the following four weeks are as follows: January 27, "Footballs and Frauds," featuring "Slim" Summerville; February 3, "Love and Lather," featuring Earl Montgomery and Joe Rock; February 10, "Soapsuds and Sapheads," featuring James Aubrey; February 17, "Stamps and Scandal," featuring Larry Semon.

During the recent convention of Vitagraph branch managers, held in New York, it is reported that all the exchange managers testified that these two-reel Vitagraph comedies released every week were great trade builders and in growing demand daily.

With the initial release of these "Big V" Comedies September 16, there has been one released every week since, and the Vitagraph now has three companies at Hollywood, Cal., producing them on schedule time.

Larry Semon heads one of the companies and also plays the leads and directs.

The second company features Earl Montgomery and Joe Rock and is under the direction of Gilbert Pratt. The third company is directed by J. A. Howe and features James Aubrey.

"Romance of Happy Valley" Griffith's Third

D. W. Griffith's third production for release on the Artcraft program is titled "A Romance of Happy Valley," scheduled for release January 29. Unlike his preceding pictures, there is no touch of war in this production. Practically the same cast that was seen on "Hearts of the World," appear in this production—Lillian Gish, Robert Harron, George Fawcett, Kate Bruce, George Nichols, Bertram Grassby, Porter Strong, Adolphe Lostim, Lydia Titus, Andrew Arbuckle and Frances Parks.

The action of the story is laid in the South and its characters are quaint Southerners. Robert Harron has the role of a boarding-house keeper and Lillian Gish that of a neighbor's daughter. The two fall in love but he, longing for the sights of New York, leaves. His return after eight years finds his sweetheart waiting. It is said that Mr. Griffith has a real surprise and clever mystery in the climax.

"The Better 'Ole" February 16

The Strand theatre in New York City has secured the first booking on "The Better 'Ole," or "The Romance of Old Bill," according to World Pictures, which will distribute this picture by special arrangement with Charles B. Cochrane, who produced the play in England.

This is the screen adaptation of Bruce Bairnsfather's cartoons assisted by Arthur Elliott, directed by George Pierson and made by the Welsh Pierson Films.

The stage play is now reported to be showing to capacity houses at the Cort theatre in New York and the World Pictures feel that the Bairnsfather vogue means much for the success of the picture throughout the country.

Drews in Advance Showing

"Romance and Rings" is the first of the series of two-reel Drew comedies released on the Paramount program and at the advance showing held at the Rialto theatre in New York City Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew made a personal appearance.

They were filling an engagement at Baltimore of their stage production, "Keep Her Smiling," but made a special trip on Sunday, January 5, when the Rialto showing started and then travelled to Buffalo where their company opened on the following Monday.

It is declared that the applause lasted nearly eight minutes when they made their personal appearance at the Rialto and Paramount officials believe that the Drew comedies will make a strong feature for their program.

"Breed of Men" Finished

William S. Hart has just completed "Breed of Men" and the Ince star appears as "Careless Carmody" who goes broke and afoot in cowland.

This Artcraft will be released February 2.

January 25, 1919

Ethel Barrymore Appears in "The Divorcee"

An adaptation of what is described as one of her most striking stage successes; "Lady Frederick" serves as the screen vehicle which stars Ethel Barrymore in the Metro release of January 20.

The play was by W. Somerset Maugham, the English playwright and the scenario was prepared by June Mathis and Katherine Kavanaugh. Maxwell Karger directly supervised the making of the film and the camera work was by George K. Hollister.

Miss Barrymore's leading man is E. J. Ratcliffe, H. E. Herbert, Naomi Childers, John Goldsworthy, Maud Turner Gordon, Harold Entwistle, Eugene Strong and Ricca Allen. For the filming of the casino scenes P. Thad Volkman, who, assisted by Mr. Blache, staged "The Divorcee," had the play enacted on one of the great private estates in the east.

International News Man Follows President

President Wilson was closely followed in France by V. K. Whipple of the International News, according to report, and his success in getting exceptional scenes is said to be demonstrated in the news released by Universal last week.

The Screen Telegram is said to show what is claimed to be the first pictures to be sent from Austria-Hungary since America declared war.

"Enchanted Barn" Ready for Release

January 27 is the release date set by Vitagraph for Bessie Love's second feature, "The Enchanted Barn," written by Grace H. L. Lutz.

It was filmed at the Hollywood studio and directed by David Smith. Supporting Miss Love are J. Frank Glendon, Otto Lederer, Joseph Singleton, William T. Horns, Frank Butterworth, Ella Wolbert, Darbey A. Walker and Jane Hathaway.

Vitagraph heralds this as the ideal play for Bessie Love, and pronounces it full of the joy of children, with a wealth of exquisite photography and rich with little real life touches.

Universal Releases "100"

Number 100 was the Universal News Screen Magazine released January 11 and six subjects of decidedly different characters are portrayed, according to editor Jock Cohn.

Our ancestors are pictured with the aid of wax by Dwight Franklin; a study of babies; the service flag of Isaac Simms, a Southern patriot who had fifteen boys in Uncle Sam's service; activities of American women in Italy during the war; paragraphs from prominent newspapers, and Willie Hopkin's mud modeling comprise the varied subjects offered.

Two Classic and Four All Star

Metro Names Six Productions to Be Released During Month of February—Lyttell's "Faith" Is First

May Allison, Star in Metro Pictures

BERT LYTELL in "Faith" is released by the Metro February 3, and during that month there will be three more Metro All Star Series and two Screen Classics subjects to be offered through the various Metro exchanges.

"As the Sun Went Down" stars Edith Storey and is released February 10, while a week later Hale Hamilton appears in "Johnny on the Spot." The All Star series release for February 24 is "Peggy Does Her Darndest," with May Allison in the title role.

The Screen Classics schedule for February reveals "Why Germany Must Pay" and "The Great Romance," starring Harold Lockwood.

Maxwell Karger, director general of Metro, wrote in novel form the story of "Why Germany Must Pay," and June Mathis with A. S. Le Veno prepared the scenario. Charles Miller directed it, with Creighton Hale and Florence Billings in the leading parts.

Edith Cavell, the martyred nurse, is one of the characters, and she nurses the Alsatian forced at the outbreak of the war to fight for Germany against his own personal inclinations.

In support of Mr. Hale and Miss Billings are E. J. Connelly, Frank Currier, Henry Kolker, Joseph Kilgour, Earl Schenck, Margaret McWade and H. C. Carvill.

Harold Lockwood is said to be seen at his very best in the second Screen Classics offering for February, "The Great Romance." Henry Otto staged the production, which was written especially for Mr. Lockwood by Finis Fox. The supporting cast included Ruby de Remer, Frank Currier, Joseph Granby, Louis Stern, Helen Lindroth, Franklyn Hanna, Morgan Thorpe, J. P. Laffey, and Clara Grenville.

Bert Lyttell's picture in Metro's All Star series is "Faith" and is from the story by Richard Washburn Child, scenario by George D. Baker and A. G. Kenyon. Edythe Chapman is Lyttell's leading woman and the cast also includes Rosemary Theby, Edwin Stevens, Nancy Chase, while the direction was by Charles Swickard, with Robert B. Kurrle at the camera.

"As the Sun Went Down," with Edith Storey appearing as Colonel Billy of Rattlesnake Gulch in the mining days of '49, has Lewis Cody in the role of Faro Bill. The picture is from the stage play adapted by George Baker, directed by E. Mason Hopper, photographed by William Thompson, and with the following support: Harry S. Northrup, William Brunton, Alfred Hollingsworth, E. A. Turner, Frances Burnham, Za Su Pitts, F. E. Spooner, Vera Lewis, and George W. Berrell.

Hale Hamilton in "Johnny on the Spot" has Louise Lovely as his leading woman and supporter by Phil McCullough, Ruth Orlamond, Edward J. Connelly, Hardee Kirkland, Lilie Leslie, E. N. Wallack, Neal Hardin, Oral Humphreys, and Fred Warren. This is said to afford Mr. Hamilton great opportunities. Harry L. Franklin directed "Johnny on the Spot," and it was scenarized by June Mathis from Shannon Fife's story.

"Peggy Does Her Darndest" is the title of the picture which stars May Allison and is released February 24. Rosemary Theby and Robert Ellis are prominent in the cast, which includes Wilton Taylor, Dick Rosson, Sylvia Ashton and Ernest Morrison, a little colored boy. The scenario was by George Baker, founded upon Royal Brown's story in "The Red Book."

Three Universals During Next Two Weeks

UNIVERSAL'S program for the last two weeks of this month shows a feature portion of melodramas and light comedy drama.

The January 20 release presents Ruth Clifford in "The Game's Up," a story of how fortune smiles on an ambitious young art student when she is forced to make good. Al Ray, cousin of Charles Ray, is seen as Miss Clifford's male lead. Elsie Jane Wilson directed. The week of January 27 will see the release of a Universal special attraction featuring Harry Carey and entitled "Roped," and a program picture, "Who Will Marry Me?" featuring Carmel Myers.

"Roped" relates in a semi-humorous way a story of the married life of a millionaire Western ranch owner and his beautiful young wife. It shows what happens to the mother-in-law with social ambitions, who after arranging the wedding seeks to run things her own way.

"Who Will Marry Me?" featuring Miss Myers, is a story of how love finally finds a way to bring true happiness to an Italian girl and her wealthy husband who has married her when intoxicated but who, insisting that he is a thoroughbred decides to develop the girl to his standards.

Houdini Serial Hits New York

Beginning January 6 "The Master Mystery" Started in Sixteen Keith and Proctor Theatres in Gotham

THE fondest expectations of the producers, exchangeman and distributor, were said to be exceeded when B. A. Rolfe's serial, "The Master Mystery," starring Houdini, opened with its first episode in the Keith and Proctor theatres in New York City and state.

To say that the opening was auspicious is to use terms which do not adequately describe the true facts, according to the officials who declare it was a tremendous success—a veritable triumph—an occasion that once more justified the opinion so often expressed that the Houdini serial will go down in film history as marking a new epoch in serial productions.

What happened at Proctor's theatre, Yonkers, is said to illustrate just how well the serial opened. Seating three thousand, the policy of Proctor's, Yonkers, is to play one show nightly. Thursday night, the opening day for the Houdini serial, the house was packed to its utmost capacity.

Friday night, at 7:50, ten minutes before the show began, the theatre was literally jammed to the doors. Not only was every available seat occupied but standees were present to the utmost limit of the law's allowance.

Outside a veritable mob had gathered, vainly trying to gain admission. Three thousand people were in the crowd that was turned away, it was estimated.

As a solution to the problem of accommodating the disappointed throng, the house management decided upon a radical course—in accordance with which it was immediately announced that two shows would be given on Saturday night, the first at 6:30 and the second at 9:00 p. m.

Thus far what is declared to be the first time in the history of the house the Keith and Proctor policy of one show a night was broken—a significant compliment to Houdini in "The Master Mystery."

Berst to Close Big Deals on Trip to Coast

THREE feminine stars and one male star are said to figure among the prospective deals to be consummated by J. A. Berst, president of United Picture Theatres of America, Inc., on his trip to California. Mr. Berst left for the Coast this week. The production of two ten-reel features is said to be among the projects contemplated by Mr. Berst. For one of the stories Mr. Berst said that $20,000 is asked.

Mr. Berst stopped off en route at Chicago, where he presided at a special convention of United branch managers operating in the central division of United territory. The gathering included Managers C. W. Bunn, David G. Rodgers, Milton Simon, Floyd Lewis, C. W. Harden, S. C. Bestar, of the Chicago, Minneapolis, Indianapolis, St. Louis, Kansas City and Omaha United offices respectively, and E. J. O'Donnell, the central divisional manager.

Statistical reports were presented to President Berst on the successful reception of this Farnum feature in the various first run theatres of the central division and figures pointing to the success of "The Light of Western Stars" were given. Mr. Berst expressed the opinion that "A Man in the Open," the next Farnum feature, would surpass in strength of story, excellence of acting, and beauty of photography any vehicle in which Dustin Farnum has thus far appeared.

Plans for the unification of the branch system and constructive discussion of more intensive co-operative action among the managers were outlined and discussed. Mr. Berst is reported to have intimated that following his trip to Los Angeles an announcement of importance to their work as managers, and affecting the material they would be enabled to offer to exhibitors might be looked for. Milton Goldsmith, treasurer and general counsel for the United, accompanies Mr. Berst on the trip.

"The Still Alarm"

Pioneer Film Corporation reports encouraging accounts of the success of its production, "The Still Alarm," in all sections of the country. It reports that this production has run in every motion picture theatre in Newark, N. J., a record to be proud of, it claims.

"Live Wires" in Gaumont's Late Reels

Gaumont Company in its late Graphic release, No. 42, shows the simple ceremonies which marked the burial of Theodore Roosevelt last week. Glimpses of prominent public characters, including William H. Taft, ex-President, are given in this connection.

Included in the "live" news of this number of the Graphic are pictorial accounts of King George and the Prince of Wales reviewing English heroes in Hyde Park, London; American Red Cross Society assisting war orphans in Marseilles, France; Harry Ludwig winning the Bulletin's Eight Annual Cross City Race in San Francisco and visiting French soldiers; downtown fire in Cleveland; annual carnival, Pasadena; Mary Pickford's adopted heroes; the new head of the Mormon Church; scenes at Camp Logan, Texas, and views of Samuel L. Rothapel and the Rivoli and Rialto theatres, the management of which he has recently resigned.

Gaumont News, No. 42, released Tuesday, shows characteristic poses of the late Theodore Roosevelt; an installment of "flying for Uncle Sam"; Baron Makimo, Japanese peace delegate, and Secretary Daniels; views in Paris and scenes of the big transport Northern Pacific, grounded off Fire Island.

"The Unpardonable Sin" for Kinema Theatre

It is the Kinema theatre at Los Angeles that will house the premiere of the Garson and Neillan production in ten reels starring Blanche Sweet.

The opening date for what is expected to be an extended run is February 3 and "The Unpardonable Sin" will then be brought to New York City for a Broadway engagement.

At the Kinema theatre the admission prices to see the Blanche Sweet production will be $1.50 top.

Billy West's second release through Bull's Eye Film Corp. is called "A Rolling Stone"

Middle West Reports Good on West Comedies

Billy West's latest comedies, made under the direction of the Bull's Eye Film Corporation, are meeting with big success, according to reports received by officials of the Bull's Eye Company. An official of the company in commenting upon the reports received from the Middle West said concerning the popularity of the comedian and his comedies, said: "Reports from the Fontenelle Feature Film Company in Omaha, Neb., indicating that Billy West's new comedies are far and away ahead of anything he has previously done. Out in the West film men look on the Omaha territory as the straw that indicates the way the wind is blowing. If the producer can show Omaha anything, he's got the goods that will sell, and sell big. It is a matter of pride with us, therefore, to know that out in that big territory they think so well of the new Billy West comedies.

"Billy West has completed two pictures since his attack of influenza, and in the judgment of his director, and the comedian himself, he is doing a far better line of comedy 'stunts' just now than previously. The news from Omaha is reflected in messages we have received from practically all of the exchanges releasing the new Billy West comedies. Chicago, Boston, Atlanta, Philadelphia and the big New York territory, report excellent business.

Priest Reports Good on Selig Production

Robert W. Priest, president of the Film Market, Inc., reports keen interest in the two William Selig productions, "The City of Purple Dreams," and "Who Shall Take My Life?" which the Film Market is handling for the Selig interests. Mr. Priest also states that numerous inquiries have been received by the Film Market with reference to the reissued rights to "The Spoilers," also a Selig production. He said that every independent buyer who handled it, is ready to purchase again.

A Moment in the David G. Fischer Production, "The Law of Nature," Made Under the Direction of David G. Fischer

Fischer Presents "The Law of Nature"

DAVID G. FISCHER, David G. Fischer Productions, Inc., gave a specially arranged showing for his anti-alcohol feature, "The Law of Nature," at Wurlitzer Hall, Monday afternoon. The picture is in eight reels. The story was written by Mr. Fischer in collaboration with Captain Richmond Pearson Hobson, ex-Congressman from Alabama. Mr. Fischer also directed. Vincent Coleman and Dixie Lee appear in the leading roles, Frances NeMeyer and Harold Salter have principal roles. Stanley C. Mason photographed.

Mr. Fischer will present "The Law of Nature," first in legitimate theatres booked as a legitimate attraction. Following its showing in regular playhouses, the feature will be sold on a state rights basis for the several territories.

Mr. Fischer, who has recently opened offices in the Selwyn Theatre Building in West Forty-second street, has been promi-nently identified with the motion picture industry for several years in the capacities of director, actor and producer. He was with the American Film Company three years as co-star with J. Warren Kerrigan and directed. He directed the first picture of the company. He then joined Essanay and remained six months with this company as a director. He was director-general of Premier for one year and with the American Commercial Film Company for one year. He was stage manager for Virginia Harned, Julia Marlow and other stars. He was for three years a stage director of stock companies and one and one-half years as director-general of the United Play Company. He is the author of the dramatization of "Lavender and Old Lace," which won an enormous success; and "The Master's Violin," "John Rawn," "The Purchase Price," "Immigrants," "The Stronger Love" and "To-morrow."

"Romance of Air" Crowds Boston Theatre

INDEPENDENT SALES CORPORATION, which is handling the bookings for Carle E. Carlton's serial production, "A Romance of the Air," featuring Lieut. Bert Hall, announces that the picture's opening at the Tremont Temple theatre, one of Boston's largest theatres, reports that an overcrowded house greeted the opening of the four weeks' engagement.

From the reports received this week, Independent Sales Corporation announces that it will extend the engagement to an indefinite run of considerably more than the original four weeks to meet the tremendous demand for seats.

Lieut. Hall, the American "Ace," and one of the two survivors of the famous Lafayette Escadrille, is personally appearing at each performance of his pictured story, which was adapted from his book, "En L'Air."

An idea of the success that marked the opening in Boston is taken from the telegram received by Frank Hall, president of the Independent Sales Corporation, from Manager Franklin F. Plimpton, of the Tremont Temple theatre, as follows:

"'Romance of the Air' complete knock-out at Tremont house. Sold out; big crowd clamoring for admission. Indication it will break all records. Lieut. Hall the hero of the hour; special guest of Boston City Club. Many notables present congratulations.

"(Signed) FRANKLIN F. PLIMPTON."

Contracted for Sixteen

D. L. Williamson, of the Lyric theatre, Jackson, Tenn., has contracted with the Big Feature Rights Corporation for sixteen pictures, one to run every other week, and he has secured the advertising for all.

Lee Gives Results of Trade Showings

Joseph F. Lee, exploitation manager for Louis B. Mayer, now on the Coast giving special trade showing of Mr. Mayer's production, "Virtuous Wives," starring Anita Stewart, reports from Los Angeles that the last of the 25 or more special trade showings of "Virtuous Wives" was held at Tally's Broadway theatre, Sunday, January 5. "That it was a success is putting it mildly," Joe wrote. "T. L. Tally had provided a short concert by an augmented orchestra which he had engaged for the run of 'Virtuous Wives.' The entire motion picture colony was present—stars, property men, directors, actors, and extra men.

"When I arrived in Los Angeles I had given thirteen trade showings in thirteen of the largest cities. Being a little superstitious I was naturally interested in how the thirteenth showing would turn out, and, frankly, the thirteenth was the biggest success of them all. I found the exhibitors wide awake, eager and ready to attend. The Denver Post said of one of these showings: 'For a number of years it has been the custom in the movies to hurry finished products to New York and there show each picture to a small audience of reviewers and managers. The verdict of these people was taken as final by many exhibitors through the country and on their word the pictures were booked. Many times there arose a wide difference of opinion and things that pleased the experts in New York were far from interesting to the audiences in Kankakee. The system was, as all systems, rich in merits but also at fault in many ways. Mr. Louis B. Mayer, president and general manager of the Anita Stewart Productions, decided that a new system was necessary and has already put into effect the following new innovation: Instead of asking the few New York managers and local critics to pass judgment, he is giving private runs in all larger cities and inviting exhibitors and reviewers to view "Virtuous Wives."'"

Lesser Gets Three States for West Comedies

Wilton Cohen, president of the Bulls Eye Film Corporation at 729 Seventh avenue, New York, announced that Sol Lesser had just closed a contract with him to distribute the new Billy West comedies for California, Nevada and Arizona.

Before returning to San Francisco Mr. Lesser said: "I am in the market for the very best features obtainable in all lines of photoplay offerings, and in adding the new Billy West comedies to my list of bookings I am convinced that I am doing my patrons and myself a big favor. I feel assured that Billy West is at his best now, and has never done anything to compare with this new series, and for this reason I am more than pleased to add these features to my attractions.

"There are comedies in profusion. The difficult thing is to wade in and dig out the best. I have overstayed my original schedule of this trip for several reasons, one of the reasons being that I desired to investigate the market for comedies as thoroughly as I could before deciding upon my bookings.

"I know conditions in my territory from careful analysis, and first-hand investigation from all angles, and I have found it is inadvisable to offer my patrons anything but the best in comedies."

All Star Cast for Late World Picture

World Pictures has under production at its Fort Lee studio "The Price of Doubt," in which Montagu Love, June Elvidge, Evelyn Greeley, George MacQuarrie, Jack Drumier and Johnnie Hines will be starred. The scenario was written by Wallace Clifton and Harry O. Hoyt, under the direction of Charles Sarver, scenario editor of World Pictures. Del Henderson is directing.

Advertising Reflects the Quality

So States Louis Burston in Referring to Advertising Matter on Francis Ford's "The Silent Mystery"—Ford "Pep" in Posters

REFERRING to the elaborate advertising campaign which has been set on foot by Louis Burston, as producer, and Hiller and Wilk, Inc., as selling agents, of and for Francis Ford's fifteen episode serial, "The Silent Mystery," Mr. Burston has the following to say of the minute detail work in the design of the posters and the dramatic action that has been expressed by the artist in his work of bringing out the "catchy" lines and action of the serial:

"No expense or effort has been spared in turning out a brand of paper that will fully reflect the quality of the article we have to offer. 'The Silent Mystery' is super-burdened with Ford 'pep,' Ford 'punch,' and Ford mystery, and it was the determination of me and Hiller & Wilk, Inc., to crowd the most compelling possible suggestion of all of these elements in our advertising literature—particularly the posters.

"A striking evidence of the success we have achieved in this direction is the one-sheet for lobby display. It is a fine, balanced, bold and effective specimen of the art of poster making. In the lobby display or on a billboard it simply can't escape notice. And above all it is a poster surcharged with the feeling of action. Our best illustrators are those who are able to endow their drawings with the vital element of action. How often do you see a poster imbued with the atmosphere of dynamic action? 'The Silent Mystery' one-sheet and three-sheet have it—in super-abundance.

"The artist has given the public an eye-full of box-office itch.

"Prominent on the list is a press book with 'pepy' copy, written by men who know their business—who know what magnetizes the editorial eye and what doesn't. The slides and banners are out of the ordinary—different from the hackneyed stuff. The generous display of ready prepared advertising cuts which we have gotten up evidence a decided and really successful attempt to invest them with originality and character as well as 'punch.' They should stand out well on any newspaper page. 'The Silent Mystery' player cuts and lobby display are fully in keeping—in the matter of distinctive character—with the other advertising features which we have mentioned and are calculated to attract strongly."

Novelty Campaign for Lincoln

Syndication of Stories Bearing on First Production and Novel Lobby Displays, Planned by Sawyer and Lubin

ARRANGEMENTS have been completed by Messrs. Sawyer and Lubin, sponsors for the S-L Productions, presenting E. K. Lincoln as star, to syndicate a series of stories through the various newspaper syndicates throughout the country, said stories to have an important bearing on the production in which Mr. Lincoln will first appear in the series of S-L Specials under the direction of Ralph Ince. The papers, it is announced, have been selected as to location and circulation, so as to most effectively cover the territories in which they are published. During the exploitation of the first Lincoln feature, Messrs. Sawyer and Lubin will establish a special department in one of the popular motion picture "fan" magazines. The department will be conducted personally by E. K. Lincoln.

With this feature as the dominant note, Sawyer and Lubin venture the assertion that they will have inaugurated the most extensive personal advertising campaign yet employed to exploit the star of any production. During the time that Mr. Lincoln's first production is being exploited, the star's pictures will appear on available covers of leading magazines.

In the lobby display several novelties have been provided. Paintings in colors done by Clarence Underwood, magazine illustrator, will be available. A distinct novelty has also been prepared in the form of an illuminated frame containing a photograph of Lincoln, in the character which he depicts in the play. This photograph, done on glass, will be of varied colors. As the patron of the theatre watches the picture it changes both in color and pose. As a special aid to the exhibitor, a booklet is now being made, carrying a story of the first S-L Production, together with useful information concerning Lincoln. This booklet will be profusely illustrated with cartoons of the star and scenes from the play, done by a well-known artist. All of the material mentioned will be handled directly by their New York office.

Organize Capital Film Company

Indianapolis Capital Has Organized Company to Handle Two-Reel Specials and Ike Schlank Is President

THE CAPITAL FILM COMPANY, recently organized, has headquarters in the Merchants Bank building in Indianapolis and Ike Schlank has been elected the first president.

Capitalized at $250,000 it is said to have started its distribution auspiciously and the officers announce that the organization of branches is nearly completed. There will be twenty-five of such centers, all of which will be in operation in a few weeks it is declared.

"We will be ready to book January 27 and ready to begin releasing February 3," said President Schlank.

Behind the Capital Film Company are declared to be some of the best practical motion picture men in the game and some of the shrewdest capitalists in the Middle West. These men are said to be bent on making the Capital Film Company one of the big powers in the industry.

The company will release two-reel specials, three of these being offered weekly. The subjects will cover the whole field of motion picture expression—comedies, Westerns, crook and detective plays, emotional dramas, beautiful scenic subjects, in fact, everything in the whole category of cinema art.

"We will feature the two-reel specials," said President Schlank, "because we believe it goes back to the days when everybody in the industry made lots of money. We believe the two-reel subjects offer the wide variety that the human heart demands—quick, changing appeal to the intellect and the emotion of the man in the seat.

"We believe that a new day is here and that the motion picture patron wants new stuff—the kind he used to rave over when the movies was a passion with him, some few years ago."

The Capital Film Company is building a big organization. The organization will cover the whole United States and parts of Canada to bring about, according to President Schlank, the perfect distribution of these two-reel subjects, so that the exhibitor will get the quickest and best service.

Inter-Ocean Sees Producers Waking Up

An Inter-Ocean official said this week that American producers, big and small, were becoming educated to the requirements of the foreign market. That market no longer represented a mere after thought to the producer, in his opinion.

"Once upon a time," stated this man, "the export field was of minor consideration to the average producer. He selected his local distribution very carefully, but the great market beyond did not matter.

"At that time he was just as likely to show his product to Exporter Smith as Exporter Jones, or to forget his appointments with both and show the film to Exporter Brown, because he happened to meet Brown on the street at the last minute. Foreign distribution was often decided upon in hotel lobbies or bars.

"But the reputable exporters, like Inter-Ocean, have educated the producer, and perhaps successfully. At least, the producer studies the export market as carefully as he does the home one. He does not hawk his pictures about among the exporters. He knows that they are just as opposed to hawking as are the better class American distributors.

"And he knows what class of film will go in the foreign markets, and is guided by this knowledge in making his picture.

"That is to say, the producer tries to get international appeal into his product. As long as he succeeds in achieving this, this American industry does not have to fear losing its hold on the foreign market."

Alpha Gets "Reclaimed"

"A Soul Adrift" Is Third Perret Picture

AN original story written by Leonce Perret and entitled "A Soul Adrift," affords the vehicle for the third Perret production.

Mme. Alice Blache directed it and Dolores Cassinelli is the star, with Albert Boscoe as leading man. No definite announcement has been made as to any distributing arrangements, although it is stated that the production will be shown at a leading New York theatre in the near future.

The story has to do with the obstacles and hardships encountered by a young girl because of her constancy for the man she loves. It is said to contain many dramatic thrills and appealingly romantic.

The leading man appears as a prominent society artist who forsakes his customary haunts and settles in a small Western village under an assumed name.

He meets the heroine there and their acquaintance develops rapidly into a strong mutual friendship and then as quickly into love. Having occasion to visit his old haunts in the big city back East the man comes again under the influence of his old heroine learns of his real identity and recent escapades.

There are said to be several dramatic moments when she tries to learn his attitude towards her and in the end she lacks the courage to go back to her home in the small Western town and takes up a stage career as a means of support.

She acquires the stunning city polish which she is convinced her former lover would admire and also quickly mounts to stardom behind the footlights.

When he finally discovers that his former country sweetheart is the great actress he pleads for her forgiveness and after several scenes, which are described as intensely dramatic, the twain are reunited.

United Announces Title of First Reed Film

FLORENCE REED'S first picture of the six she has contracted to deliver to United Picture Theatres of America is entitled "The Call of the Heart," according to President J. A. Berst.

William Desmond plays opposite to Miss Reed and others prominent in her support are Alec Francis, George Stevens and Marcelle Roussillon. The picture was produced for the United by Tribune Productions, Inc., and is in six reels, directed by John M. Stahl, and will be released late in February by the United through the various United representatives in the General Film Exchanges throughout the country.

The story is described as being very novel and startling with the action taking place in Paris and New York. Miss Reed plays a dual role, two generations, a combination which is said to afford her many emotional opportunities.

A private showing in New York is said to have brought forth enthusiastic laudatory comments from the representative United exhibitor-members who witnessed it.

United officials point with pride to the cast surrounding Florence Reed in her initial United offering, "The Call of the Heart." William Desmond, himself a star of many current screen attractions, is declared to bear an artistic reputation second to none, and George Stevens' ability is said to have been proved in many important productions. He was formerly with Henry Irving, and afterwards with the A. M. Palmer stock company.

Special Service Section on

Harry Carey in "Roped"

THERE should be none of the so-called "specialization" on "Roped," the newest Harry Carey production, because here is unquestionably a picture that will appeal to everyone in your audiences. Therefore you can safely go to it by advertising this as a real special and devoting more attention to it than you do to the ordinary picture, because, unless there is something wrong with your exploitation, you can bank on bigger business than you usually get, and on more pleased patrons.

Recently Harry Carey has appeared in a number of successes and we would capitalize his popularity, but at the same time we would build a big share of the advertising on the character of the story. We would tell the people that it is a virile, genuine comedy-drama that keeps you laughing most of the time, but that now and then brings a little grip upon the heart and that unfolds a story that is full of startling developments to the very end. You can safely call this a typically American picture.

We would strongly advise against getting too serious with this picture. Comedy is only the background and there is a strong story with plenty of thrills, but most of your people want to laugh these days and we would certainly not overlook the chance of making that appeal dominate everything. We would feature Harry and his flock of cowboys, but we would be sure to point out that most of the story has to deal with their experiences in the "high society" of the east and their difficulties with evening dress.

HERE is the story. Cheyenne Harry is a millionaire ranch owner, but he is sadly in need of a housekeeper and voices that need to his group of cowboys, who decide that what Harry really needs is a wife, and so they write in his name to a matrimonial agency, which results in his name and requests being placed in the matrimonial journal. A copy of this falls into the hands of a group of New York society folk while they are dining at a fashionable hotel and one of the girls, Aileen Judson-Brown, decides to answer it as a joke, saying that she is a beautiful, but poor New York girl who understands housekeeping and who is longing to marry Cheyenne.

Little realizing that he is being made the butt of a joke, Harry takes the first train to New York and there starts the comedy element strong with the uneducated cowboy in the stamping ground of fashion. Aileen's mother has but one desire in life and that is to marry her daughter to a rich man, and at first she refuses to receive the uncouth westerner, but when she learns that a New York bank will honor his check for three millions and when she is also faced with alternative of paying a huge amount that she owes the hotel or getting out into the cold without a cent to her name, she consents to "sell" her daughter to the westerner, who is actually in love with the girl and fails to understand that she is marrying him solely on account of her mother's desire for wealth.

Instead of returning to his ranch, he fits up a mansion for his wife and her mother in New York and then developments come thick and fast. The Judson-Browns continue their society pace, and Harry is relegated to the background, though there are many amusing scenes at the expense of Cheyenne. Ferdie Van Duzen, a poor but high-society bounder, continues to pay attention to Aileen, and with her mother's consent.

BUT the months go by and a little Harry comes. Here the deception of the mother-in-law becomes the greater. She lies to the girl when she asks for her husband when the baby is born, and then lies to Harry telling him that his wife is delirious and cannot see him, and bars him from the baby. But here another element enters in the apparently dignified English butler, one of the cleverest characters that you ever saw on the screen, who shows Cheyenne how to see his own baby, and there follow several touching scenes that will bring a suggestion of a tear to everyone in your audiences.

About this time we have a switchback to the cattle ranch with the rival owner plotting to blow up the source of Cheyenne's water supply and get possession of his 50,000 head of cattle. The "boys" from the ranch discover the plot, but they decide that instead of sending a wire they had better go in person and since they have heard of the arrival of a "son and heir" they decide to go in person not only with the notification, but these "wise men of the west" come bearing presents for the young Harry. They come in full dress, but with their sombreros, one of them very drunk, and there are plenty of laughs to be featured here. Of course the high-browed mother-in-law is terribly shocked, especially when they break up a perfectly good society party, but the little wife here first shows her first affection by welcoming her husband's friends.

BUT at the same time there comes a realization to Cheyenne that he and his wife belong on different paths that will never meet and with the danger that threatens his interests on the ranch he goes back with the boys, without a farewell. He is in time to frustrate the efforts of the villain—but this is one point to remember—that the thrills in this picture are secondary to the heart interest and humor. Then we have some scenes back in the east with the girl wife being told by her mother that her baby has died and has been buried while she was away at a house party, and we have the first direct evidence of her love. The mother tells her that she wired Harry of the child's death, but that he showed no interest and a divorce is being arranged when the butler, a loyal and human friend of the ranchman, wires him that strange things are happening.

Cheyenne takes the "eight-thirty train." His first moment in the house is to look for the baby. He finds the covered baby bed and the other things draped in white. The mother-in-law tells him that the child is dead and that the mother is away. But the butler comes with the information that he does not believe that the child is dead and with the warning to find the nurse. And just at that moment Harry overhears the mother-in-law and the lawyer plotting the divorce. His spirit has risen against her on other occasions, but now he drives her from the house and the skulking lawyer with her. He sends a wire to the boys "back home" and with the butler goes to look for the nurse.

Several weeks elapse, but they find her and she confessed the plot of the mother and restores the child. It happens, very conveniently, that Aileen, her mother, Van Dusen and others are to be members of a slumming party in the section where the child had been found, that night, and here is staged one of the final scenes, and a very dramatic one. When Van Dusen sees them enter, he bribes the resort keepers to put Harry and the butler "out" if they start anything. He appears and wins his wife back, for she really loves him, and when a sneer comes from Van Dusen he knocks him out and then the gangsters start. There is a clever touch with the butler telephoning the cowboys and their leaving their beds in their shirt-tails and joining in the fight. And there is no doubt about how it ends.

Aileen is now reconciled to her husband fully, but she does not know that the child is alive until almost the very end—and after that on the ranch comes the real honeymoon.

WE repeat: Keep the comedy element strong in your exploitation.

And then the heart interest.

You may safely go ahead with picture on the theory that everyone will like it. There is not the slightest thing in it to offend; there is no trace of the salacious and no hint of the problem drama.

For the reason that many people will judge from the title and from the fact that Carey has generally been seen in cowboy pictures that this is a Westerner, we would go a little further and explain that this is a story of a millionaire cattleman who comes out of the West and marries an Eastern society girl with a grasping mother—that he is literally roped into matrimony.

Feature the cowboys in their dress suits, their coming with their offerings to the heir and their part in supplying the happy solution.

You know from experience that a picture that holds the attention, but at the same time keeps the people laughing and sends them away from the house in a good humor is the sort of a picture that creates the greatest amount of word-of-mouth advertising for you.

Invite Laughs and Thrills Both With This Picture

THERE have been a lot of opinions contributed to these pages about the sort of pictures that people want to see these days. They have pretty well agreed that these want to incorporate into pure American lively action and plenty of humor. They have said that there is called for love interest, with something doing all the time and a happy ending, with the right side winning out.

So you can regard "Roped" as an after the war picture so far as appealing to your patrons, but, for the Love of Mike, do not make any reference to the war in your exploitation on this one. The minute you do someone with jump to the conclusion that you are trying to hide some ordinary war picture behind the sort of frontier camouflage that they are selling for junk in France and Belgium and even in Bingen along the Rhine these days. There isn't a hint in the picture that there ever was a war, except with mothers-in-law.

When you start in to exploit this picture forget that the war ever existed except that it gives you an opportunity to clean up. Don't let an element of it get into anything that you write or say. Do not even be tempted into saying that the spirit that Harry Carey and his cowboys show exemplified the spirit that enabled America to turn the tide of the Hun horror. Forget the battle stuff, talk about the

You don't have to label an American these days. Neither do you have to label a "truly American" offering.

AFTER having seen this production our advice is going to be different from most that you have received with an unusual offering and that it to put this on a SURPRISE basis. The main thing that you, as an exhibitor, desire, is to bring new patrons to your theatre and to send them away with the desire to come to your house again. Therefore your first duty is to get them into the house FOR THE FIRST TIME.

SURPRISE them with what a motion picture can do.

There are pictures on which you can arouse a certain amount of curiosity by a "teaser" campaign and get them to come to solve the mystery. You might be able to do it with this picture, but we distinctly wouldn't.

We would appeal directly to the desire of the public to laugh and to thrill a little at the same time.

We would start the campaign well in advance of the showing of the picture, at least a week with a first run and then dropping down according to the length of time that you intend to use "Roped." We wouldn't use anything like a teaser, but we would get to straight-away statement.

Suppose the current picture is a comedy-drama. Then let us say:

"Come and laugh at this one, and if you like to laugh we believe that you will come back Monday and laugh even the more with Harry Carey and his wild west cowboys in dress suits as they appear in 'Roped.'"

If you have a tense production say something like this, of course changed to meet the character of the offering:

"Here are the thrills and the heart throbs, but when you see Harry Carey in 'Roped' Thursday your heart will grip just as hard, but you will punctuate every throb with a chuckle."

OF course you would be foolish to say anything that will tend to knock your

THEY roped him into marriage, but he thought he had "em fooled when the baby came—until they took his wife away from him and made him think something worse had happened to the kiddie. current offering. What every good showman is trying to do is to sell TODAY'S show, but there is no reason why you cannot make another appeal with the coming one if you do it intelligently.

But we do believe that this is a picture that gives the chance to make NEW friends for your theater and it is for that reason that we suggest the contrast in your advertising.

Very frankly, we cannot conceive of a series of events like those pictured in "Roped" ever really happening, but his is an offering for pure enjoyment and that will never lead to the cold contrast of unreality. Samuel L. Rothapfel's one big idea was to leave them laughing when they left his theatre. He figured that they would come back again if they had had a good time in gazing at his screen.

And they will, and if you make people who have never before had a good time in your house look for more, you have a first mortgage on the first patron that it is up to you to foreclose.

WE have just mentioned the surprise basis, to which we will refer again. Now use this on those who fail to come at all, or who come at very great intervals. Write them a letter something on this order:

"I know a lot of motion pictures are tiresome. I know that when you see the average Western drama advertised you expect to see the cowboys riding over the plains, shooting up everything in sight, with the hero stringing into the barroom with his two guns in his hands and winning the gal that he wants or righting some 'terrible wrong.'"

"Harry Carey is the prince of the Western actors, but you won't find anything of the 'shooting stuff' in this picture. You'll find a few 'flashes back' into the West, but there's most of this played out in New York. I'd like to have you come and see this one. If you can tell ten minutes before the end how it is going to turn out we'll give you a pass for a year—provided, and provided—

"That you haven't laughed eighteen dollars worth for your ten cents admission."

And then across this to the letters going to the "regulars" we would use a rubber stamp, saying:

"Here's a copy of a letter that we have just sent the people of Sweetwater, who say they don't like motion pictures."

PROBABLY that is not surprise in the way that you have meant it at your theatre and in your exploitation. You have been content with the old stuff of asking the patrons:

"Suppose you had been roped into marriage for your money and had found an unscrupulous mother-in-law, etc."

In the first place, this is the worst form of exploitation. Most of it is distinctly offensive to the people to whom it is addressed. In the next instance it is the ordinary method. We would rather take the surprise method of daring them to come and refuse to laugh, except that directly stated it is too crude.

BUT the public has been told so often that "here is the funniest thing that ever happened" that such a statement will be passed up as the ordinary "brag." So tell them why.

And there is no reason why the heart appeal cannot be put over at the same time that the fun is being used as a magnet. There is one thing that you should carry into your advertising and that is the fact that you can talk about the punches, but it is mighty hard to explain the comedy events in the few lines that you ought to use in your newspaper space. Let's let the comedy come in either by inference or in a direct statement from the exhibitor himself. Here are a few selling talks that we would suggest:

"He wanted a housekeeper and he sure needed one. His cowboy friends decided that he needed a wife and they framed one up on him. But back in New York there was the innocent daughter of a scheming mother and the girl thought that it was a mighty good joke to write him. He came, and the scheming mother bought him, but she sought only his money. They laughed a million times at his expense, and you will laugh with them, but your face will break into a smile of perfect bliss when you see the way that Harry Carey 'ropes' mother-in-law and ties her to the rock of fashion while he takes his bride and baby back into the big West—and happiness."

And this one:

"Harry shore was a galoot from the plains. But he had three million plunks in the bank and the socially ambitious mother found it out. And so when he came to answer her daughter's kidding acceptance of his offer of marriage she accepted him for the coin. She kept him from his wife and from the baby that came and from the boys from the ranch that came bearing gifts to the son and heir. She and her 'lounge lizard friend' were clever for awhile, but one of them got a broken jaw and both of them went to the police station, while Harry took the cooing kid and the happy wife to his home in the West. You'll probably remember all those things after you've seen the picture and stopped laughing."

IN our opinion we have well passed the time when you should dismiss a really strong picture with a few lines and let it go at that. We have also well passed the time when we have been able to get away with the use of a lot of superlatives and adjectives. Therefore the selling talk is needed.

If you put on this picture "cold" you are going to get the average business, but you will have the advertising plus of pleased patrons.

So then why not start out your business by promising the people in so many words that they will be PLEASED with this offering? Instead of promising "tremendous" things, why not promise actual pleasure? That is why people seek the motion picture theatres.

Make a straight appeal to the emotions, but make the straightest appeal to the enjoyment angle. There are a lot of your patrons who have some pangs in the heart from the war. The "flu" hasn't left any too pleasant impressions around. We, and the rest of us, don't care to be reminded of it, but we like to get the bright side of the world before us again.

THEN there's the baby element. There's always something about a baby in a picture that gets close to you. We'd not make this too strong in the advertising except that we'd make it a point to use a picture of Carey with the kid in his arms in the advertising whether you use the ready made sort furnished by Universal exchanges or design your own. We've referred to the baby in both of the suggestions that we have given, but if you want to make it the more direct in your displays, and you want to shorten up the other appeals, use some of these:

"He was barred from his baby, and he idolized it. He didn't know what to do with it when it cried. But he knew how to find it again when his mother-in-law said that it was dead and he knew how to win back the mother with it."

"Six woolly cowboys, all in a row, hunting for a baby, how should they know? But father was a wiser rancher, tipped upon the dope and he got the kid back, while loungie got the 'rope.'"

"What does a cowboy know about a baby? If you can't answer that then what do seven cowboys know about a baby? But though they may know a lot at first they don't take long to get next, and you'll see here what a 'roped' husband of the daughter of a scheming Easterner found out and how he won."

"Say, friends, you've heard a lot about fighting for the freedom of the world recently, but you want to see how these cowboys fought for a baby. And there are twenty laughs for every yelp from the kid."

This 24-sheet will also prove valuable in providing large cut-outs of Carey for lobby displays

This is Not a "Western", So Forget That Angle

WE would strongly advise getting away from the usual Western idea in any lobby display that you make. It will get a wrong idea of the picture in the minds of most of your patrons and will be misleading. Harry Carey himself should be featured strongly, and it is good stuff to use cut outs of him as he appears in his big black hat.

You can make an effective display that will cause talk by having designed a huge reproduction of the marriage license from that obtains in your state and then have it filled in with the names of Carey and Aileen Judson-Brown. Surround this with a coil of rope as if a lasso has been thrown over the whole thing. For the remainder of your display use cut outs of Carey and if possible get a number of cut outs of a very young baby.

WE would advise you not to tell the full story of the picture in your newspaper stories, for one of the strong points of it comes from the unexpected turning that the story takes. We have already suggested some phrases for the advertising that give some idea of the picture, but we would not take away any of the enjoyment of the story by revealing the whole thing.

COMEDY SETTING

*You Don't Need It for Relief,
But It Will Please Them*

WHILE there is tense heart interest in "Roped," the comedy is the prevailing element. More than half of the time during the showing of this picture the audiences will be laughing, but there is no reason why they should not be given a full comedy evening.

We would suggest that you have your orchestra play selections from "Pretty Baby" as the overture and then use a Western scenic feature, preferably one that shows the mountains and gives the spirit of the wild grandeur of the open country.

If you use vocal or instrumental selections, we would suggest those with either the light comic opera element or the mother love interest. "Mother Machree" would be a good one for a single voice, and if you care to put on a tableau effect you can use the "Sandman" song, played by a couple of children with a girl singing the verses.

A Lyons-Moran comedy or a slapstick will go well as winding up the bill.

CAREY has appeared recently in a number of mighty strong pictures and you should couple that fact up in all of your exploitation. "Hell Bent," "Straight Shooting" and "Three Mounted Men" are some of the biggest things that he has done in the past year and we would certainly mention them.

It isn't often that we get a chance to commend a story in press sheets, but there is an unusually good one here about the way that Carey got into pictures. It gets away from the purely press agent bunk and you may be able to get your newspaper to use it as a feature story on the motion picture page. Illustrate this with one of the pictures showing Carey with the baby in his arms and the appeal will be all the greater.

Neva Gerber undoubtedly has a considerable following in your section and we would play up her name only secondary to the star. There is a stock cut of her available for your advertising as well as one of Carey. Miss Gerber has appeared with some of the biggest companies and especially well known is her long connection with American films.

Arthur Shirley has a prominent part in the story and one of the best characterizations that a recent picture has given is supplied by J. Farrell McDonald as the butler. Molly McConnell who plays the mother is also well known.

FOR LONGER RUN

Your Method of Handling This Picture Means a Lot to You

HARRY CAREY is a popular actor and "Roped" is a good title, but if you are content to rely simply on those facts you are not going to get the business out of this picture that you should. If you have been running Harry Carey pictures for two days, you have a chance to put this one on for six, PROVIDED you put over the exploitation.

Elsewhere in these pages we have suggested plans for advertising, lobby displays and the like. To supplement this there is an attractive assortment of paper including two 1-sheets, two 3-sheets, a 6-sheet and a 24-sheet, some of which is illustrated on this page. Much of it is suitable for cut-outs.

For the lobby there is a set of 8x10 stills and another 11x14.

For newspaper use there are one, two and three column advertising cuts and mats and the same sizes in scene pictures, while there are single column cuts of the star and of the leading woman, Neva Gerber.

Slides are also available at all Universal exchanges.

In and Out of West Coast Studios

At the Ince Plant

Thomas H. Ince and his staff of moving picture makers are this week installed in their new home at Culver City, and three companies have already begun production at the new studios. The new plant has attracted much attention since it was completed. The administration building is of large colonial type, built after the style of the venerable residence of George Washington at Mt. Vernon. It has an expansive front yard, dotted with a variety of fruit trees and many flowers and much foliage. In the rear of the administration building stretch the spacious studios and stages, claimed to be the most thoroughly equipped motion picture plant in the world. It is said that the two stages are the largest in existence. The Ince property extends back to the Baldwin hills, and on this wide stretch of land will be constructed exteriors.

Dorothy Dalton's first picture to be taken on the stages at the new Ince studios will be a comedy drama in which she is given the character of a traveling saleswoman. The picture will be directed by Otto Hoffman. Victor Schertzinger, who has been directing Miss Dalton, has been ill with influenza. It is expected, however, that when this picture is completed he will direct Miss Dalton's next photoplay. Miss Dalton is supported by Donald MacLean, Edwin Stevens and a strong cast. The story was written by John Lynch.

Enid Bennett's new play called "Nemesis" was written by John Lynch, and is being directed by Fred Niblo. Miss Bennett appears in the play as a sculptress in love with a painter who lives next door. A wealthy patron of their arts becomes the villain. Miss Bennett is supported by Niles Welch.

Universal Newsettes

Rupert Julian has started work on a six-reel superproduction for Universal titled "The Fire Flingers." The story was taken from William J. Neidig's Saturday Evening Post story. Julian will play the feature role. He has a fine supporting cast including Fay Tincher, Margaret Green, Charles Hill Mailes, Will Jeffries and Clyde Fillmore.

"The Outcast of Poker Flat" company left Universal City last week for a trip to Truckee, Cal., to film some snow scenes. The party was headed by Director Jack Ford, and others who went along were Harry Carey, Gloria Hope and Jo Harris. It is a Bret Harte story, and every effort is being put forth by the Universal director

AGAIN IN ACTION Holidays Leave Studios Full of Pep and Production Moves Forward

WITH the holidays on the shelf for another year, production at the various studios this week was once more in full swing. Two new productions were begun at the Fox studios, with Tom Mix and Madaline Traverse as the stars. In the meantime Katherine and Jane Lee finished their newest picture, "Smiles."

Bryant Washburn has started a new picture at the Lasky studios called "The Poor Boob," while Wallace Reid is moving swiftly in the production of his automobile subject, which has not as yet been titled. Cecil B. DeMille is about ready to begin work on Edgar Selwyn's story that was written for the stage, but which has been adapted to the screen.

Earl Williams is beginning a new picture at the Vitagraph plant, having finished "The Highest Ace," an aviation picture. Three Ince companies are now busy at work at the new Ince studios at Culver City. They are the Charles Ray, Enid Bennett and Dorothy Dalton companies.

James J. Corbett has arrived at the Universal studios and has started work on an eighteen-part serial written by James Horne. Production on Priscilla Dean's latest film-play, "Raggedy Ann," was begun, and Rupert Julian continues production on "The Fire Flingers." Director Jack Ford and a company of players have gone to Truckee, Cal., to film some snow scenes in "The Outcast of Poker Flat."

Production activities continue unabated at the Goldwyn studios, where Mabel Normand, Tom Moore, Madge Kennedy and Mae Marsh are at work, while Rex Beach's new story, "The Brand," is being rapidly made ready for the screen.

to make the film as nearly perfect, or as nearly to Bret Harte's interpretation, as possible.

"Raggedy Ann" is the title of Priscilla Dean's new Universal story, which was written by Charles W. Tyler. The scenario was prepared by Harvey Gates. Ted Browning is the director.

J. P. McGowan has begun production on the third episode of the new Marie Walcamp serial, "The Red Glove." The play was adapted from "The Fifth Ace," a novel written by Douglas Grant. Yvette Mitchell, ingenue, who has played in a number of Universal pictures, has an important part

Fox Studio Doings

Two new companies began work recently at the Fox studios, making five in all shooting at the present time. Madlaine Traverse began a new production to be called "Madame Rouge," with Harry Millarde as her director. Tom Mix is starting on a new vehicle of the Western type, called "The Highgraders." Edward Le Saint continues as his director. His leading woman will be Teddy Sampson. The leading man for Miss Traverse is Herbert Hayes. Teddy Sampson is a New York girl. She began her stage career in vaudeville, then went into comic opera, and has been in pictures several years. Other members of the cast are Sid Jordon, Jack Nelson, Harry Lounsedale, Robert Dunbar, Hattie Buskirk and Hattie Clark. The cameraman is Friend F. Baker. The story was written by William Macleod Raine. The final scenes of Jane and Katherine Lee's new picture, "Smiles," were shot this week. Arvid Gillstrom was the director.

Jane and Katherine Lee, the Fox kiddies, seem to be very popular with the "boys over there." They receive a large number of letters from across the seas every week. The missive that came to hand this week and which impressed them most was from F. M. Ford, 29th Motion Picture Company. Ford wrote: "I received a letter from you about the middle of October, as we were right in the middle of the big attack. I read it with my gas mask on."

Winfield Sheehan, general manager for the Fox Film Corporation, who was taken ill at the Los Angeles Athletic Club, was able to get out in the Southern California sunshine for a few hours last week. He expects to be able to return to his office at the studios this week. He has not announced just when he will return to New York. While he was confined to his bed two of Tom Mix's latest pictures were thrown on a screen for him from a special fitted projection room.

About Metro Players

After much preparation Metro began work of filming "The Way of the Strong," a program production, in which Anna Q. Nilsson will be featured with a strong cast. The story was taken from the novel by Ridgwell Cullum, and the scenario was prepared by Finis Fox. Among those who will appear in the cast with Miss Nilsson will be Joe King, leading man; Harry S. Northrup, as the heavy, and little Irene Yeager, who will play the part of a five-year old boy. The picture will be directed by Edwin Carewe. Miss Nilsson will be called upon to play a dual role, that of a sister and half-sister. "The Way of the Strong" is a story that has for its locale a beginning on the Yukon, in the Northwest, in which the scenes later shift down the coast to Seattle. The company left Wednesday for Truckee, Cal., to film some snow scenes.

"Diana Ardway," Viola Dana's latest screen effort for Metro will be finished at the Metro studios this week. Plans for her next picture have not been announced.

May Allison, who has started work on her newest vehicle for Metro called "The Island of Intrigue," left this week with her company for a two week's stay at Catalina and Santa Cruz Islands, where the desert isle scenes in the play will be filmed. The photoplay is being produced under the direction of Henry Otto. The company chartered the private yacht Pehr of Colonel Cornell of Avalon, Catalina Island, and the party will cruise around Catalina Island several days before going to Santa Cruz Island.

Bert Lytell's new picture for Metro, "Blind Man's Eyes," is about half completed. A number of scenes were filmed this week in a Pullman car at the studio, and the company will next week flash some exterior views from a moving train at some point in Southern California. The production is being made under the direction of John Ince.

Alec B. Francis, who has been appearing in prominent parts in Goldwyn pictures for about a year, produced in the East, has arrived in Los Angeles. He will continue to take prominent parts in Goldwyn productions, it is announced.

Mrs. Alfred Reeves, wife of Alfred Reeves, manager of the Charlie Chaplin studios, has arrived in Los Angeles from New York, after an uneventful voyage across from England. She came across on the steamer Adriatic, and she announced that very few civilians were on the sailing list. Besides her husband, she was met at the station by Mr. and Mrs. Syd Chaplin. Mrs. Reeves was known to vaudeville patrons as Amy Minister, the soubrette in the act, "A Night in an English Music Hall," produced by Alf Reeves, in which Charlie Chaplin first came into prominent notice in the United States.

Many Costume Changes

makes seventeen complete changes of costume. The picture is a five-reel production requiring one hour and fifteen minutes to pass through the picture machine. Now if you will get out your paper and pencil and do a little figuring, you will discover that Miss Love changes her dress every four and a half minutes. Emulation of such a display of "pep" by slow dressers would call forth the thanks of all men who like to get to the theatre on time.

If the first Jimmie Aubrey comedy is one-half as funny on the screen as the situations appeared to observers at Vitagraph's West Coast studio as Director Howe puts the scenario comedian through his fantastic scenes, it will prove a laughter-luring offering long to be remembered by picture patrons and the men who count up the receipts in the theaters. Many of the situations in the new comedy require expensive sets and mechanical aids that have taxed the ingenuity of Vitagraph's technical staff. The comedy, it is promised, will be a revelation in this respect.

Pauline Frederick, one of the Goldwyn stars, arrived in Los Angeles the latter part of last week, and will almost immediately begin production on a new picture under the direction of Hobart Henley. It will be her second subject for the Goldwyn company. Mr. Henley arrived Tuesday, and he began preparations immediately for filming the new Frederick production. The nature of the play, except that it will be a strong dramatic subject, has not been announced.

Mabel Normand, who is back at work at the Goldwyn studios after a siege of influenza, will complete production of "Sis Hopkins" at a very early date, it is announced.

Optimistic Note: The Fox Studio Flu Club added a new member this week in the person of Henry Lehrmann. The other members are Winny Sheehan, Dave Morrissey, Ed LeSaint, Scotty Dunlap, Tom Mix, Gladys Brockwell, Friend Baker, and about everybody whose name appears on the payroll.

Henry Lehrman, while ill with the flu, conceived the idea of boosting Los Angeles and organizing a club known as the L. A. B., "B" being for boosters. Hereafter every member will say "L. A." instead of "Hello" or "hurrah" or "What the —," and therefore our neighboring city is to be advertised by the word of mouth, probably widely, owing to the mouth.

The warriors are coming home. Lieutenant Carl Robinson has come back to our midst. B. J. Ed Durling is again in his office at the Alexandria each evening. Pat Dowling has permitted Uncle Sam's name to drop a notch or two in quality, and Sam Comly has allowed the artillery to go to the dogs. The aviation branch of the service will shortly be represented by that daring young eagle, Ken. O'Hara, who is giving his home town in Brooklyn the O. O. before returning to his favorite haunts in the Western filmdom.

Our town is over-run with filmagnates, exhibitors from other than the tank towns, and hiel brow stuff concerning our industry is being purveyed every two meet. In fact, our town never saw the like before. "They Fred Fishback made the claim say" and "I just heard," are favorite expressions, and all the rumors that formerly fitted between Forty-second street and 1600 Broadway have been brought out and turned loose among the flu germs of Los Angeles. Old Lady Rumor is working overtime, and is threatened with a nervous collapse.

When such film magnates as compose the First National, and A. Zukor, J. Brandt, S. Goldfish, Goldwyn, Walt. Rothacker, Harry Warner, Hi. Abrams and Ben Schulberg choose to meet in our town, or even come here at the same time, due notice should be given through the public press in advance that one of our almost daily peanut or prune parades could be staged in fitting manner, but now that they are here, they'll find our citizens ready to put on the gala attire and bid them hearty welcome. The western spirit cannot be downed, for as to hospitality it is more than Southern.

Notes of the trip:
H. Blank, of Des Moines, found a wonderful site for a theatre on the main street of Lammy Junction, New Mexico, after spending twenty-four hours there.

Harry Schwalbe came on in front of the gang to pave the way for a good meeting.

As pinochle players, Nate Asher, Bob Leiber, A. Jones and Walt Hays won all the medals en route, J. H. Junskey being umpire, while Wat Rothacker and Dave Howells scratched the surface of the industry by building a half dozen new laboratories and promoting an even dozen new fillum companies.

E. Hulse, of Dallas; Claude Jensen, Seattle; Fred Dahnken, Frisco, and J. D. Williams are among the guests of our city, and Tom Tally, as host, is busier than that old hen with one chick.

J. D. Williams gave a Navajo blanket party at Albuquerque. Walt Hays would have staged a pow wow en route, using regular Indians, had it not been that the Indians refused to work, it being the Sabbath. He therefore discovered some light houses in the mountains that served as beacon lights for straying cowboys.

Carl Laemmle Answers Critic

"Large Sum of Money Does Not Insure Good Stories"—Cites "Birth of Nation" and "The Heart of Humanity" as Examples

A PROMINENT New York editor recently criticized the picture producers for buying mediocre stories and refusing to pay good authors a good price for their wares. Carl Laemmle, president of Universal Film, in answer to the critic's statement that "if producers would pay enough for stories they would be able to get the best writers to give them more manuscripts," said: "Most assuredly you know whereof you write, but the big point of it is that mere spending of large sums of money does not necessarily insure good stories.

"Universal is scouring the world for good stories all of the time. We have asked the very best authors to write especially for the screen. We have indicated our complete willingness to pay the price; but the results have not always been good.

"Our greatest trouble lies not in being asked too much money by good authors for good stories, but rather in being asked too much money for mediocre stories. The mere fact that we might tack a big author's name to a mediocre story does not interest us at all. You as an experienced critic would be first to tear to pieces some of the stories that have been submitted to us at high prices just because they bore the name of a famous writer. For a long time we have attempted to concentrate, first, on the story. We have not cared where the story came from, whether from known or unknown writers. In fact, some of the best have come from writers we never heard of. We held fast to the policy that 'the play's the thing,' and we were laughed at for our pains.

"In theory I agree heartily with you, but in practice here is what happens: Let one company produce a rattling good story without a star and let a second company produce a poor story with a big star, and ninety out of a hundred critics will dismiss the first one with clever contempt and dwell for half a column or so on the picture containing the star, overlooking the poor quality of the story and helping the star to twinkle.

"As far as price is concerned, I do not believe Mr. Griffith had to pay a fortune for 'The Birth of a Nation,' and I am sure we did not for 'The Heart of Humanity,' yet I believe these are two of the best, if not the two very best, stories that were ever put on the screen."

Warner Joins Hampton

H. B. Warner returns to the screen world as the result of a contract signed with Jesse D. Hampton and will appear in a series of "strong man" features directed by Mr. Hampton in the Brunton studios.

Through an arrangement with Robertson-Cole, the Exhibitors' Mutual exchanges throughout the country will distribute the Warner pictures.

Mr. Warner withdrew from the stage play in New York, "Sleeping Partners," and his first screen production under Mr. Hampton's management will be "The Man Who Turned White."

Hopper Directs Kerrigan

J. Warren Kerrigan, the Jesse D. Hampton star, is now directed by E. Mason Hopper. "Come Again Smith," to be released February 10, is described as a light comedy with a touch of melodramatic spice.

W. W. Hodkinson Corporation handle the picture through Pathe exchanges.

- ¶ Alfred S. Cory passed away Saturday, January eleventh, after a short illness. He was thirty-four years of age, and is survived by his wife, father and sister.
- ¶ Mr. Cory, who was Technical Editor of Motion Picture News, was one of the leading authorities in the optical and projection branches of motion pictures. His one object in life was to place before the readers of Motion Picture News all the authentic information obtainable for the advancement of the motion picture industry and the better education of those engaged in it.
- ¶ His articles, while highly technical, were couched in such simple language that his meaning was always clear. He had no use for those who tried to make a secret of their information, always claiming that any improvement in mechanics and science should have the widest publicity. A careful review of his writings will show that no new process was left unexplained, no inquiry left unanswered in an intelligent and understandable manner.
- ¶ To those who had the privilege of his personal acquaintance, his loss will be sincerely felt. He numbered among his friends most of the greatest scientists and leaders in the photographic and optical world today.
- ¶ It is with the sincerest regret and deep personal sorrow that Motion Picture News chronicles the sad news of the loss of so valued a worker and so esteemed a colleague.

Motor Generators for Parallel Arc Operation

CONSTANT POTENTIAL SYSTEM

EVERY projectionist should know not only how to operate a motion picture machine, but he should be thoroughly familiar with the details of each piece of apparatus and the function thereof, which comprises the equipment which intimately deals with the final result on the screen. It is a well-known fact that unless any piece of apparatus is properly installed and properly taken care of, the results intended by the designer and by the manufacturer will not be obtained. In other words, unless proper care is exercised in installing and caring for equipment, a new installation is purely a waste of money and it is very often these conditions which result in owners refusing to buy and projectionists refusing to recommend the consideration of installation of equipment which will give better results and at less operating costs.

When a new equipment is purchased there are several pointers that the man in charge of the installation will do well to observe. It will mean better service at once, and a longer life for the equipment and less repairing in the long run.

Care should be taken in unpacking to protect the various units from damage. The blocking between the generator and motor should not be removed until the set is finally mounted. The booth should be dry, clean, well ventilated, and of liberal dimensions, and all equipment should be located so as to facilitate inspection and cleaning and operating.

The foundation for the motor-generator set should receive careful attention. The bed-plate should preferably be elevated above the floor and to prevent vibration being transmitted to the supports of the floor or the walls the upper part of the base should be constructed of sound and vibration absorbing material (see Fig. 3). The top platform should be level.

If the motor-generator and accessories cannot be installed in the booth itself (which is highly desirable) they should be placed as near as possible to the booth.

The accompanying Fig. 1, furnished by the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company, presents an excellent guide for the schematic diagram of connections of their motor-generator equipment for motion picture service.

The method of wiring and connecting motor-generator sets depends upon the type of motor installed. Complete detailed directions are available in instruction books supplied with the equipment.

Fuses in the starting circuit should carry four or five times full load current. If fuses are used in the running circuit they should carry current in excess of current indicated on the name-plate. Circuit-breakers, when used in the running circuit, should be adjusted to open the circuit with provision for overload capacities.

The wiring for the circuit of each direct-current or alternating-current motor should be of such a capacity that the speed of the motor will not be appreciably affected by the line voltage drop at any load which the motor may be called upon to develop.

Although it is desirable for many reasons to have the motor-generator and accessories installed in or near the booth, in many instances, the motor-generator has been mounted in the basement of the theatre at a considerable distance from the booth. Under these circumstances a long run of cable is required to connect the generator to the circuits in the booth for the projecting machines. When only one machine is in operation this cable will conduct the current for one arc only, say 50 amperes. During the change-over period two arcs will be in operation at one time, and therefore this cable will be subjected to a double load, namely, 100 amperes. If the cable size is too small, an excessive drop in voltage will be produced when the second arc is started and operated. This drop in voltage will be indicated by a sudden decrease in illumination from the other arc, thereby producing a less brilliant picture on the screen. To keep this undesirable effect at a reasonable minimum it is necessary to use sufficiently large cable for the main circuit, which must conduct the current for both projection machines. The size of cable required depends upon the length and the current required by each arc. The following table No. 1 gives this data in concrete form.

The column headed "Length in feet of circuit which must carry current for both arc lights" represents the distance from the generator terminals to the generator switch, or to the point where the circuit, which must carry current for both lamps, branches or divides into separate circuits, one for each lamp. The distance must be measured along the route of the wiring or conduit.

The cable connecting each projecting machine to the main circuit need only be of sufficient capacity to conduct the current required by the arc, regardless of the voltage drop up to 20 volts in this cable because it is necessary to have about 25 volts drop between the main current and each arc. This necessary drop is usually obtained by a grid resistance known as a ballast resistor. Therefore, if the cable voltage drop for the lamp circuit is appreciable, a portion of the ballast resistor may be cut out of the circuit to compensate.

With these facts in mind and by perusal of Table 1, it is obvious that if the motor-generator must be mounted a great distance from the booth it will be less expensive in many instances to make the main circuit not over 30 feet long, and then branch into two independent circuits one for each projection machine. In every instance each ballast resistor should be mounted reasonably near its corresponding projection machine because it is necessary to run two cables or wires from the resistor to the machine.

If an alternating current is used for an emergency service all wiring and switches, which are used for carrying this current to each lamp, should be made of sufficient capacity to carry the alternating current, bearing in mind the fact that, in order to produce the same volume, or candle-power, of light, the alternating current (measured in amperes) must be approximately three times as great as the direct current ordinarily used.

Compensarcs in Multiple

Question—We are informed that we can take our two Compensarcs (both identical) and hook them up in multiple, thereby getting from them double the output of one singly. In other words, by wiring them in multiple, putting the switches on each, on say, the 40 Amp. mark—we will get from them 80 Amps.

Is this correct? If so, is it practical? Is this too much amperage to use for a throw of 95 ft. to give a good clear picture about 13 x 16 ft.

What effect would this increased heat have on the usual condensers? What size carbons would be best to use—all this—on A.C. 110V. 60 cycles.

Answer—In answer to your letter of January 1 relative to multiple operation of 110 volt, 60 cycle A.C. Compensarc, the operation is as follows:

In cases where more than 60 amperes of current is desirable in connection with your picture projection, two A.C. Compensarcs connected as shown in the attached sketch can be used to give entirely satisfactory service. Two standard A.C. Compensarcs connected in this manner can be used to give a maximum of 120 amperes at the lamp. Eight values of current ranging between 30 and 120 amperes inclusive can be secured by this connection.

DIAGRAM OF CONNECTIONS FOR USE OF TWO
 A. C. COMPENSARCS IN MULTIPLE

You will find, however, that it is quite difficult to control the A.C. Arc in your projection machine when you exceed 90 amperes, as the noise is quite excessive and the heat intense. The increased heat of the 90 ampere arc over that of your 60 ampere arc should not be great enough to crack your condensers unless the carbons are placed extremely close, and for this operation we would recommend a $\frac{1}{8}$ " lower carbon, and $\frac{3}{4}$ " upper carbon.

You should be able to obtain sufficient light for all practical purposes by using about 80 amperes.

C. D. Struble, manager of Yale Theatre Supply Co. in Kansas City, Mo.

New Simplex Distributor in Kansas City

IN the Yale Theatre Supply Company, second floor Scheidley Building, Kansas City, Mo., the Simplex Company, 317 East Thirty-fourth street, New York, N. Y., has added to its list of distributors a concern which is expected to greatly increase the present large sale of its machines in Kansas, Western Missouri, Northern Arkansas and Oklahoma.

The Yale Company has unusual facilities for the disposal of Simplex products in that territory, and is under the management of C. D. Struble, who is well known and recognized as one of the most capable men in the film circles of the Middle West. He has been engaged in the film and machine business in the Kansas City territory continuously since April, 1907. For three years, from 1908-1911, he was the manager of the Monarch Film Exchange in Oklahoma City; for two years, the branch manager of the General Film Company in Kansas City, and during the year of 1917, in charge of the Triangle Exchange, Kansas City.

The Yale Company will carry a large stock of Simplex projectors and parts for replacements, and has added a projection room for the convenience of film manufacturers in screening their pictures for the benefit of local exhibitors.

An extensive advertising and publicity campaign will be conducted by the Simplex office at New York in conjunction with the Yale Theatre Supply Company, and it is expected that the inauguration of a new and effective sales plan will be productive of unusual results in that territory.

"As Mr. Struble is personally known to nearly all of the exhibitors in his territory and has made a close study of local conditions," says E. M. Porter, general manager of the Simplex Company, "it is safe to predict that the Yale Theatre Supply Company will do a business of large proportions."

Pictures are judged by the results which depend as much upon the ability and experience of the DEVELOPER and PRINTER as it does upon the one who takes them.

EVANS' reputation, experience and responsibility are essential to best results for you.

Musical Equipment*American Society of Authors, Composers and Publishers*

Musical Editor,
"Motion Picture News,"
729 Seventh Avenue,
New York City.

Dear Sir:

Will you kindly send to me a list of music publishers whose music can be played in my theatre without my having to obtain a music license from the Society of Music Authors, Composers and Publishers?

An early reply will be greatly appreciated.

Respectfully yours,
CHAS. A. REITMEYER,
Mgr. Plaza theatre,
Freeport, L. I.

In reply to our correspondent's inquiry, and as there may be other exhibitors who are also seeking the same information, we herewith append a complete list in alphabetical form of those publishers who are not members of the American Society and whose music for that reason can be performed free of the tax now being collected by the American Society of Authors, Composers and Publishers.

Morris, 145 W. 45th St., New York City; McCarty & Fischer, 140 W. 45th St., New York City; McKinley Music Co., 145 W. 45th St., New York City; Al. Piantadosi, 1531 Broadway, New York City; Penn Music Co., 145 W. 45th St., New York City; J. K. Remick, 219 W. 46th St., New York City; Maurice Richmond, 145 W. 45th St., New York City; Will Rossiter, Chicago, Ill.; George Rosey, 24 E. 21st St., New York City; G. Schirmer, 3 E. 43d St., New York City; Ed Schuberth, 11 E. 22d St., New York City; Southern California Music Co., 332 S. Broadway, Los Angeles, Cal.; Harry Von Tilzer, 226 W. 46th St., New York City.

The American Society is a body of musicians, publishers and composers who claim the copyright privilege of restricting the public performance of their compositions, but to those who wish to publicly perform their copyrights they demand a tax or fee. To the motion picture industry this is based upon the seating capacity of the theatre.

To those exhibitors who believe that this tax is oppressive, and in order to keep free of legal action, it is essential that the selection of music performed in their theatres are restricted to the above mentioned catalogues, because these publishers are not members of the American Society of Authors, Composers and Publishers, and they further believe that when they receive payment for the copies of their music that the privilege of free public performance goes with it.

To those of our readers who are not paying the tax of the American Society, we would advise them that ignorance of the law is no protection or defense from breaking of same. It is, therefore, suggested that a manager or his musician have it clearly stated when purchasing music, even from these publishers, that the rights of public performance are not restricted and prohibited.

THE EDITORS.

Review of Latest Musical Compositions

1—The following hits from "Oh Look" the famous musical comedy success by Carroll and McCarthy are now published and obtainable from McCarthy and Fischer, Inc., 148 W. 45th St., New York City.

- 1—I'm Always Chasing Rainbows, Fox Trot.
- 2—Typical, Topical Tunes, Fox Trot.
- 3—A Kiss for Cinderella, Fox Trot.

2—"U. S. Field Artillery March"—J. P. Sousa. A fit companion to "Stars and Stripes Forever," the best Military March published in years. (Carl Fischer Edition.)

3—"The Volunteers March"—J. P. Sousa. The great "Ship Building" March Played at the New York Hippodrome with a Band of 300, directed by Lieut. J. P. Sousa. (Carl Fischer edition.)

4—"Furioso for 'Storm' Scenes," by Sol. P. Levy. A Furioso lasting for 5½ minutes without repeats. (Cinema Music Co., Columbia Theatre Bldg., New York City.)

5—"Spirit of America," by J. S. Zamecnik. A new patriotic patrol, written in true patrol style, played with great success by Sousa's Band and other leading organizations. Be sure and get this one. (Sam Fox Edition.)

6—"Dear Kiss Waltz," by Ager. A very melodious and popular Waltz and a most valuable addition to the library of any musician. (Leo Feist Edition.)

7—The following extracts from "Sinbad," the Winter Garden's latest extravaganza, are now ready for orchestra, and published by G. Schirmer.

- 1—Fox Trot introducing the Rag Lady of Bagdad and Bagdad.
- 2—Fox Trot, introducing Badalumbo and A Thousand and One Arabian Nights.
- 3—One Step, introducing I Hail from Cairo and Our Ancestors.
- 4—Selection.

Stern Makes a Special Offer

MUSICIANS' particular attention is drawn to the very special and interesting offer made by the well-known house of Jos. W. Stern & Co., through Belwin, Inc., 701 Seventh Ave., City.

Amongst the many listed will be found "Indianola," the song and fox-trot by S. R. Henry (composer of By Heck) and D. Onivas which is making a sweeping national hit. This number, together with "Gypsy Pep," is offered for 25c.

The music of the extraordinarily successful play "Chu, Chin Chow" is also listed in this special offer. The selection consists of all the song hits of the play. They are beautifully arranged so that any one number can be separately played or the selection performed as a whole.

A jury of noted musical authorities has pronounced a sentence of life-long success on "Kentucky Dream" Waltz by S. R. Henry and D. Onivas.

These numbers together with the rest mentioned would be very welcome additions to the library of motion picture pianists and musical directors.

The editor of these columns is informed by Messrs. Stern & Co. that this offer is only for a limited time.

Berlin Resigns from Waterson, Berlin & Snyder

IRVING BERLIN, the popular and famous composer of production and musical song numbers, severed his connections with the music publishing firm of Waterson, Berlin & Snyder, after being associated with them for nearly twelve years.

Mr. Berlin's first well-known hit was "Alexander's Ragtime Band," and to him is attributed such popular hits as "Yacki, Hula, Hicka, Dula," "When I Lost You," "My Bird of Paradise." Among his later numbers are "Good-bye, France," "Tell that to the Marines," "I Can Always Find a Little Sunshine in the Y. M. C. A." etc.

During the war Mr. Berlin enlisted in the army, and while in camp wrote the dialog, lyrics and music of "Yip, Yip, Yaphank," the biggest musical comedy hit of Broadway this season. Among the several song hits, one that took the country by storm is "Oh, How I Hate to Get Up in the Morning." "Mandy," "Send a Lot of Jazz Bands Over There," "Ragtime Razor Brigade," "Ding Dong" and "Dream on Little Soldier Boy" are among the rest of the excellent numbers in the show.

Mr. Berlin will devote his time to free lancing, and it is rumored that for the present he will arrange to place his production numbers with T. B. Harms & Co., New York City.

Germ Traps Worse Than Fire Traps

The "Flu" epidemic—still prevalent in some sections—has emphasized the necessity of a high standard of sanitation in picture houses. The public demand, reflected in the cash receipts, is for conditions that safeguard health.

Germs lurk in leather seat cushions. Fabrikoid cushions are absolutely sanitary and thoroughly cleanable. They do not absorb and hold perspiration, grease, dust and other germ breeding foreign matter. You can have sanitary efficiency at a great saving over leather. Let us tell you where to buy Fabrikoid theater seats.

Pictures Reviewed in Advance

[In addition to Advance Reviews—covering pictures shown too early to be included in The Complete Plan Book—readers will also find under this heading each week the reviews of short features and serial episodes.]

"Bringing the Boys Home"

(Educational Films Corp. Released Jan. 31—2 Reels)

THIS picture has been produced by the Motion Picture Department of the Y. M. C. A. National War Work Council, with the purpose of showing what that organization is doing for the shipworkers in the yards, and how it is turning some derelicts into useful men. These activities of theirs are interwoven with many scenes of the Hog Island Ship Yards, such as the mile and a half shipways with some fifty-odd ships under construction, that are to bring the boys home from overseas; the police and fire protection; the housing and caring of the workers and their families, and many incidents of their daily lives.

The scenes are so placed as to form a simple narrative; the heroine of the story is Miss Mineta Timayo, a member of the Women's Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A. The different incidents appear as she saw them in a personal visit to the yards. It is an interesting and instructive picture. Those of you who may contract to run it will receive the full support of your local Y. M. C. A. —P. S. Harrison.

"Photoplay Magazine Screen Supplement"

(Educational Films Corporation. Jan. 15.—One Reel)

THIS picture has been produced by James R. Quirk, publisher of the Photoplay Magazine, and deals exclusively with stars and their activities at the studios. It is the purpose of Mr. Quirk to produce one a month to be released through the Educational Films Corporation the 15th of each month. This number contains incidents of the American Studios in Santa Barbara, California, showing Mary Miles Minter and her former director, James Kirkwood; the Drews at work in their Long Island home; the million dollar smile of Douglas Fairbanks; Montagu Love and some other screen celebrities. At the tail end of the reel a cartoon is attached.

"The Law of Nature"

(Fischer Productions—Screen time, 2 hours)

THE great trouble with this offering is its lack of unity of thought. The reading matter at the start makes the spectator believe that it is a picture based on an anti-drink theme; considerable part of the first reel is allegorical, tending to strengthen such theory; but shortly after the main story is introduced, it wanders away from the main idea and becomes a vice subject; after a while, it picks up the threads of an interrupted love affair, introduced at the beginning, resulting in the marriage of the hero to the heroine; immediately after the wedding, again it switches into a bona-fide melodrama, with its murders and deaths and "flames" and joy-rides, and all that go with pictures of such type.

As the picture now stands, it is more a vice melodrama than an anti-liquor. In fact, it is a combination of several stories, hardly any one of them predominating, least of all the crusade against drink; and whatever scenes have been interposed to drive home the results of the drink evil to the spectator, they are forced and appear to have been put there arbitrarily.

Had the author stuck to the idea first conceived, perhaps he would have produced a picture suitable for propaganda against drink; it would have undoubtedly been suitable for private showings in halls, with the co-operation of the different temperance societies; as it now stands, it is hardly fit for either such purpose, or to be shown in theatres catering to steady patronage.—P. S. Harrison.

"Wanted—$5,000"

(Rolin-Pathe—One Reel)

HAROLD LLOYD again. This time in a version of the old accident policy comedy in which the young enthusiast tries to inflict bodily harm on himself that he may collect the premium and marry the girl. The plot is familiar in all its windings and, while it fails to measure up to the best of Lloyd's work, rest assured that it is not devoid of laughs.

"THE DIVORCEE"—METRO

Ethel Barrymore in a Brilliant Screen Achievement

WE never really enjoyed Ethel Barrymore on the screen before her appearance in "The Divorcee." She seemed to be mis-cast and her beautiful voice was missed. Here, however, she appears to splendid advantage in an adaptation of Somerset Maugham's play, "Lady Frederick," and in a part to which she brings all exacted requirements.

"The Divorcee" is a picture that deals with the lives of people high in English society, and it mirrors these lives faithfully. We hesitate to think of the burlesque which many producers would have made of it. But Herbert Blache's direction, Miss Barrymore's performance and those contributed by H. E. Herbert, E. J. Ratcliffe, Naomi Childers, Joseph Kilgour, Maud Turner Gordon and Eugene Strong have made it the polite, high comedy-drama that it is.

Here, indeed, is a picture that is brilliant. It will bear exhibition before an audience of the highest intelligence and will be appreciated by all. The subtitles are delightfully witty, Miss Barrymore is superb and the plot is so clever in conception and development that each succeeding scene lays further stress on the picture's merit.—Length, 5 reels.—Released Jan. 20.—Peter Milne.

THE CAST

Lady Frederick Berolles.....Ethel Barrymore
Lord Frederick Berolles.....E. J. Ratcliffe
Sir Paradine Fuldes.....H. E. Herbert
Kitty Beresford.....Naomi Childers
Horace Beresford.....John Goldsworthy

CATCH LINES

A high drama of English society—one in which Ethel Barrymore, surrounded by a splendid cast, appears to exquisite advantage. If you like wit and subtlety and real acting all set in a play that is downright clever from beginning to end then you'll like "The Divorcee."

She sacrificed her reputation to save her sister's and ever afterwards, it seemed, she was to have this act thrown in her face by people who did not understand. "The Divorcee" is a story of a noble and clever woman to whom happiness only came after many trials.

Here indeed is the real Ethel Barrymore—the delightful actress of the speaking stage equally as delightful in the silent drama—and the play, one of Somerset Maugham's, provides a setting as delightful as the star.

AD TALK

"The Divorcee," a Metro picture starring Ethel Barrymore, will be the piece de resistance of the theatre's bill on _____ of _____ week. This is by all odds one of the most brilliant and clever society dramas that the management has ever offered. Taken from W. Somerset Maugham's play, "Lady Frederick," it deals with this lady's cleverness in solving the love affair of a man much younger than she, the affair happening to be his love for her. This constitutes the body of the action, although there are many other situations of a force and subtlety that everyone will appreciate.

"The Divorcee" is one of those high society dramas that once were in great vogue on the stage. They deal with clever people, people who use brains in act and speech and are, consequently, the most fascinating form of dramatic fare. Under the skillful direction of Herbert Blache the Maugham play was converted into a picture that matches itself creditably beside the original.

As for Miss Barrymore, it may safely be said that never before has she appeared to such exquisite advantage on the stage. The part of Lady Frederick she carries with all the ease and grace with which her career on the stage has equipped her. In support appear E. J. Ratcliffe, H. E. Herbert, Naomi Childers, Joseph Kilgour, Eugene Strong and John Goldsworthy, all players of exceptional ability and well suited to carry the important roles of the Maugham play.

Lady Frederick Berolles, the former Betsy O'Hara, married Lord Berolles to help her impoverished family. Lord Berolles turns out to be a brute and on one occasion publicly insults her when Sir Paradine Fuldes, Lady Frederick's one-time suitor, is seen in company with her. That same night Lady Frederick receives word from her sister, Kitty Beresford, that she has been obliged to visit the rooms of Robert Montgomery, possessor of secrets of Kitty's indiscreet past that she does not wish to reach her husband, Horace Beresford. Lady Frederick goes to the rescue, and as luck would have it, Horace also calls. There is a tell-tale scarf lying on a chair that he recognizes as his wife's. But Lady Frederick appears and claims it as hers. Thus does she sacrifice her own reputation for her sister's. A divorce soon follows.

A number of years later Lady Frederick is at Monte Carlo in rather reduced circumstances but still making the best of it. The young Lord Mereston is seen much with her and finally his mother sends for her brother, none other than Sir Paradine, to settle matters. So, to Monte Carlo comes Lady Frederick's old suitor, to learn the truth of the situation. He soon discovers that Lady Frederick does not love the young lord and he also discovers that he himself is again in love with her. Lady Mereston insults Lady Frederick and she is about to produce letters to show what sort of a fellow her "sainted" husband was when Lord Mereston declares his high regard and admiration for his late father. Again Lady Frederick sacrifices herself and soon after disillusion Lord Mereston by permitting him to watch her "make up." Lord Mereston straightway realizes the difference in ages and though his infatuation for Lady Frederick takes flight his admiration for her increases. But Lady Frederick becomes his aunt, for Sir Paradine finds he can't live alone any longer.

SUGGESTIONS

Here is a picture that gives you a wonderful chance to appeal to the better class of picture-goers. You have a well-known play, "Lady Frederick," on which the picture is based, by a well-known author and featuring one of the renowned stars of the stage today. Use dignified phrasing in your advertising. State facts and let it go at that. You can safely call the picture brilliant and witty and clever, but, personally, we wouldn't go into any further description for audiences of the better class. Just state the facts, the star, the author and the play and mention some of the support, as the cast embraces a number of well-known names.

If you have played previous pictures featuring Miss Barrymore do not hesitate about calling this her best. It is head and shoulders above anything else she has done. The part fits her and the play fits her. Metro has also given you a good title, believing that its advertising possibilities are greater than those contained in the original title. This is correct, but while you cater to the better class patrons be sure to carry a sub-line in all advertising calling attention to the original title along with the name of the author.

"THE LIGHT"—FOX

Star Has Best Story in a Good While; of Vampire Type

THE story of this picture is much better than any furnished the star for sometime. It is interesting and, though of the vampire sort, is clean.

Although some parts of it are improbable, and some of the situations awkward, still Theda Bara fans should be pleased with it, as the story appeals to the emotions. It wins sympathy because the heroine is shown as trying to do good—serve her country.

The role given the heroine is that of a notorious Parisian vampire, whose beauty and heartlessness has sent many a man to the grave; but she becomes tired of that life, her only wish being to become a Red Cross Nurse and thus serve France. Her past, however, is a bar to her ambitions! She is rejected each time she applies.

Toward the end of the story she redeems herself by nursing a blinded soldier, once a famous artist who had sought her for his model. The real light of love now shines in her heart and she marries the soldier.—Released Jan. 12.—Length, 5 reels.—P. S. Harrison.

THE CAST

Blanchette Dumonde.....Theda Bara
Chabin.....Eugene Ormonde
Etienne Desechette.....Robert Walker
Auchat.....George Renevant
Jeanette.....Florence Martin

By Arthur Reed and Bret Page.
Scenario by Adrian Johnson and Charles Kenyon.
Direction J. Gordon Edwards.

CATCH LINES

Theda Bara as the siren of Paris—a woman wicked amid a city that sacrifices its all in the cause of right—a woman regenerated through the medium of the World War—without doubt her greatest picture.

"The Light" came to Blanchette Dumonde, known as "the wickedest woman in Paris" through self-sacrifice and suffering in the time of the world's great hour of trial.

A role in which Theda Bara appears resplendent—known as the wickedest woman in Paris, a simple request from a strange man awakes within the breast of Blanchette Dumonde a desire to serve others and her country.

"The Light" is a production of illimitable candlepower. To see it is to see one of the season's brilliant offerings. And Theda Bara is the brightest ray in the entire production.

AD TALK

Theda Bara, the inimitable Fox star, will be seen at the theatre on _____ of _____ week in her latest super-production entitled "The Light." Her newest picture finds her as Blanchette Dumonde, known as the wickedest woman in all Paris, because she continues to play while all others concentrate their efforts in prosecuting the war to a successful finish. How the real soul in her is awakened and how she brings others to see the light as well as herself forms a photoplay of absorbing interest.

Nothing just like "The Light" has ever been done before on the screen. It is by no means a war story, but a story in which several persons find a regeneration through the medium of the great conflict. Miss Bara appears to splendid advantage as the woman of the world. It is a part which fits her peculiar style of playing admirably well and the transition she undergoes is brought out with sincerity on the part of the actress. Eugene Ormonde, Robert Walker, George Renevant and Florence Martin give of their best in the star's support.

"The Light" was written for Miss Bara by Arthur Reed and Bret Page, while J. Gordon Edwards, Miss Bara's director on all her recent pictures, was in charge of the production of this one also.

Blanchette Dumonde, who continues on a life of riotous gayety while all Paris bends its efforts to winning the war, is known as the wickedest woman in the city. As the consort of Chabin she is a familiar sight in all the cafes. One day

Etienne, a sculptor, who has long watched her from afar, asks her to pose for his Madonna. Something about her haunts him, he says. Chabin, in a rage, refuses in her behalf. But this appeal to Blanchette has awakened a latent virtue. She goes to a hospital and seeks to enlist as a nurse. But when the authorities learn her name she is ordered out of the place.

So Blanchette plunges again in a riot of self-pleasure. She throws over Chabin for Auchat, an Apache dancer. They flee from Chabin's wrath together and plan to live in a cottage a short way from the city. But at the railroad station Blanchette sees a trainload of returning soldiers and among them Etienne, now blinded. She deserts Auchat and takes charge of the man who first awakened within her a true feeling. When Etienne passes his hand over Blanchette's face he realizes her identity and asks her to pose for him again. This time she consents.

Auchat in a jealous rage comes to the cottage with the purpose of killing Etienne. Blanchette, defending Etienne, kills Auchat. Chabin also appears on purposes of revenge. He takes in the situation at a glance and then a change comes over him. The war and personal sacrifice that he sees all around him have their effect. He leaves Blanchette with the man she loves and goes out into the world, taking the blame for the murder of Auchat on his own shoulders.

SUGGESTIONS

Bring out in all advertising and publicity that this is a story in which a siren is regenerated through personal sacrifice in the great war. Any argument written on these lines, together with the fact that Theda Bara is the star of the production, should bring good returns. Whether or not the exhibitor is in the habit of using the ad cuts supplied by manufacturers it would be a good idea to secure the press book on this production. The illustrated advertising cuts are particularly good and even if you prefer to write your own copy, some valuable suggestions will be found in this book.

The title offers ample opportunity for a clever play on words and for appropriate advertising. The fact that the woman is brought "into the light" or "to see the light" through the events of the story gives a suggestion in itself.

"DAY DREAMS"—GOLDWYN

One of the REAL Artistic Offerings; Cast Excellent

AS an artistic piece of work, "Day Dreams" has few equals. Beautiful outdoor scenery, splendid interior settings, fine photography, good cast, excellent acting, consistent directing, and other features have been successfully interwoven in a light story; and as all these factors are combined with the charms of Miss Kennedy, they make a delightful picture.

The plot is a combination half fairy tale and half modern story. The heroine is introduced as a goose girl, possessing great imaginative powers. She thinks that a large male goose of her flock is a former Knight, and that some day he will come and seek her. A concrete engineer falls in love with her, but she will not have him because she is waiting for her Knight. He hires a young man to impersonate the Knight, so that, by disillusioning her later, to make her marry him. His plans miscarry, as, after the disillusionment, she marries the fictitious Knight.

Released Jan. 12.—Length, 4,560 feet.—P. S. Harrison.

CATCH LINES

Every girl has her day dreams. The one that Primrose gloried in most was the one that brought a handsome White Knight before her. He would lift her to his saddle and ride off to his castle in the hills, there to make her his Princess! And the dream of Primrose came true—a disgruntled suitor brought it about!

"Day Dreams" is a story of when dreams come true—it was written specially for Miss Kennedy by Cosmo Hamilton and it is a romance ideal from first to last. It's a modern story, but it has its White Knight and the maiden who tended the ducks and the geese—the girl who dreamed and dreamed.

A romance as thrilling as any ever told in the Arabian Nights—a romance laid in a modern setting, but possessing all the poetry of a story of olden days. Madge Kennedy in "Day Dreams" is a real treat.

"Day Dreams," a picture that is different, written specially for Miss Kennedy by Cosmo Hamilton, author of "The Blindness of Virtue" and other well known stories.

AD TALK

Madge Kennedy, the irresistible Goldwyn star, will be seen in her latest picture entitled "Day Dreams" at the _____ theatre on _____ week. This is an entirely new type of photoplay, quite apart from the farce comedies in which the star has generally been seen heretofore and provides her with the role of Primrose, a young girl who spends her time dreaming of a White Knight who will come some day and carry her off to his castle across the sea. How Primrose's dreams are realized forms the basis of the picture. There is a plot instituted by one Graham, who covets her, which takes shape when he employs an author, Dan O'Hara, to pose as the knight. It is his plan to encourage the love affair between the two and then shock the girl into a revulsion of feeling by introducing a dark and not at all appealing past into Dan O'Hara's career.

Romance deftly plied by Cupid prevents the culmination of this plot and all ends happily for the lovers. Graham discovers to his anger that he has only succeeded in finding Primrose a husband, other than himself. This unique story was written specially for Miss Kennedy by Cosmo Hamilton, the well known fiction writer. It is quite apart also from Mr. Hamilton's usual line of work. In fact it is something apart from the usual cut-and-dried type of photoplay and with Miss Kennedy's delightful presence its success is well assured.

THE STORY

Primrose tends the ducks and geese on her grandparents' farm, but her heart is never exactly in accord with this more or less prosaic existence. Primrose is a dreamer and her thoughts are always drifting afar conjuring unto her a white knight who some day will come and make her his princess and carry her back to his castle. Of course a matter-of-fact man such as George Graham couldn't be expected to have any sympathy with Primrose's idea, particularly as he is in love with her, but he sees the only way to win Primrose is to endeavor to make her dream come true.

In the village lives an author, also a dreamer, over whom Graham possesses a certain power because his brother once worked for him and embezzled certain funds. So Dan O'Hara, the dreamer of the town, is forced into playing a white knight with the alternative that his brother be cast in jail. Reluctantly at first Dan takes up this mission, but when he sees Primrose he instantly falls in love. To Primrose, his white robes and spirited charger are the realization of her dreams and she, too, falls in love with him.

Graham forces Dan to bring Primrose to his estate a little way off, an estate that he has converted into a veritable fairyland castle. It is his plan to foster the love of Primrose and Dan until such time as he shall see fit to introduce a bogus vampire, one who will claim relationship with Dan and so disillusion the girl for all time. But Primrose learns this plan accidentally. Her fairy castle comes near toppling down over her ears. But after all, hasn't Dan proved himself a white knight in reality? Such is Primrose's line of reasoning and Graham finds that he has lost the girl, for all his plot.

SUGGESTIONS

You have a star that is particularly popular with women in this picture, so be sure to see that all your regular patrons are circularized. "Day Dreams" is also a picture that will appeal specially to the women in your audience. Address your advertising firstly to them. In all copy bring out the romantic quality of the picture in catch-lines or arguments. This is the dominating note in the picture and one that should sell it.

Pay particular attention to your music with respect to this picture. Sentimental love songs should make up the musical program and include among these "Day Dreams." You might have a soloist sing this previous to the showing of the picture.

John Bowers is quite popular as a leading man, having appeared in World pictures for the last year, while he has played opposite Mary Pickford and other well known stars.

"THE SECRET GARDEN"—PARAMOUNT

Plenty of Action, But Not the Happy Type for Star

THIS picture is an improvement over "Such a Little Pirate," Lila Lee's last contribution, but it cannot yet be said that it hits the right spot. There is plenty of action in the plot, while the outdoor scenery is beautiful and the photography good; but all these merits can hardly make up for the lack of heart interest. Some of the main incidents of the story, on the other hand, will prove anything but entertaining to a great many picturegoers.

For instance, shortly after the opening, cholera is shown as having broken out; the father and the mother of the heroine die of the epidemic. Even the removing of a covered body is shown, apparently for realism. Of course the story calls for an orphaned heroine, but the means chosen to make her such are repelling, especially during these days.

Again, one of the important characters is a cripple. The spectator, of course, in the course of the story learns that he is not one, the character having been made to think so by his scheming uncle; but the effect on the audience is the same as if he were one. In books or in real life, such sufferers seldom fail to awaken sympathy; but in pictures they usually have a depressing effect.

Excepting at the close of the picture, there is hardly a happy situation shown—the uncle even tries to kill his nephew by putting deadly germs into the nephew's medicine; but whatever little happiness is shown there, it is hardly able to offset depression and bring cheer.—Released Jan. 12.—Length, 5 reels.

AD TALK

Lila Lee, Paramount's youngest star, will be seen again on the screen of the theatre on _____ of _____ week in her third photograph done for this company, entitled "The Secret Garden." This is an adaptation of a novel by that popular writer, Frances Hodgson Burnett, best remembered as the creator of "Little Lord Fauntleroy." With respect to "The Secret Garden" Mrs. Burnett has created one of her most lovable characters in the person of Mary Lenox, the orphaned little girl from India, who, in the English home of old Archibald Craven, manages to institute happiness and love where once reigned hate and intrigue. It is this role which Lila Lee portrays and it is probably the superior of her two previous picture characterizations.

This young star's ability was not to be lightly considered even before her advent into pictures. Many patrons still remember her as "Cuddles" of vaudeville fame. It was in the varieties that Jesse L. Lasky discovered her and immediately saw that she possessed that ready talent and mobility of expression that help to make stars of the screen. As a consequence her name soon decorated a Paramount contract and soon after followed "The Cruise of the Make-Believes" and "Such a Little Pirate." Now in "The Secret Garden," the new star seems fairly to cap her short but still-growing career with a performance as appealing as any could wish.

G. Butler Clonbaugh, long time a stage director, makes his bow as a picture director on "The Secret Garden." His work shows a mastery of technique that immediately places him with the best of his brother artists.

THE STORY

Mary Lenox, daughter of a British army officer in India, is left an orphan and friendless when a plague sweeps the country. She is sent to England to live with her appointed guardian, Archibald Craven, a crabbed old gentleman who has soured on the world since the death of his wife. His son, Colin, a weakling, is constantly made the weaker by Dr. Warren Craven, his uncle. The doctor insists that his nephew wear a heavy brace to straighten his back, when in reality it saps his vitality. The doctor's brutal actions are motivated by a desire to get rid of Colin that he may secure the Craven fortune. One night Mary hears Colin groaning and, going to his room, she removes the brace. He then sleeps quietly. She is severely reprimanded by the doctor and the housekeeper for her action.

Back of the Craven home lies a garden surrounded by a wall. It has remained locked to all since the death of Craven's wife. Martha, a maid and Mary's only friend, tells her this story. One day Mary braves the wrath of the entire Craven household and gives the gardener instructions to make the place beautiful again. In time, Colin grows to trust Mary and at her suggestion he casts off the brace and finds that he can walk perfectly well without it. The doctor sees that he is losing ground in his plot and decides to get rid of Colin quickly. He poisons his drinking water but is seen by both Mary and his intended victim. Mary, realizing the seriousness of the situation, goes across a vast bog for help. She is sucked into the mud but Colin arrives in time to save her.

Then Archibald Craven, who had been away, returns and learns the whole story. The doctor sees his game is up and beats a hasty retreat. Colin is now healthy and his father's faith in humanity is restored. Three years later Mary is the bride of Colin—a lieutenant in the British army.

CATCH LINES

Lila Lee, Paramount's youngest star, in her third picture for this company—in it she creates a charming character that you will long remember.

By Frances Hodgson Burnett, author of many fiction successes including "Little Lord Fauntleroy." In Mary Lenox, Mrs. Burnett has shaped a human, sweet and appealing character, one whose insistent optimism turns the tide in a home where intrigue and hate seemed to have the upper hand.

"The Secret Garden" is quite worthy to be termed the "Little Lord Fauntleroy" of the screen. By the same author, Frances Hodgson Burnett, it possesses all the grace of appeal and the wholesome sentiment of this popular work of fiction. Seeing is believing—so see.

SUGGESTIONS

It would seem that the best way to advertise Lila Lee is as the "youngest Paramount star" or "the youngest star playing romantic roles." These lines, with reference to her career as "Cuddles," should serve to stamp her as a distinct personality.

Story of Light, Pleasing Sort; Should Be Enjoyed by All

YOUR patrons ought to enjoy this picture in spite of the fact that, in places, it may tax their imagination heavily. It will do so particularly at the close of the picture, where a jealous rival has lured the heroine into his apartments, and, pointing a gun at her, threatens to shoot, unless she agrees to marry him. Brain fever is resorted to, causing the villain to collapse, thus avoiding a calamity.

The story is of the light, pleasing variety; it is a romantic drama; although the heroine is shown as playing with fire, nobody gets burned. It at no time goes far enough to cause any objections even by the most discriminating picture goer.

Miss Talmadge's charms are in evidence throughout; which, combined with her acting, help decidedly to pull over the weak story.

AD TALK

Constance Talmadge, who has been seen at the theatre in so many enjoyable light comedies of late returns on of week in a picture somewhat different in character and one which gives this charming young actress full opportunity to display that versatility which has caused her rapid rise to stardom during the past year. "Who Cares?" is the name of the picture and it is an adaptation of a novel which ran recently in the Green Book Magazine. Cosmo Hamilton is its author. Probably more than any other writer Mr. Hamilton fairly revels in portraying New York's high life, its general shallowness as compared with the virtue of a few of its inmates. In "Who Cares?" he has evolved a story of startling originality, of a daring quality and of a spirited treatment that sets the picture distinctly in a class by itself.

Miss Talmadge in the role of the young wife who adopts as her motto "Who Cares?" and who totally disregards her husband only to seek him when in trouble and find him driven into the arms of another woman through her neglect, creates a character that is real in every act. Harrison Ford again appears as the star's leading man and contributes a most effective performance, while the support is of a high order from first to last.

Julia Crawford Ivers prepared the scenes from the Hamilton novel while it was produced under the direction of Walter Edwards, a man equally at home in handling comedy or drama, as this latest of his efforts well exemplifies.

THE STORY

Joan Ludlow lives with her grandparents in the country and has rather a bad time of it, inasmuch as the old folks can't tolerate anyone young and happy about the place. She meets Martin Grey who comes to live next door and the two develop a lively interest in each other. When her grandparents discover this they forbid Joan to see any more of him. This is the last straw and Joan persuades Martin to take her to her friend's home in the city. But by a chance the friend is away and Joan finds herself obliged to trust in Martin. Martin takes up this trust by marrying the young lady, although Joan has not the slightest idea of the obligations of a wife.

Some time later we find that Joan has adopted as her slogan "Who Cares?" and she continues to live up to it with a vengeance. She enters into the social whirl and forgets all about Martin. Days often pass and she sees none of him. And Martin turns elsewhere for the attention he craves, finding it in the person of Toodles, a chorus girl. So Joan falls an easy victim to the by no means wholesome attention of Gilbert Palgrave, who happens to be the husband of her best friend.

When Joan's grandmother asks her to return for a visit she readily accepts. In the evening she decides to look at Martin's house and is thoroughly shocked when she discovers him in Toodles' arms. So back she goes to the city and, heartbroken, decides to play the game to the limit. It is Martin himself who comes to her rescue when Palgrave is threatening her with a revolver because she resents his advances. This near-catastrophe brings husband and wife together again and all ends happily.

CATCH LINES

Joan adopted as her motto "Who Cares?" and plunged into the social world without regard or thought for her husband. Then when, in her hour of need, she went to him and found him with Toodles, a chorus girl, the full enormity of her neglect dawned upon her. But what was she to do? The answer forms the startling climax to "Who Cares?" now on view at the theatre.

Constance Talmadge, the charming young star of "A Lady's Name," "A Pair of Silk Stockings" and other Select comedies plays a totally different type of role in this adaptation of Cosmo Hamilton's latest novel.

She lived according to the slogan "Who Cares?"—but she found that her actions boomeranged back at her and she, after all, was the first to care. But when she cared she found that her husband did not.

Joan thought that she could bully her way through life, but found to her sorrow that life was a bigger bully than she. "Who Cares?" is a spirited drama of New York society life written by the ever-skillful Cosmo Hamilton.

SUGGESTIONS

Play up the name of the star as big as you can, for her past Select productions have certainly skyrocketed her to stardom. Mention some of her latter work that you have shown at your house and then draw a comparison between them and the present picture. Her former pictures have been wholly comedy—this is a drama of New York society life. Bring this out as extravagantly as possible in all advertising.

German Atrocities Again, with a Good Romantic Interest

IF anyone is in doubt as to the various reasons why Germany must pay such doubt must vanish after a thorough look at this picture. Once again are rape and pillage paraded forth on the screen, once again is Edith Cavell the center of an episode (this time quite a different series of events causes her death than in "The Great Victory") and once again is there a hero who well avenges the wrongs done to his own family.

This time the hero is an Alsatian, forced into the German army. His heart is with France, however, and his escape to America, his romance with Congressman Gordon's daughter and his second entrance into the conflict as an American soldier form a series of interesting events.

If the exhibitor finds his public still eager for the war picture then "Why Germany Must Pay," well made and bold in every way as it is, should fill the bill.

AD TALK

A striking arraignment of autocratic Germany is given in the Screen Classics production, "Why Germany Must Pay," which will be shown at the _____ theatre on _____ of _____ week. To drive home and make effective their argument the producers have told the story of the Le Bretts, a peaceful family of Alsace-Lorraine on whom the Prussian hand falls heavily. Conrad, forced into the German army, returns after witnessing a year of horror, determined to take his father and sister into neutral country and from there flee to America where he has friends. The spectacle that greets him on his return, however, puts such a plan to rout. His father has been murdered and his sister lies dying, ravaged by a German officer.

Eventually Conrad reaches the United States where he works in the Secret Service and is of great value to the government. When the war starts he is enabled to enter the army through political friends and to his satisfaction he has the opportunity of meeting the self-same German officer who caused his sister's death, on the battlefield. The war done, he returns to America and to the girl he loves.

Creighton Hale, Helen Ferguson, Florence Billings, Frank Currier, Margaret McWade and Earl Schenck are the principal players in this dramatic narrative of the war. Patriotism must not end with the war and it is the duty of all true patriots to see "Why Germany Must Pay."

THE STORY

Conrad Le Brett, an Alsatian, returns from his period of enforced service in the German army, bitter against the military power that has torn his native state from France. He is enthusiastically greeted by Vilma, his sister, and his father. They, too, loathe the yoke of Prussianism to which Alsace-Lorraine is subjected. Conrad gaily casts his uniform aside, but his joy is short-lived, for soon after comes the great war and the young Alsatian is summoned to his German regiment.

A year of fighting, of witnessing the brutality of his masters and his companions in arms has turned Conrad completely against Germany. If ever he entertained the slightest regard for the nation it vanishes when he sees his officers herd young women together and paw over them as if they were cattle, when he sees churches desecrated and babies torn from their mother's arms and murdered. Once he attempts to protect a woman with a child in her arms. She can not understand it when she looks at the uniform he wears and cowers away from him. Her young son sees this through the window and shoots, severely wounding him.

He is taken to a hospital on Belgium soil where Edith Cavell is in charge and where friend and foe are treated alike. Conrad meets Amy Gordon, an American nurse, and the two fall in love. She tells him if he but can escape to the United States, her father, Congressman Gordon, will help him. This Conrad determines to do. When he leaves the hospital he is sent home on leave. There a tragedy awaits him. His sister has been ravaged by Lieutenant Ober of the German army, his father murdered. Vilma soon dies and leaves Conrad alone.

His escape to America is a success and later we find him working for the American Secret Service and making love to Amy, who has returned. When the United States enters the war, President Wilson grants Conrad citizenship that he may fight, and in one of the first American battles Conrad has the satisfaction of coming face to face with Lieutenant Ober, whom he makes short work of. Soon after the war ends and Conrad returns to an eager Amy.

SUGGESTIONS

Display the title prominently in all advertising. Say in your copy that it is a striking arraignment of Germany's crimes in the war and told graphically through the medium of a personal story regarding an Alsatian family who loved France. All posters, cuts, etc. supplied on this production designate the character of the production, without room for doubt. This sort of story will appeal to a great many people at this date, so use this paper plentifully and follow up this display with a liberal use of the cuts provided.

Look over the cast. You will probably find therein a number of names with which your audiences are acquainted. Don't neglect these names for, after all, a big title often needs to be backed by a few familiar faces.

CATCH LINES

To see it is to see why Germany Must Pay!

An indictment of Germany's crimes that will sound throughout the ages.

Have you ever seen a wild beast—a beast gone mad with blood lust? If you have not you do not know what the armies in France saved this country from. "Why Germany Must Pay" will help you to realize this in a manner that leaves no room for argument.

Conrad Le Brett was an Alsatian and therefore forced into the German army at the outbreak of the war. But his soul revolted at the degeneracy of the Hun leaders. He returned home on leave and found his father dead, his sister dying in unspeakable horror. Finally he managed to reach American shores and in the army of the United States he made one man pay—see his adventures and you'll see "Why Germany Must Pay."

Creighton Hall, Helen Ferguson, Florence Billings, Frank Currier, Margaret McWade, Earl Schenck and Joseph Kilgour are the principals in the great cast that enacts the roles of "Why Germany Must Pay."

"THE GAME IS UP"—BLUEBIRD

Pictures in This Class Are Rarity These Days

GOOD pictures, as this one is, are at premium nowadays; and it takes, I presume, a great deal of hunting on your part to find them. If this one chances to fall to your lot, it should please you greatly.

"The Game Is Up" is full of clean and wholesome entertainment from start to finish; and what is more, it is suitable for any theatre, whether catering to the high or to the low brows. All the picture requires is a patron with ability to laugh; it will do the rest.

This attraction belongs to the farce class, where the complicated situations, when intelligently arranged and directed, seldom, if ever, fail to prove a source of enjoyment.

The plot is built around a heroine who pretends to her friend she is wealthy and owns an automobile and knows the best people of the town; how she is able to meet the situation and prove her word has been treated extensively in advance review published on page 447 of issue Jan. 18.—Released Jan. 20.—Length, 5 reels.—P. S. Harrison.

Directed by Elsie Jane Wilson.

CATCH LINES

She thought him a chauffeur, when in reality he was a millionaire. But he hired himself and his car for the day because she was the prettiest girl he had ever seen. And then she asked him for his apartment! And he handed that over to her and two other ladies! Rather obliging of him, wasn't it? There is a barrel full of fun in "The Game Is Up," and that barrel has your name on it.

A Bluebird comedy in which a girl mistakes a millionaire for a chauffeur and—he lets her get away with it! There are complications galore in this farce—complications that keep you guessing and laughing up to the last moment.

She had to make good her bluff before the home town folks. She had said she was a successful artist and owned an automobile—but where was she to get the auto? She would hire one! The trouble and the fun and the romance started when she hired one from a millionaire and took him along as chauffeur! It's all shown in "The Game Is Up," at the _____ theatre, a farce you can not afford to miss.

AD TALK

"The Game Is Up," a sprightly little farce comedy bearing the Bluebird trademark and featuring Ruth Clifford, will be the attraction at the _____ theatre on _____ of _____ week. This story has as its central character, one Constance Elliott, a girl from the country who came to the city with ambitions to take the world of art by storm. Like so many other country girls, she fell down rather hard and when her friend, Winnie, came to town she was having a difficult time making both ends meet. And the trouble was that in all her letters home she had told Winnie and the rest of her friends what a wonderful success she was! She was a bluffer and now had to make good her bluff.

So she decided that she must have a car and a chauffeur, and thereon hangs the tale. She approached Peter Neyland, who happened to have a million in the bank and who happened to be sitting idly in his car at the moment. Constance thought him a public chauffeur and his car for hire! And Peter accepted it all in good fun because Constance was pretty. From here on the humorous complications in "The Game Is Up" run thick and fast. The author, Gladys Johnson, has developed her story with not a little originality and skill and as a result the spectator is kept in a state of laughter and suspense from beginning to end.

Miss Clifford appears radiant in the principal part, while Al. Ray, Mildred Lee, Harry Holden, Clifford Gray, Margaret Cullington and John Cossar are in support. The film was produced under the direction of Elsie Jane Wilson.

THE STORY

It all started when Constance thought Peter Neyland, a chauffeur, and his automobile for public hire. Peter entered into the game enthusiastically for Connie was pretty and he didn't let on at all that he had a million in the bank. Connie wanted the car to put through a bluff on her friend, Winnie, from the home town. Connie, with artistic ambitions, had come to the city to sell her paintings but found that the art market didn't sit up and take notice in the manner she expected. However, her letters back home had told of her success, for Connie was quite proud, and before Winnie the bluff had to be put through.

So Peter posed as a chauffeur and gladly loaned his car and his services. However, toward the end of the day they met Mrs. Hyland, also from the home town, who persuaded Winnie to stay on a few days—at Connie's house. Connie not having any house, it was rather a difficult proposition for her to face but Peter came to the rescue again with his bachelor apartments. McQuade, his valet, was dispatched for Connie's clothes and a hurried excursion on Peter's part put pipes and tobacco and other tell-tale things to cover.

Then Mrs. Hyland demanded to meet celebrities and McQuade was again pressed into service as a polo player. Ted Latham, Peter's friend, joined in the game and fell in love with Winnie. What was more likely to happen than a dual wedding? Nothing; and truth to tell, that's what did happen after Connie's game was up.

"THE DUB"—PARAMOUNT

Well Produced and Entertaining Farce of Crook Sort

"THE DUB" is a thoroughly enjoyable picture. Both from a production point of view as well as from an entertaining, it is by far the best Wallace Reid feature released for a long time. It belong to the farce type rather than to comedy; and as it has been handled intelligently, you should not be afraid to advertise it strong.

The story is of the high class crook sort, in which the hero, the heroine and one other character are the only honest persons.

The opening of the picture is novel and attracts the interest. It shows three partners in a quarrel, exchanging "cuss words." The cause of the quarrel is the fact that the two partners who have the brains and the experience attempt to take advantage of their third member, who has furnished the money.

One hero is brought into the story by being hired by the attorney of the one crook partner to recover an option unjustly taken away by the other crook member, after the dissolution of the partnership. The house is guarded closely, but he succeeds in getting into and taking away the paper. Incidentally he saves the heroine who is kept there as a prisoner for the purpose of being robbed of her estate.

The picture is clean and should delight any audience.—Released Jan. 19.—Length, 5 reels.—P. S. Harrison.

Scenario by Will M. Ritchey.
Directed by James Cruze.

CATCH LINES

Pop! It was only a little boy bursting a paper bag but John Craig thought it was dynamite and that it had blown his business office to the skies. He started running and landed plump in the arms of adventure and romance. Some mystery, too! See it all in "The Dub," now at the theatre.

You'll find comedy, romance and adventure and mystery in "The Dub." It is the most thoroughly enjoyable picture in which Wallace Reid has appeared.

They thought him a dub and the right man to do dub's job. But he proved a man of brains. The crooks were the dubs, after all, for they flew to cover when the supposed dub got started. Wallace Reid's latest picture, "The Dub," is one of exciting adventure, mystery and romance.

Written by Edgar Franklin, one of the foremost writers of the day.

AD TALK

A comedy-drama in which romance, adventure and mystery are the dominating elements is presented in "The Dub," starring Wallace Reid, which will be shown at the theatre on _____ of _____ week. Mr. Reid is equally at home while portraying a role in either comedy or melodrama and he has been seen in some excellent pictures of both kinds. It remains for "The Dub" to give him the ideal role, however. In it he appears as John Craig, a young contractor who is in dire need of eight hundred dollars in order to finish a job. Chance directs him to an unscrupulous attorney who is looking for a "dub." Just why he wants a dub is a secret only disclosed on the _____ screen. Suffice it to say here that he mistakes our hero for this sort of a person and it is a big mistake to make, for Craig unravels a long mystery, shows the lawyer and his partner up as the criminals they are and wins for himself a wife—and money—besides.

"The Dub" was written by Edgar Franklin, one of the best of contemporary writers. His stories often appear in the Saturday Evening Post and other popular fiction magazines. Will M. Ritchey supplied the scenario for "The Dub," while James Cruze, who has made a wonderful record in the pictures as a character man, directed.

Nina Byron, Charles Ogle, Raymond Hatton, Winter Hall, Guy Oliver and Billy Elmer appear in support of the star, portraying the various difficult roles with an individual ability that is of an unusually high order.

THE STORY

John Craig, the head of a small construction company, takes a stroll in the park. He is worried about several things, among them how to get eight hundred dollars that he may finish a job and also by the fact that he left a box of dynamite on his office desk. Suppose this box should fall to the floor. Where would his construction company be then? Then pop, went a paper bag between a boy's hands! It was only a little bang but John Craig had visions of his office sailing skyward. He started running and landed plump in the arms of Burley Haddon, an attorney without a conscience and not a very good judge of human nature either.

Haddon took the panting youth as a dub and immediately saw in him the man he was looking for. In the home of George Markham lay an option on a mine that Haddon wanted to put up a bluff at trying to get. Believing Craig a dub and believing also that he would be thrown out of the Markham home if he requested admittance, he promised him a thousand dollars and sent him forth. The thousand looked good to Craig and the job looked easy.

But beyond the doors of the Markham house lay adventure of which Craig never dreamed. To begin with, there was a very pretty girl, Enid Drayton, Haddon's ward, virtually kept a prisoner by the man and periodically swindled. Craig smelled a rat as soon as he entered and did not give up the job the way Haddon had confidently expected. In fact, he did not give up until he had proved that both Haddon and Markham were crooked and that Enid needed a new guardian in the person of a husband—John Craig.

SUGGESTIONS

The star and the mysterious, adventurous character of the story are apparently the strong points to bring out in all advertising done on this production. Reid has attained real popularity as a star and should be well featured. The story has some good points which you can play up and so get the mysterious note into your advertising.

Edgar Franklin is one of the most popular authors of the day while many of his works have been put on the screen and with success. Use his name in all advertising. James Cruze, the director, gained a reputation as a Lasky character actor previous to his debut as a director and no doubt his name will be remembered by many.

Maybe he did look like one. But — this same dub of a kid rescues a girl's fortune from two "shark" brokers, a crooked lawyer and a full-grown burglar. Come and see all the excitement!

"THE ENCHANTED BARN"—VITAGRAPH

Has All Good Points Necessary to Interesting Picture

YOU will not have to hide your face from your patrons while playing this picture. If, in the future, every Bessie Love contribution measures up with this one in quality, you should have no kick coming.

"The Enchanted Barn" possesses such merits as are necessary to a good picture. Besides being heart appealing, it offers some thrills; the interest, on the other hand, is held well from the beginning to the end.

The heroine wins your sympathy right from the start. She is a young stenographer, who thinks the world of her mother and little brothers. Her one desire is to get a home in the country, where her sick mother can have plenty of fresh air. She rents a barn which, with her little savings, she transforms into a nice little home.

In the course of the story, she gets acquainted with the son of the millionaire owner of the barn. Feeling grateful for the reasonable rent he charges her, she loses no time in notifying him of a scheme which some sharks were hatching to defraud his father of a large sum of money. In the end, they become engaged, with the consent of her lover's father.

The picture is clean and should please any audience.—Released Jan. 27.—Length, 5 reels.—P. S. Harrison.

SUGGESTIONS

Mention some of Bessie Love's previous pictures in connection with the advertising of this feature. Accentuate the fact that it is a romance and also tell that there are kiddies in the story. Miss Love made her Fine Arts reputation by appearing in pictures with the famous group of Fine Arts kiddies. Let them know that this feature is kin to the former subjects in which she achieved such great success.

AD TALK

Bessie Love, the young Vitagraph star, will be seen at the _____ theatre on _____ of _____ week in her latest photoplay, "The Enchanted Barn." This story is the work of Grace H. Lutz, an author well equipped to provide the plot setting for Miss Love's charming talents as the picture here presented well indicates. It tells the story of a little stenographer who managed to eke out a living for her mother and young brothers and sisters in the city. It is her ambition, however, to move her charges to the country where the kiddies may romp in the open and with the view of finding a place, she goes out to the suburbs.

Here she finds an empty barn, much to her liking, and seeks out the owner, determined to rent it. The owner proves to be a young man of wealth and high social standing who immediately takes an interest in the girl and not only rents her the place (cheaply) but fixes it up with all modern improvements. The romance which is introduced at this stage of the story is one of the prettiest ever seen on the films, while it is brought to a close with a climax of sudden and thrilling power.

Surrounding Miss Love in this production are J. Frank Glendon, Joe Singleton, William T. Horne, Frank Butterworth, Darbey A. Walker and Jean Hathaway. Other productions on the bill of the _____ theatre for the same dates are _____.

THE STORY

Shirley Hollister, a private secretary, manages to make both ends meet for her mother and younger brothers and sisters—and herself. Her ambition is to be able to rent a cottage in the suburbs so that the kiddies may have the opportunity to play out of doors. One day she makes an excursion to the country and finds a large stone barn that has never been occupied and seems to be standing there awaiting a house to be erected along side of it. Shirley hunts up the owner of the place, Sidney Graham, a young man of wealth and asks him to rent it to her. She eagerly tells him her reasons for wanting it and Sidney immediately takes an interest in her.

As a result, he lets her have the barn but on the day she and her family move in she discovers that it has been fitted up like a little bungalow inside with all the comforts that she never thought she could have. Quite naturally, her gratitude toward Sidney takes the form of love.

Later, Shirley overhears crooks plotting to swindle her employer and Sidney's father. By taking a few short-hand notes she manages to prevent the catastrophe from taking place. Then the elder Graham becomes interested in the little girl also. But Shirley believes she can never meet Sidney on the same plane. Little incidents occur all the while which firmly stamp this opinion on her mind. At length, however, when Shirley is kidnapped by government enemies while she carries important papers to her employer, and when she is rescued by Sidney she forms an altogether different opinion—with the assistance of Sidney himself.

CATCH LINES

She lived in a barn and a Prince Charming was her landlord—one of the prettiest romances of the screen set forth in "The Enchanted Barn," now running at the _____ theatre.

This particular barn had hot water, steam heat, telephone connections—all modern improvements, as they say in the real estate field—and in this barn Shirley Hollister found that the owner had also installed a bit of love which he expected his tenant to care for—you'll find a thoroughly pleasing romance in "The Enchanted Barn."

"THE GREAT ROMANCE"—SCREEN CLASSICS

Romance and Adventure Story Laid in Beautiful Setting

THIS is one of those mythical kingdom stories that is brought well up to the minute when the hero throws his title to the four winds and declares for a democracy. With the late Harold Lockwood as star and Ruby de Remer appearing in the opposite role—a delightful pair of leads—the romantic qualities of the plot have been excellently realized and of romantic qualities the story has an abundance that furnishes it with a sure appeal particularly before a young audience.

Finis Fox, the author, has paid more attention to his love story than to plot development and at times there is an absence of a real sustaining interest. However, the whole is done after such a pretty fashion—the backgrounds remind one of another mythical land, so beautiful are they and so exquisitely photographed—that every foot of film is enjoyable.

The acting of the leads is meritorious, while the support furnished is of an entirely acceptable order. —Length, 6 reels.—Peter Milne.

CATCH LINES

A romance of a mythical kingdom that becomes up-to-date and turns into a democracy—a wonderful love story with ample thrilling adventure and scenes of an exquisitely beautiful character.

Rupert Danza believed—and gloried in his belief—that he was a citizen of the United States. So one day when he was told that he was revolutionary leader of the kingdom of Rugaria he suffered something of a shock. But it was his duty to go and settle Rugaria's destinies—and as he was a man with advanced ideas, he turned it into a democracy. See this lively story of adventure and romance at the theatre.

Harold Lockwood with Ruby de Remer as his leading lady! A wonderful romantic team in a wonderful romantic story. See "The Great Romance" and be transported away from a prosaic existence for an hour and a quarter.

Rugaria isn't on the European map but it's in "The Great Romance," which is more to the point. Furthermore, Rugaria throws its king out the back door and takes a President in through the front entrance. It is a wonderful story of romance, adventure and thrills with Harold Lockwood and Ruby de Remer, a delightful team, as the lovers.

AD TALK

"The Great Romance," a Screen Classics production featuring Harold Lockwood, will be the attraction at the theatre on _____ of _____ week. Written by Finis Fox, the story of this picture is laid, for the most part, in one of those mythical European kingdoms, ideal localities for romance. And be sure that this six-reeler contains a romance of the most romantic type. It is a romance between Boris Danza, a young man reared in the United States and believing himself a citizen thereof, who suddenly finds the leadership of a band of revolutionists in the kingdom of Rugaria thrust upon him, and Althea Hanway, the pretty daughter of an American millionaire whose mother is desirous of marrying her to Prince Boris, a worthless weakling who is heir apparent to the throne of Rugaria.

Given these three characters at the outset, Mr. Fox has plotted them through a story of adventure, thrills and romance that takes us back to the days when McGrath and McCutcheon were in their prime in writing this sort of fiction. Mr. Lockwood and his charming leading lady, Ruby de Remer, make an ideal pair of lovers, while Joseph Granby is sufficiently villainous as the Prince. The picture has been laid in gardens and rural spots of the most delightful sort. The setting fits the story to a degree that only goes to enhance the romantic and adventurous qualities of the plot.

The picture was produced under the direction of Henry Otto, while Frank Currier, Franklyn Hanna, Clare Grenville and Helen Lindroth lend the principals adequate support.

THE STORY

Rupert Danza, student at Columbia University, is one day approached by a gentleman of title, calling upon him to return to his native kingdom of Rugaria and settle its political destinies. The idea doesn't appeal to Rupert in the least for he is a staunch believer in the principles of freedom and democracy as embodied in the United States. However, when he learns that the only girl, Althea Hanway, has been kidnapped by her mother and father and conveyed Rugaria-wards in order to marry a title—the title being Prince Boris—he sits up and takes notice and, to make the story short, arrives in Rugaria on the very next steamer.

Arrived there, he learns that his mission is to lead a band of revolutionists against King Rudolph, a monarch who, like many others of his time, has proven a rank failure at operating a government. This makes it all particularly interesting when Rupert considers that Althea is being pushed off on the king's son by her very vain parents. However, Althea's heart is with Rupert altogether and when Rupert gets in touch with her—oscillating touch, to be correct—she again vows that she will never marry Prince Boris and that she is Rupert's and only his. Rupert is far from being displeased.

Then things happen. An anarchist takes a shot at the king and brings him to his bed as a result. A countless makes the confession that Rupert is the real heir to the throne, having been kidnapped when a child, by the revolutionists, and sent to America to absorb democracy. So, King Rudolph dies and Rupert quite naturally—renounces the throne, although he does permit the people to elect him President, while he elects Althea as his wife.

SUGGESTIONS

Refrain from mentioning Harold Lockwood's death in any advertising. It would be crude to make capital of such a thing, and furthermore, you wouldn't make capital. The suggestion of such a thing would tend to keep people away from the theatre. Play up the picture as an up-to-date romance of a mythical European kingdom and bring out its up-to-dateness by adding that the kingdom turns into a democracy before the picture is over.

Stress the beauty of the various exteriors in the production and bring out the abundant romantic qualities of the story, mentioning the star and Ruby de Remer as being an ideal team to portray people of this sort. Some good advertisements could be gotten up with reference to the fact that one live American administered the right dope to a decaying European kingdom so that it sat up and became a democracy.

Has Features to Exploit That Should Put It Over

AS an entertainment, this is only an average program offering; but it possesses certain features which, if properly exploited, may help those of you who expect to play it to draw the crowds. Its Chinese atmosphere is one of them; the Chinese leading woman, the only such star on the screen just now, is another; the fact that Americans and Chinamen join hands in defeating the German plans that were to cause China to side with Germany is still another.

The heroine of the story is a Chinese Princess, head of a secret organization whose purpose is to make China a Republic. It is opposed to German "kultur"; the hero, an American, head of the Embassy's secret service department. The heroine helps the hero secure evidence of the German intrigue.

The "wronged girl" stuff, which, in the past, has been one of the main features in this sort of stories, has been left out of this one. The story holds the interest well.—Length, 6 reels.—P. S. Harrison.

SUGGESTIONS

Your strong advertising point with regard to this production would seem to be the fact that it features a Chinese star for the first time. If you lay stress on her acting ability, calling attention to her success in vaudeville and on the concert stage you will attract attention with this announcement.

Siberia and Allied activities there are coming greatly into prominence these days. You can find newspaper stories almost every day regarding the army operations in this country, where the war still goes on. Cash in on this publicity. Lift a number of the stories and place them in your lobby frames along with the stills. They will attract considerable attention.

"For the Freedom of the East" is a picture that lends itself well to special house settings and lobby decorations. The exhibitor knows himself to what extent he may go in lobby decorations. If the picture is kept on for a run of any length of time get a Chinese atmosphere into your lobby display and your stage settings. Chinese costumes on ushers or performers; the burning of incense, etc., are among the various ways in which the theatre could be "dressed" for the occasion.

AD TALK

Unusual in every respect is "For the Freedom of the East," which will be shown at the theatre on _____ of _____ week. Produced by the Betzwood Film Company and released through Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, this picture has as its star Lady Tsen Mei, a Chinese artist noted in this country both on the concert and vaudeville stages. The offering in which she appears is a picture dealing with German intrigue in China and the manner in which it was thwarted through the activities of Princess Tsu (Lady Mei) and a representative of the American Secret Service.

Outside of the novelty of seeing a Chinese star on the screen patrons will be well rewarded by the contents of the plot itself. Ira M. Lowry, who conceived and directed the production, built a particularly strong story around the activities of the spies who sought an alliance with China that the Hun campaign in Siberia might be a success. The plot is frustrated by the loyal Chinese girl and the American only after the severest ordeals. The principals at one time leave China, on the same boat, arriving later in Washington, where the battle of wits continues until at last the cause of right is triumphant.

The star receives adequate support from a cast in which appear a large number of Orientals as well as some actors of the American stage.

THE STORY

Princess Tsu, in whom surge the principles of democracy, is leader of a secret Chinese clique to combat the Hun propaganda in her native land. Franz von Richtman, head of the enemy spy system, plots with Princess Tsu's uncle, the Viceroy, to the effect that if the latter organize a Chinese army to join forces with the Huns in Siberia, he will be made ruler of all China. A written agreement passes between the two. Princess Tsu overhears this plot and informs Robert Kenyon, head of the American Secret Service in China, of its existence. Through her services he procures the agreement long enough to have it photographed, purposing to send a copy on to the authorities at Washington.

Princess Tsu grows to love Kenyon through her constant association with him. Prince Kang, who has been betrothed to the Princess since infancy, is jealous of the American and tells the Princess that he is engaged to marry an American girl. Her pride hurt, Princess Tsu determines to turn against Kenyon and as a result she informs Von Richtman that he has a photograph of the agreement. As Von Richtman is about to make use of the information, however, Princess Tsu's love of country triumphs over her personal feelings and she saves the day for Kenyon.

Kenyon leaves for Washington and Von Richtman books passage on the same steamer. Princess Tsu also goes along disguised as a servant. In Washington the Secretary of State is absent, so Von Richtman plans a daring coup. He sends word that the Secretary has returned and is ready to see Kenyon. Kenyon goes to his office and there is surprised by Von Richtman's henchman. Through the quick wit of Princess Tsu, however, the Germans are again put to rout and when the Secretary appears he congratulates the Chinese girl on her pluck and daring. The plot finally foiled, Princess Tsu returns to her native land, there to join hands in marriage with Prince Kang.

CATCH LINES

Featuring Lady Tsen Mei, the first and only Chinese star in motion pictures.

Showing the manner in which German intrigue in China and Siberia was frustrated through the patriotic activities of a Chinese Princess and a member of the American Secret Service.

Conceived and directed by Ira M. Lowry, of the Betzwood Film Corporation, producers of "For the Freedom of the World."

A thrilling incident of the wresting of Siberia from the grasp of the Huns and their tools.

In which the Americans foil the German plot to use Chinese soldiers for their own vicious purposes in Siberia.

The East—China—had to combat German intrigue much as did the West. "For the Freedom of the East" is a picture fraught with intense action in which a Chinese Princess proves the savior of her country in its hour of need.

"OUT OF THE SHADOW"—PARAMOUNT

Pauline Frederick Strikes Good One After Several Months

IT should be a pleasure to those of you who hold a contract for the Pauline Frederick series to know that, after several weak releases, one will at last reach you that shows a possibility of pleasing the majority of your patrons. To begin with, "Out of the Shadow" is a clean picture; and in spite of some slips in the handling, it should satisfy, because of the interesting story. It is a strong melodrama, with all gruesome features, such as usually go with this type of photoplays, entirely eliminated.

The heroine is ushered on the screen as being tried for the murder of her husband. Unwilling to convict a woman, the jury acquits her, in spite of the circumstantial evidence. But she is not satisfied with the acquittal, because the people still consider her guilty, although she is innocent; so her one aim in life is to clear her name.

In the course of the story she finds the real murderer; he is a young protege of hers, who was brooding over the mistreatment the heroine received the hands of her husband. He killed him while his mind was affected during the first stages of a severe illness.

Eventually, she marries a philanthropist who took an interest in her, and who believed in her innocence.—Released Jan. 5.—Length, 5 reels.—P. S. Harrison.

AD TALK

Pauline Frederick, the superlative emotional actress will be seen at the theatre on _____ of _____ week in her latest Paramount photoplay success entitled "Out of the Shadow." This picture offers Miss Frederick a role in which her exceptional ability as a dramatic actress is offered full play. Critics who have seen the picture already, are unanimous in acclaiming it the best of her recent pictures, both in regard to her performance and the intense dramatic story that it sets forth on the celluloid.

"Out of the Shadow" is based on E. W. Hornung's novel, "The Shadow of the Rope," and is one of the most sustaining plots that this prolific English author has ever created. Miss Frederick is seen as Ruth Minchin, the wife of a man who becomes more like an animal than a human being when under the influence of liquor. A man whom Minchin insults, murders him one night while he lies in a drunken stupor, and because of a recent quarrel with her husband, Ruth is suspected of the deed. But she is not convicted, owing to a lack of evidence.

How the real murderer is found, forms the basis of the rest of the action of this story and gives rise to a number of dramatic situations of the utmost force and intensity. Miss Frederick is surrounded by a distinguished cast of screen players, including Wyndham Standing, Ronald Byram, William J. Gross, Jack Johnson and Syn De Conde. The picture was adapted for the screen by Eve Unsell and produced under the direction of Emile Chautard.

Ruth is wedded to her dead father's business partner and leads a very unhappy life, inasmuch as he is addicted to drink and is exceedingly brutal at times. In the same apartment house lives Paolo Severino, a pianist, who finds it hard to get along. Minchin, Ruth's husband, though he has not the slightest ground on which to base his suspicions, accuses his wife of an affair with this man and, in a fit of temper, strikes her to the floor. Ruth resolves to leave her husband, and taking her things, departs. Severino returns to the Minchin apartment and finds the master of the house in a drunken stupor. He awakens him. Pistols are produced and duly fired and Minchin lies dead.

The police get on the trail and believe Ruth guilty. At the trial she is acquitted, owing to lack of evidence against her. Steel, a city official and Langholm, a reporter, believe her innocent and determine to find the guilty party. Steel sends her to the country in charge of the Woodgates, where, under an assumed name, she lives a life free from disagreeable publicity. In time, Ruth and Steel grow to love each other. A tramp that comes through the village recognizes Steel as a man who committed murder in Australia. Because Minchin came from there Langholm believes that Steel murdered Minchin. Steel is arrested and brought to trial. Minchin refuses to defend himself.

Then Ruth suddenly remembers Severino and seeking him out plies him with questions. He breaks down and confesses to the murder. Steel is liberated and when Ruth begs his forgiveness he takes her in his arms.

SUGGESTIONS

Play up the author of this production besides the name of the star. He is a well-known writer of fiction and if you mention the "Raffles" stories you will surely recall him to your public. "Out of the Shadow" is, in every sense, a serious subject and your advertising had best be dignified and in keeping with the character of the production. If you are in the habit of following out the suggestion of the title in your advertising copy you have a good opportunity to do so with respect to this production.

CATCH LINES

By E. W. Hornung, famous as the author of "Raffles" and the "Stingaree" series. In "Out of the Shadow" he has furnished the star a vehicle in which her varied capabilities are allowed full play.

Ruth lived an unhappy life with her husband and his violent death relieved her from bondage more than it caused her sorrow. But in time, a true love came to her and then she grew to suspect the man she adored, of the murder of her husband! Could this be true? The answer is revealed in "Out of the Shadow."

Pauline Frederick's latest screen triumph—a drama in which her emotional ability is taxed to the utmost and in which she rises to the demands of every situation with a firmness and conviction of purpose that makes every scene a dramatic climax.

"HEART OF GOLD"—WORLD

Romance with Comedy Touches and Plenty of Suspense

HERE is a romance with plenty of comedy thrown in, with an original story handled in expert fashion so that the fullest amount of suspense is derived from it. "Heart of Gold," written by Lucy Sarver and scenarioized by Clara Beranger, tells the story of a girl who designed a gown and all but had her just profits stolen from her by a modiste who is designing in other directions.

The picture is possessed of a strong feminine interest, and well it might be considering its source, but the comedy in it and the love story furnish it with an appeal that is well nigh universal. Louise Huff is particularly attractive as the girl, while Johnny Hines on the opposite end of the romance injects plenty of his inimitable brand of comedy.

The picture was furnished with a realistic production and the support is good. A few flashes show some of the latest gowns on pretty models and while more or less apart from the story proper, they can easily stand on their own merits.—Length, 5 reels.—Released Feb. 10.—Peter Milne.

SUGGESTIONS

There is a good team to play up in advertising this production, namely, Louise Huff and Johnny Hines. The former is well known and Hines' comedy deserves him a position of co-star in the billing.

You can interest your women patrons in this feature by telling them that a contest for a war-gown is part of the action. Bring out that several models appear wearing the latest styles.

If you care for the often-advised co-operative advertising you might have a modiste display some of the stills from the production in the window.

AD TALK

"Heart of Gold" is the title of the World picture to be shown at the _____ theatre on _____ of _____ week. In this offering Louise Huff is starred, supported by the ever-humorous Johnny Hines, and from advance reports patrons of the _____ theatre may justly expect a real treat in this picture. It is quite different from the usual story of the screen, having as its leading character a messenger girl in a modiste's shop. A well developed sense of the artistic leads her to compete for a prize of five thousand dollars offered for the best gown to be worn by women during war time. But as luck would have it she sends in her design on her employer's note paper and without signing her name. When the prize is awarded to her design therefore she is prevented from reaping her just profits by the grasping Madame Estelle who claims the design as her own.

How this tangle is straightened out and how the girl comes into her own, forms a series of very interesting events in which Miss Huff and Mr. Hines appear to attractive advantage. Miss Huff has never appeared in such a winsome and appealing light while the comedy injected by Mr. Hines, a natural comedian, if there ever was one, gives the film an additional interest that is invaluable.

"Heart of Gold" was written by Lucy Sarver and scenarioized by Clara S. Beranger. This has proven a combination well equipped indeed to produce a picture possessing an unusual interest before feminine patrons. We are certain that they all will enjoy this five-reeler—so will everyone, for that matter. It is unusual and it is human—a combination of two elements hard to beat on the modern screen.

Annie Wilkes, messenger girl in the dress-making establishment of Madame Estelle, has a well developed artistic sense which leads her to enter a contest for the best gown to be worn by women during the war. A prize of five thousand dollars is offered. Annie submits her design on Madame Estelle's note paper without attaching her name thereto. As a consequence when her design is adjudged the best Madame Estelle takes all the credit. Annie is obliged to sit by and watch her reap the golden harvest that comes as a result of her effort. But finally unable to bear it longer she goes to her employer and tells her her story. Furious, Madame Estelle discharges her.

Annie then gives her original copy of the design to Mike Monahan, her sweetheart, who takes it to a lawyer, in whom he places explicit confidence. The lawyer, however, proves a double-crosser, for he takes the design to Madame Estelle and by the use of a little gentle blackmail gets taken into partnership with the costumer. The lawyer succeeds in keeping the lovers apart with promises to each that everything will come out all right.

Annie then gets a position with Collins, another designer. To him she tells her story and he attempts to set things right for her. But her inability to produce the design coupled with the smartness of Madame Estelle's lawyer produce failure. Finally utterly exasperated Annie goes to Madame Estelle and attempts to steal her check. The police are called and Annie goes to jail—under an assumed name. But now Mike Monahan wakes up and before long he has proven the crookedness of Madame Estelle and her lawyer. All that needs to be done is to locate Annie, and this is shortly accomplished. Final proof is then offered as to Madame Estelle's duplicity and Annie at last comes into her own.

CATCH LINES

"Heart of Gold" was the design that won the five thousand dollar prize offered for the best costume for women during war-time. But the award went to the grasping Madame Estelle and not the rightful owner, Annie Wilkes. See her struggles to gain recognition against almost overwhelming forces.

Pretty hard lines to design a costume that wins a five thousand dollar prize and then see another walk away with it, isn't it? Annie Wilkes had this experience. Her employer, Madame Estelle, refused her recognition and gobbled all the publicity herself. How Annie finally won out forms a series of highly sustaining and interesting events.

Louise Huff is there to provide the element of heart interest—Johnny Hines is there to provide the element of comedy (and it's some comedy, too, and original), and the two together provide the romantic interest. Where are they? At the _____ theatre in "The Heart of Gold"; it's a corker.

"IN FOR THIRTY DAYS"—METRO

An Obvious Comedy, But One Which Gets the Laughs

LUTHER REED, author of "In For Thirty Days," dug up an old town law which permitted the hire of convicts to citizens at twenty cents a day and based a comedy upon it. The convict is Helen Corning, a young woman who delights in speeding and who lands in jail as a result. The employer in this instance is an author. The humorous complications which follow can be imagined.

The very premise on which the author builds his structure gives its entire content away at the start and there is little sustaining quality about the picture as a result. However, the comedy situations that rise from the peculiar relationship of the leads are manifold, originally handled and, supported as they are by humorous subtitles, manage to keep the laughs coming in regular order.

A well developed sense of humor runs throughout the picture and unless we miss a guess it belongs to Tom Geraghty, one of the adaptors. This sense is to be found in the subtitles and in the various ridiculous gags of the action.

May Allison is attractive as the star. Robert Ellis is a likeable hero and Bull Montana a curious convict.—Length, 5 reels.—Released Jan. 27.—Peter Milne.

AD TALK

One of the sprightliest little comedies of the season will be shown at the _____ theatre on _____ of _____ week in "In for Thirty Days," a Metro picture in which May Allison is starred. "In for Thirty Days" was written by Lieutenant Luther Reed, who took as the basis of his story a long-forgotten law of an old southern town which permits the hiring of convicts out to citizens at the rate of twenty cents a day. There is, to be sure, nothing so funny about that law at first glance, but hearken. Helen Corning, rich, pretty and with a will all her own upsets the judge of the county seat while she is speeding about in her roadster. The judge is wrathful, particularly because during the up-setting process a few dozen eggs were scrambled all over his countenance. So into the cooler she goes for thirty days.

Then comes along Brett Page, an author with a sense of humor. Helen had previously upset him while he was wandering comfortably along the road in his flivver. Now, perhaps, the comedy begins to dawn! Yes, Brett Page hires Helen at twenty cents a day and forces her to go to work for him in his kitchen! The rest of this story can best be imagined, or better yet, seen on the screen of the _____ theatre. Miss Allison is thoroughly delightful in the principal role while Robert Ellis, in the opposite part, gives a pleasing performance.

The picture was made under the direction of Webster Cullison while Maym Kelso, Rex Cherryman, Jay Dwiggin, George Berrell and Bull Montana complete the cast.

THE STORY

Helen Corning, the pretty daughter of a rich widow, delights in speeding about the roads of a little sleepy southern town. At one time she upsets a young author, Brett Page, who is crawling peacefully along in his flivver and then again she clips off a wheel of Judge Carroll's buckboard and scrambles eggs all over his face as a result. Now Judge Carroll has very strict ideas about the proper places to scramble eggs. And his bearded countenance is not included in this list. Very wrathful indeed is the judge and he casts Helen in jail for thirty days and refuses to grant bail to her frantic mother and her suitor, Count Dronsky.

In this little southern town there is a law to the effect that a citizen may hire out a convict at the rate of twenty cents a day. So when Brett Page comes along the next morning, he remembers his flivver episode and hires Helen. Helen resists, but to no avail. And, ensconced in Brett Page's kitchen, she breaks various pieces of crockery but also to no avail. She must work if she eats and eat she must. But as each of the thirty days passes Helen reaches a better frame of mind. Brett Page is quite nice, after all and, to tell the truth, he thinks the same about her. So Helen looks with disfavor on her mother's continued efforts to release her.

Eventually "Hot Stove" Kelly is employed to kidnap her and take her into another state. "Hot Stove" decides to kidnap her himself and hold her for ransom but Mr. Page comes to the rescue in the nick of time. He arranges for a hasty wedding but Mrs. Corning again interferes. They are pursued and nothing remains for the lovers to do but get married in the flivver while Mrs. Corning and Count Dronsky vainly trail behind them.

CATCH LINES

Helen Corning was an heiress, yet she was placed in a position where she was forced to work for Brett Page at a salary of twenty cents a day! And Helen was a girl of high temper! Yes indeed, Mr. Page lost some of his best crockery but after all he won a wife! Who was she? That's the secret that only the conclusion of "In for Thirty Days" will reveal!

Judge Carroll would have forgiven Helen if she had only knocked off the wheel of his buckboard, but by a peculiar trick of fate a basket of eggs landed on his countenance, and thoroughly scrambled themselves there! That was unforgivable, so Helen, heiress that she was, went to jail for thirty days—and found romance!

May Allison was never so delightful than in "In for Thirty Days." She appears as an heiress, Helen Corning, and peculiar circumstances bring Brett Page, an author, into a position to hire her as servant girl for thirty days. But before the time is up he decides that he needs a wife more than a servant and Helen helps in the decision. See this charming, romantic comedy at the _____ theatre.

SUGGESTIONS

Here is a comedy that will stand a lot of comedy advertising. Quote the law on which the author has based his story and follow it up with the humorous consequences derived from it in the picture. Look over the catch lines. They were written on this basis. But anything that suggests the original and humorous character of the production will suffice.

You might feature the author's name prominently. He is not well known, to be sure, although his name has appeared on several Metro productions. But you will arouse some interest in that he is a lieutenant. At the same time the title prevents anyone from thinking that his work is in any way a war picture.

If in the stills you can find a good head of the star, one of Robert Ellis, one of Jay Dwiggin and one of Bull Montana, you could arrange these in the four corners of an advertisement with appropriately humorous captions. All are distinct types and with the two last mentioned you would create a comedy interest that would be quite unusual.

MAY ALLISON

"THE HEART OF HUMANITY"—JEWEL

A War Subject That Should Draw Larger Crowds Each Day

DON'T be afraid to book this picture, whatever your personal opinion of war subjects may be; if you miss it, you will lose a good bet. If there ever was a picture made that would come near pleasing 100 per cent. of the audiences, this is surely the one. It is a picture which, like "The Birth of a Nation," should live forever; it should give as good a satisfaction ten years from now as it will to-day, because of the tremendous power it exerts upon the human sympathies. While an exhibitor, I have known people to attend one performance every day when "The Birth of a Nation" was shown, return engagements included; many a picturegoer will undoubtedly do the same thing on "The Heart of Humanity."

Love of mother and sons, wife and husband, woman and orphaned children, love of country, and almost every element of the better side of human life that is known to exist and that appeals to the deeper emotions, has been interwoven in the plot.

Being a Canadian story, it should find excellent reception in Great Britain and all her possessions. In view of the agitation that has been aroused by some overardent Canadian patriots right now, the prints that are to be sent there have been so edited as to exclude any possibility of any objection whatever.

On account of the falling low in quality of the regular program offerings, this attraction should be welcomed by every one of you; but it deserves longer runs, as the longer it is played, the larger the crowds will grow. It is one of those that will make people go out of their way to praise it; it also offers a chance for raising the prices. For extensive review see page 295, issue of Jan. 11.—Length, 9 reels.—P. S. AD TALK

What many critics consider the greatest picture of the war, entitled "The Heart of Humanity," will be shown at the theatre next week and the manner in which the public has taken to this subject in other cities augurs well for its extended run here. Allen Holubar wrote and produced this masterpiece, while Dorothy Phillips, one of the noted emotional actresses on the screen, appears in the part of most importance. The picture, unlike the majority of war subjects passed off on the public, has a deep under-current, a theme of absorbing interest, a theme well summed up in the title, "The Heart of Humanity."

To go into a description of all the details of the action would be making a futile attempt at painting the lily. "The Heart of Humanity" is so big and so real, it contains so many cross currents of human interest and human love that it fairly beggars description. One may, however, dwell on the individual performances and the art of the director briefly. Miss Phillips portrays the role of Nanette, a Canadian girl who follows her husband to the front as a Red Cross nurse, with all that marked ability which has brought her to the front rank of picture actresses. William Stowell, as the husband, gives another sterling performance, while Robert Anderson, one of the principal players in "Hearts of the World," Pat O'Malley, Margaret Mann, Walt Whitman, George Braidwood, George Hackathorn and Gloria Joy complete the cast of principals.

All the individual performances, however, are, in some respects, at least, directly traceable to Mr. Holubar for their merit. His is a work that will live for all time. In "The Heart of Humanity" he has proven himself a director of the highest order.

THE STORY

The wedding of John and Nanette in a little town of the Canadian Rockies takes place the very day that war is declared and John, with his three brothers, are among the first to volunteer. Maurice and Jules, two of the brothers, are killed in the first offensive, but Patricia, the mother, finds some ray of light in her sorrow when Nanette's baby is born. Shortly afterwards Louis, John's youngest brother, goes to the front. John's letters always lay stress on the miserable condition of the orphaned children in France and Belgium and Nanette's heart goes out to them. When her own child has past his second year, she feels it her duty to leave him and join in the work on the battlefields and behind the lines.

In a convent in Flanders she takes charge of the nation's orphaned children in that district. In the meantime Paul and Louis, the widow Patricia's other sons, fall in battle. John, the aviator, is the only one left but the mother heart is comforted in that they died for humanity. The last German offensive begins and the Allied line is bent back. Strange, a Prussian officer leads his detachment through the town in which Nanette is serving. Without regard for her Red Cross uniform he brutally attacks her. She resists furiously, at length losing her mind but still retaining a superhuman strength to fight.

John, who has been taken prisoner, escapes from the German lines in the uniform of an enemy soldier. He arrives to save Nanette just as the Prussian has battered down the door of the room in which she has secluded herself. Killing the brute, he rushes in to save her but she, believing him an enemy, plunges a dagger in her bosom. But there is still life and under medical care, Nanette revives. She is persuaded to return to her home where she finds her boy and Patricia fondly awaiting her. And shortly afterwards, the war done, John returns, a famous hero of the air. Peace had come and the Heart of Humanity throbbed with a new Hope for Mankind.

SUGGESTIONS

To go into detailed suggestions as to the advertising of this production would be too extensive a proposition to do here. You will find a special insert on this production in the January 11 issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS. This is complete and places before the exhibitor many valuable suggestions as well as "don'ts" for the picture's exploitation.

The point that we wish to bring out here is that "The Heart of Humanity," a war picture, if there ever was one, played to big business at the Broadway theatre, and still is playing, and all the public is acquainted with the fact that it is a war picture. This would seem to prove that a picture will get over on one condition—that it is good. So don't be afraid of telling your public just what you've got. It's the MERIT of it that counts, not the CHARACTER of the contents.

CATCH LINES

If you do not know why mothers gave their sons willingly, why wives sent their men into battle with a blessing, why brave men met death with a smile, you will know after seeing "The Heart of Humanity."

The war was the chant of civilization, the victory the triumphant song of humanity. You will understand why after seeing this production.

"It is God who calls my sons to save humanity," said the Canadian mother, and four of them gave their lives. And yet her heart was glad because she knew that they still lived, that they had fallen on the battlefield, but that they lived forever in the Heart of Humanity.

You will know that there is a greater call in the world than self, mere glory, or even pride in country—it is the call of Humanity that moved the world's heart to battle and to Victory.

Dorothy Phillips, star of "The Heart of Humanity"

EDITOR'S NOTE—Exhibitors will find here a complete list of all feature pictures for the current quarter arranged alphabetically as an index to The Complete Plan Book for this period, naming the picture, the producer, the star, the release date, and designating the issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS which contained the original review.

The following also contains our reviewer's opinion encompassed in a brief single line and gives the comments of exhibitors who have shown the picture and forwarded their opinions. And we also publish a final line fairly summarizing a consensus of all opinions received on each picture. As many of the exhibitors do not comment on every picture (merely checking it Big, Average or Poor), we arrive at the consensus not only by the actual comments made and published, but are also guided by the reports from exhibitors who have made no actual comments but have merely checked the box office value of the picture.

All the pictures mentioned are five-reel features, unless marked otherwise. Serials are reviewed also. At the conclusion of this department will be found the "Flash-Backs," being comments on films released previous to October 13, 1918.

PICTURE BRAND STAR RELEASED PLAN BOOK

MY COUSIN (ARTCRAFT) ENRICO CARUSO (NOV. 17)....DEC. 7

"Caruso is an instant success and the story is good."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Utterly impossible." "No drawing power at all. Very good picture." "Star not acceptable as motion picture actor to public." "Booked for a week, took it off after run four days. Caruso may be good for New York but not for such weak stories." "Awful picture. Very good business." "Advertised heavy but simply could not get them in. Pulled it off second day. Awful." "Disappointed." "Picture fair. Business terrible." "Glad he is only making one more." "Poor business." "Took it off second day. Another case of stage success, screen flier." "Average business seven days."
Consensus—"Ordinary picture with just fair drawing powers."

MYSTERY GIRL, THE (PARAMOUNT) CLAYTON (DEC. 27) DEC. 7

"One for the imagination with lots of real entertainment."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Fair picture to average business." "Poor business." "Very good. Big business." "Hard to understand. Star good. Badly put together. O. K. after one and a half reels."

NARROW PATH, THE (PATHE) FANNIE WARD (DEC. 15) DEC. 7

"One of the 'wronged girls' kind with no appeal to emotions."—M. P. News.

NATURE GIRL, THE (BLUEBIRD) MESERAU (JAN. 6) JAN. 4

ONCE TO EVERY MAN (FROHMAN) SHERRILL (DEC. 29) DEC. 21

(Six Parts)
"Starts and ends in fight with many punches between."—M. P. News.

ONE WOMAN, THE (SELECT) (NOV. 16) NOV. 29

(Six Parts)
"Production excellent; entertainment depends on politics."—M. P. News.

Exhibitor Comment—"Good picture. Excellent cast. The theme of the story 'Free Love' will kill it for some exhibitors." "Big business seven days."
Consensus—"Excellent production with good drawing powers."

PALS FIRST (SCR. CLA. METRO) LOCKWOOD (OCT. 13) OCT. 5

"Best Lockwood offering in a long time. Everybody will like it."—M. P. News.

Exhibitor Comment—"A real knockout, biggest business we ever had and a classy picture." "One of the very best." "Very good. Will repeat." "Played two-day return to big business." "A very good picture, well liked. Did not draw. People will not stand for dead stars." "Fine picture, deserves a big crowd." "Average business." "Fine picture. Big business." "Wonderful. A great picture."

Consensus—"Most excellent production with wonderful drawing power."

PERFECT LADY, A (GOLDWYN) KENNEDY (DEC. 8) DEC. 14

"Star blends the tear and the smile delightfully."—M. P. News.

Exhibitor Comment—"Big business solid week." "Excellent." "Well made picture, but star rather mis-cast. Madge does not look like a burlesque queen." "A delightful story. Give us more like this." "Extra big business."

Consensus—"Excellent picture with fine drawing powers."

PERFECT 36, A (GOLDWYN) MABEL NORMAND (NOV. 17) NOV. 29

Exhibitor Comment—"Censors spoiled this for Pennsylvania." "Average business." "Extra big to big business seven straight days." "Fair. Story weak." "Just the kind of a picture they want to see."

Mabel Normand in. Went over big to extra big business." "Big business; played with 'Shoulder Arms.' " "The poorest picture we ever screened. Took it off the first day." "One Goldwyn star we could do without."

POOR RICH MAN (METRO) BUSHMAN-BAYNE (DEC. 28) JAN. 4

"Two stars in a rather sluggish comedy-drama."—M. P. News.

PRETENDER, THE (TRIANGLE) WM. DESMOND (OCT. 13) OCT. 26

"Star registers good in clean Western picture."—M. P. News.

PRIVATE PEAT (ARTCRAFT) HAROLD R. PEAT (OCT. 13) OCT. 26

"Faithful treatment of a famous book should put this over."—M. P. News.

Exhibitor Comment—"Very good. Out of the ordinary." "Bad business. People care nothing for war pictures now." "Pleased but patrons were a little disappointed." "Patrons walked out on this." "Poor. Public doesn't seem to want war pictures after the war. Poor business seven days." "Peat scores here, but business wasn't big. Why? Just before Christmas." "Only fair. Director only fair. Peat not so good. War pictures not in demand."

Consensus—"Good production with good drawing powers."

(Six Parts)
"Sex play considered remarkable by interviewer."—M. P. News.

QUICKSAND (PARAMOUNT) DORO DALTON (DEC. 22) DEC. 28

"Reviewer thinks picture was wrecked at the start."—M. P. News.

Exhibitor Comment—"Fair picture." "Fairly good dramatic story. Held its interest and apparently satisfied."

RAINBOW TRAIL, THE (FOX) WILLIAM FARNUM (OCT. 13) OCT. 5

(Six Parts)
"Farnum scores again in Zane Grey sequel to 'Riders of the Purple Sage.'"—M. P. News.

Exhibitor Comment—"Great picture, to great business." "Not as good as 'Purple Sage.' Over 1,000 feet of repeat scenes from 'Riders of the Purple Sage.' Advertising issued is very misleading. Farnum saves it." "Here is a real star in a real production." "Average business." "Wonderful picture. Book it if you have to borrow money." "Well liked. Would have done more business but 'flu' hurt." "Fine. Drew big." "Good story. Well done. Business fair. Star holds his own." "Fine. Capacity for three days." "Fine picture. Needs these repeat scenes."

Consensus—"Excellent production with strong drawing powers."

RECKONING DAY, THE (TRIANGLE) BENNETT (NOV. 17) NOV. 2

"Snappy action to this tale of those familiar German spies."—M. P. News.

Exhibitor Comment—"Average business."

ROAD THROUGH THE DARK (SELECT) YOUNG (NOV. 25) DEC. 21

"Moral question raised in story that looks worthy."—M. P. News.

Exhibitor Comment—"Big business." "Very good. Big business."

"Fairly good. Would have been better without war stuff." "Average business."

Consensus—"Good production with strong drawing powers."

PICTURE BRAND STAR RELEASED PLAN BOOK

ROAD TO FRANCE, THE (WORLD) BLACKWELL (OCT. 14) OCT. 12

(Seven Parts)
"Absurd melodrama but title should draw the crowds in."—M. P. News.

Exhibitor Comment—"Other than patriotic sentiment this picture has not much to recommend." "An ordinary melodrama with some extra good shipbuilding scenes. Would have been better in five reels. Business so-so." "Great, went over big, first show after 'Flu' ban was lifted." "Lacks interest, no story, ordinary. Patrons displeased."

Consensus—"Just a fair picture with good drawing power in some sections."

ROMANCE OF TARZAN, THE (FIRST NATIONAL) ELMO LINCOLN (OCT. 13) NOV. 2

"Loads of action and thrills make this fitting sequel to 'Tarzan of the Apes.'"—M. P. News.

Exhibitor Comment—"Extra big business seven days." "Fair picture. Did not go as well as 'Tarzan.'" "Flu' killed business." "Big business." "Big first three days, average three and finished big."

Consensus—"Excellent production with big drawing powers."

Peter J. Schaefer Passes Fiftieth Milestone

PETER J. SCHAEFER, vice-president of Jones, Linick & Schaefer, of Chicago, passed his fiftieth birthday January 4. In observance of the day he gave a party at the Illinois Athletic Club to twenty-one friends and associates. Among those present were: Aaron Jones, Adolph Linick, Judge Joseph Sabbath, Nathan Ascher, Max Goldstine, Samuel Schweitzer, Samuel I. Levin, Ralph T. Kettering, Emil Mayer, John G. Burch, Norman E. Field, Louis J. Jones, Sigmund Faller, Leonard H. Wolf, Sam Kohn, Jack Seeley, Rollo Davis, William Wade and Mr. Schaefer's three brothers, Charles J., Fred W. and Frank G. Schaefer.

High School Students as "4 Minute Men"

THE introduction of High School students for the Four-Minute Men at the moving picture houses in the Red Cross Christmas roll call, has proven a worth-while innovation. Members of the senior, the junior and the sophomore classes participated in school tryouts to determine who should represent their classes at the several theatres. As a result it developed several spirited oratorical contests in school, the prizes hung up being the privilege of appearing before the theatre audiences in teams of three members each. Some times there were two boys and one girl on the team—on one occasion the girls had the boys beaten two to one. At that it was a good experience for the high school students. It served to get the Red Cross campaign before the picture house patrons and it created a closer bond of interest between the high school and the motion picture theatres.

Children Ban on Racine Theatres

INFLUENZA has again had its effect on the public, and at a meeting of the board of health last week, it was decided to clamp the lid on the city again.

However, the new ruling does not affect the movie houses directly, as they have not been included in the list of "shut downs."

All schools have been closed for two weeks, but the lid is expected to be lifted by the first of the year. All children under the age of sixteen years, inclusive, will not be allowed to go to the movies, or on the business districts of the city, whether accompanied with parents or not.

This ruling has perhaps had a bigger effect on the movie proposition here than all the other rulings together.

Hoo's Hoo in Hoosierdom

Seeing Indianapolis from an Exchange Window

A FAREWELL banquet was tendered Joe Schnitzer, erstwhile division manager for a bunch of Universal exchanges, who is shortly to assume the general sales management of the well-known Universal. Joe holds a tender spot in the hearts of all exchangemen, who, by the by, are "kicking in" for the feed. Joe has easily earned the position and leaves Indianapolis loaded down with honest-to-goodness wishes of God-speed. Careful arrangements were made with the bell-hops to page all the exchangemen present, for the benefit of any strange exhibitors who wandered in.

AT THE ANNUAL election of officers of the Indianapolis Board of Exchange Managers on December 30, every officer was re-elected. Schrader of Pathe, chairman; White of World, vice-chairman; Miss Elsie Green of the Chamber of Commerce, secretary, and Floyd Brown of First National, treasurer. There was quite a scramble for the office of treasurer, but Brown won the day by threatening to keep the four dollars that was in the treasury, in case he lost. As a result, he got all the votes, including his own.

EXTENSIVE CHANGES are under way for the Rialto theatre which occupies a flat-iron corner at the intersection of three of the busiest streets downtown. The main floor is to be pushed back over ground now occupied by a restaurant, and along with this comes a larger lobby. Mr. Leonard, the owner, estimates the change will give him an additional three hundred seats, which will keep the other houses on the hop.

AMONG THE distinguished visitors of the week are to be numbered T. Guy Perfect of the Princess and Empress, at Huntington; "Ole Scout" Benny Van Borssum of the Crescent and Savoy, Terre Haute; who holds the world's record for Hart pictures, and Becker, of Becker & Arnold, Vincennes, who breezed in for a moment between trains on his way East.

MISS ROSE TAPLEY, at present with Famous Players-Lasky, arrived in town Thursday for a short visit among friends and a series of lectures, to be delivered before several women's clubs in the interest of co-operation between the clubs and the theatres. A lack of understanding of mutual needs and aims has retarded this work heretofore, and such expert attention as can be given it by Miss Tapley should accomplish a world of good.

C. C. WALLACE, Cincinnati sales manager of Famous Players-Lasky, burst into the old town last week, dashing hither and yon among the trade, and as hurriedly dashed away after shaking down several more contracts and leaving the dead and dying enemy upon the field. It is confidentially understood that several of the local exchanges are planning to meet all Cincinnati trains hereafter.

DAME RUMOR hath it that another mammoth theatre on the order of the Circle may become a reality during the present year. Several favorable sites have been mentioned in this connection, all of which seem reasonably suited for the purpose. There is no telling, but by this time next year Indianapolis may find herself the god-mother of another frisky child of the silent art, making foolish noises after the fashion of a forty-piece orchestra.

Elgin Architect Plans Chicago Theatre

IT was announced from Elgin, Ill., this week, that D. W. Postle, Elgin architect, will draw plans for the motion picture theatre into which the old Inter-Ocean Building in Chicago will be remodeled. It will seat 1,500.

Exhibitor Believes in Thirteen and—Also Friday

MANAGER VOLLERT, of the Idea theatre, in Fond du Lac, Wis., has no fears of either Friday or the number "13" being unlucky, either singly or in combination. At any event it was on Friday, January 10, that the thirteenth episode of "Hands Up," the Pathe serial, was put on at the Idea and it went even better than its predecessors—and that is saying a good deal. Mr. Vollert declares that "Hands Up" has proven one of the best serials ever thrown on an Idea screen.

"Public interest has turned from war pictures to pictures of the boys in the Army of Occupation," declares Manager Vollert of the Idea. He finds that the War Review pictures furnished by the Government, and which are a regular feature at the Idea, constitute a good drawing card.

Manager Smith, of the Bijou, in Fond du Lac, is of the opinion that weather conditions are taking some of the enthusiasm out of picture fans. Lila Lee, in "Such a Little Pirate," on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, January 9, 10 and 11, was entitled to better patronage than she received—but the weather was to blame.

Notes From La Porte

AFTER consulting with photoplay house managers it becomes evident that there is a great lack of short one-reel comedies in Northern Indiana and many of the managers are being forced to use re-issues which are not sufficiently old to get across with the public. The managers feel the great need for these productions to fill out their program as a supplement to their feature. The old Keystone comedies being revived by G. A. Lynch Producers are still fresh in the minds of the fans and when a manager flashes these pictures on his screen he is hurting his business, as they are recognized. There are many other instances of this. When questioned the managers state that it is practically impossible for them to secure the short comic features.

FILM men and exchange men in this circuit are looking forward to better times in this coming month. Since the "flu" ban has been lifted business on the whole has been poor. Matinees in Gary, LaPorte and other cities have been practically a loss and during the week the night performances muster out what would have been known as a corporal's guard. Now that the holiday season is over it may be possible to induce the people to attend the pictures.

NOW that regulations are under way in Ohio to close the theatres on Sundays, the agitators in Indiana are gaining weight. The moving picture men are making a united effort to forestall any definite action until after the influenza scare has passed over.

Interesting Items of Elgin

MANAGER WILLIAM P. FAY of the Temple has stepped into big city theatre pace with the contracting for the "Houdini" serial for the fifteen weeks to follow January 23. On that day he will show the first of the series, and on Thursdays thereafter they will feature his bill. Elgin has never had taste of pictures of this sort, but Mr. Fay is hopeful that the novelty and mystery will attract a class indifferent to less complicated pictures.

MANAGER FAY has also signed contract this winter with the Affiliated Exchange. He recently showed their issue of "The Kaiser's Finish" to crowds that seemed to like it immensely. Through them he secured "Lafayette, We Come" for Saturday, January 11. Billie Rhodes in "The Girl of My Dreams" is another attraction to come in late January to the Temple.

THE week of January 5 is reported by Manager Fay of the Temple the best in his history of theatre manager. Mr. Fay acquired the Temple last July, and has made every possible effort during his apprenticeship in the profession, to give Elgin just the thing it most wants in the film line. He has been encouraged by increasing patronage and approval of his programs.

THE bill for the week of January 5 included: Harry Mesthayer and Gloria Swanson in "Wife or Country," Ruth Clifford in "The Cabaret Girl," Bessie Barriscale in "A White Lie," Claire Anderson and Joe Bennett in "Crown Jewels," William S. Hart in "Lion of the Hills," the O. Henry story "Lure of the Circus," and the regular Fatty Arbuckle comedy, and Hearst weekly features.

ENID BENNETT in "A Desert Wooing" made great hit at the Grand. It was shown there Wednesday and Thursday, January 8 and 9. Patrons praised the photography of the picture as well as the very lovely settings and the high standard of the acting and the play.

ELGIN "laughed itself silly" over the antics and pretty play of Constance Talmadge in "Sauce for the Goose" on Friday and Saturday, January 10 and 11. The uncommonly pretty interiors and artistic photography were a source of admiration by many of the crowds which saw the picture. There is universal opinion, judging from lobby comment, that Constance Talmadge is improving with each new picture effort.

D. W. GRIFFITH'S production, "The Great Love," played to big crowds at the Grand theatre the week end of January 2, 3 and 4. The picture seems to hit the favor of fans and did excellent business at regular matinee prices and 25 cent admission at night.

EXPERIMENT was made Tuesday and Wednesday, January 14 and 15, by Manager Fay of the Temple, in bringing Hall Caine's "Manx Man" film play to the Temple at regular prices. Considerable advertising was done before the showing of the picture and high school pupils particularly urged to see it.

NORMA TALMADGE, whose popularity with Elgin audiences is rapidly growing, led the bill at the Grand theatre for the week of January 12. She was shown Friday and Saturday in "The Forbidden City." Other pictures offered that week by the Grand were "The Better Half" with Alice Brady and Marion Davies in "The Burden of Proof." The Allied Weekly War Review and the Pathe Weekly were also shown.

EVELYN NESBIT and her son Russell Thaw in "Her Mistake" were shown at the Temple Sunday, January 12. Other pictures of the week were Eddie Polo in "The Lure of the Circus," a Wolfville story, "The Coming of Faro Nell," Lyon and Moran in "Don't Weaken," J. Marney Sherry in "The Reckoning Day," J. Warren Kerrigan in "Prisoner of the Pines" and the Christie comedy, "Two is Company."

MANAGER R. W. CROCKER of the Star theatre was anticipating one of the box office rushes of the season in offering Charlie Chaplin in "Shoulder Arms" on Wednesday and Thursday, January 15 and 16. The picture was shown at advanced prices: 15 and 7 cents for matinee and 20 and 10 cents for evening.

AMONG offerings of the Star for the week of January 12 were "The Strange Woman" with Gladys Brockwell, Douglas Fairbanks in "The Man From Painted Post," the trained chimpanzee in "Mongrels" and Alice Howell in "The Cabbage Queen."

MARY PICKFORD in "Stella Maris" led the bill at the Crystal the week of January 12, shown there Tuesday evening. Other pictures of the week were Zoe Rae in "Danger Within," Episode Six of the serial, "Hands Up!" the Joker comedy, "Don't Flirt," Dorothy Dalton in "Flare Up Sal," Fatty Arbuckle in "The Waiters' Ball," "The Magnificent Meddler," the comedy, "Flat Heads and Flivvers," "Cavanaugh of the Forest Rangers," the Happy Hooligan comedy, "Judge Ranny's Day Off." Features to come include "The Zepelin's Last Raid" and William S. Hart in "Blue Blazes Rawden."

MANAGER CROCKER of the Star, who began showing of the Pearl White serial, "The Lightning Raider" with the new year, terms it the best, by far, that he has seen in the way of serials in his four years of their showing in his playhouse.

"THE SAFETY CURTAIN," a picture which made tremendous hit at first local showing, was on the Orpheum theatre's bill for Tuesday, January 14. Other pictures of the week were "A Soul Without Windows" with Ethel Clayton, Hale Hamilton in "$5000 An Hour," Evelyn Nesbit and Russell Thaw in "The Woman Who Gave," Carlyle Blackwell in "The Road to France."

"TARZAN OF THE APES" will have first showing in Elgin when it comes to the Orpheum Wednesday and Thursday, January 22 and 23.

"BELIEVE ME, XANTIPPE," with Wally Reid, made great killing at the Grand the week of January 5. The picture was voted one of the best in weeks.

Gathered In Green Bay

ALICE BRADY and David Powell were presented in the Grand theatre December 19-20-21-22, in "The Better Half," a Select film. Evelyn Nesbit's "Redemption" played December 16-17-18.

PAULINE FREDERICK played in the Paramount photoplay, "Madame Jealousy," at the Orpheum theatre, December 19-20-21-22.

MADGE KENNEDY, the Goldwyn star, played December 20-21 in "A Perfect Lady," in the Colonial theatre. "Pals First" was presented December 18-19. Vitagraph's "Clutch of Circumstances" preceded it on December 16-17.

"THE MODEL'S CONFESSION," featuring Mary McLaren, was produced in the Royal theatre December 20-21. Margery Wilson was screened in the Triangle film, "Marked Cards," at the Royal theatre December 17. Mack Swain was seen in a Mack Sennett comedy, "Ambrose's Cup of Woe," in the same program. "Hell's End" was the December 16 attraction.

INFLUENZA is subsiding in Green Bay under the quarantine method. On December 20-21 only nine new cases developed and the number of recoveries reached a total of 28 in these days.

They Say in Chicago That—

THE E. E. FULTON CO. is making a shipment of a line of their well-known Fulco specialties to Chile, the sale having been consummated by the Inter-Ocean Film Corp., of New York, which has charge of all the export business for the Fulco Product, except Canada. E. E. Fulton, the active head of the company is enthusiastic over the volume of business that has started 1919, and figures that this will be a banner year for every one in the motion picture industry.

P. H. CONLEY, proprietor of the Majestic theatre of Reedsburg, Wis., has been in Chicago recently, arranging two day runs for more of his pictures. The fear of the "flu" has had a more or less detrimental effect on the people of his community, and he reports business slow in returning to normal. He is going after the public in an active way, using direct by mail and special commutation tickets which he terms "Happiness Contribution Ticket," enabling the purchaser to contribute to some child a free ticket, with each adult ticket purchased, without added cost to the purchaser of the ticket.

JOSEPH G. RHODE of the Rhode Opera House, Kenosha, Wis., has been in Chicago and perfected arrangements for many Artcraft-Paramount Productions. The gentleman says business is good—it always is with live wires like Mr. Rhode...

A. SIEGFRIED, proprietor of the Bijou theatre at Decatur, Ill., says that Lila Lee pictures are proving his best bet.

DEE ROBINSON, while in Chicago arranging his bookings, reports action taken to compel the city of Peoria to either allow the theatres to reopen or close business houses, pending the "flu" scare. Similar action is reported by Manager Dikeman of the Grand Opera House, Fort Madison, Iowa.

JACK FULRATH, of Savanna, Ill., reports the reopening of the theatres of his city, following a closed period of three months.

FRANK AND LENA NAZRA who recently purchased the Lyric theatre of Gary, Ind., have been in Chicago, looking over the field of features.

A LARGER field for short subjects is being developed through the use of Burton Holmes travel and the Paramount-Bray magazine of the screen, in clubs, hotels, homes, schools, etc., many of these subjects, as well as some of the productions of greater length are meeting with a greater popularity in private entertainments or entertainments given for clubs and societies, lecturers taking the pictures as text for their talk of the evening.

MISS E. E. SMITH of the Pastime theatre, Clayton, Ill., passed through Chicago this week on her way to her home town, after a very interesting visit in Detroit where she gathered many new ideas in picture presentation.

MANAGER A. J. BLOOMBURG, of the New Rialto theatre, of Racine, Wisconsin, reports that their three day run of D. W. Griffith's "The Greatest Thing in Life" gave the clientele of his theatre greater satisfaction than anything he has shown to date.

"THE BIRTH OF A RACE" engagement at the Playhouse has been extended four weeks, following which engagement it will be presented in New York, Philadelphia, and Pittsburgh.

FRANK J. HIBBARD, JR., who brought the "Birth of a Race" to successful production has resigned the General Management and in the future will confine his attentions to the Ad-Photoscope Co.

W. J. ROY, manager of the Chateau theatre, Kankakee, Ill., has been in Chicago arranging his booking. While in the Motion Picture News office he reported that business was keeping up in a satisfactory manner.

"THE WILD CAT OF PARIS" the big six reel Universal Special, featuring Priscilla Dean, opened at the Casino theatre, Chicago, the week of the thirteenth for a run.

JERRY ABRAMS, Joe Brandt's personal representative, after a month's stay in Chicago has left for a trip of the exchanges. He is working out a newspaper co-operative plan originated by Mr. Brandt.

BERNARD DENNY, for nine years operator at the Garden theatre, Canton, Ill., occupied his time during the recent "flu" shutdown by constructing a miniature White House and Capitol building which is being used as a stage setting for pictures at the Garden.

PAULINE FREDERICK was a visitor in Chicago for a few days, on her way from New York to the Coast.

JACK MEREDITH, has just been appointed Sales Manager of the Goldwyn, Chicago office. Good Boy—Jack.

HAROLD S. SOLIMON opened a new theatre, the Rialto, on Christmas Day at Jacksonville, Ill.

HARRY WILLARD, recently appointed City Salesman of the Metro Screen Classics in Chicago reports business "great," and that all of his old friends and customers are rallying to his support.

JACKSONVILLE, Ill., was quarantined from October 15 to December 20.

MAJESTIC theatre, Toluca, Ill., opened its doors again when W. E. Parricklow, the former owner returned from the Army.

LOUIS CLAIR, traveling auditor for Metro's western offices, has been in Chicago giving things the "once-over."

AARON J. JONES and family spent the holidays at Atlantic City.

R. C. MACMILLAN, manager of Ascher Bros. Kenwood theatre, has the distinction of running one of the most successful New Year's eve performances that that theatre has ever known.

W. E. WEINSHENKER, manager of Ascher Bros. Milford theatre, has built the business of that house up by his hard work and unique methods of presentation.

I. L. LESSERMAN of the Universal Chicago office announces that the first picture made featuring Jas. J. Corbett—for twenty years known as "Gentleman Jim"—will be called "The Midnight Man."

SID GOLDMAN, the Chicago manager of Jewel Productions is so full of enthusiasm over their forthcoming picture—"The Heart of Humanity" that he resembles a walking, talking dynamo.

LEE HERZ, president of the Silee Corp., is leaving for New York to look over the field and grab off all the big features obtainable. He reports that the "Ashes of Love" is going away beyond its fondest expectations and making the Silee Exchange many friends among the exhibitors by its drawing qualities.

With Dubuque Exhibitors

ON New Year's day fairly good pictures were shown at Dubuque theatres. The Grand had the third day's run of "America's Answer"; the Princess put on "The Caillaux Case"; the Liberty starred "Bessie Barriscale in "Patriotism" and the Dreamland featured Virginia Pearson in "The Liar." The Family has Norma Talmadge in "Ghosts of Yesterday," the best and most successful picture shown in Dubuque on New Year's day.

DOROTHY GISH, unusually popular here since her characterization of the "Little Disturber" in "Hearts of the World," proved a good drawing card at the Grand, Thursday and Friday, January 2 and 3, when she appeared in "The Hun Within." Miss Gish's charm is becoming more and more noticeable with each new production. She is a dainty little actress, who always manages to get a bit of comedy into her scenes that is more than pleasing. Her next vehicle, "The Hope Chest," is being anxiously awaited by a host of admirers, both old and new.

"OUR LITTLE WIFE," with Madge Kennedy, shown at the Family theatre Thursday, January 2, met with the hearty approval of Family patrons. In roles like this Miss Kennedy is at her best. The lighter the play, the more nonsensical, the better her fans like it. Miss Kennedy threatens to out-run Miss Marsh in popularity at the Family, and that is saying a great deal, for Mae Marsh holds the place of being one of the best-liked players who appear on the Family screen.

GRAND patrons are joyful these days, for that theatre has contracted for Paramount pictures again. The first Paramount, "Her Country First," with Vivian Martin, was shown on Sunday, January 5, and the theatre's patrons showed their appreciation of Paramount's return by filling the theatre to its capacity at all shows. Manager Maclay will run Paramount offerings three times a week, and if all the pictures draw as well as "Her Country First," he says he will "get rich quick." A number of splendid plays have been booked, among them being "On the Quiet," with John Barrymore; "Heart of the Wild," with Elsie Ferguson; and "Out of a Clear Sky," with Marguerite Clark.

THE Princess has made no change in its weekday program so far, because the pictures shown at present are the best that can be secured. Paramount, Artcraft, Fox, Select Pictures and Goldwyn offerings make up the program, and one could not wish for better pictures. Following are some of the attractions to be shown during the latter part of January and the first week of February: "The She Devil," with Theda Bara; "The Kaiser's Shadow," with Dorothy Dalton; "Amarilly of Clothes Line Alley," with Mary Pickford; "Money Mad," with Mae Marsh; "The Widow's Might," with Julien Eltinge; "The Safety Curtain," with Norma Talmadge; "The Woman Who Gave," with Evelyn Nesbit; and "The Claw of the Hun," with Charles Ray. Three Vitagraph features, "Diplomatic Mission," with Earl Williams, "Mating," with Gladys Leslie, and "The King of Diamonds," with Harry Morey, will be shown January 19 and 26, February 2, respectively.

"THE CAVELL CASE," with Julia Arthur, will be shown at the Princess Monday and Tuesday, January 13 and 14.

THE Jewel Production Company's special feature, "The Surrender of the German Fleet," was shown at the Majestic theatre, Sunday, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, of the week of January 5.

ON Saturday night, Baby Marie and Osborne played at the Liberty theatre in "Winning Grandma," a delightful photoplay in five reels. Little Miss Osborne is one of the sweetest children on the screen and is very popular with the patrons of the Liberty.

"EVE'S DAUGHTER," with Billie Burke, was shown at the Princess theatre Friday and Saturday, January 2 and 3, to good houses. Miss Burke is in great favor here and always draws from average to big houses.

THE favorite serial in Dubuque these days is "A Fight for Millions," with William Duncan. The picture is shown at the Grand every Saturday, and the way it is attended is truly surprising. The fans are very enthusiastic too, and when Mr. Duncan gains a victory over his enemies, the applause is deafening. On Saturday, January 4, a traveling attraction, "Furs and Frills," held the boards, so the serial was run on Sunday, in conjunction with "Her Country First," with Vivian Martin.

WILLIAM FOX'S great production, "A Daughter of the Gods," with Annette Kellermann, was shown at the Liberty theatre Sunday, January 5. There was no increase in admission.

"THE ETERNAL TEMPTRESS," with Lina Cavalieri, was the Sunday, January 5, feature at the Family theatre. While an actress of ability, Miss Cavalieri is not very well liked at the Family, and her pictures only draw an average crowd.

WALLACE REID played at the Princess theatre Sunday, January 5, in a very good Paramount attraction, "Less than Kin." Mr. Reid, like Jack Pickford, is a player who never grows tiresome; when his pictures are shown one is always sure of a good entertainment. A Wallace Reid production means good business for an exhibitor.

MANAGER BOYLE, of the Dreamland, advertised Tom Mix as "the man who never fakes," when that player appeared at his theatre in "Treat 'Em Rough." Mix is a player who never shirks; when he does stunts they are always the real things. A regular Mix crowd turned out to see this picture and Manager Boyle did rushing business all day.

ON Friday, January 3, Clara Kimball Young played at the Star theatre at Decorah, Ia., in "Shirley Kaye." An Allied War Review was also shown. On Saturday the "Surrender of the German Fleet" and "Things We Love," with Wallace Reid, was the program.

THE GRAND theatre at Anamosa, Ia., presented Wallace Reid in that famous photoplay, "The Firefly of France," on Saturday, January 4. Reid is almost as popular at Anamosa as he is in Dubuque, and consequently the Grand had good business that day. "His Smothered Love," a Mack Sennett comedy and "The Surrender of the German Fleet" was also shown.

ON Saturday, January 4, the Belknap theatre, at Hopkinton, Ia., presented "Their Compact," with Francis Bushman and Beverly Bayne, to full houses.

"THE WITCH WOMAN," with Ethel Clayton, was very well received by the patrons of the Grand theatre at Galena, Ill., where it was shown Friday, January 3. On Saturday Miss June Caprice appeared in "The Camouflage," an extremely likable comedy of youth. On Sunday Billie Burke was starred in "Pursuit of Polly," at Galena's other theatre, "The Dreamland." The Monday program at the Dreamland was "The Lesson," one of the funniest and cleanest comedies produced. Constance Talmadge and Tom Moore, the stars, won the favor of everyone who saw the play.

THE BLENDE theatre at Benton, Wis., is doing good business with the Pathe serial "Hands Up," with Ruth Roland. An episode is shown every Saturday night to unusually large houses.

News and Gossip of Springfield Theatres

ELSIE FERGUSON and Eugene O'Brien delighted Springfield with their work in "Under the Greenwood Tree," which was shown at the Gaiety for three days, starting December 29. "Wives of Men," which followed for four days was a "knockout" in every sense of the word. Fred Stone came to the Gaiety for four days in "Under the Top," starting January 5, and pleased all who saw the picture. "The Village Chestnut," a Mack Sennett comedy with Chester Conklin and Louise Fazenda, was on the bill with "Under the Top," and it was one of the funniest pictures ever shown in this city. Mae Marsh came to the Gaiety on Thursday, January 9 in "The Racing Strain," her newest Goldwyn picture.

MANAGER W. D. CAVE played "Hearts of the World" one week at the Chatterton, starting Sunday, January 19. This was the second engagement for Springfield, the first one also having been for a week, early in August.

D. W. GRIFFITH'S "Romance of Happy Valley," "Little Women" and "Sporting Life" are billed to play the Gaiety the latter part of January.

CHARLIE CHAPLIN played a return engagement at the Vaudette in "Shoulder Arms," starting Thursday, January 9. Wallace Reid in "The Dub" was on the same bill. Marguerite Clark in "Little Miss Hoover" came for four days, starting Sunday, January 12.

GEORGE WALSH delighted big crowds at the Lyric for two days with "I'll Say So," his latest Fox play. Alice Joyce played one day at the same theatre in "The Captain's Captain," and then had to move to make room for "Virtuous Wives."

THE day following New Year's brought to this city the first real cold snap of the year, with the result that the motion picture theatres were not patronized heavily on January 2 and 3. By the last of the week, Saturday, the weather had moderated, and big crowds were in attendance at all playhouses. The Gaiety had great business with "Wives of Men," Doll-Van special production, one of the best pictures ever brought to this city. It is safe to assume that had conditions been normal the theatre would have had the biggest business in its history, for everyone in town was talking about it.

THE LYRIC had four good days with Anita Stewart in "Virtuous Wives," her first First National attraction. The Princess showed Gaby Deslys for three days in "Infatuation" with satisfactory results; the Vaudette enjoyed good patronage for four days with Enid Bennett in "Fuss and Feathers." Taken as a whole, business for New Year's Day and the days following was entirely satisfactory.

THE PRINCESS had Louise Huff for one day, Saturday, January 4, in "The Sea Waif," a World production. Fannie Ward came for three days in "The Narrow Path," on Sunday, January 5, and the first day drew great crowds. Baby Marie Osborne was the attraction on January 8, and the next three days went to Nazimova in a return engagement of "Eye for Eye." This picture was shown at the Princess for four days, but the prevalence of influenza at that time prevented many fans from seeing it. These disappointed folks prevailed upon Manager Kunz to bring the play back, so it was shown for three days more, being the only picture except "Over The Top" to have a seven day run at the Princess.

THE LYRIC has booked Metro service again.

MANAGER KERASOTES, of the Royal, says that except for big specials, he finds the daily change nets him the most money. However, Mr. Gus says he is always ready to play a good picture for as many days as business holds up. For the week of January 5-11, the Royal had: Sunday, Helen Gibson in a two-reel Universal, and Eddie Polo in "The Lure of the Circus;" Monday, Mary Miles Minter in "The Ghost of Rosy Taylor;" Tuesday, Vitagraph's "Baree, son of Kazan;" Wednesday, "Hereditry," World production with Barbara Castle-ton; Thursday, "The Masque of Life," a foreign made picture; Friday, Gladys Brockwell in "The Bird of Prey," Fox feature; Saturday, a Bluebird special.

THE CAPITOL is going along at a nice pace, playing Triangle, Select, and Goldwyn plays, with a special now and then. With Fox comedies, Sennett comedies and other short subjects, Manager Maisel always manages to have a bill his customers like, with the result that the Capitol is nearly always filled.

W. D. CAVE of the Chatterton says he has not yet decided as to whether he will play "The Birth of a Race," the picture that is now running at the Playhouse, Chicago.

"A ROMANCE OF HAPPY VALLEY," D. W. Griffith production, came to the Gaiety Sunday, January 19, for four days' run. Every Griffith picture has proved a good drawing card for this big theatre.

TOM MIX in "Treat 'em Rough" came to the Lyric for two days, beginning Sunday, January 12.

THE management of the Pekin theatre (colored) says business is good. Patrons of the Pekin demand serials, so the manager shows five a week. Ruth Roland is the big star with the colored folks, and draws a full house every time her name is displayed.

THE CAPITOL showed the first chapter of "The Lightning Raider," Pathe, with Pearl White, on Sunday, January 5 and great crowds were in attendance. Manager Maisel gave good free presents to every child, and a free photograph of Pearl White to every one who cut the coupon from the January 4 issue of the Saturday Evening Post. Mack Sennett's "Ladies First" was on the bill with "The Lightning Raider" and made the crowds shriek with laughter.

BEN ROVIN continues to grow rich showing William Farnum pictures. "Fighting Blood" was the attraction on Sunday, January 5, and as many as could crowd into the playhouse from noon till near midnight saw it. Hundreds of others were disappointed, not being able to get in. George Walsh in "The Kid is Clever," Theda Bara in "The Serpent" and Harold Lockwood in "Broadway Bill" were some of the pictures shown for the week of January 5-11.

HARRY WEISS, of the Central Film company, Chicago, was in the city again last week, getting accounts for the Max Pickford, Norma Talmadge and other First National productions. According to Weiss, Fairbanks, Hart and Ray are negotiating with his company.

MADLAINE TRAVERSE, new Fox star, had two good days at the Lyric with "The Danger Zone." Harry Morey followed for two days in "Hoarded Assets," a Vitagraph production and on January 9, 10 and 11, William Farnum was seen in "The Rainbow Trail," sequel to "Riders of the Purple Sage" shown here three weeks ago. There had been a great demand on the part of Lyric patrons for an early showing of "The Rainbow Trail," the entire city seemingly having read Zane Grey's story.

THE smile that betrays a satisfactory state of affairs is still worn by Louis Kerasotes, who operates the Savoy. Lo says things are great, and that he hasn't a kick to make, fault to find. The following pictures, were played for a week of January 5-11; Sunday, chapter 8 of "A Fight for Millions," Helen Gibson in "The Secret Peril," and Al Howell in "The Cabbage Queen;" Monday and Tuesday, "The Crisis," special Selig production; Wednesday, episode 16

"The Brass Bullet," a two reel Broadway star feature, and a Star comedy with Lyons and Moran; Thursday, Monroe Salisbury in "That Devil Bateese;" Friday, "The Iron Test" and other pictures, and Saturday, Dollie Ledgerwood Matters in "The Mother and The Law."

THE MAJESTIC is now showing chapter II of "A Fight for Millions."

A GOODLY sprinkling of men in uniform is now to be seen at all the theatres at all times of the day. The boys are returning every day, which means more money in the pockets of the exhibitors. It is a surprising thing, but some of the local theatres have had better patronage during the war than they had before America got into the fight. When all the boys get back it will surely mean good times for the theatre men.

THE EMPRESS, Palace and North End Circle theatres report that business is generally satisfactory. The cold weather of the past few days has put a crimp in the attendance, but this is only temporary.

THE VAUDETTE has Marguerite Clark coming in "Little Miss Hoover," which is said to be a very charming photoplay. Manager Watts has been forced to substitute for Burton Holmes Travelogs and Bray Pictographs for the past two weeks, and has been using Pathe News.

Katterjohn Discusses Future of War Drama

A question which is just now agitating the minds of many producers and exhibitors of motion pictures is that which relates to the present status of the war film, from the standpoint of its worth as a profitable attraction.

Is a story dealing with the war a suitable subject for production, now that the war is over? Has the public become satiated with war pictures, as such? If not, why do exhibitors continually proclaim in their advertising that "this is not a war picture?" What is the future of the war drama?

Monte M. Katterjohn, producing head of Katterjohn Films, delves beneath the surface in a discussion of these interesting points, and presents a clear-cut analysis of the situation.

"To a superficial observer," says Mr. Katterjohn, "it would appear that the war film has had its day—that the theatre-going public has become surfeited with pictures dealing with the great conflict whether the scenes be laid on the battlefields of France or in the spy-infected areas of the United States.

"It is claimed that such productions have now been relegated to the unprofitable class. Many with whom I have talked have expressed themselves positively on this point, and have announced their intention of having nothing further to do with war plays.

"I find myself unable to agree with their contention or their conclusions, without qualifying them with a number of 'ifs.' I cannot believe that the world could so quickly lose interest in the most tremendously dramatic period in all history. The real fault has not been in the selection of the subject or the background, but in the character and quality of the plays created.

"Piffle has been substituted for patriotism; German spies have been dragged in by the heels whether they 'belonged' or not, simply to give every story a 'war angle;' pointlessodge-podges have been thrown together, labeled with flamboyant titles, and dumped upon the film market; flag-waving has taken the place of plot and heart interest—and because these things have lost their vogue, we are told that the public is tired of war pictures!

"The objection is not to war pictures. It is to the kind of war pictures. There has been no lessening of the popularity of Griffith's 'Hearts of the World' since the signing of the armistice, and its drawing power gives no indication of diminishing for a long time to come. No motion picture ever produced has been more thoroughly steeped in an atmosphere of war; yet it still continues as one of the great film successes of all time.

"But the screen is its own worst enemy, and its pointless, tiresome productions unfailingly react against every producer and every exhibitor in the industry. It is the poorly conceived war drama which has brought this class of picture into disrepute, and which threatens to cast into the discard the very type of film which possessed unequalled possibilities both as to production and exhibition.

"The future favor of the war drama rests with the producers themselves, and not in the fickle mind of an over-fed public. There must be an earnest effort to secure stories which combine logical plot and virile imagination; there must be human characters with human hearts and impulses; decidedly, there must be something in the stories besides the flag. It is the weak act of the bill that waves the Stars and Stripes for an applause finish.

"Countless thousands of our soldiers returning from France will want to live over again with their families the scenes through which they have passed during the great conflict. Though the war is over, the entire world is still bound up in its memories.

"If the producer will do his share, and do it superlatively well, the exhibitor will no longer protest that 'this is not a war play.' He will shout from the housetops, 'This IS a war play—and its GREAT.'"

THE manager of the Dreamland theatre at Galena says that he has "just a mere little theatre, but the biggest and best photoplays obtainable!" A glance at his program for the week of January 5 proves that he was correct where the pictures were concerned. Monday, "How Could You, Jean?" with Mary Pickford; Tuesday, "The Turn of the Wheel," with Geraldine Farrar; Wednesday, "The House of Gold," with Emmy Wehlen; Thursday, "The Passing of the Third Floor Back," with Sir Johnston Forbes Robertson; Friday, "Mrs. Leffingwell's Boots," with Constance Talmadge; Saturday, "His Own Home Town," with Charles Ray.

THE BLENDE theatre at Benon, Wis., showed two very good features during the week of January 5, "The Winding Trail," with Viola Dana, and "Baby Mine," with Madge Kennedy.

THE PLAZA theatre at Manchester started out the new year with a Mary Pickford feature, "Amarilly of Clothes Line Alley," and followed that play with a number of fine features, among which were "Love Letters," with Dorothy Dalton; "By Right of Purchase," with Norma Talmadge! "Revelation," with Alla Nazimova and "A Successful Adventure," with May Allison.

ETHEL CLAYTON and FATTY ARBUCKLE shared the honors of the day at the Grand, Monday and Tuesday, January 6 and 7. Miss Clayton was starred in "The Girl Who Came Back," a highly interesting Paramount drama, while Fatty Arbuckle played in "The Cook," a screamingly funny two-reel comedy. One of these stars alone is enough to draw a full house, and when the two stars were, shown the Grand had packed houses all evening.

"HEADIN' SOUTH," with Douglas Fairbanks, was the feature at the Princess theatre January 6 and 7. The inimitable "Doug" was better than ever; he was greeted by large and enthusiastic audiences who applauded him again and again. The picture itself was of a higher standard than the usual Fairbanks productions—in fact, many Dubuquers considered it his greatest photoplay.

MANAGER YOUNG of the Family theatre presented "The Marionettes," with Clara Kimball Young, for the January 4 program. As the frumpy little country girl and later as the brilliant society woman, Miss Young scored a big hit. Though an old picture, "The Marionettes" drew a crowd worthy of a first-run feature.

"AMERICA'S ANSWER," the second official war film, was shown at the Dreamland theatre Tuesday, January 7.

What Racine Is Doing

MANAGER TOM NORMAN of the Rex theatre, returned from Chicago, having buried his father there, who has been suffering for years with an internal disease.

THE REX played Gladys Brockwell to a crowded house for two days in "The Strange Woman." Constance Talmadge in "The Shuttle" also went well, matinee and evening. Evidently this theatre has a monopoly on the north side people, as it is usually patronized by people from this section of the city, especially now that winter has set in.

A HEAVY snow storm put the Jinx on the motion picture business here Christmas Eve, but Christmas Day the crowds were more than fair.

THE "flu" ban has been lifted, the scare is over, and the city is practically free from this epidemic. The ban was lifted last week.

CAL DEVOL, violinist at the Rex, wrote the words and music of a new semi-classical song, "Alabama Lullaby," a fine piece of art, which he is playing regularly at the theatre, and which is being published and financed by Chicago publishers. He is now at work on two other additions, both of which deal with the end of the war, and the returning Yank. In these, he is assisted by Ethel DeVol.

THE BIJOU, like the Rex, is doing a good business, altho the afternoon crowds are usually very small. Manager McKivett, like Manager Norman, is not running any big features until after the holidays. Mack says he's thru with war pictures. "The people don't want war," said Mack.

THINGS at the Palace are very quiet, since the admission price has been reduced to 10c. Thus far, the management is not running any feature stuff.

THE RIALTO pulled a big surprise on the public, when they announced that beginning Sunday, December 29th, five acts of first class Vaudeville would be shown there regularly on the Sabbath Day, in addition to a big feature movie production. The new admission price is 25c. straight, war tax included. Tom Moore was seen on the first Sunday in addition to the vaudeville, in "Thirty A Week."

D. W. GRIFFITH'S great play "The Greatest Thing In Life," was shown at the Rialto, and with the possible exception of "Eye For Eye," proved to be one of the biggest attractions ever shown in Racine. An admission price of 25c., (war tax included) was charged for this production. Racine talent was in evidence again between acts, when this production was played. Miss Florence Peterson, known as Racine's Silver-toned Soprano, sang. The American Quartette also rendered a choice number of selections.

NAZIMOVA in "Toys of Fate," is being booked for the Palace in the near future. The success of this picture is practically assured, as this famous actress has become a big favorite with Racine fans, since she played here in "Eye for Eye."

JACK BESSIE left here with his company for "parts unknown." He got his first real bunkoing this year, for the first time since his many annual visits here. He has been showing at the Orpheum for several months, banking strongly on "after the 'flu'" prospects.

Gathered in Green Bay

DOROTHY GISH played in her initial Paramount picture in the Colonial theatre program, January 9-10. She appeared in "Battling Jane," an amusing film.

"THE LURE OF THE CIRCUS," with Eddie Popo as the feature performer, was produced in the Royal theatre January 10-11, and it proved a drawing card.

NAZIMOVA proved an attraction at the Colonial theatre January 8-9 in "Toys of Fate," one of the best pictures the star has been seen in here.

CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG added to her admirers when she played in the Grand theatre January 7-8-9 in "The Road Through the Dark," a Select production.

"THE MODEL'S CONFESSION," with Mary MacLaren in the leading role, was shown at the Royal theatre January 3.

"THE YELLOW DOG," a Jewel production, was presented at the Royal theatre January 8-9 and drew crowds.

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS was seen Jan. 9-10-11-12 in the Paramount film "Headin' South." The characteristic Fairbanks action was present in the picture.

PAULINE STARKE was seen in "Alias Mary Brown," a five-reel Triangle film, at the Royal theatre January 7. Chester Conklin was shown in a Mack Sennett comedy "Bucking Society," in the same program.

"THE WHISPERING CHORUS," with Katheryn Williams in the lead, was produced in the Orpheum theatre January 2-3-4-5, and it was exceedingly interesting.

ETHEL CLAYTON played in the Lasky-Paramount production, "The Girl Who Came Back," at the Colonial theatre January 6-7.

THE Triangle film, "The Price of Applause," was shown at the Royal theatre January 6. Jack Livingston played in the lead.

CHARLES RAY was presented in "String Beans," a Paramount film, January 4-5, at the Colonial theatre. He drew large houses.

CONSTANCE TALMADGE played in the Select picture, "A Pair of Silk Stockings," January 3-4-5-6, at the Grand theatre.

ATTENDANCE at motion picture houses in Green Bay has gradually gotten back to normal with the abatement of the influenza epidemic. The influenza has practically disappeared in the city, and people are no longer fearful of contracting the disease by mingling in crowds.

ILLINOIS

Finkelmann and Corey, owners of the Princess, Gem, and Savor theatres at Quincy will combine two of their houses into one large theatre early in the summer.

At Marion an up-to-date new theatre will be erected shortly according to announcement. It will be located in the Shannon Holland lot, and A. B. McLaren says that the new house will have a seating capacity of 1,500.

INDIANA

At 126-128-130 East Washington street, Indianapolis, E. C. Sourbier will erect a modern theatre in the near future, it is announced.

Harry Mendenhall, of Greenville, Ohio, has purchased the Strand theatre at Newcastle, Ind., and also the site adjoining and announces the investment amounts to $50,000, which provides for the erection of a theatre on the combined site with a seating capacity of 1,400.

Spokane Health Officer Denies Petition of Theatre Men Containing 7,300 Names

J. B. ANDERSON, health officer for Spokane, has denied the petition of theatre men asking that the influenza ban on public gatherings be lifted and homes quarantined where influenza prevails. The petition carried some 7,300 names. The petitions were presented to the Board of Health and without discussion referred to Dr. Anderson. Dr. Anderson made the statement that he would not lift the ban until January 1, at least. The petition calls for a lifting of the ban on public gatherings and individual quarantine of influenza patients. The theatre managers of the city, hard hit by the half-capacity regulation, have backed the movement for the lifting of the ban and have circulated the petition at their theatres. The petition was presented to the Health Board by C. E. Stillman, Walter De Lion and W. C. Smith for the theatre managers. At noon Tuesday there were only thirteen new cases of influenza and none of pneumonia reported to the health office. On December 10, the influenza death rate reached the highest point of the epidemic, twenty deaths from the disease being reported to the health office on that date. Since then deaths have gradually, but surely, dropped, until, for the last few days, there have been few reported. On December 11, there were thirteen deaths; on the 12th, nine, and on other days in succession to date reported as follows: Nine, seven, six, five, six, one, four, one and six.

Hart's New Picture Gets a Name

"THE POPPY GIRL'S HUSBAND" is the title of William S. Hart's newest photoplay production. At least, this is the working title. The original story was by Jack Boyle and was printed in the Red Book Magazine. Supporting Mr. Hart are Juanita Hansen, leading woman; Walter Long, formerly a Captain in the United States Coast Artillery, and who has played prominent parts in a number of Griffith and Paramount pictures; Fred Star, as the heavy; Dave Kirby, the crook, and little Georgie Stone as the five-year-old boy of the play. The story is of the crook variety, but with a new twist. Hart at one time in the play must assume the role of a convict, and to do this properly he had his hair completely abbreviated. He is now week recovering from the effects of the "close cut." The picture is now in the second week of production, and it is believed two more weeks' work will be necessary before the picture is completed.

Metro Forces Occupy Administration Building

HEADED by Maxwell Karger, director general, the Metro producing organization took formal possession of the newly completed Administration Building at Hollywood, California, January 8.

Workman had just completed the installation of the hardwood finishings in the various offices used by the director general, scenario writers, directors and the auditing staff.

The administration building, fronting north on Romaine street, with Cahuega avenue bounding it on the east and Cole avenue on the west, is described as a splendid example of graceful colonial architecture.

Massive white columns rise before the main entrance, midway of the structure, with above them a jutting gable roof surmounted by a State House cupola topped by a flagstaff and Old Glory.

The new edifice has received its coatings of buff paint, with white window sashes and a green roof. Ample account has been taken of the importance of an abundance of light in making motion pictures, and all the windows are exceedingly large.

Construction of the entire new plant has been carried on rapidly with Joseph W. Engel, Metro treasurer, supervising all details, assisted by C. P. Butler. A record was made in the speedy erection of the three big stages, of which one is enclosed.

Dahnken and Asher Boost 'Frisco for Studios

CARRYING a message from the Mayor of San Francisco to be read at what is expected to be the biggest meeting of motion picture exhibitors ever held on the Coast, Fred Dahnken, president of Turner & Dahnken circuit of theatres, and E. M. Asher, manager of the Tivoli theatre left for Los Angeles on January 6 with the purpose of persuading some of the big film-producing companies to move to San Francisco. It is well known that many companies would like to move to San Francisco, and Asher has gathered data and statistics on climatic conditions in this city which he will present to the motion picture men to show that climatically San Francisco is an ideal place for producing pictures. Among the national exhibitors who will be present at the Los Angeles meeting are Aaron Jones of Chicago, Harry Schwalber, Jansen and Von Herber of Seattle, E. H. Hulsey of Texas and Moe Mark of New York.

War Service Association Plans to Disband

PLANS have been formulated for disbanding the war time organization Motion Picture War Service Association, and funds in the treasury will be returned to the givers on the basis of about eighty-five per cent of the original gift or membership fee. This plan was decided upon at the very recent meeting of the officers and directors of the War Service Association at which time steps were taken for the organization of an Association that would be in charge of raising funds for, and erecting a home for indigent or disabled motion picture players. Rule relating to the admittance of unproductive people to the home will provide that only those who have had three years or more experience in motion pictures, will be admitted.

Upon the unanimous vote of all officers present the suggestion by David Wark Griffith that Frank E. Woods, manager of production of the Lasky Studio, serve as chairman, was carried, and Mr. Woods has now taken up the work of organizing what will probably be known as the Motion Picture Players' Fund Association.

With the passing of the Motion Picture War Service Association a brief resume of the work accomplished by the film industry in this respect is highly complimentary to the industry. Perhaps the greatest achievement was that of having the industry classed by the War Department as essential, this being accomplished by considerable correspondence, telegraphing, long-distance conversations, and the sending of a representative to Washington. Help has been given to many dependents of motion picture men who were in the war service, and it was through the War Service Association that entertainment was provided for war camps on the southwestern Pacific coast territory. The morale of the soldiers at Camp Kearny was greatly improved during a recent quarantine, when the Association gave nightly entertainments for the soldiers.

It was under the auspices of the War Service Association that approximately $5,000,000 worth of Liberty Bonds were subscribed during the Fourth Liberty Loan. David Wark Griffith served as chairman; Mack Sennett as treasurer; S. E. V. Taylor, secretary, and other prominent workers were Lois Weber, Dustin Farnum, Mary Pickford, William S. Hart, Douglas Fairbanks, C. B. de Mille, Winifred Kingston, Mrs. Charles Ray and many others.

Abrams Claims Star Keeps Business Alive

HIRAM ABRAMS, formerly vice-president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, and B. P. Schulberg, former general manager of the corporation, arrived in Los Angeles recently. Mr. Abrams said he was interested in the formation of a new company. Discussing the film industry in a general way, he said:

"There is now in progress the first step to the largest consolidation of motion picture interests that has ever taken place in the industry. Strange to say, this amalgamation has been indirectly suggested by the Government.

"When the United States declared war on Germany, the Government asked the motion picture industry to co-operate in the dissemination of its screen propaganda. This tended to bring the various warring factions together for the first time in a common purpose. As a result of this trade association the leading financial and producing factors in the business began to see advantages of united action.

"There are at present in Los Angeles a number of film executives who are looking forward to a great consolidation, and it is my opinion that such a coalition would have a disastrous effect upon the industry. It would limit the opportunity of the independent star.

"The star is the principal factor in the business and must always remain so. Motion pictures are popular only because the stars are popular. In fact, the star is the motion picture business. Therefore, anything that hampers the growth of stars will react unfavorably upon the industry, and trade combinations are bound to hamper it.

"Such combinations will naturally carry with them restrictions and diminished salaries, thus proportionately diminishing the incentive."

New Ince Studios Actively Operating

THE new Thomas H. Ince studio, erected at a cost said to be in excess of $250,000, is now occupied by the entire staff in Culver City, California.

Three new companies are now completing screen productions according to report. The administration building is of large colonial type much resembling the home of George Washington at Mount Vernon.

It is artistically set off by an expansive front yard, dotted with a variety of fruit trees and flowering foliage.

Samuel Goldwyn, Rex Beach, Samuel Rothapfel, Mrs. Rex Beach and Abraham Lehr on the Goldwyn lot at Culver City recently

What They Do in Seattle

HAROLD H. HURN, formerly manager of the Triangle's offices in Seattle for the Northwest, but now in uniform, recently received a furlough and spent a great part of his time on Film Row visiting the boys who gave him such a grand send off when he left for Camp Lewis. All were glad to see him and he was just as glad to see them.

ON NEW YEAR'S EVE the larger houses had midnight shows. Special music and concerts were given together with the pictures. The theatres were crowded. Seattle was extremely prosperous during 1918 and even though the flu did close the houses almost six weeks in Seattle, the managers all did exceedingly well.

EDDIE POLO, star in the Universal's "Lure of the Circus" and "The Bull's Eye" paid a visit to Seattle and other Pacific Coast cities, where he appeared on the stage at the theatres where "The Lure of the Circus" is being shown. He made a great hit wherever and whenever he appeared.

ARRANGEMENTS have been made by the Universal with James J. Corbett, to appear on the screen in the Pacific Coast cities in a new serial.

MANAGER DUNHAM and son from Mount Vernon, Wash., were on the row looking over some pictures to either book for a future date or else take home with them immediately.

MADAME PAUL of Olympia, recently paid another visit to the Goldwyn offices in order to obtain more pictures for her theatre.

G. GLENN of Issaquah, Wash., a mining town, took a trip to Seattle's Film row, visiting almost every exchange, for he realizes that his clientele will only continue to patronize him if he shows them the best pictures.

ALL the towns in the Seattle Film Exchange territory have not opened to date. About half were closed the first of the year. A town may be open one day and closed the next. This has played a great hardship on the small town managers and the exchange managers.

With Los Angeles Exchanges and Theatres

J. H. SEMLER, representative of Robertson-Cole company, banking house associated with Mutual Exhibitors exchanges, an American concern that has purchased world rights for all Mutual releases, was a visitor in Los Angeles this week. He expects to be here indefinitely.

WILLARD WYATT has purchased the Rosebud theatre on Central avenue from Mrs. S. R. Stern, and he has booked the Hayakawa series as one of the attractions for the house under its new management.

THE CASINO theatre at Yuma, Ariz., formerly managed by John Johansen, has been taken over by Paul Maretta, according to word received in Los Angeles this week by various film exchanges. Both Mr. Johansen and Mr. Maretta were visitors on film row, where Mr. Maretta lined up some pictures for the next few months.

JAMES COOK, of the Palace theatre at El Centro, this week booked the entire series of Sessue Hayakawa pictures from the mutual exchange, according to announcement by Branch Manager A. R. Patton.

THE New Strand theatre at Phoenix, Ariz., has booked for January 8, 9 and 10 Martin Johnson's "Cannibals of the South Seas," being released in this territory by Mutual.

FOLLOWING Douglas Fairbanks' "Arizona" at the new California, was "Sporting Life," a Paramount-Artcraft picture with an all star cast. "Branding Broadway," with William S. Hart as the star, has also been booked for an early run at new California. The present program will be followed by the Nazimova production, "An Eye for An Eye."

HARVEY E. GAUSMAN, who has for the past six months been with the Goldwyn exchange as road representative, left the employ of that organization on Saturday, January 4, to be connected with the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, working out of the Los Angeles exchange. Previous to joining Goldwyn he was with the Hoffman Four Square and the United Exhibitors' Booking corporation. He was also with Thomas H. Ince for eighteen months in the producing end of the game. Mr. Gausman is well known to the exhibitors in the Los Angeles territory.

"SHOULDER ARMS," in which Charlie Chaplin is seen as a soldier in the trenches, is breaking all records for attendance in every theatre in Southern California where it has been shown. This announcement was made last Saturday by Branch Manager W. E. Knotts of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, following advices from houses where the picture has been shown. It was a special attraction for three weeks at Tally's Broadway, and the Superba theatre in San Diego held the picture one week longer than the original schedule. Manager G. A. Bush of the Superba theatre said the picture had been even more popular in San Diego than its predecessor, "A Dog's Life." "Shoulder Arms" also had a week's run at Camp Kearny, and the longest run of any subject previous to this time had been four days.

"VIRTUOUS WIVES," First National special attraction, starring Anita Stewart, was given a pre-view at Tally's Broadway theatre at 11:30 o'clock last Sunday night. The public was invited to see the picture along with the various news critics of trade journals and local newspapers. The picture was the feature attraction this week at Tally's Broadway.

W. J. MULLANEY, special salesman for Pathe, left for an extensive trip through Arizona. This is the first time he has visited in this territory since the influenza ban was raised.

THE APOLLO theatre at the corner of Vermont avenue and Forty-eighth street, Los Angeles, formerly operated by Patterson and Thompson, has been taken over by Glen Harper, secretary of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners' Association of Los Angeles.

ACCORDING to a report made by Sid Grauman, general manager of Grauman's theatre, to Harry Ballance, branch manager of the Paramount-Artcraft exchange, "Little Women," the William A. Brady Artcraft picture, showing at Grauman's last week, broke all recent attendance records.

E. Shurtleff, general sales manager for Hodkinson, are scheduled to arrive in Los Angeles about the end of this month. They are coming to the West Coast in the interest of some new plans for the new year, it is understood.

G. R. SIRWELL, branch manager of the Hodkinson exchange in Los Angeles, said this week that Bessie Barriscale's picture, "The Heart of Rachael," broke all attendance records of the present management at the Victory theatre on Broadway, where it was the attraction all last week.

MOTION PICTURES of the famous Rose Tournament at Pasadena on New Year's day, made by Pathe, were shown at the New California theatre on New Year's night, or the same day of the big floral parade. This showing was just twenty-four hours ahead of all competitors, according to the claim of Branch Manager Tate of the Pathe exchange. Mr. Tate said that motion pictures of Mary Pickford greeting the 143rd Field Artillery at San Francisco on last Friday were shown in Los Angeles three hours ahead of any other competitor.

WILLIAM ALEXANDER, division manager of United for the Pacific coast, has purchased a new car, and expects within the next month to visit all the United exchanges on the Pacific coast, using the new car as means of transportation.

W. E. MATHEWS, salesman for General Film Company, who has been ill in San Francisco for more than a month, has returned to Los Angeles and this week was calling on exhibitors in Southern California.

F. E. SAMUELS, special representative of General Film, working out of the New York office, after spending several days in Los Angeles, left Sunday for San Francisco. He said he would likely visit the exchanges in Portland, Seattle and Denver before returning East.

C. E. ELLIOTT, who is handling special productions for Select in the Los Angeles territory, is this week calling on exhibitors in San Diego.

B. E. LOPER, branch manager of Select, has just returned from a trip to San Diego last week, and he reports that business in the southern city is about 60 per cent normal. San Diego recently underwent the novel excitement of being closed, then reopened and closed again, with everybody required to wear masks. The town has not recovered from this shock, Mr. Loper says, and hence business is still far from normal.

Heard in Los Angeles Town

ANNOUNCEMENT was made this week by Louis Hyman, manager of the All Star Features Distributors exchange, that Sol Lesser, head of the All Star Features, had purchased the screen rights to sixteen Tom Mix reissues, all of them two-reel subjects. These pictures, Mr. Hyman said, will be handled on the franchise basis, and already many inquiries are being received by the exchange as to releasing dates. A number of the subjects have already been booked in the Los Angeles territory, Mr. Hyman said.

LOS ANGELES exchanges were notified this week that the theatres in Santa Barbara have again been closed by order of the Santa Barbara health authorities, because of a recurrence of influenza in that community. The closing order specifies an indefinite period. The theatres at Covina, another town in Southern California, were also closed again this week. Announcement that these towns had been closed again came when it was generally believed by theatre men in Los Angeles that the epidemic had permanently subsided in Southern California.

NICK DIAMOS, manager of the Lyric Amusement company, of Arizona, was in Los Angeles this week arranging bookings for his various theatres in Arizona. The influenza ban has been lifted in Arizona, and Mr. Diamos believes that with the reopening of the theatres business will soon hit its normal stride. Among the exchanges he visited in Los Angeles were Metro, Select, Mutual, Universal, Paramount-Artcraft, Goldwyn, World and Vitagraph.

NOTICE that a print of the World Film picture, "What Shall We Do With Him," will be received on the Pacific coast was received last week by Branch Manager T. E. Hancock from the New York offices of World Film Corporation. Mr. Hancock is planning a pre-view of the subject as soon as it arrives in Los Angeles.

L. D. PURDY, road salesman for Metro, left this week for a trip to Imperial Valley, where he will call on all the exhibitors in that territory.

HARRY COHEN, special representative of Metro, returned to Los Angeles this week from San Francisco. He says that business is resuming its normal trend, and predicts shortly the West Coast theatres will be playing to larger crowds than even before the influenza epidemic.

HARRY LUSTIG, western division manager of Metro, left on January 9 for a visit to all the Metro exchanges on the Pacific coast. His trip will take him to San Francisco, Seattle, Portland, Salt Lake and Denver. He expects to be away from Los Angeles between two and three weeks.

THE ANNUAL New Year's eve social gathering of the Los Angeles film exchange men and their wives was held this year at the Ship Cafe, at Venice. The entire upper deck of the ship was turned over to the exchange celebrants, and following dinner dancing continued into the small hours. Prominent among these in attendance were Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lustig, of Metro; Mr. and Mrs. William Alexander, of United; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Ballance, of Paramount-Artcraft; Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Lamb, of Metro; Fred Miller, of the California theatre; Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Theurkauff, of Universal; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Charles, of American Photoplays; Mr. and Mrs. Paul Mooney, of Fox Exchange; Mr. and Mrs. B. E. Loper, of Select; Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Elliott, of Select; Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Purdy, of Metro; Bart Burtelson, of the California theatre.

"EYE FOR EYE," special Select production, starring Madame Nazimova, has been booked at the new California theatre for the week beginning January 12, it was announced this week by Branch Manager Lamb of the Metro exchange. Special advertising features are being prepared, Mr. Lamb said, to put the picture over in a big way.

All the News of Portland

SPANISH influenza has taken a new hold on Portland, Ore., the increase in cases following Christmas and New Year's festivities being marked, but thus far there has been no talk of theatre closing again.

OREGON towns are still tightly closed, that is the third reported last week, with the exception that at Pendleton a new ordinance has been put through permitting operation of motion picture theatres with patrons occupying every other row of seats and every other seat in a row. This cuts them down to one-fourth capacity.

Theatre men at La Grand and several other points are reported in a fighting mood and determined to fight the closing of their towns.

HENRY BERGER, Jr., who made the famous Columbia River Highway pictures four years ago and lectured with them throughout the country, is back in Portland and devoting his time to art photography-gravure portraits. He has been commissioned to take color pictures of the Columbia River Highway, Crater Lake, and Rainier National Park, next Summer, for Prizma, Inc. For several years he has been filming American wonder spots for this concern.

WENDELL O'DAY, well-known Pacific Coast organist, brought to Portland by J. J. Parker to dedicate the new Wur-litzer organ last October, died in a Portland hospital on January 3 of cerebral embolism-clot on the brain. He was a University of Washington man, a bridegroom of little more than a year, and very popular among theatre people. At one time he was organist at the Rialto theatre, San Francisco.

LIBERTY, MAJESTIC and GLOBE theatres were the leaders in New Year's eve festivities in Portland. Special vaudeville performances, with much local talent, featured the bills, with souvenirs for all. Practically all theatres gave performances—regular bills—until after 12 o'clock.

EDDIE POLO dropped into Portland first week of the new year, made a couple of personal appearances in down town theatres and then departed.

McMINNVILLE, Ore., is a freak town, for it was closed by the health board because of a smallpox scare and not because of the "flu."

W. H. DURHAM, Camas, Wash., film chief, was a Portland visitor recently.

L. JACOBSON is awaiting the end of the influenza scare to dedicate his new Liberty theatre at Klamath Falls, Ore.

SHERIDAN, Ore., was closed for a few days, but it was a diphtheria scare, according to W. E. Dodge, of the Grand theatre.

HENRY CLAY BELL, recently appointed organist at the Globe theatre, Portland, is one of the youngest in the game—16 years old, but Manager Marquard asserts he's more than a hundred in talent.

BERT LATZ, former Jewel representative in the Northwest, was out of the Spruce Division trenches by Christmas and will soon be back in film harness.

GEORGE JACKSON, former Mutual manager in Portland, now with Uncle Sam at American Lake, expects to be back on film row soon.

AMONG recent Portland visitors were Charley Schram of the Grand theatre, Oregon City; Manager Heideman of the Westport theatre, Westport, Ore.; Manager Kiggins from Vancouver, Wash.

R. TEESON, who used to operate for W. H. Durham, at the Grand, Camas, Wash., is back on the job. He enlisted and was sent to Washington State College for training.

V. F. NICHOLS has bought the Star theatre, McMinnville, from Dr. Morris. Nichols came down from Alaska, where he railroaded and later played the organ for Captain Lathrop at Anchorage, to enlist in the army. He was in the service but five months before presented with a discharge.

MRS. S. DANZ, wife of the manager of the Star theatre, Astoria, came into Portland the other day and booked some pictures for the theatre.

WHEN the "flu" resulted in another lid-clamping at Salem, George and Frank Bligh, the theatrical magnates of the Oregon capital, hied themselves to Portland for a trip.

J. B. SPARKS, controlling theatres in Heppner and Condon, Ore., also came to Portland while the "flu" was venting its spleen on his people.

NEWPORT, Ore., has reopened and Manager Bair, of the Royal Theatre, is back on the job.

JOHN WESLEY, of the Peoples theatre, Scio, Ore., has closed his house, pending a new election. The present city council vented its ire on him by soaking a $450 license in his theatre. His only recourse is to wait until a new council is elected.

Butte Exchange Dines Eddie Polo on Visit For Universal

ON the occasion of Eddie Polo's visit to Butte last week he was the honor guest at a dinner given at the Finlen by George Bourke, manager of the local Universal exchange. Present were several newswriters and the following theatre folk: William Woolfall, Harrison avenue theatre, E. Marshall Taylor, Ansonia; Merle Davis, Broadway; George Peppes, Lyric; Mrs. Lyod and Mr. Whethsone. Polo, who is starring in the new serial, the "Lure of the Circus" appeared in person at the six houses in Butte and suburbs now showing it. He left after a day's stay for Seattle. Mr. Polo was accompanied by Mrs. Polo.

News of the Week in San Francisco

THIS is the open season for snow films in the high Sierras. Work on filming such pictures started near Truckee, Cal., shortly after the first of the year. Several companies sent troops of actors and retainers of from fifteen to twenty persons each, with requirements of dog sleds, dogs, etc. A large portion of the Alaskan and British Columbia scenes are regularly photographed a few miles from Truckee.

BENJAMIN BRODSKY, manager of the Sunrise Film Manufacturing Co., whose headquarters are located in Yokohama, Japan, is in San Francisco for the purpose of establishing a branch office in this city. He says that later he may establish a branch in New York. Mr. Brodsky has been taking pictures in Japan for a number of years. He states that now he is going after the business of this country and also of the entire world. In San Francisco the pictures will be assembled, edited and cut, and when the New York office is opened they will be distributed from that point. R. E. Hasbrook will have charge of the San Francisco office.

P. R. HENDERSON, of Oakland, is branching out as an exhibitor and owner of theatres. He recently sold the "Clairmont" theatre to O'Neal & Griffen and has since bought "The Avenue" theatre, a house with 1,000 seats under construction at 27th and San Pablo, Oakland. This theatre he is rushing to completion and expects to open about February 1. He has also started to build a 1,000 seat theatre in East Oakland, which will be completed in about six months. This new house will be known as the Tivoli. Mr. Henderson says that he may change the name of the "The Avenue" theatre to the "Strand," but he has not fully decided on this matter.

PATHE FILMS evidently stand ace high in the estimation of Eugene Roth of the California theatre. At least it would appear so from the fact that he has just sent to E. O. Child, manager of the local Pathe exchange, Annual Pass Number One for the year 1919.

FRANK L. OLSEN, before the war connected with the Pathe organization in San Francisco, and who enlisted about fourteen months ago and was assigned to the 140th Aero Squadron, arrived in San Francisco direct from Europe. Mr. Olsen was on his way to the front when the armistice was declared. He says he is going to take a few weeks lay off before seeking a position.

L. SAMUELSON, booker for the Seattle branch of Pathe, and who was reported to have lost his life when the Du Maru was wrecked, has been heard from. With four other men he was picked up at sea in a small boat, and according to latest information is now in the hospital at Manila.

W. L. WATTON of the Colonial theatre, Stockton, was making the rounds of the exchanges last week. He reports a bright outlook for the theatres of his section of the State after the first of the year.

IRA FORD, of the Palmer theatre, San Francisco, died as a result of an attack of pneumonia.

ROBERT BATNER, formerly of the auditing department of Select in the New York office, was discharged from the army in this city and is doing some temporary work here before returning to New York.

HARRY COHN, special representative of the Metro spent two days in San Francisco.

M. E. CORY is back from his first trip in the San Joaquin valley since he joined forces with the Select Picture Corporation. Mr. Cory is particularly optimistic as to the future after making this trip through one of the most fertile sections of the State. He says that the timely rains has put the entire country in as fine a condition as it has ever been and that producers everywhere are jubilant and confident that the coming season will mean bumper crops of all sorts. Mr. Cory found that the Select was popular with the exhibitors. He placed a number of contracts in towns where these pictures had not been shown before, as well as booking all the old customers. He found the exhibitors were especially interested in the Edith Cavell pictures, and he booked this picture everywhere he went.

HARRY LEE KNAPPEN, manager of Select, announces that his office has booked "Ruling Passions" with the California theatre in this city for a first run January 12.

THE wife of H. H. Hicks, recently promoted to the Cincinnati office of the Select, passed through San Francisco this week on her way to Los Angeles to spend some time with her sister in that city.

IT IS announced at the office of Sol Lesser that Mr. Lesser has secured all the Tom Mix dramas for California, Nevada and Ohio. There are 16 or 17 of these pictures, all of them two reels.

THE FILM CLEARING HOUSE, of which D. J. Chatkin is the local manager, is preparing to make a drive for business in this territory. It will soon have two men on the road rounding up contracts, which Mr. Chatkin says should be easy to get after the extensive advertisement run by the company in the Holiday Number of Motion Picture News.

THOMAS HULL, who before he joined the army conducted with his father a theatre in Demming, N. M., is in San Francisco, having just arrived from England. He was in the aerial service and was wounded in France, while flying over the enemy's guns, by a piece of shrapnel from a big "Archie." He wears both service and wound stripes. Mr. Hull is looking for location in California.

HOWARD SHEEHAN left San Francisco last week for a visit East.

CONSTANCE TALMADGE has been promoted from the Portola to the California and appeared in the latter house for the first time through the medium of "Mrs. Leffingwell's Boots."

GEORGE PARKER, manager of the Majestic theatre, Portland; John Jennings, of the Sunset, Portland; Jensen and Von Herberg, magnates of Seattle and Portland; Sol Stiller, of the Liberty, Portland; Eugene Perry, Select, Seattle; were in San Francisco for the New Year's celebration and have just left for a visit to Los Angeles before returning to their homes in the North.

SID CHAPLIN, Roscoe Arbuckle, Bill Hart, Juanita Hansen, Everett Bentley, Grant Churchill and Henry Nief, all movie folk, spent New Year's eve in San Francisco and several days thereafter.

THE ST. FRANCIS theatre, opposite the St. Francis Hotel, in this city, has closed permanently and the location is now under lease to Techau Tavern, which will remodel the building and open its cafe there about June 1. The theatre was famous all over the West as the only one in which the screen was at the entrance end of the theatre and the projection machine at the far end. This was done to avert all danger from fire or panic in case anything went wrong in the projecting room. "Intolerance" was the last picture shown on the St. Francis screen.

THE SUNRISE FILM EXCHANGE, which was being fitted up last week, has now completed its headquarters and is by all odds the most artistic and ornamental in the city. A striking feature of the office is the two large Japanese vases standing over 6 feet high on their pedestals, one on each side of the manager's desk.

Flickers on the Screens of Butte

ARCHIE MALOTTE, former road man in this territory for the Fox people, has forsaken the film game for the automobile business. He is now with the Pan-Motor company.

MISS THELMA GREEN, a sweet-voiced local singer, appeared at the American theatre at the midnight matinee on New Year's eve. She made a distinct hit. Just as the hour of midnight struck she led in the song, "Auld Lang Syne," and the big audience which completely filled the house, joined in the chorus. The matinee at midnight was introduced to Butte several years ago by Manager Bailey's house.

BARBARA SPROULE, the eight year old daughter of Mrs. Dr. Sproule of Butte, has been delighting audiences at the Harrison avenue theatre, whose destinies are presided over by William Woolfall. The Harrison theatre, which shows high class pictures, now has a three piece orchestra in attendance nightly.

J. G. RILEY, former booker for the Paramount-Artcraft exchange in Butte, is in the city from Seattle, where he is making his home.

R. J. HARTWIG of Deer Lodge, where he operates a theatre, was in Butte the past week. He is a brother of Manager Hartwig of a Dillon theatre.

H. BRADLEY FISH, Goldwyn representative, was in Butte the past week, from Denver.

"THE FORBIDDEN CITY" with Norma Talmadge starring, broke all house records at the American on January 1. Packed business all day and until the close at midnight was noted. A. C. Raleigh says that the New Year's record came next to the "victory day" attendance. On both those occasions Butte people simply flocked to the local theatres in droves. The picture made good and Miss Talmadge's friends were all pleased.

G. H. BAILEY, father of Frank T. Bailey, spent the holidays in Butte. The visiting Mr. Bailey, who formerly conducted the Theatorium at Billings, and also had an interest in the Star, is now living in Los Angeles. He was in the show business in Billings for six years and "cleaned up."

H. K. BRIN, one of the popular men in the film business, making Montana, was in Butte last week, from Spokane. He is with the American film exchange at the Inland Empire metropolis.

"IN ARIZONA," starring Doug Fairbanks, certainly was an irresistible magnet at the Rialto last week. Manager Ruffner's house packed them in every night.

Sid Chaplin Uses Unique Stunt in 'Frisco

WHETHER or not Sid Chaplin has selected the San Francisco girl who is to become his leading lady and thus win her way to fame is not yet announced here, but he did pick a little lady to take part in his pictures. Six year old Florence Snow, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Snow of Portland, Oregon, gave an impromptu dance, in the lobby of the St. Francis hotel one day last week that won her a motion picture engagement. Little Miss Snow, moved to dance by the strains of the orchestra in the tea room, broke away from her parents and gave a graceful exhibition of terpsichore. Sid happened along during the dance and was so impressed by the capers of the youngster that he agreed, with the permission of her parents, to take the child to Hollywood and star her in his next picture.

Metro Plant to Have Excellent Lighting System

THE new Metro studios now being built are to have an exceptional lighting equipment, orders having been placed with the Los Angeles branch of Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company for a 300 k. w. motor generator set and switchboard. The plans for this equipment were made by H. F. O'Brien, of the Westinghouse Los Angeles Service Department.

Considerable credit is due C. P. Butler, engineer in charge of construction, and Walter Grams, electrician, for the speed they showed in getting three 35 k. w.'s, one 100 k. w. and one 70 k. w. in a temporary powerhouse and operating in four days' time so that Nazimova's production on the "Red Lantern" could commence on schedule.

Heard in and Around Coast Studios

ANNOUNCEMENT is made this week that Aristo Productions, Inc., a Los Angeles organization, is to begin work within the next few days on the filming of "The Will" at the Robert Brunton Studio, under the direction of Julian Frankenberg. Molly Malone has been engaged as lead, and others cast for this picture are Frank Weed, Jack Nelson and Williard Newell.

AN organization has been perfected by the assistant directors and now has about forty members enrolled. It has been named Assistant Motion Picture Directors' Association, and headquarters will be maintained at the Hayward Hotel. Allan Watt, of Universal, has been elected first president; Harry Schenck, Brunton, vice-president; Rex Hodge, Universal, second vice-president; S. R. Beall, National, secretary and treasurer, and Arthur Flaven, Astra, sergeant-at-arms. The purpose of the organization is said to be partially social and also to bring about co-operation among the assistant directors which will tend to better conditions for the industry generally.

OUT of a field of fourteen comedies shown the management of the new California theatre by the several Los Angeles exchanges a Lyons & Moran star comedy, marketed by the Universal, was selected as the closing subject for their second week's program. The picture selected was titled "Swat the Flirt," and proved a very enjoyable feature of the nine unit program, which had the Douglas Fairbanks subject, "Arizona," as its big feature.

LYONS & MORAN were last week engaged in making a travesty on a well known screen play and have titled their comedy "The Shooting of Hella Balloo." Mildred Moore continues as leading woman for this company.

THE Bull's Eye Comedy Studio continues decidedly active. This week the second Billy West comedy was completed and has been titled "Ship Ahoy." This will go out as the February release. Billy West, the comedian, came near drowning this week when appearing in a scene representing the sleeping quarters in a sailor's hotel. A storm outside was represented by a three-inch hose, and when the flow hit West squarely in the face it proved too much for him and he was down and out for a short time. This film is to follow "Katinka," which was completed recently. Laboratory work is being done at the William Horsley Studio, where release prints will be made.

GENERAL MANAGER NAT SPITZER last week announced that definite arrangements had been made for the increasing of the Gale Henry comedies from one to two reels, and beginning February 1 the first release will be made. This will be "Cuckoo Lizz," and following that will be a two-reel comedy titled "Luck." At the present time the first Pierce-Arrow car manufactured, which is now more than twenty years old, is being used in a comedy. It was secured from a Los Angeles museum and around it is built many scenes.

FOLLOWING a successful one week's run at the Rialto theatre, Los Angeles, the initial production of the Brentwood Film Corporation, "The Turn in the Road," has been retained for the second week and will probably run a third. In order to give this picture a very thorough try-out with the public, it was not advertised extensively as most films shown in Los Angeles during the same week. A few lithographs were put out, no advertising except the one-inch card was carried in the papers. In the face of this the film played to increasing business daily, the box-office receipts being reported at about $40 increase each day. Since the initial showing of the film at this theatre it has been re-edited and contains many changes.

PRODUCTION activities continue at the Sunshine Comedy studio at full speed during the absence of Director General Henry Lehrman, who has been ill with influenza and will not be back at work for several days. Four companies are at work on Sunshine comedies, these being directed by Jack White, Fred Fishback, Tom Burbank and Al Herman. Miss Morrison, business manager of the studio, has been absent several days as the result of illness from influenza.

ONE of the greatest thrillers staged in Los Angeles for a film was that shot this week when Bobbie Dunn jumped from the eleventh-floor fire-escape of the Bryson Apartments while five cameras played upon him. This scene is for the Lehrman Sunshine comedy released by Fox, titled "Money Talks," and in which Dunn plays the part of a man 80 years of age, who, when unable to get an apartment with bath, has his tank of cold water placed outside his window, but eleven floors below. Fred Fishback is directing this subject, and had the use of several hundred wealthy tourists, who witnessed the thriller and played the part of atmosphere in the scene.

ONE of the big scenes in Madame Nazimova's superproduction, "The Red Lantern," being produced by her own company at the Metro studios, was made Wednesday night, in which several hundred natives of Chinatown in Los Angeles participated. The scenes were shot in the big Chinese street set that was erected some weeks ago for this special stunt. The picture will be finished within the next two weeks. Albert Capellani is the director.

Short News of San Francisco

NEWTON E. LEVI, recently appointed Coast Supervisor of the Exhibitors' Mutual Distributing Corporation, left January 6 for Portland and Seattle to look over the offices in that territory. Mr. Levi has just recovered from a severe cold which confined him to his home for several days.

J. L. FRAZER, salesman for the Mutual, is leaving in a short time for a trip through that section of the northern part of the State popularly known to the trade as the "Death Trail." It gets its name on account of the difficulties in traveling and making connections advantageously.

GEORGE J. EKRE, formerly manager of the General Film in Los Angeles, has made connections with the Film Clearing House in this city and will handle the sales on the big productions that come through the Clearing House.

SOL LESSER is preparing to leave for Los Angeles in the near future. He announces that the "Hearts of the World" is now available as a leasing proposition in certain sections of the State. By this new plan the theatres will have an opportunity to reap the big benefits that come from showing this picture.

FRANK E. SAMUELS, special representative of the General Film Co., New York, has arrived in San Francisco on a tour of the West in the interests of his company. He was to-day in conference with M. J. Cohen regarding this district. He has been in Los Angeles and goes from here to the Northwest. Thence he returns again to Los Angeles, where he says he wants to remain the rest of his life. He intends to make his future headquarters on this Coast and to live in the southern part of the State.

THE local theatre managers are putting up a big kick over a recent change in the charges made against them for maintaining water stands as protection from fire. The theatres have had to deposit $175 with the water company which keeps the money without interest and to pay a monthly rental of $4 per month for the water which they have no use for. Now it seems that the State Railroad Commission has increased this charge to $12.50 a month and the managers think it an imposition. Added to this the Gas and Electric company has practically doubled their rates, with the commission's permission, and the managers are asking "Where they get off at?"

G. L. THORNTON, formerly manager of T. & D. and Franklin theatres, Oakland and the Rialto at Eureka, has been appointed assistant manager of the Rialto in San Francisco.

Whole army of Projection Pests lay down their arms!!!

Overwhelmed by Simplex Superiority !!!

After harassing the business and making life miserable for the projectionist, old "kill-joy" FLICKER, and that General Disturber BREAK-DOWN and their constant companions VIBRATION and JUMP, and POOR TAKE-UP and POOR PARTS have been hunted down by the SIMPLEX TWIN GENERALS.

From all parts of the country comes the same report—"UNCONDITIONAL SURRENDER."

Should any of these pests have escaped, and attempt to become a part of your theatre staff, rush to the nearest Simplex Distributor, give him the sign of distress, and the pests will leave as soon as Simplex enters.

The Simplex Twins have banished projection troubles in the finest theatres, studios, and institutions of the country.

BUDDY got into a deuce of a fix with one of those New York sirens. Bought her expensive jewelry; a hasty proposal; a few thoughtless letters; then talk of a breach of promise suit. There was nothing bad about the girl. She was just after his money, that's all. And Buddy was caught.

But Buddy sized her up right, at the right moment. Then he told her that he was broke. You know the rest. She let him go like a hot poker.

So Cactustown dusted off the Welcome sign, reclapsed him to its bosom, and they—Buddy and Martha from Cactustown—lived happily forever after.

Note—Don't forget to mention in your advertising that this is a famous Saturday Evening Post story. The 8,000,000 or 10,000,000 readers of that publication should be "gone after" in your ads.

"A FRIENDLY little story of Kentucky folk," that's what D. W. Griffith calls his newest Artcraft Picture.

Just like calling the Woolworth Building "a tidy little shack," like describing New York as "a busy little village"; the same as saying "a nice little piece of property" when you mean the United States of America.

In "A Romance of Happy Valley," Mr. Griffith has gone far away from war, far from massive spectacles and has laid his story in the land of his boyhood and with his genius he shows the bigness and the narrowness of the cross roads folk.

THOMAS D. SORIERO MANAGER

Jan. 14, 1919.

Mr. Wm. A. Brady,
Play House
48th Street,
New York, N. Y.

My dear Mr. Brady:

I am writing a few lines to tell you that I am playing one of your pictures this week, "Stolen Orders", and the public is certainly taking to it.

We have opened this week to packed houses, and if I had my way, I would break the policy of the house and run it the second week, but the Stockholders object to breaking the policy.

On the strength of record breaking business, I immediately booked it into all our theatres, that would be four runs in Boston, one week after the other.

I took advantage of your name, William A. Brady, in my ads, and it certainly means a lot to the public, and everybody playing this picture should do the same. The audiences were much impressed with the production, and I am sure the mouth to mouth advertising after the first performance did a lot to make a record breaking attendance.

Make some more pictures like that for the public and the Exhibitor are hungry for them.

Very truly yours,

TO THE INDEPENDENT BUYERS

In the belief that independent productions of special character and "bigness" are in demand, and that there are state right exchanges of financial standing in the United States sufficient to justify a meritorious production being released through that channel, I have determined to prove my belief by releasing "ONCE TO EVERY MAN" on the state right basis.

I want to state to the buyers and exhibitors that this is the biggest box office attraction The Frohman Amusement Corporation has ever made, and a production that compares favorably (and this opinion is verified by the trade reviews) with any ever offered a state right buyer. Prominent exhibitor praises "UNDER FOUR FLAGS"

The Government's Great Victory Picture

Exhibitor Comment:

"Wonderful picture. Extra Big Business." "A picture that every theatre should play"—M. P. News.

Consensus:

"Powerful production with extra big drawing powers"—M. P. News.

S. Barret McCormick, Managing Director of
The Circle, Indianapolis, writes this letter:

January 8, 1919

Gentlemen:

"Under Four Flags" was presented, as you know, at the Circle Theatre the week starting December 1st, or three weeks after the armistice was signed, when one would naturally suppose that there would be a lull in the enthusiasm and interest of war activities. But our week of this picture has convinced us that the public's interest in pictures dealing with the actual achievements of American arms, has not been lessened by the cessation of hostilities. "Under Four Flags" played at the Circle Theatre to the largest attendance of any of the numerous war pictures that we have presented.

It appears to me that "Under Four Flags" presents to the exhibitor of America one of the best attractions available today. It is the Victory picture of America and her Allies. This was the manner in which we exploited the same. Our advertising was planned to appeal to the public as the victors in the great contest, with "Under Four Flags" as the undying record of the glorious achievements of America in the war for Democracy.

Now, the fact of the American troops returning to their homes, each one bringing back his own intimate story of the struggle, will only serve to heighten the interest in "Under Four Flags". It will visualize our boys' own experience. Such history is not to be passed over lightly by the public, and a picture like "Under Four Flags", which tells the actual, graphic story of the closing days of the war, possesses unquenchable appeal to the public.

Exhibitors Trade Review,
1587 Broadway,
New York City.

Gentlemen:

Believing that a great injustice has been done to the exhibitors throughout the country by certain concerns distributing the news weeklies of current events of the world, as an exhibitor who has used them consistently ever since the origin of these weeklies, I want to protest at the greed of such weeklies as the -----, which have been sold to exhibitors throughout the country as up-to-date topical reviews; advertised to give at all times promptly the world current events, and then just as soon as a timely subject offers itself such as the Surrender of the German Fleet, have endeavored to make a scoop in the form of a special release and asked from exhibitors an excessive price, instead of giving to their customers all that they offer to give them when they solicit their business, at which time they promise to give absolutely the latest current events.

Simultaneously with this announcement to the referred to release by the before mentioned weeklies, the Pathe News and the Official War Review announced that this interesting current event would appear in their next immediate releases in the regular manner and at the regular price. This refusal to get their "pound of flesh" is very commendable and will undoubtedly be remembered by a great number of exhibitors. During the year exhibitors do not find every issue of a weekly a "knockout", or frequently even passable. It occurs to me that here was an opportunity for the ----- and the ----- companies to equalize their shortcomings by giving their customers the benefit of the important happenings taking place in Europe at this time that the American public is anxious to see, and which exhibitors should enjoy by reason of the franchise they hold to exhibit these weeklies. This special issue, special price practice should be discouraged by every exhibitor, since by reason of it the real value of the weekly is lost to him if he encourages such a move.

Very truly yours,

Production.*

FOR months, pending her first Goldwyn release, exhibitors have said: "Well, let us hope Goldwyn gives this great star the right kind of stories."

By that they have meant stories as great as this beautiful woman's dramatic and emotional powers; modern American stories; vital themes of the present day and moment; stories like those that established her tremendous screen and stage popularity.

Such a play, meeting the emotional demands of this lovely star, is announced for February 16 release as the first of our Pauline Frederick Star Series of six productions.

Louis Bennison in Sandy Burke of the U-Bar-U

By J. Allen Dunn

Directed by Ira M. Lowry

This second successful Star Series production of a winsome, lovable, new personality on the screen means a continuation of exhibitor and public approval that greeted his first picture, "O, Johnny!" It has more speed and action; more heart interest; more humanness and more laughs. Announced for release February 23.

Welcomed with open arms in the Great West, you find the Butte Miner saying: "Hats in the air for Lou Bennison; he's 'home folks' on the screen." And the Los Angeles Examiner saying: "This big stage favorite will number his screen friends by the million." Over-night he captured the audiences of the Eastern cities.

Just a little bit of intelligent promotion and live showmanship will make Bennison one of the best "draws" you have had in years! The Goldwyn service and promotion department is ready to show you some stunts and tricks that will make him still "surer fire."

FORD EDUCATIONAL WEEKLY

$1,000,000 A Year Invested To Maintain the Quality of the FORD EDUCATIONAL WEEKLY

THIS splendid weekly attraction has been built without ever a thought as to its profits or losses. Henry Ford, who imparts to it his name, his ideals and his vital imagination, has felt that there should be a great, powerful screen educator beyond the reach or influence of propaganda.

The Ford Educational Weekly aims to depict and succeeds in revealing real Americans; the inside of great industries in terms of vivid drama; those historical things in the old and new life of our nation that make the hearts and minds of the people responsive.

There has now come a time, under the new Goldwyn exclusive distribution, when The Ford Educational Weekly attains a greater importance than it has ever had before. This is not because this attraction has undergone any direct changes for it merely continues to maintain its previous splendid quality.

Its greater importance is due to the fact that its presentation is tremendously enlarged by its entry into the Goldwyn type of theatres throughout the nation. And there is a Goldwyn type—the best and biggest theatres of the country, patronized by the best people of America.

We have increased the volume of patronage of the Ford Educational Weekly and are enlarging it so rapidly each week that, frankly, we cannot from day to day forecast the size of our standing order for prints.

The best exhibitors of the nation are advertising this attraction as one of the appealing features of their programs. Any exhibitor who hesitates about booking it for his theatre is, we feel, making an error of judgment.

Mr E.Kendall Giltett
Dear Sir:-

Replying to your inquiry as to the value of your Studio Directory to the members of the M.P.D.A. I can only answer personally as we do not meet for several days. I have found it of great help when casting plays and always have a copy handy but I do wish you could impress upon the actors that the lack of their telephone numbers in their biographies loses them engagements, time and commissions. All casting calls are made by phone and if we had the numbers in the directory we could dispense with our troublesome card systems and get in touch with actors immediately. If you left a blank line at the end of each biography it would be even better.

I think you have a most valuable publication and I hope the whole trade will help themselves by helping you to make it perfect.

Yours

George Irving

FIRST NATIONAL EXHIBITOR CIRCUIT,
6 and 8 West Forty-eighth Street, New York City, N. Y.

Just finished viewing "Virtuous Wives." Undoubtedly finest production of its kind ever released. We wish every exhibitor could see this picture before booking, they could then realize for themselves the indescribable class and merit of this production. "Virtuous Wives" is a hundred per cent. production, viewed from any angle. It will be a real pleasure for us to distribute "Virtuous Wives." We will offer it to exhibitor with a guarantee against loss, regardless of price they pay for it. "Virtuous Wives" already booked by Strand Theatre, Louisville; Crescent Amusement Company, Nashville; Signal Amusement Company, Chattanooga, for week. Each believe it will ultimately play in every theatre our territory. Some of the enthusiastic people at the screening join us in congratulations to Mr. Mayer, Miss Stewart and others responsible for the magnificent production of "Virtuous Wives."

Reaching the World Market

SAID a prominent film man from Russia. "Copies of Motion Picture News contain so much practical market information that even in every foreign buying centre which I have recently visited, I find them filed and steadily referred to throughout the film trade.

"No other American Journal takes the place of the 'News'"

There are throughout the world about 250 buyers of American films. This is the extreme number and embraces the small and intermittent purchasers.

A recent check against this list shows that the "News" reaches practically the entire list.

A Word to the Wise

The Innocent Bystander Ventures a few Well-Intentioned Thoughts

JUST what does the star combination mean? To be frank, now that the news excitement has departed, there seems to be little to be excited over—as yet.

So very much remains to be seen.

Except for one star, the rest have contracts running throughout the year, or more. We assume these contracts will be observed.

Next arises the two important questions: (1) the production and (2) the distribution of these star pictures under the newly proposed alignment.

Will better pictures be produced?

These stars have already been their own producers—to a very large extent at least. They have had the advantage of well established studios and producing organizations. Will these be improved upon? Will they aim to make still fewer pictures and so make them better? Have they in mind a basic revolution in the art of picture making? Who will head and carry out this new production policy.

These are very important questions. But as yet no declaration has been made in answer to them.

All we know is that the stars, after whom such a scramble has been made, have suddenly decided to band together; for immediately strategic purpose or for permanent purposes it remains to be seen.

MOST important of all, it seems to us, is the question of the distribution of the pictures—the adequate and profitable distribution of them.

Profitable distribution means profitable to the producers, to the distributors, to the exhibitors.

These star values have risen so high that the whole industry is highly strained by the pressure.

The producers who have had these stars have complained that competition brought their services so high that they couldn't make money with them—that they were compelled to make them serve partly as booking pressure upon other pictures upon which a profit could be made.

Exhibitors have complained bitterly over rental prices,—that they booked star pictures to keep their competitor from getting them, and to advertise their house, whether the star picture paid them or not—a situation quite similar to that of the producers.

Have we now, or will the stars themselves make, a distribution agency able to handle this tense situation?

WE are saying, here, neither yes nor no on the point; but it must be apparent to anyone—even to the stars themselves, that there is a decided tenseness to this problem and that this tenseness is due to the exceedingly high value placed upon the star's services.

Better pictures may be made and through better advertising to the public, more box office money may be had from the public.

Or distribution may be more economical and more efficient—thus relieving the tension by saving cost and increasing gross booking revenue.

But those enormous service values are stickers; and we say this in the best interests of the stars themselves.

You don't—Mr. and Miss Star—want to kill the goose that is laying the golden eggs for you.

You don't want to strain this industry till it stands in daily danger of cracking wide open—till it trembles right along with unhealthy unrest.

You don't want to keep supporting capital away from it—it needs capital very badly; and capital, you know, regards you as an intangible asset. You may be here or not here tomorrow; your popularity is not a bankable matter like ground, bricks and mortar.

WE take it that you expect to remain in motion pictures and not get out quickly and profitably regardless of your own and the industry's future.

You don't want to do this for your own best interests. Then you'll have to look ahead a little, along with the industry; only the stability of the industry will keep you stable.

We have gamblers and constructionists in this business. Which side are you on—the quick clean-up end or the big, stable, future end?

You may regard yourself as a super person. You are not. You are simply super popular, but this popularity, this wide acquaintance with the public, are given you by the motion picture.

You don't want to destroy this motion picture; if you do, in all logic, it will only destroy you.

W. A. Johnston

National Advertising—II

Reasons Why the Exhibitor is Nucleus of Advertising

THE point we aimed to drive home in last week's editorial on advertising the picture is that the exhibitor must be the fountain head, or the feeder, or the nucleus of national advertising.

There are several valid reasons for this, as we pointed out.

One is strong enough, however, to stand alone. It is this: that the peculiar distribution of pictures, the fact that they appear locally only for a few days, makes it impossible for the manufacturer to direct the advertising out of New York, and makes it imperative for the exhibitor to hitch up to the picture when it appears at his theatre.

It is, in other words, necessarily, a retail advertising proposition.

We believe this situation should be made clear to the newspapers.

The leading dailies today are constantly expecting a big advertising campaign from the manufacturers. They believe they deserve this if they are to maintain photo-play departments; and they believe the section demands it.

They do not understand that pictures differ altogether from other commodities in the salient points of national advertising—that Ivory Soap, for instance, may be advertised as a brand because every cake is like every other cake, and furthermore the cakes are always on the dealer's shelves when the customer calls.

Every feature picture, on the other hand, must be advertised distinctively and apart from its brand name; and it must be advertised when and where it appears—by the theatre showing it, in other words.

* * * * *

NEWSPAPERS should be told why national advertising need not be expected from the manufacturers alone.

They should also be told how they can help the exhibitor advertise, and how exhibitor advertising, if fully promoted, may equal department store advertising, as it already has in some cities.

In the creation of exhibitor advertising three factors are involved: the picture manufacturer, the exhibitor and the newspaper.

There must be co-operative effort among these three.

The manufacturer should supply the exhibitor with complete advertising material; the newspapers, through a service department, should help the exhibitor employ this material, just as it now helps with other retail businesses.

Patience is necessary to build up this ideal situation.

THE manufacturer of today does not get the proper advertising material into the exhibitor's hands. But a considerable effort at much expense is being made, and in some quarters there is marked improvement; and more and more the manufacturer will realize that his real customer is the public, not merely the exhibitor, and that to make and hold public patronage for his pictures he must give the exhibitor advertising material that is highly efficient and exact—that sells each picture for all it's worth, but which doesn't jeopardize public confidence by overselling it.

And the exhibitor in general is by no means educated up to the value of newspaper advertising. He is today, perhaps, the greatest obstacle to the adequate and extended advertising of the picture. But the success of those exhibitors who do considerable advertising is so marked, and it is so easy to indicate all about him the quick response of the public to clever picture exploitation, that the campaign of education should not be so difficult with him as with other kinds of retailers.

The policy of MOTION PICTURE NEWS is to supply the exhibitor with the manufacturer's advertising material, through its advertising pages, its Service Bureau and special service sections, and its Complete Plan Book.

We are also putting all this material into the hands of the newspapers so that their service departments may be able at call, to prepare full copy on any current release.

We regard this as the very highest service a trade paper can give to this industry.

Prohibition and Pictures

THE New York World, in an excellent editorial points out the solemn fact that the wave of prohibition fanaticism now sweeping this country is an invasion of the American system of government in that through constitutional amendment, it ignores the police powers of the States and thereby makes them provinces or districts, not self-governed, of the Federal Government.

Motion picture executives will easily recall that the strongest argument against Federal regulation of motion pictures was that the police powers of the States were fully able to control locally the theatre and pictures.

The World says: "No less certain is the prospect that one successful invasion of the rights of States by sectarian and centralizing influences will be followed by many others designed still further to regulate or suppress customs, diversions and occupations, domestic relations forms of public worship, perhaps matters of faith and opinion."

The closing of saloons will undoubtedly help the motion picture theatres. And, on any ground, we hold no brief for saloons.

But it will not help the motion picture, and it may destroy its present industry, if the same crowd of reformers, led as most of them are by deplorable bigotry, decide that theatres be closed on Sunday and that indeed their entire regulations, as well as the making of pictures, be subject to Federal laws and commissions.

This is by no means improbable. In fact, it is already threatening. Two bills calling for State and Federal regulation of pictures have just been introduced respectively in the New York State Legislature and in Congress.

It looks as though a greater problem than those involving star contracts is now facing the motion picture.

An Actress

IT is with real pleasure that we go out of our way to record here the notable acting of Dorothy Phillips in "The Heart of Humanity." In a well conceived and remarkably executed photoplay, the construction of which does great credit to Alan Holubar, Miss Phillips makes you feel every moment of an appealing and thrilling story. Can anything more be said of fine acting?

Dealing in Personalities

WHY do we publish Hiram Abrams' likeness here this week?

Because he is the only film man now in Los Angeles who is not mentioned in every telegram coming East about the "Big Five" combination.

And because he is the only film man mentioned in every conversation about the "Big Five" heard in the Astor lobby.

We can't understand what power of man can be enabling Hiram Abrams and Benny Schulberg to keep so quiet out there in Los Angeles.

On Broadway they are blaming the whole deal on this pair. In Los Angeles they are apparently not even mentioned.

What's the answer?

Whatever the answer we will probably hear it in due time from Benny. Until then, we can hear Benny saying—as he has so often to us in the past—"any statement now would be 'premature.'"

A feller we met yesterday said that a man he used to know well declared that a friend of his reported that a cousin of a Claridge waiter told an unknown party that Dick Rowland summed up the news of the "Big Five" combination in these immortal words: "The lunatics have now taken control of the asylum."

SYDNEY COHEN and CHARLES REILLY were up-State visitors last week. Some day these boys will permit us to give them some publicity—and then News readers will hear the most interesting story of exhibitor organization ever told.

JOE LEE just has to break into print this week, having favored us with a crate of oranges from Los Angeles.

Oh, yes—the "crate" was one of those souvenir things containing a half dozen tangerines.

After nailing his reservations "BILL" RUDOLPH called off his trip to the coast. HARRY GARSON is coming East and things will soon be humming on "The Hushed Hour," opening at a Broadway theatre. February 17th is the date, we hear.

Prohibition is here—and in its wake the gol durndest wave of restrictive legislation for the motion picture we have ever seen. The Nation, States and even cities are going after the screen. We have grouped together just the developments of the past week on page 683, and they sure do make a staggering total. We're in for some tough political work, boys.

Speaking of legislative battles to come, a committee of the National Assessment has completed its investigation of last Fall's Expositions and filed its report. Requiescat in pace.

IMAGINE AN OHIO reformer's joy when he read that table of donors. "Boodle! Graft!" he screeched. "These picture people are my meat."

A "FIRST NATIONAL DIRECTOR" is the authority given for a rumor wired us from Los Angeles, Thursday, that "Griffith has contracted to produce three subjects for First National. Can't verify."

And following the legislative subject, our own Albany informant, who sits pretty close to the throne, told us: "If it weren't for Governor Smith the Brush bill wouldn't be the joke you think it is. Lots of Democrats at heart opposed to the idea are willing to see it through if only on the theory that it is coming in a couple of years anyway—so why take a chance on some unknown future power?"

THE EXHIBITORS fighting for Ohio Sunday opening are now trying to explain that Hotel Astor meeting and the jingling of the dough-bag to GOVERNOR COX. Some tall 'splanation needed, too.

The Director General of Railroads announces the following time-table on the Coast-to-Coast trolley:

WINNIE SHEEHAN left Los Angeles on Wednesday.

J. A. BERST and MILTON GOLDSMITH arrived last Friday.

J. D. WILLIAMS states in Los Angeles that First National has contracted for several new stars. Names will come later.

A friend of ours walked into 130 West 46th Street behind James E. McBride at about five-thirty the other day. Mr. McBride stepped into the elevator and said: "Fourth floor, please." The imperious Amazon from Hell's Kitchen looked him up and down and then volunteered: "They ain't doin' no casting up at Fox to-night."

With HARRY ROWSON, JOHN H. TAYLOR, GOLDWYN STOLL, KING and a handful of other English film men in New York just now this sure is looking like the film capital of the world.

JOE REDDY is hanging his hat in the Exhibitor-Mutual offices.

Comes the announcement that popular WILLIAM J. MACGRATH, formerly manager of the News Chicago office, has taken unto himself a bride in the person of Miss Mae Snyder of Lima, Ohio. Congratulations all around!

Before starting East WINNIE SHEEHAN completed a reorganization at the Sunshine Comedy plant. The same directors and efficient organization will continue to turn out the comedies, the only change being the departure of H. Pathe Lehrman.

The Fox Corporation offices in New York issued the following statement January 23:

"The Fox Film Corporation has decided to enlarge its Sunshine Comedy Pictures plant in Los Angeles.

"Sunshine Comedies will be produced and distributed on a greater scale than ever.

"Directors Fred Fishback and Jack Blystone and others began Monday photographing the most lavish and stupendous comedies yet released by William Fox.

"Henry Lehrman is no longer connected with Sunshine Comedies."

ONCE a week for some few weeks Fred Beecroft has stalked into our office and queried:

"Say, why don't you run Charley Burr's picture on that 'Personality' page? He's one of the best fellows in the game."

And once a week we've answered that we hadn't been able to beg, borrow or steal a photo of the same Charles Burr.

But finally we called in Pete Smith's assistance and herewith we present Charles Carrington Burr.

"C. C." started in the advertising department of Paramount several years ago, soon became advertising manager, and then stepped up to the post of assistant manager of the distribution department and right hand person to W. E. Greene and Al. Lichtman.

And "C. C."—take it from any of the Paramount-Artcraft "gang"—is every bit as popular as his rapid rise has shown him to be capable.

Local Advertising the Answer

So Says Universal's General Publicity Director Discussing Wm. A. Johnston's Advertising Series

BY TARKINGTON BAKER

FROM no source, it seems to me, has there come a clearer, saner comment on the subject of the advertising of motion picture products than that appearing in the last issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS. Under the title "National Advertising," MOTION PICTURE NEWS contributes to this important—to this vitally important—subject some observations that are notable at once for their wisdom, their breadth and their value.

Particularly should emphasis fall upon the paragraph which points pertinently to the fact that "the picture, unlike any other commodity, cannot be standardized; unlike an automobile, or a safety razor, or a package of breakfast food, you cannot make fifty-two pictures alike in quality. Therefore you cannot employ general publicity as general publicity is used with other nationally advertised products to create steady, year-around customers."

No truer word has ever been uttered on this whole perplexing problem! And the sooner this fundamental, basic fact is firmly established in the minds of all concerned—producer, exhibitor and agent, controller or proprietor of the advertising medium—the sooner will the money spent for motion picture advertising show really profitable returns.

Each product of the cinema studios, each individual picture, must be separately and individually advertised. It must be advertised, moreover, as a perishable product. As MOTION PICTURE NEWS well says, pictures cannot be permitted to remain on the dealer's shelves. They must be marketed without delay or they lose much of their timeliness and, consequently, much of their value.

For the exhibitor the newspaper is, of course, the logical advertising medium. He must sell his wares to his public. The producer, on his part, must advertise for a two-fold purpose. He must sell his wares to the exhibitor and he must, no less than the exhibitor, sell his wares also to the public. So, in addition to the use of space in trade papers, the producer must join hands with the exhibitor in using newspaper space.

But—there's the rub! Joining hands, admittedly the wise, the logical course, is easier said than done. Exhibitors do not always see the value of the cooperative system; neither, for that matter, do the producers. And, to speak of the third point of the triangle, the newspapers, which could do so much to bring about this essential and practical cooperation, neglect the possibilities in a wild—and futile—pursuit of a vague, uncertain, chimerical will-o'-the-wisp known more or less indefinitely as "producers' advertising."

If it may be permitted the suggestion, it seems to me that if the advertising managers of the leading newspapers of the country would devote half the time, the energy, the gray matter and the money to bringing exhibitor, local exchange manager and newspaper together now spent in the quest for "producers' advertising" their ledgers would show a remarkable increase in revenues accruing from motion picture advertising. And, what is no less to the point, the money invested in such advertising would be well invested and the investors themselves would be no less gratified with the results than the newspapers.

Producers are beset daily by solicitors for agencies representing newspapers. These solicitors want the "producers' advertising." Their papers are continually urging the solicitors to go forth on the long, strenuous hunt for the elusive copy. Incidentally, the producers—the vast majority of them—are wondering how they can effectively advertise their products in the sort of "national campaigns" which these solicitors advocate. They know from experience—and costly experience—that an attempt to advertise the product as a whole can prove only profitless. They are not, as the solicitors may occasionally hastily conclude, opposed to national advertising. They hold no such attitude. On the contrary, they believe in advertising; they want to advertise. But the way is made difficult for them because there is this lack of co-operation and co-ordination between newspaper, local exchange and exhibitor.

Advertising the individual picture, the specific studio product—precisely as Mr. Belasco, Mr. Brady, Mr. Shubert and all the other legitimate producers advertise, not their productions as a whole, but each individual, specific production and each in its own way—advertising of this sort counts. It is the only sort that does count. No newspaper, no advertising agency proposes to Mr. Belasco or to Mr. Brady or to Mr. Shubert that he advertise his productions as a mere anonymous group, without regard to the individual characteristics of each separate production.

But for some strange reason newspapers and newspaper advertising agencies not only ask motion picture producers to follow this course, but seemingly expect them to do so without objection and without quibble. And the wise motion picture producer answers simply and directly and to the point when he says that he cannot do it. Nor can he do it with any more hope of success than his brethren who produce their wares for the speaking stage.

I have been from one end of the country to the other. Everywhere newspaper advertising managers have solicited me for this vague, nondescript, illusory "general product" advertising. Not one has ever seriously maintained that it could possibly prove of value when compared to the more simple, more direct, more specific advertising of the specific production. Yet few of them have shown a disposition to conduct a campaign of education to the end that this really valuable advertising policy could be placed in effect.

The great field for the newspaper lies not through its agency with the executive offices of the producing companies, but instead in its own city and state of publication today, this week, every day and every week, with the local exchange and the local exhibitor. Increase the producer's advertising by increasing the exhibitor's; increase the exhibitor's by increasing co-operation between exhibitor and local exchange and newspaper. Go after, not indirect, but direct advertising—advertising of today for today. Get exhibitor and exchange manager together. Teach them both what advertising investment is and then, this well implanted in their minds, it only remains for the newspaper itself to give further co-operation—and, incidentally, increasing its circulation—by insuring the advertisers that among its readers are thousands who are interested in motion pictures. And this the newspaper can do only in one way—by opening its columns to notes, little stories of productions, of stars, of the doings of stars, of details of production, to all the thousand-and-one—nay, the million—items connected with the making of motion pictures concerning which the general public is inordinately curious and in which it is deeply interested. Let the motion picture be treated with the dignity it merits; let there be photoplay critics as there are dramatic critics; let there be photoplay editors as there are sporting editors. And, finally, let the producers' publicity departments mend their ways and send out to these progressive newspapers matter that is worth publishing, that is interesting enough in itself to be of intrinsic merit—matter that a self-respecting newspaper wants because it is honestly worth wanting.

Co-operation is the key to the problem's solution. But it must be co-operation that is possessed of enough straight-grained hard common sense to see the wisdom of MOTION PICTURE NEWS' contention that each individual picture must be individually advertised in the place where it is being shown and at the time it is being shown in all the newspapers of that place and by the joint efforts of local exchange manager and local exhibitor and their joint expenditure made effective and profitable through honest, sincere co-operation on the part of the newspapers backed, in their turn, by readable, interesting, pertinent, illuminating publicity items contributed by the general directors of publicity.

A Boston Newspaper Man Tells of the Lessons He Learned in the Transition

BY TAMAR LANE

HAVING served a term of years as motion picture editor on a Metropolitan daily, reviewing practically every film of consequence made in the last decade, and having been connected with many other branches of the industry, it was only natural that I come to the usual conclusion that there wasn't anything about the picture game that I didn't know. Then I became interested in a picture theatre, the Fellsway Theatre, Medford, Mass. In other words I became a common ordinary exhibitor. During my years as M. P. editor I have never missed an opportunity to take a "shot" at the general run of exhibitors, who from observation I judged to hit a very low average of intelligence. Since entering the exhibitors' ranks, however, I have a greater respect for some exhibitors and much less for others.

First of all I want to say that you can learn more about the fundamentals of the m. p. business in one month as an exhibitor than you can in six months in any other branch of the game. The enlightenment comes swiftly and mercilessly. The first thing that hits the new-born exhibitor as soon as he has talked things over with the various exchanges in regard to service is that the renting systems now in vogue are unsound, impractical and in need of immediate adjustment. Of the systems I have so far encountered the "star series" system seems by all means the best. It includes the "program" system and besides allows the exhibitor to choose the stars which go best in his particular theatre. Its chief drawback, however, is that the exhibitor must take every one of the star's pictures be they good or bad, and at the same price. The antiquated program system which some companies still cling to is nothing else than a hold-up which requires the exhibitor to take several no-account stars in order to get a couple of real box value. Imagine a reader having to read the works of several inferior authors in order to get one good book.

Personally I have always believed that the open-booking system is the logical one. Only a short time ago it was expected to revolutionize the industry, but the hue and cry of a year or two ago has died down to an almost imperceptible whisper. While in theory it seemed practical it has not appeared to work out so well in practice. Though the open-booking idea is several years old there is hardly one representative company selling films by that method at present. This is rather difficult to understand until one becomes an exhibitor, but after a few weeks' experience with the exchanges the explanation is quite clear. The whole trouble lies in an utter lack of confidence between exhibitors and the exchangemen or distributors. This lack of confidence is so marked that it is useless to deny it. The exhibitor distrusts the exchangemen and the exchangemen distrusts the exhibitor. This is such a vital factor in the welfare of the industry that it must be remedied at once if the picture game is ever to get on a Big Business footing.

This lack of confidence is not without cause, for there have been and still are many undesirables in both branches of the business. But it would be bad enough if there were simply a lack of confidence. The truth is that in many instances there is absolute antagonism. The motion picture industry boasts some of God's finest men, but every branch of the game is also filled with inflated, consequential individuals who are under the impression that the entire business depends upon them. The exchanges have more than their share. In many cases everyone from the booker to the shipper looks with contempt upon the exhibitor and pulls against him. In any other industry the wholesaler caters somewhat to the retailer, but the exhibitor is thankful to get even civil treatment.

For a business where competition is so keen I should say that most exchanges do very little to rope in extra trade. They don't use enough road salesmen. Personally I think road salesmen are one of the best methods of increasing business. Probably the companies believe them too expensive; but if the companies are going to do nothing but wait for the exhibitor to come to the exchange, especially when the exhibitor has had no previous business with the exchange, then those companies are going to have many long waits. Simply because an exhibitor doesn't go to a certain exchange is no proof that he wouldn't book that firm's films if the right salesman got after him. The exhibitor may be satisfied with what he has. It is up to the competitor to show the exhibitor he has something a little better.

In the past eight months of studying the picture going public through the eyes of an exhibitor I have made the following observations which I believe hold true with all theatres catering to the great bulk of movie patrons.

1. The star is the thing, and according to all indications will continue to be. By that I mean that it takes a star to draw the people to the theatre. Of course it is understood that it is desirable that the star be given proper vehicles, but the idea that just strong stories with good but unknown actors will make money for exhibitors is doomed to failure. To know a play is good the spectator must see it. How can he tell beforehand if it is good or not? This is only possible in big cities where a picture is given prolonged runs. Patrons, however, know to a certain extent whether a star is good or not because they have in most cases seen the star before.

2. The name of an author has no bearing whatsoever upon the drawing power of a photoplay. Sometimes a story by a certain author does big business, but that is because the story itself is unusually well known and unusually popular, not because it was by any certain author. An author's name on advertising matter amounts to little. Movie patrons don't give a rap who wrote the story. All they ask is that it be a good one.

3. Except in very rare instances adaptations of famous books, plays, etc., do not draw money to the average theatre one bit better than an original scenario. The title is more important. The average movie patron is not much of a book worm, nor much on visiting the two-dollar theatres, so is not up on stage offerings. If exhibitors would spend as much exploiting an original photoplay as they will on the screen version of a famous book or play they would always get as large a return.

4. Exhibitors are too apt to judge the success of a play by its audible effect on the spectators. Exhibitors give no consideration to the silent approval of the spectator. If the audience applauds, laughs loudly, etc., then the exhibitor decides the picture "went over"; but if the audience remains quiet during the entire showing of a play the exhibitor gains the impression that the film is "dead." In reality the silence of an audience is usually a sign of the play's absorbing qualities.

5. The coming year will be a banner one for "specials" and independent productions. The safest thing for the big producers to do is to buy up all the good independent productions and release them on their own programs. Otherwise the big fellows will probably suffer quite a loss of business.

6. To sum up I would say that the worst flaw in the improvement of the standard of the photoplay is the system which keeps inferior pictures in circulation. Any picture which is not up to standard should be immediately withdrawn from service after it has been adversely reported on by reliable showmen. It is an imposition on the picture fans to force these films on them. The exchange and not the exhibitor is responsible for this. This is one great advantage the legitimate theatre-goer has over the movie patron. In the theatrical business it is a survival of the fit. If a play is not popular the producer cannot keep it on action without daily losses. So he moves it to the storage warehouse. There should be a storage warehouse for trashy films. Theatrical producers are forced each season to retire shows after a few days' showing, and at a loss of many thousands of dollars. If they can afford to do this the film producers can do likewise.

What the motion picture industry is sadly in need of is Big men, plenty of them, and in a hurry. Small fry have had the reins long enough.

Cleveland Gets New House Tax

Exhibitors to Pay in Proportion to Seating Capacity—Measure Comes as Surprise to Showmen

A BOMB was dropped on motion picture exhibitors of Cleveland last week when it was learned for the first time that an ordinance had been introduced into the City Council, passed, and signed by the mayor, which fixes an annual license tax on all motion picture theatres, according to the seating capacity of each house, at the rate of $100 for house with 300 seats; $200 for houses of 600 seats, and $600 for houses of over 600 seats. To say that this was a complete surprise, would be putting it mildly, for the exhibitors, through the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, has been very active, for the past two months, fighting off a $25 license tax. This $25 license tax was proposed some time ago, but the officials of the League were given to understand that no such ordinance would be sanctioned by the council members, much less signed by the Mayor, who has always been exceedingly friendly to the industry.

The passage of the tax, at this time, however, was not due to any breach of confidence on the part of the councilmen, nor on the part of the mayor, but was simply an accident. Instead of being introduced as a separate and independent ordinance, this exorbitant license tax ordinance was tacked on an amendment of the building code, and so escaped the attention of all those who were concerned in the proposition. The way it happened was like this. The present building inspection department is not self-supporting. The financial condition of the city, at the present time, is not what might be called affluent, and it was the intention of some of the councilmen who are vitally interested in the upkeep of the building inspection department, to raise sufficient funds for its support. A movie license tax seemed a legitimate means to such a fund, and so the tax was added to the building code ordinance, and nobody knew a thing about it.

Now that the thing is done, exhibitors and the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League are trying to see what can be done to undo the mischief. A meeting was held on Monday between exhibitors and council officials, at which it was suggested that another amendment be added to the amendment just passed, reducing the movie license tax to $5 a year for all movie houses, irrespective of the seating capacity. This new amendment is to be discussed before the judiciary committee of the council next Monday at 1:30 P. M., following which it will be brought up at the next council meeting.

In the meantime each exhibitor is requested to obtain an expression of opinion in regard to the matter from the councilman in whose district his theatre is located, so as to see just which way the wind is actually blowing.

Cromelin Secures World Rights

"Ghost of Slumber Mountain" Is First of Novelty Series—Introduces Herbert M. Dawley to the Screen

PAUL H. CROMELIN, 218 West 42nd Street, New York City, has secured the world rights on "The Ghost of Slumber Mountain," first of a series of novelty films showing the creatures of prehistoric times. Inter-ocean and the matter of American distribution will shortly be announced by Mr. Cromelin. Herbert M. Dawley, a newcomer to the films, is the creator of the idea and the pictures.

Herbert M. Dawley, the producer of "The Ghost of Slumber Mountain," is a designer and sculptor by profession. He was for ten years the head of the art department of the Pierce Arrow Motor Car Company of Buffalo, and during his residence there was active in amateur theatricals of the higher order. Mr. Dawley naturally followed the development of the art of motion pictures with a great deal of interest.

He anticipated the animated cartoon by a great many years, and the margins of his high school text books bear witness, for on them were traced a succession of pictures which revealed a boxing match, a fencing match, and a baseball game when the pages were passed quickly through the fingers.

Possessed of an artistic temperament and an inventive turn of mind, it was only natural that some day he should turn to the field of the motion picture as an outlet for some of his activity. It was not until some years later, though, that this became a reality.

Having returned from the theatre, where he had witnessed the screening of a film on which were shown budding flowers, he sat for a time discussing with Mrs. Dawley the wonderful possibilities of the motion picture as an educational aid. Attacked by insomnia during the wee hours of the night, he again thought of the picture he had seen. Came a flash of inspiration that caused him to sit up. What a wonderful thing it would be if the huge reptiles of the prehistoric world could be recreated on the basis of the skeletons to be seen in the American Museum of Natural History! A field worthy of the efforts of anyone. It possessed not only great educational value, but there was an impressive mystery surrounding it which would enable one to touch finger tips with the Infinite. And so Herbert M. Dawley became a producer of the life of prehistoric ages, making possible to the human vision what had never been shown to it before.

It required many months of patient effort and the retaking of several hundred feet of film before Mr. Dawley was satisfied that the results of his efforts were of a standard sufficiently high to present to the public over his name. He wrote and discarded several stories before he conceived "The Ghost of Slumber Mountain." The fact that he was able to conceive such a bold idea, write the story, act the part of the principal character as well as direct the other parts, and make it possible to produce a film of unusual excellence.

Sweet Picture to Have New York Debut

The Garson-Neilan production of "The Unpardonable Sin," in which Blanche Sweet is starred, will not have its premiere in Los Angeles after all. This decision was reached by Mr. Garson after one of the prominent managers controlling a chain of two-dollar theatres throughout the country and Canada, after a private showing of the film booked the picture over the entire circuit, and at two-dollar prices. The first showing will be in one of the Broadway houses in February, and it is confidently expected the engagement will last throughout the summer. A Chicago engagement will immediately follow, after which other large cities will follow in rapid succession.

The most flattering reports are constantly filtering in from the coast from the "wise ones" who have seen parts of the picture and witnessed some of the big scenes taken.

It is a ten-reeler and said to be one of the best productions ever made.

United Pushes Suit Against Trade Paper

It was announced this week by United Picture Theatres of America, Inc., that a decision has been handed down in the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court whereby allegations made by United Picture Theatres of America, Inc., against the Chalmers Publishing Company, publishers of the Moving Picture World at 516 Fifth Avenue, New York, have been sustained, and certain statements published by the Moving Picture World have been adjudged to be libelous.

The suit was filed on April 16, 1918, for libel against the Chalmers Publishing Company in the sum of $250,000 damages.

The decision handed down establishes as sufficient and justifiable the ground on which United bases its allegations and on which the process for recovery of damages against the Moving Picture World is based.

Goldsmith & Rosenthal are the attorneys for United.

May Appear in D'Annunzio Stories

Allan Rock announced this week that in all probability Dolores Cassinelli, star of Leonce Perret's "A Soul Adrift," will appear before the camera in a series of portrayals of the works of Gabrielle D'Annunzio, the Italian poet.

It is reported that Miss Cassinelli and Capt. Ugo D'Annunzio, son of the author, have held a series of conferences in New York, and it is expected that announcements will be made to the effect that D'Annunzio will appear with Miss Cassinelli in the productions, under the direction of Leonce Perret.

Geffen Leaves Rialto

It was announced this week that Lewis S. Geffen has resigned as assistant to the director of publicity at the Rialto and Rivalto theatres, New York.

Censor Bugaboo Again Stalks Country

Several States Seek to Establish Commissions to Curb Film Stories
—Chicago Warns Against Lack of Cooperation—Colorado
Exhibitors Invite Inspection of Programs

PEACE is not yet in sight for the exhibitors of the country, according to reports from various sections to the effect that the censorship agitation is being stirred to eruption.

Several States of the Union are seeking to establish commissions to curb the film stories. Colorado and Indiana are included in the list. New York State is also reported as leaning toward more strict censorship, through the medium of a bill recently introduced.

Exhibitors throughout the nation have recognized the injury that may be done their theatres through these measures and are uniting to combat the impending evil.

Producers have been warned in Chicago that they are not cooperating with the city censorship commission sufficiently, and that "pictures are apt to go the way of the saloons."

Meeting in Brooklyn

At a special meeting of the Executive Committee of the Associated Motion Picture Exhibitors of Brooklyn and Long Island, called together by its chairman, William Brandt, to consider a bill introduced by Assemblyman William F. Brush of Orange County, New York, designed to create a State Motion Picture Department to supervise and regulate the production, distribution and exhibition of motion pictures in this state. A resolution was unanimously adopted against the enactment of this bill into law and a committee of five was appointed for the purpose of planning by publicity and otherwise in opposing the proposed legislation. It was a consensus of opinion among the speakers present that this bill is the most iniquitous piece of legislation ever aimed at the motion picture industry since its inception.

The members of the committee are William Brandt, chairman; Otto Lederer, A. Schwartz, John Manheimer, Charles Fischer, Harry S. Manus and Louis L. Levine, counsel.

Union Against Sunday

The Sunday question is looming up as large throughout the country as the censorship evil, and hardly a state has escaped the reformer who seeks to do away with motion pictures on the Sabbath.

That the motion picture interests of California are to be further harassed by proposed legislation became evident when it was learned two bills would shortly be introduced in the assembly at Sacramento which would no doubt prove detrimental to the film industry. One is said to be proposed by the union organizations of musicians, operators, stage employes and others, providing that it shall be unlawful to work on Sunday. This would close all theatres on Sunday. The second bill concerns censorship, and will, it is understood when introduced, provide for all films shown within California to be passed by a State Board of Censorship. This information was brought to members of the Los Angeles industry in a letter from Harry Lustig, Coast special representative of the Metro Film Corporation, and action will be taken by the Theatre Owners' Association, Film Exchange-men's Board of Trade of Los An-

New Haven Houses Dark

For the first time in more than a year theatres of New Haven, Conn., were dark on Sunday evening, January 19. This followed the fining, on the previous day, of Claude Fredericks, manager of the Olympia on the charge of violating the "Sunday secular law by running a motion picture show. While his case was appealed immediately, Sunday shows are brought to an end in New Haven till some change in the law is made or a favorable decision comes from the higher courts.

The case of Mr. Fredericks marked the end of the first round in the battle between Protestant ministers of New Haven and the theatre managements. After about two years of unmolested shows, the proceeds from which went to charity, the ministers, acting through their "Pastors' Union," complained to the prosecuting attorney of the city that the law was being violated. Under the prosecutor's orders the police visited eleven theatres on January 12 and on the following day arrested their managers. Mr. Fredericks agreed to stand as a test case to settle the matter and he alone was presented to the courts, other managers promising the prosecutor they would stand by the decision in the Fredericks' case.

Excludes the Exhibitors

It is announced from Indianapolis, Ind., that a bill providing for a State Motion Picture Commission and appropriating $5,000 for the establishment of the bureau, has been introduced by Representative Charles A. Johnson of Grant County. The measure was prepared for the Women's Christian Temperance Union.

It provides for the appointment by the governor of a Censorship Board of three members and excludes any person interested in or connected with the management of motion picture theatres or exhibitors.

INDIANAPOLIS, January 21.—The Sunday motion picture bill passed during the 1917 session of the Indiana state legislature, and vetoed by Governor Goodrich after the end of the session, was handed down in the Senate Wednesday by Lieutenant-Governor Bush. The measure was originally intended to legalize motion picture performances on Sunday. The governor vetoed the bill two years ago when he found that a clause in the measure which permitted shows after 2 p. m. had been altered, after transmission from the Senate to the House, to permit picture shows all day Sunday.

It is understood that no decision has been reached on any further procedure on the vetoed bill. Opponents of the measure express the belief that an attempt might be made to pass it instead of offering a new bill covering the same ground. Passage over the governor's veto requires only a majority in each house.

Senator Harry E. Negley, Republican floor leader in the upper branch, said that if any attempt was made to put the bill to another vote it would be only after opportunity had been given to opponents to present their objections to individual senators.

Mrs. Edward Franklin White, president of the Legislative Council of Women, said last night that the council will make a vigorous fight against legalizing Sunday movies. Mrs. White announced that a conference will be held by members of the council today to decide what form the women's protest will take. Women representing organizations in other parts of the state are making their voices heard against the Sunday motion picture shows to a greater extent than in Indianapolis, Mrs. White said, and are urging the headquarters of the Legislative Council of Women to oppose Sunday shows.

Federal Commission

Information received in Los Angeles last week that Congressman Randall of California, was planning to introduce in Congress a bill creating a Federal Commission whose duties it shall be to pass on all motion pictures before they are released to the ex-

Van Beuren Is for Quality First

Head of V. B. K. Comedy Company
Tells News Interviewer That He Thinks Always of Public—
Cost No Object

WITH carefully laid plans, with new ideals guiding his efforts to "build" entertainment and with a keen business mind, whetted to a sharp edge by a long and successful career as chief executive of several of New York's most enterprising businesses, Amedee J. Vignot-Van Beuren, has taken a hand in motion picture production activities with Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew, carrying out his idea of clean, snappy, up-to-the-minute comedy. Mr. Van Beuren is executive head of the V. B. K. Comedy Company, now engaged in producing Drew comedies, the initial releases of which reflect more clearly than any other medium, the real meaning of Mr. Van Beuren's statement: "I'm in the producing end of the motion picture business, first and primarily, to build entertainment for the public, for when I do this, my success in the venture is assured, since I have always held that money is no object when one can give the public what it wants. And when the public gets what it wants it will pay for it and the man supplying the demand will not lose for his trouble."

It would seem that Mr. Van Beuren's policy in producing comedies, is digested in that one statement. His whole attitude leans toward the public. In diagnosing this or that phase of the business he always starts at the public pulse, notes its pulsation, whether it is feverish in response to a certain situation developed in a comedy exhibition, or normal in response to another. And the head of the V. B. K. Comedy Company has had every advantage in taking this public pulse because for years he has been engaged in supplying amusement and entertainment to it in large measures.

Mr. Van Beuren is probably better known to the business world because of his connections with the Van Beuren Bill Posting Company, one of the largest established advertising mediums in the country. Through this medium, he has learned what attracts and what repulses the eye of the public. Until recently he held the vice-presidency of this concern but lately has resigned active interest. He still is a major stockholder.

He is president of the Nolek Amusement Company, which controls some of the largest open-air amusement centers in the country. He is interested in New York's largest skating rinks, tennis courts and hand-ball courts and president of the Van Kelton Amusement Company, Fifty-eighth street and Eighth avenue. He is one of the owners of the Moorish Garden, One Hundred and Tenth street and Riverside Drive. Through these mediums he has learned to study the public's likes and dislikes.

"I saw in the Drews," he said in announcing his policy of comedy production, "the highest type of comedy entertainers. Before I even knew them, their comedies were in my house and never have I heard a house leave without at the least one hundred patrons commenting favorably on their work. And when I didn't run their comedies, my patrons wanted to know why.

"Through the Paramount people, I have supplied the public with samples of the Drews' work under my management. The returns I have received have repaid me a hundredfold for the venture. And the biggest return of all and the one that means most to me, is the fact that the public likes their work and my work in production. It isn't to be assumed from my statements that I'm not expecting financial returns, I am; but first and foremost, I'm expecting satisfaction on the part of the public and I am not only prepared but willing to wait for financial returns.

"Regardless of cost, I am in the business to put the best that is possible in each and every Drew production. Expense is a minor consideration so long as something novel, something that attracts, something entertaining, something "everydayish," and above all, something that represents an event in the life of the masses, that Mary Jones or Bill Smith can see enacted by the Drews, are the resultants of my efforts.

"The little things with which we are all acquainted, they are the ones that I will endeavor to make the crux of the Drew comedies. I'm not seeking to portray on the screen those events that happen but once in a lifetime, but those that are happening every day in your household and in mine. These little incidents, heightened by the Drews' inimitable humor, are to be the basis of every Drew comedy that is made under my management. This is the brand of comedy that the public wants and this is the brand that the V. B. K. Company is going to furnish regardless of time of expense in production. If I have to spend a million dollars on one Drew I will do so, for I know that if it merits a million it will be worth more to the public."

Circle in Indianapolis Elects Officers

It was reported this week from Indianapolis that at the annual meeting of the Circle Theatre Company and the Monument Realty Company, owners and operators of the Circle theatre, A. L. Block was re-elected president, Robert Lieber vice-president and treasurer, and R. S. Norwood secretary; Fred C. Gardner, Leo Rappaport, H. P. Lieber and Meyer Efromson were elected as directors, Mr. Gardner and Mr. Rappaport as new members of the board. The reports of the president, secretary and treasurer showed a successful year. The Circle theatre, which is now entering into its third year of operation, has been kept in perfect physical condition, improvements in equipment making for more efficient service and better productions. Plans for the ensuing year call for a program of even more notable achievements as it is the ambition of Mr. Block and the other officers of the company that the Circle theatre prove an institution of national interest and civic pride. The president's report referred to S. Barrett McCormick, manager, as one of the two most capable theatre executives in the country.

Their Growth Is Rapid

The firm of Willis & Inglis, of Los Angeles, has again found necessary the need of larger quarters and have taken additional suites adjoining their offices in the Wright & Callender Building in Los Angeles, where they will be in better position to handle their growing business pertaining to engagements and publicity.

Inside Story of Combine Now Told

Smoke Screen Subsidies in Alexandria Lobby and Information on Stars' Actions Is Obtainable—Chaplin Prime Mover in Amalgamation

WHAT is considered the most revolutionary move in the history of the film industry, if all rumors prove of solid foundation, is the combination of Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Wm. S. Hart, Charles Chaplin and D. W. Griffith in the United Artists' Distributing Association, as announced in MOTION PICTURE NEWS last week.

Now that the dust has settled in the lobby of the Alexandria in Los Angeles, and everyone is yet in the dark concerning the true status of the new organization, stories of how the idea was hatched are being circulated throughout the country.

Some of these rumors insist that the United Artists' Association will upset plans affecting two or more producing organizations directly, and will affect the whole industry indirectly.

Definite Statement Expected

Plans for the organization of the United Artists are now nearing completion, and shortly it will be possible for this infant organization to make definite statements setting forth just what will be its policy with respect to distributing directly to the exhibitor.

Now that the big sensation created by the act of the big five has died away to a more or less extent, it is possible to get at details of the organization heretofore not made public.

It may be said the combination started as a joke, at least it was so suggested by Harry Garson. Charley Chaplin took the Garson jest seriously, and turned comedy into, will we say, tragedy or just business drama. Chaplin, with his brother Sid, who serves as business manager for him, called upon the directors of the First National Exhibitors' Association Friday afternoon and asked for a few minor changes in his contract. The directors refused the Chaplin petition, it is said, and further the report is that he left the meeting in an angry mood. He drove to the Chaplin studio, a distance of almost nine miles from the parlors of the Alexandria Hotel where the directors met, and dictated a notice which was posted on the bulletin board. This notice was to the effect Mr. Chaplin's studio would be closed with the end of the week for an indefinite period, and that the comedian producer himself would go to Europe for a long needed rest.

Had Chaplin Resting Up

Los Angeles papers were keen for this story, and columns were carried of Charley giving up producing to recuperate his health.

The remainder of the day Chaplin started to spend visiting friends at the other studios. The first studio visited was that of D. W. Griffith, and it was here that he expressed his dissatisfaction in the presence of Harry Garson, who made the suggestion that he organize his own distributing company. A second later Chaplin put the proposition up to D. W. Griffith. Griffith gave an affirmative answer, and then the famous comedian was on his way to the Fairbanks studios. Doug. was keen for the proposition, and Chaplin sought William S. Hart and Mary Pickford.

THAT JOB!

Give It to a Victory Boy and Win Two Ways

THAT job you have to get a man for soon—are you going to give it to a soldier or sailor? Are you going to win two ways—by giving yourself a cheery patriotic feeling and by getting a man who has proven his worth?

Motion Picture News has thrown its classified columns open free of charge to men discharged from the service seeking to re-establish themselves in the picture industry.

And we thus give you a chance to make good—with yourself and for yourself.

Thirteen plays in this new organization, for it was on Monday, the thirteenth of January, that the first get-together of the five was held. This was at the home of Sid Chaplin near the Chaplin studios. There the articles of agreement were decided upon and signed. Miss Pickford's name was first. She being unable to be present because of a recent attack of influenza, was represented by her mother, Charlotte Pickford, who has been her business manager since she entered upon her screen career. Douglas Fairbanks put his strong right arm into action next, then came Hart, Chaplin and Griffith.

The first intimation others of the film world had concerning this combination was on Tuesday evening, January 14, when all took dinner together at the Hotel Alexandria at a table almost entirely surrounded by officers and executives of such well known photoplay organizations as the Famous Players-Lasky, Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, First National Exhibitors' Association, the Universal Film Manufacturing Company and others. The dinner created a sensation, and caused many to sense the coming of an announcement, but none guessed the real intent of the five and their representatives. By Wednesday afternoon the temporary agreement had been put into concrete form by attorneys, and the new articles were signed, at which time, it is said, each of the five gave bond to the extent of $100,000 for the fulfillment of their obligations with respect to taking part in the organization of a direct-to-exhibitors' releasing system. When this was done, the first definite statement was given to the public.

Papers Feature Story

The afternoon newspapers of Los Angeles were first to spread the story, and got it for their last edition. A headline two inches deep appeared across the front page of two. The story came so late, however, the papers carried but a paragraph which did not give the definite facts pertaining to the organization or the intention of the five principals with respect to carrying out existing contracts.

Many did not believe the rumors the papers carried, and it was not until the morning papers on Thursday were distributed in which statements were given by all that credence was given to the story or the rumors.

Adolf Zukor, when interviewed by MOTION PICTURE NEWS representative, said: "I congratulate the members of the United Artists' Distributing Association. This will not in any way affect the Paramount and Artcraft programs' plans. We will go right ahead and create new stars to take the places of those who are leaving our programs upon the expiration of present contracts. We have been creating new stars ever since we entered the industry, and we believe we can be successful by continuing to do so."

The directors of the First National in session Thursday, adopted a congratulatory statement which was forwarded to the members of the United Artists' Association.

Through all of the excitement occasioned by a thousand and one rumors, and the final bombshell explosion when the definite information concerning the United Artists' Association was made public, Hiram Abrams and Benny Schulberg have remained silent. From day to day they have promised to give out a statement concerning the future of the organization they were forming, but up to the end of the week this statement was still forthcoming.

Still More Rumors

There have been many rumors concerning Goldwyn. One of particular significance was that Geraldine Farrar would go to First National, and Mae Marsh would again play in Griffith productions. When confronted with this statement Mr. Samuel Goldwyn smilingly said, "You may believe everything you hear."

Joseph Brandt of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company claims he has been so busy getting four serial companies to work, that he has not had time to take part in the various doings or undosings of filmdom.

Exhibitors Reorganize in Montreal

The Canadian Motion Picture Association of Montreal, Quebec, has been reorganized and steps have been taken to seek affiliation with the Moving Picture Exhibitors' Protective Association of Ontario.

The Montreal and Quebec exhibitors who have become identified with the revived body are pressing for an arrangement with the Quebec Board of Moving Picture Censors whereby a committee of the organization could confer with the Censor Board regarding the revision of rejected pictures. It is felt that the exhibitors could handle the matter to the satisfaction of all concerned. This is rather a new kink and is being given serious consideration.

Officers have been elected as follows: President, Mr. Lavergne of Montreal; vice-president, Sam Freed of the Tivoli theatre, Montreal; secretary-treasurer, H. G. Le Grove.

Claims That Picture Was Pirated in Jersey

Both criminal and civil action has been brought against Harry Samwick, manager of a state rights exchange in New York City, according to J. Berkowitz on behalf of Elk Photo Plays, another state right concern in Gotham.

According to Mr. Berkowitz, who recently entered the film business from mercantile lines, film piracy was a tremendous surprise to him and he declares that he will prosecute the offender to the limit.

He claims that Harry Samwick bought the rights to "Lust of the Ages" for New York only and then sent it over in Northern New Jersey where a large number of theatres played it. Only recently Mr. Berkowitz secured the Northern New Jersey rights for his Elk Photoplays exchange and quickly learned that his purchase had already played many of the leading theatres there.

"An example must be made of those who have been many years in the film business and must therefore know that it is open thievery to operate in territory owned and paid for by another concern," declared Mr. Berkowitz.

Select Says Anna Case Is Widely Known

Because of her various concert tours throughout the country and her many appearances on the Metropolitan Opera stage, Select Pictures Corporation is convinced that thousands of persons know Anna Case, the star in "The Hidden Truth."

And then they point out that she has made more than a score of records for the leading phonograph companies and that the people will be glad to see her pictured on the screen.

World Film to Distribute United Productions

Confirming the press dispatch carried by the daily papers under a Los Angeles date line of January 20, in which an announcement was made of the combination of World Film, United Theatres and the Peerless Producing Company, World officials in New York, make the following statement:

"World to distribute United productions. Peerless to make big special productions for United. Name of new chairman of, board of directors of United to be announced later.

"A few weeks ago World Pictures announced that plans were under way that would establish this company as one of the biggest distributing organizations in the film industry. The association of the World, United and Peerless is but the beginning of a gigantic organization that will be a power working for the betterment of the exhibitors, not alone in this country but in the whole world. With a policy of absolute square dealing the exhibitors will be afforded a chance to put their business on a sound basis through co-operation. This will result in their receiving pictures of the highest box-office value through the association of World, United and Peerless."

MOTION PICTURE NEWS received a wire from the West Coast, January 23, which stated that Messrs. Berst, Goldsmith and Gradwell announced consummation of merger of United Picture Theatres, World Film and Peerless Producing Company of Fort Lee, and that this means that United and World distributing organizations will be combined in one set of exchanges with each company maintaining its sales force while the physical portion of distribution will be handled by the World organization. The United takes over Fort Lee Peerless studios heretofore used by World and will enlarge them. Productions will be made there as well as the West Coast. Mr. Berst then announced list of theatres that have contracted for United Service. The foreign marketing will be handled by David P. Howells.

Western Electric Show

The Western Electric Company leased the Lexington theatre, New York, for two evenings recently and showed four of its industrial pictures, made by Universal to its 5,000 employees in the New York district. The pictures deal with all phases of the company's work.

No Strike in Kansas City

The controversy between exhibitors and operators in Kansas City has been settled by the United States Commissioner of Conciliation, according to late reports. The operators asked for wages of $23 a week. They were awarded $20 a week for three to three and a half hours' work each day.

Pathe Opens Big Exchange in Buffalo

It was reported from Buffalo this week that Pathe is opening in that city one of the largest film exchanges in the state outside of New York City. The office will be at 218 Franklin street, in a building which has been in the hands of remodelers for several weeks and which today presents the appearance of an entirely new structure, admirably suited for the business of a film exchange. The office will be in charge of C. A. Taylor, who has looked after Pathe interests in Western New York for several months and who previous to taking charge of this company's exchange was manager of the local Metro branch. "Buck," as he is familiarly known by friends in this part of the state, is one of the most popular men in the industry, which is perhaps one of the reasons why Pathe features are being shown in more theatres each week. One of the features of the new exchange will be a miniature theatre where pictures will be screened for exhibitors.

Associated with Mr. Taylor will be A. Teschmacher, branch booker; S. Z. Williams, branch cashier; G. H. Christoffer, former manager of the local Mutual offices, Hodkinson representative; Frank J. Leonard, American representative; Otto Schroeppel, Buffalo Pathe representative; Basil Brady, Rochester representative, and Harry De Vere who will look after business in the Southern tier. Monday evening Mr. Taylor gave a luncheon for his staff at one of the local hotels and the exchange office has been filled with flowers this week, the tokens of friendship from Western New York exhibitors.

Contest Right to Show the Goldwyn Pictures in Butte

The American theatre, Butte, Montana, has filed an action in the civil courts against the Ansonia theatre, also of Butte, asking for an injunction to restrain the Ansonia from showing Goldwyn's, "The Hell Cat," featuring Geraldine Farrar. Judge Lynch, presiding, granted a temporary injunction, restraining Manager Lynch of the Ansonia from showing the feature as he had advertised.

On January 5, a motion to dissolve was heard before Judge Lynch, each side being represented by a big array of attorneys. The American alleges that it had a prior contract with the Goldwyn people to show its productions in this city. The Goldwyn Company, it is said, alleged violation of the contract and then made a new contract with the Ansonia.

The case is docketed as the Montana Amusement Securities' Company and the American theatre vs. Goldwyn Distributing Company and Ansonia theatre.

"The action will determine whether or not an exhibitor's contract with a film distributing or producing company is worth the paper it is written on," said A. C. Raleigh of the American. Judge Lynch took the matter under advisement and the theatre men are awaiting his decision.

Acme Issues "Thirteenth Chair" as Special

The first announcement made by the Acme Pictures Corporation concerning their motion picturization of Bayard Veiller's "The Thirteenth Chair," in which Yvonne Delva is to be the featured player and which is to be adapted and directed for the screen by Leonce Perret, has been supplemented by the announcement of additional important information.

In order to insure the same international interest and world-wide success for the screen version of "The Thirteenth Chair" as that afforded it as a legitimate stage attraction, the producers are extending themselves and bending every effort and sparing no expense towards this end. A cast of such sterling and stellar qualities as has never before appeared jointly in any other motion picture, has been chosen by Mr. Perret to insure the proper portrayal of the many intensely dramatic and unusually difficult roles.

Supporting Miss Delva is an all-star cast headed by Creighton Hale, Marie Shotwell, Marc McDermott and others.

New Hampshire Exhibitors Elect Officers

At a meeting of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of New Hampshire (annual meeting) held at the Hotel Arlington in Boston, Mass., officers were re-elected. Alfred S. Black, president of the Maine State League, and Frank J. Howard, president of the Massachusetts League, addressed the gathering after the banquet, which was attended by about thirty prominent New Hampshire exhibitors.

Many important matters were discussed, including the tax question, the raising of funds for exhibitor organization, and also the question of Sunday showing of pictures in New Hampshire. At the present time the state of New Hampshire is closed to Sunday shows, and this includes Manchester with a population of 85,000 and thirteen theatres, Nashua with a population of 35,000 and five theatres, and Concord with a population of 25,000.

John M. Willander Sails for Sweden

Henry Ford's Peace Ship, "Oscar the Second," sailed away Tuesday, January 21, with John M. Willander, film exporter and importer, for Sweden, Norway and Denmark.

Mr. Willander also represents the Scandinavian Film Central which has exchanges and theatres in Copenhagen, Stockholm and Christiania, and expects to be back in New York City about April 15.

The early experience of John Willander in the film industry was gained in the Mid-Northwest territory. He operated a state right exchange at Duluth for a long time and later located in Minneapolis. New York City has been his headquarters for the past eighteen months.

He insisted that MOTION PICTURE NEWS be delivered to him at Stockholm every week.

Famous Players Directors Meet

Report That Organization Has Progressed to Gratifying Degree—
Lasky Presides in Absence of Zukor

THE third annual meeting of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation was held in the office of the company at 485 Fifth Avenue, on Tuesday noon, January 14. In the absence of Adolph Zukor, president of the corporation, Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president, presided.

The annual reports of the officers were received with great interest, particularly the resume of the year's activities submitted by Mr. Lasky, and the report submitted by Arthur S. Friend, treasurer, which showed the corporation to have attained the strongest and soundest financial condition in its history.

The stockholders re-elected the following as directors to serve for a term of four years: Arthur S. Friend, Elek J. Ludvigh, Emil E. Shauer, Eugene Zukor and Walter E. Greene.

At the meeting of the directors, held the same afternoon, two vacancies in the directorate, caused by recent resignations, were filled by the election of Walter W. Irwin, formerly of Vitagraph, and Theodore F. Whitmarsh, who is vice-president of Francis H. Leggett & Co. Mr. Irwin's election was forecast in a statement several weeks ago. Mr. Whitmarsh is a director of a number of banking and commercial companies, and has been prominently identified with Herbert C. Hoover in the conduct of the United States Food Administration.

The directors re-elected the officers of the past year, with the exception of Hiram Abrams, who retired from a vice-presidency. They are Adolph Zukor, president; Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president; Arthur S. Friend, treasurer; Cecil B. De Mille, director general; Frank A. Garbutt, Walter E. Greene and Walter W. Irwin, vice-presidents; Elek John Ludvigh, secretary; Emil E. Shauer, assistant treasurer; Ralph A. Kohn, assistant secretary; L. S. Wicker, assistant secretary; Frank Meyer, assistant secretary.

The election of Frank Meyer to the office of assistant secretary gives recognition to one of Mr. Zukor's first associates in the Famous Players Film Company. Mr. Meyer for more than six years has been in charge of the company's laboratories in the East.

The directors re-elected the executive committee with the exception of Hiram Abrams. The committee consists of Adolph Zukor, Jesse L. Lasky, Arthur S. Friend, Walter E. Greene, Elek John Ludvigh, Emil E. Shauer and Walter W. Irwin. Mr. Irwin is a new member.

The finance committee, consisting of Frederic G. Lee, chairman; Adolph Zukor and Arthur S. Friend, was also re-elected.

The complete personnel of the board of directors of the corporation follows:

Jules E. Brulatour, Cecil B. De Mille, William C. Demorest, William H. English, Arthur S. Friend, Daniel Frohman, Frank A. Garbutt, Walter E. Greene, Henry Hine, Walter W. Irwin, Albert A. Kaufman, Jesse L. Lasky, Frederic G. Lee, Elek John Ludvigh, Emil E. Shauer, Theodore F. Whitmarsh, Eugene Zukor and Adolph Zukor, chairman.

"New Field Opened"—Collins

Producer of Roosevelt Picture Considers That Big Men Plus Dramatic Episodes Spells Innovation—
Gompers Picture to Follow

WITH sound, relevant facts to substantiate his belief and with a finished production builded upon the big, appealing events in the life of one of our greatest Americans, now on the screen before the public, Frederick L. Collins, of McClure Pictures and producer of "The Fighting Roosevelts," believes that he has opened a new field in motion picture production. "That field," he states, "is to be represented by bigger and more far-reaching subjects, to wit: the lives of the world's big men recited on the screen in dramatic episodes."

Mr. Collins is not going to stop with the Roosevelt picture. He's going to put more of the big men of the world before the eye of the camera and in such a manner as to make the world proud of the achievement. At the present time Mr. Collins has a representative in Europe talking the matter over with the big ones on that side of the Atlantic, and he drops the hint that at least one crowned head of a European country is interested. Men, known throughout the length and breadth of civilized nations, are his objective.

Samuel Gompers, known throughout the world wherever there exists organized or disorganized labor, and one of the most prominent figures in public life, is to be the feature of Mr. Collins' next production of this nature. And the same plan that was followed in the making of the Roosevelt picture will be followed in the Gompers picture—the big, human events, the far-reaching episodes, the national and international characteristics of the man and the heart-appealing incidents will be portrayed with the drama ever present, which combination, Mr. Collins states, is the greatest medium of entertainment either behind the footlights or on the gold fibre.

The why and the wherefore of this contention will be found in the following interview with Mr. Collins:

"My experience in producing 'The Fighting Roosevelts,' which pictures the dramatic events of our great ex-President's life, has convinced me that a new field has opened in the film world. It was generally considered that scenarios based on fiction were necessary for the production of a commercially successful photoplay. Those who have seen 'The Fighting Roosevelts' this week at the Strand have expressed to me the conviction that this is no more the case. Nothing shown

Pessimism Reigns in Missouri

Kansas City Rejoices at Sunday Crowds, But Nights Are Dull—

Other News of Interest

THE theatres in Kansas City have suffered the greatest financial loss of their lives this fall and winter, it is reported. Closed five weeks on account of the influenza, and now a street car strike has almost paralyzed the amusement business. The strike was called on December 9th and is not as yet settled. A few cars are running under martial protection, but the service is very uncertain.

Many big features are being held back until something definite can be decided regarding the strike situation. One theatre manager has a most spectacular advertising campaign planned and has held it for five weeks; he has also purchased elaborate interior decorations to comply with the setting of the picture, all of which he will thrust out as a bomb shell as soon as the existing conditions are rectified and he can be assured of fair patronage.

Sundays all the houses enjoy a good afternoon audience, but night crowds are meager.

"The Romance of Tarzan" played to capacity houses last week during the day, the S. R. O. sign going up at noon and staying until evening. "Little Women" at the Royal and Clara Kimball Young in "The Road Through the Dark" at the Liberty drew fairly well. The Doric played O'Henry's story "Everybody's Girl" with Alice Joyce. Miss Joyce is a good bet here.

S. J. Baker of St. Louis and manager of the First National Exhibitors Corporation for the entire state of Missouri, has been in Kansas City for several days looking things over. The First National has sold this territory to Flynn and Richardson. Mr. Baker was formerly on the Missouri state censor board and says he is glad to get back into the commercial end of the game.

Victor Eubank Returns from Army

Victor Eubank, supervising director of the Essanay Film Manufacturing Company, who entered the services of the United States some months ago as first lieutenant in the Signal Corps, has returned to civilian life. He plans to resume the production of big features and to otherwise interest himself in the film business.

Lieut. Eubank spent some time in the War College, editing propaganda films and news releases from France. Later he was at Camp Meade, Maryland, and in the office of the Chief Signal Officer in Washington, where he had supervision over all cameramen working on news pictures and propaganda films.

He was ordered to join the American Expeditionary Forces in France to take charge of photographic work abroad, and was at the port of embarkation at Hoboken, New Jersey, awaiting transportation when the armistice was signed and he was recalled to Washington.

Dorothy Phillips and Alan Holubar were to have spent a day or so in Kansas City on their way back to the West coast, but on account of Mr. Holubar's illness they only stayed a few hours.

Kansas City film fans are looking forward to the personal appearances of Baby Marie Osborne in several of the theatres. She is quite popular here and a number of the suburban houses have put out special advertising in view of her visit. The downtown houses have also made a number of announcements of her coming.

Herman Stern, one of the oldest salesmen in the service of the Universal Film Company, has resigned as city salesman for the Kansas City exchange and will return to New York, where he formerly represented the company. He will be succeeded in Kansas City by Mr. Samuel Bornstein, who has been acting as his assistant. Mr. Stern created many friends for himself among Kansas City exhibitors and succeeded materially in increasing the business enjoyed by Universal in the city. Mr. Stern formerly covered the trade in Greater New York and expects to act as a special representative of the company in that territory upon his return east.

Arthur Ford of Wichita, Kansas, was in Kansas City last week arranging for a big novelty campaign to exploit "The Lure of the Circus," Universal's new serial featuring Eddie Polo. Mr. Ford has conceived the unique plan of advertising the serial in the same broad and elaborate way a circus is billed. On the theory that everybody loves a circus, he will feature the many distinct sawdust ring events in the chaptered story. Delivery wagons in Wichita will carry banners, billboards will display enormous posters, and another feature will be the sandwich man. Mr. Ford will dress up the entrance to his theatre to simulate the entrance of a circus tent, and pervading the air will be the pungent odor of hot peanuts.

Justice to Paul West

Editor, MOTION PICTURE NEWS:

Dear Sir:

Pictures have recently been announced with the statement that the scenarios were the last work of Paul West and were written by him in France.

It is true that the scenarios were supplied by Mr. West, but it is distinctly unfair to his memory to state that they were written in France. Mr. West worked for the Red Cross there as a patriotic duty, was absorbed in the work, as all his friends knew, and did no play or scenario writing whatsoever.

Will you kindly correct these misstatements?

Sincerely,

MRS. PAUL WEST.

New Field Has Opened, Says Collins

in pictures is more dramatic than Roosevelt, as President.

"The Gompers picture, which I intend to produce next, has already an immense audience waiting for it. Each local branch of labor will be an enthusiastic supporter of this film drama that will show American Labor's battle against the Bolshevik.

"My plan for the production of dramas founded on the lives of great men is, of course, a development of the successful film, 'My Four Years in Germany.' I have used the services of the same director, William Nigh, in producing 'The Fighting Roosevelts,' and I have used episodes that are just as timely and interesting.

"I am now under negotiation with several of the biggest men of the period—one of them a ruler—for the production of their lives in the films. Naturally, my prosecution of these plans will depend upon the success of the Roosevelt film. If it proves to be as great a success as reports from various sections of the country lead me to believe—I expect within a short time to have these other films under way."

"Will not your idea lead rich men to adopt the films as a medium for exploiting themselves?" Mr. Collins was asked.

"The shrewdness of the exhibitor will take care of that," Mr. Collins answered. "I think it would be a damaging thing to the trade to have the screen used for business or political propaganda."

"Is it not true, Mr. Collins," said the interviewer, "that the film world will benefit directly by the fact that big business is interested in the production of these films of great men?"

"To my mind," replied Mr. Collins, "one of the most important features of this development in motion pictures is that it is attracting to the business the attention of capitalists and statesmen who have hitherto fought shy of the industry."

"Will the recent action of the stars in forming their own organizations affect your plans?" the reviewer asked.

"Not at all," Mr. Collins replied, "the general thing I am interested in is that the exhibitor may be able to get these pictures without having to purchase program pictures to secure them. This I have arranged for in the case of the Roosevelt picture through the First National Exhibitors' Circuit. That is all that concerns me."

Rothacker Plans Laboratory on Coast

Watterson Rothacker, who went to the coast with the First National Exhibitors' Association members and spent considerable time there in the interest of the membership committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, of which he is chairman, has returned to Chicago, where he will formulate plans for the erection of a service laboratory in Los Angeles which will work in co-operation with his Chicago plant.

Alice Brady Appears in Three at Same Time

BESIDES appearing daily in her own stage play Alice Brady is said to be actually working on three Select Pictures at the same time.

With the cutting and titling finished on "The Indestructible Wife," Alice Brady's Select Picture for January, the studio and location work on her succeeding picture, "The World to Live In," also completed, Miss Brady has plunged into the midst of another, the name for which has not yet been selected, thereby putting three pictures for this star into the works at one time.

"The Indestructible Wife" is a screen version of Frederic and Fanny Hatton's stage play of two seasons ago. In it Miss Brady has the part of a wife, who proves during the course of the story to be very indestructible, but toward the end she wears down and becomes a very sensible young wife.

It's a great role, Select declares, and just the sort that is suited to an actress of Miss Brady's type and charm. Charles Maigne wrote the scenario and also directed the production.

The succeeding attraction, "The World to Live In," which Miss Brady has just completed, is by W. Carey Wonderly. Mr. Maigne was the director.

With these three pictures under way at one time, and her evenings and two afternoons a week devoted to her stage play, "Forever After" at The Playhouse, Miss Brady finds herself an extremely busy young lady, but in order to take advantage of the good location weather she is making use of every spare moment.

Fourth U. S. Series Ready

"Making a Nation Fit" is the fourth picture of the U. S. Series, the Government two-reelers released by the Division of Films and distributed through the World Film Corporation, and is released February 2.

The subject matter of the picture is the method adopted and carried out by the Government of preparing the hundreds of thousands of recruits for the heavy work of war ahead of them. It is said to show the training exercises in the cantonments and navy yards, covering the preparatory work of both the Army and Navy.

Bayonet classes are shown leaving the trench, going over the parapet, advancing on dummies and dropping into trenches.

Jean Paige Discovered

When Director Martin Justice visited friends in Paris, Ill., he met Jean Paige, and although she had no previous dramatic experience she was immediately selected as one of the two O. Henry girls and is said to be considered generally as one of Vitagraph's finds.

During the eighteen months she has been with the Vitagraph she has figured in some of their most successful productions, among which are "The Golden Goal," "Find the Woman," "King of Diamonds," and she will also be seen in the new Bushman and Bayne production.

E. E. Shauer Plans Trip Abroad

Sees Better Foreign Conditions and Goes to Study England for Famous Players—Changes Made in Exchanges

AMONG the news of interest this week from Famous Players-Lasky was that which tells of the intended trip of E. E. Shauer to England and the changes recently made in the exchanges of the organization.

E. E. Shauer, assistant treasurer and manager of the Foreign Department of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, in anticipation of greatly improved conditions in the foreign market, is sailing for London shortly, where he will spend several weeks studying the opportunities for Paramount and Artcraft pictures in Great Britain. It has been some time since an official of this company has visited England and Mr. Shauer expects to devote considerable time in outlining a program for the expansion of the export business of the Famous Players-Lasky organization.

The American film industry, unfettered by the heavy hand of war, can look forward to the year of 1919 as a period of great development and prosperity in the film export business, in the opinion of Mr. Shauer. The coming of permanent peace will not only re-open fields which have been more or less closed to American film but will permit the exploitation of countries hitherto scarcely touched, Mr. Shauer believes. Mr. Shauer will sail on the Adriatic in the near future, although the definite date is not available at this time. He is ready to leave at any moment, however. In an interesting discussion concerning the export outlook, Mr. Schauer said: "Considering the great difficulties under which the American film industry has labored during the last four years, the year just closed has shown an important gain in the exportation of Paramount and Artcraft pictures.

Y. F. Freeman, formerly General Manager of Triangle, has been engaged by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation as District Manager of the Atlanta, New Orleans and Dallas exchanges. Mr. Freeman has been closely associated with S. A. Lynch for some four years and started in the motion picture business shortly after leaving college, when he became connected with the Atlanta offices of the S. A. Lynch Enterprises, Inc., handling Paramount pictures.

F. V. Chamberlain, exchange manager of the Atlanta branch for a year and a half, has been promoted to the position of Special Representative for the Department of Distribution.

Mr. Freeman will take charge of the Atlanta, New Orleans and Dallas exchanges immediately. Mr. Chamberlain, shortly after his promotion last week, when he was called to the New York home office, left for Washington where he will consult with local Paramount-Artcraft representatives.

Dan Michalove continues as branch manager of the Dallas branch office with Dave Prince as his assistant. The Atlanta and New Orleans exchanges are under the direct management of Louise L. Dent and H. F. Wilkes.

Goldwyn Gets Blanket Booking from Poli

"THE BORDER LEGION," a Goldwyn production starring Blanche Bates and Hobart Bosworth, is reported to be in receipt of a tremendous list of blanket bookings.

The first big blanket booking of the production came from the Poli Circuit. Under this it will be seen in important theatres in Worcester and Springfield, Mass., New Haven, Hartford, New Britain, Meriden and Bridgeport, Conn., and Scranton and Wilkes-Barre, Pa. Bookings also were made for first run showing of a week at Tom Moore's Rialto theatre, Washington, D. C., and for immediate second run at Moore's Strand, in the same city.

As its second New York run following the week's showing at the Strand theatre, "The Border Legion" was booked by M. Kashin as the production to inaugurate his managerial reign at the Symphony theatre, where it is said to have played to capacity audiences for three days. Miss Bates appeared in person at one performance and at a matinee had as guests at tea women patrons of the house.

The production is reported to have had a particularly successful run of a full week at the Isis theatre, Denver, Colo., where audiences are said to have applauded it as the most striking and action-full western picture ever presented in that house.

Chicago Balks Proposed Operators' Strike

A temporary injunction, restraining members of Local 110, Moving Picture Operators' Union, Chicago, from striking to enforce the provision of the new contracts signed by the theatre owners, was granted January 17 by Judge Charles M. Foell.

Attorney Lewis F. Jacobson, for the Allied Amusement Association of Chicago, including more than 400 theatres, told Judge Foell that the new contracts were signed under duress by the owners upon threat of an immediate strike, despite the fact that a five-year contract now binds the parties. Peter J. Schaeffer, president of the association, declared that the union's demands were a "hold-up."

Regal Films Gets Another Theatre

Interests embodied in Regal Films, Ltd., Canadian picture distributors of importance, and the Paramount Theatres Company, Ltd., have acquired still another picture theatre in Toronto, the latest addition to its lengthy string being the Family theatre, Queen street East and Lee avenue. The proprietor of this theatre was W. F. Sexton, a prominent member of the Moving Picture Exhibitors' Protective Association of Ontario.

Brooklyn Exhibitors Hold Victory Banquet

The Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Brooklyn and Long Island assembled at a Victory banquet, Tuesday night, at Hotel Imperial, Fulton street, Brooklyn. It was one of the most successful events from a social as well as "get-together" standpoint, in the history of the league. More than one hundred and fifty Brooklyn and New York exhibitors and their friend were present.

The guest of honor was Dr. Royal S. Copeland, Health Commissioner of the City of New York. In a short address, Dr. Copeland told why he had refrained from closing the theatres during the epidemic and said that other cities where the theatres had been closed showed a greater death rate in comparison than did New York.

Judge Harry E. Lewis, of the Supreme Court, and William E. Kelly, clerk of Kings County, were other prominent guests. Both spoke highly of the exhibitors and expressed themselves as "with them" in their fight for better pictures and against censorship.

Sidney Cohen, president of the New York State League, spoke briefly on the urgent need of action against Sunday closing. Rudolph Sanders presided as chairman.

Among those present were: Harry Rapf, C. C. Pettijohn, Ed. Nelson, Lawrence O'Sullivan, Billy Hart, A. H. Goldberg, H. Dantz, E. Spelberg, Benjamin Schwartz, Max D. Weinberger, C. A. S. Stenneman, Ben Levine, Joe Ward, M. Glynn, G. Kara, Joseph Foster, Harry Thomas, Louis Sherman, Felix Goldberg, D. A. Mack, T. J. Connors, J. E. Chadwick, J. J. Dacey, William E. Traynor, George J. Schaefer, I. A. Hammal, Lester Alder, S. Eckman, Joseph Klein, E. A. Sanders, Jules Burnstein, I. Schwartz, Charles Steiner, Herman Wiesner, Jack Schwartz, L. Schnieder, L. Mayer, M. Solomon, I. K. Haistark, Charles Steinman, Mr. and Mrs. J. Koengswold, Mr. and Mrs. J. Calder, Charles Fischer, Mr. and Mrs. H. Shapiro, Harry Hummel, Arthur T. Smith, F. Langtree, F. J. Willis, S. Freund, C. Letts, E. R. Behrend, Frank H. Lappen, Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Stockheimer, W. H. Hollander, J. Esler, Mr. and Mrs. S. Rosenthal. Musical numbers were rendered.

National Board of Review Gives a Luncheon

Nearly two hundred members of the National Board of Review and National Advisory Committee met with the board of directors at the tenth annual luncheon held at Hotel McAlpin in New York City, January 18.

Lester F. Scott presided and Mayor Peters of Boston, was represented by John F. Casey, Commissioner of Licenses for Boston.

Among the principal speakers were Henry P. Jenkins, district superintendent of evening schools in New York City; Anita Loos, who was introduced as "The woman who made Douglas Fairbanks famous"; S. L. Rothapfel, who described his entrance in the motion picture field, and Dr. Everitt D. Martin, who is delivering a course of lectures at Cooper Union.

Censor Bugaboo Again Stalks the Country

hibitor, created much comment here and developed strong opposition from prominent exhibitors and producers. The Evening Express, a daily paper of Los Angeles, in ascertaining the sentiment of the industry on the proposed commission, interviewed D. W. Griffith, W. H. Clune and T. L. Tally, prominent exhibitors of Los Angeles.

Mr. Griffith said that Mr. Randall probably means well in his new undertaking, "but he has tackled a job that is as big as the world. It would require the services of a genius, the like of which the world has never yet produced, to pass on the desires, wants and tastes of 100,000,000 people," Mr. Griffith said. "Censorship is a dangerous proposition is a free country like the United States. Censorship is unnecessary, because every city and state has laws that, if properly enforced, will stop the showing of immoral pictures."

Mr. Clune and Mr. Tally said substantially the same thing, although Mr. Clune was inclined to the idea that the creation of such a commission would open a fine opportunity for graft. Mr. Tally said it is an insult to the exhibitor's intelligence to suggest a censorship commission.

"I think the exhibitors of the United States, as a whole, are fully competent to select their own pictures. If they insist on selecting the wrong subjects their patrons will soon inform them of it," Mr. Tally said.

Funkhouser Again

Picture manufacturers will have to show more inclination to co-operate with the Chicago City Censorship Commission, or they are apt to go the way of the saloons, so said Timothy D. Hurley, chairman, to his associates at a meeting of the commission January 17. For some reason the manufacturers have ignored the commission's hearings and made no explanation.

"That same thing that happened to the saloons is liable to happen to the movies," Mr. Hurley said. "The saloons lost because their owners were loth to submit to proper regulation."

"I think the movie industry is acting unfairly in not co-operating with this commission," said the Rev. Father F. G. Dinneen, S. J.

Maj. M. L. C. Funkhouser, formerly second deputy superintendent of police, was the principal witness.

"The manufacturers are not interested in the morals of a community," he said. "They want to make money out of their pictures. I want to say, however, that the Chicago manufacturers do not display this feeling. They want to make pictures which are not harmful to the morals of the young. I think the censorship bureau should be independent of the police department, if it is possible."

"Did the film manufacturers have anything to do with your removal?" asked Alderman F. J. Link.

"I think they conspired to have me removed," said the major. "I know where a fee of $10,000 was offered a man to get a permit for a certain picture. He did not get the permit. I know of another case

Celebrates Anniversary with Vitagraph

"The Beloved Imposter," Gladys Leslie's latest Vitagraph release, marks the completion of her first year under the Vitagraph banner, and it seems that the star has come into the full tide of her popularity, for "The Beloved Imposter," according to information from Vitagraph headquarters, is playing to a far bigger write-up than any previous Leslie picture has had over the same period of release.

Poli Builds in Waterbury, Conn.

S. Z. Poli announces he will erect a new theatre at Waterbury, Conn., at a cost of at least $500,000. Plans are now under way and construction will be started this spring. This is in line with Mr. Poli's policy of keeping his theatres up-to-date, and the Waterbury theatre will provide a modern structure in every New England city on his circuit.

where $5,000 was offered, and, I think, paid."

"These are the very things we want to know," said Alderman Link.

Chairman Hurley counseled against the commission going into matters outside its sphere of activity. Martin J. Quigley also protested against the major answering these questions.

Alderman Link persisted that the commission had a right to go into such matters, and it was agreed to have the major present again next Friday to answer these queries.

"If money was used in Major Funkhouser's removal, we have a right to know it," Alderman Link said.

Colorado Not Asleep

The Rocky Mountain Screen Club, through President H. T. Nolan, notified exhibitors of Colorado by letter that there is a bill before the Colorado legislature by Representative Furrow of Pagosa Springs, providing for examination, approval, regulation and censorship of film and advertising posters, etc. The bill refers to some films as sacrilegious, obscene, indecent and immoral or with a tendency to debase or corrupt morals and provides for a board of five censors and clerks who shall receive salaries ranging from $1,800 to $2,200 yearly from revenue derived from $2 inspection fees on each reel of film coming into the State of Colorado.

In the letter, Mr. Nolan said to the exhibitors:

"This means increased taxes for you. It was deemed advisable at a meeting of the Screen Club to issue complimentary tickets to the Legislature and Senate so that they could visit the various theatres and see for themselves whether or not the moving pictures are, as alluded to, in Representative Furrow's bill.

"If you would kindly honor such tickets as may be presented to you, it will have a tendency to enlighten the members of the Senate and Legislature materially."

Selling to Mr. Doubt and Mrs. Distrust

How Louis B. Mayer Did It Is Chronicled By Leon B. Rubenstein

"IF anybody had told you a few years ago what you would eventually pay for pictures you'd have called for the ambulance. Yet today you are not only paying a high price, but showing your pictures in handsomer theatres, and making more money, too."

At these words a banquet hall filled with the exhibitors to whom they were addressed stood up and cheered. The speaker was Louis B. Mayer of Boston. He had come there to explain in person what he was driving at, and when he thus voiced in a few lines the keynote of their progress and prosperity, they realized that he was one of their very own—and they told him so.

A few months ago, "Louis B. Mayer Presents—" was a phrase unknown to filmdom. But up in Boston, Mass., Louis B. Mayer was a quantity to be reckoned to all who knew how he had risen from humble operator to head of a great chain of theatres. He had his eyes on the manufacturing field.

"As an exhibitor his equipment was unsurpassed. He knew the box-office value of all the production elements. And he knew, too, that it was a hazardous game, this making of film plays. It was not in the Mayer system to shoot and hope; it was to think first—and then shoot.

"I have an ingrown idea," explains Mr. Mayer, regarding the happenings that followed, "that a strong foundation to build on is the other fellow's success; it seems to me that successes link with each other. I needed a successful star—in Anita Stewart I got one. I needed a successful play or story, and in 'Virtuous Wives,' by Owen Johnson, I got a novel that has sold to two million people besides the readers of Cosmopolitan for ten months. I wanted a successful director and got George Loane Tucker. Later, needing a new one, I signed up Lois Weber. Expensive? Yes—but interest-bearing. It's as simple as primary arithmetic—two and two makes four. Three successful elements in a three-unit proposition ought to total success. What could be simpler? It may for a time be cheaper to experiment with promising material, but for the quick, sure victory give me the things of proven value every time!"

Yet Mr. Mayer does not tell the whole story here. For it was after the picture was finished that the real story of his daring begins. With a splendid production in his hands he now faced a serious financial problem. As the booking ratio throughout the country totalled up, he figured out that in order to make a profit he must secure higher rentals from the theatres than they had ever paid, in some cases doubling their record price. It requires no expert analysis of the exhibitor mind to appreciate the gigantic task of securing, on demand and for a first release, a higher figure than they had paid for Pickfords, Fairbanks, and in many cases a price over-topping Chaplin. Mayer sat down and compiled a schedule of the prices he would have to get from the theatres in each territory, and when he sent it out his friends sympathized with him; they tried to dissuade him from bucking the price-wall of stone and offered oodles of advice. To their minds he was too far from the mark for any hope.

What did he do?

He gathered his sales and publicity forces about him, and spoke about as follows: "Gentlemen, we're trying to deal with a lot of men who have been tricked and bamboozled from every angle and source. There are certain limitations which they will credit to a man in my position, no matter how honest or sincere I may happen to me. I might have the biggest proposition in the world for them, but I am up against an iceberg—distrust, doubt! We've got to strike back with their own kind of guns and make them like it. We don't want their signatures on contracts now—we don't want to consider their offers. We're going out to wallop their pessimism, to tear down the barriers of precedent. They think my promises of a bigger picture than they ever had are empty; that my claims to higher prices than they ever paid are unfounded. But I've decided to put through my price schedule, and I'll do it on one basis: I am sure that no man who sees 'Virtuous Wives' will fail to realize what business he can do with it. That's certain. Well, then, the next thing to do is obvious—they must see it first and buy it afterwards. What is more, I will refuse to sell it to them unseen!"

The whole country knows now what happened. Exhibitors who had been buying entire outputs, contracting outright for pictures yet unmade, were suddenly told that the First National offices would not sell the Anita Stewart productions ahead. Just one picture at a time—no bigger orders wanted; and the contract for that one need not be hurried, either; the instructions would come later from New York. The salesman on the road had nothing to say about the Stewart picture—could not take orders. The exhibitors could not understand it—and no word came from headquarters.

Meanwhile, here's what was transpiring in New York. Mr. Mayer's orders to SHOW then first meant a big, expensive move for which there was no precedent. His lieutenants understood what he wanted. The big push was in the making, heavy guns being placed, and suddenly, to sum up the effect of it all, Louis B. Mayer raided the exhibitors of the United States. His corps of men, organized in working groups, stormed the strongholds of Doubt. They came into each city, hired the best theatre, and if it was not available they took possession of the ball-room in the leading hotel. They installed symphony orchestras. They took their story to the newspapers and through them the note of Mayer's faith and sincerity permeated into daily newspaper spreads. The word went out to the exhibitors that those who had any idea of showing "Virtuous Wives" at their houses would conserve their interests by attending the trade show. All of this happened almost at once in twenty-five cities from coast to coast—and the exhibitor came. He came, curious, puzzled, but above all, pessimistic, but he came. With very few exceptions all records for attendance at trade shows were broken.

How did the abused Mayer price schedule stand now? Oh, it was very fair, they said; and the contracts for the yearly output of six pictures began to pour in. But they were just as quickly turned down. In reply to their surprised inquiries they received another sample of the Mayer faith. "Gentlemen," he said, "you have proven my contention that you are willing to pay the price after you become convinced. To sign you up for six productions ahead means that I do not intend to excel the standard of 'Virtuous Wives.' But I do intend to surpass it, and in that case I will deserve a higher price, and you will have the advantage. On the other hand, should any one of the yearly six fall even an iota below this standard, I will have the advantage over you. Don't gamble—let each production stand alone and get what it deserves!"

This will illustrate in a measure just how far over the top Louis Mayer actually put his proposition. Where his time allowed of it, Mayer jumped on a train, and met the exhibitors gathered to see his first release. His spirit caught on—he preached the gospel of showmanship, and here are some of its pillars:

"As you gradually raised the public from a nickel audience to a dollar one, have they kicked? No—only when your show fell down."

"There is no limit to what you can afford to pay for a show, because exploitation is unlimited."

"You can cling to your precedent if you wish, but your competitor might not."

"Some exhibitors once said that cheap film at a nickel admission was business enough for them, and they pitied the man who built a real theatre. Where are the nickel men today?"

"I'd rather play a big, expensive attraction than get the same profit out of cheaper ones."

"When you pay more for your show, you naturally boost harder. Now where's the man who pleads he can never break his house record?"

"There is not a box-office record today that cannot be broken."

"The right attraction will make brick theatre-walls elastic."

"Nothing stands still. We either go forward or backward, and in our business one single idea might decide your destiny."

"Every city—every neighborhood—has its 'peculiar conditions.' Yours is not the only one."

"A real showman is the greatest sportsman in the world; he's always taking chances."

Dallas Doesn't Do Much

Newspapers Hand Out the Reading Notices and Forget the Interest in the Photoplay

UNTIL you have been down in Texas and have seen the state, and until you have played casino all day long in a Pullman car while going across it you do not really realize what you are up against. Of course, you have read that this is a place where all of the men wear big guns strapped on their belts and where nothing but a sombrero would be considered within the pale of fashion.

But when you turn to your motion picture account you are pretty apt to find that while the big cities are rather few and far between when the territory covered is taken into consideration, these houses are just about as up to date as most of them that you will find in other parts of the world. Dallas is the largest city in Texas. When the government looked over us the last time it gave the city a population of 11,986. But aside from that it has a splendid system of interurban street railways that brings thousands to do their shopping and to see their motion pictures in Dallas.

The unfortunate part of the Dallas situation seems to be that the newspapers are not up to the times on motion pictures. It has resulted largely from the fact that the great bulk of the papers that do not feel that they can afford the expense of a photoplay editor do not know the direction in which to turn to get the sort of matter that they should print. The Dallas newspapers show this straight through their motion picture departments. They are decidedly drab and we are surprised that E. H. Hulsey, one of the leaders among exhibitors of the country and who practically controls the situation in Dallas, hasn't been able to persuade the papers to really try to get out and do something in the way of presenting to the people the chronicles of this Fifth Estate.

There are four newspapers here. According to the records of Lord and Thomas they with their circulations are:

Dispatch, Evening (25,872).

Journal, Afternoon (40,655).

News, Morning and Sunday (58,848).

Times-Herald, Morning (40,890) and Sunday (38,546).

The Journal is really the afternoon edition of the News, which is one of the staid and conservative papers of the old school. For instance, it doesn't even go to the trouble of splitting the sheet up into sections, but numbers the pages straight through and lets it go at that. If you want to find the sporting section or the want ads or anything of the sort you simply have to hunt for them. You are, theoretically, supposed to have been reading the News so long that you know where to find them. A little thing like convenience is not even an episode in the career of the News.

According to our information these two papers charge the regular commercial rate for motion picture advertising and promise nothing with it. The Dispatch also gives the commercial rate and some cooperation, while the Times-Herald charges the amusement rate and offers full cooperation.

Here is one place that the rub comes in the policies of the newspaper toward the motion picture theatre. As a usual thing the advertising manager is a man without any interest in the paper and with little hope of ever having any. His main idea is to make the best possible showing and to get the largest amount of money compared with the expenses of the paper into the cash drawer. When he goes out and sells the department store a certain amount of advertising he doesn't figure that he has to give them anything, though you will often find that the biggest department store can get most anything that it wants. Then when he comes along to the motion picture theatre he gets the rule out of the middle drawer of his desk and begins figuring the amount of free matter that the theatre is being accorded up against the amount of straight display that the theatre is paying for.

There are two things to be done if the newspaper looks at it this way. It should either charge a higher rate for the motion picture advertising, the so-called amusement rate, and then give full cooperation, OR it should realize that motion pictures are a part of the news of the day and that the paper is only performing its duty by chronicling these events. We do not believe in the excessive, the hold-up amusement rate, that most newspapers do charge, but we believe that the theatre ought to be willing to pay a little more for a certain amount of the advertising, in order to compensate the paper for the services of a man that can afford this true cooperation, but that after the theatre has used a certain minimum it should be allowed to use large advertising that would be put on the commercial basis. In other words we would not expect a paper to go to the expense of employing a man for this specific duty unless it knew fairly well what review was going to come in.

A newspaper is a business venture as well as anything else. There may be a few people who like to be editors for the glory there is in it, but the days when you bought your printing presses and ordered your white paper on a credit have long ago gone glimmering. Before the motion picture theatres of a community can expect a definite volume of cooperation from the newspapers they have to pretty well establish what they are going to do—to indicate the revenue that the paper is going to get.

But there is another point beyond this and one that we have been constantly repeating in these pages—and that is that the newspaper has a duty to perform for the reader. We hope that we do not have to repeat here the interest there is in the photoplay. We can imagine the interest there is to every reader of the Dallas papers. We can visualize the crowds that are going to the leading houses every night and that are absorbing motion picture news mornings and afternoons. We can see the scores that come to the city to see a good picture and we picture the hundreds of other subscribers who have to be content with their village attractions or who are too far out of the way of things to spend an evening with the screen.

Sixty per cent of the readers of the Dallas papers—and of all other papers—are interested in motion pictures. Twenty per cent of them are interested in baseball and ten per cent attend in the course of a whole week, but the baseball matter is never held down.

One glance at the Dallas papers shows that they have not taken the motion picture as anything of news value. Where there is any cooperation it is so evidently on the basis of revenue, so evidently a "business proposition," that the whole lot of matter might as well be labeled "Advertising," for anything of interest that it is likely to arouse in the reader.

We do not know what effort the papers have made to get the fullest cooperation. There are twelve downtown houses, six of them being first run and five suburban houses. E. H. Hulsey controls three of the leading ones, the Old Mill seating 1,400, the Queen caring for 600, and the Hippodrome with 1,000 seats. The Jefferson seats 1,400 and shows both vaudeville and pictures. Two of the downtown houses appeal to the Mexican trade and charge an admission of only five cents. With the exception of the Washington with 500 seats, the Feature with 700, running stock and pictures, and the Crystal with 600, the other downtown houses are with small seating capacities. The neighborhood houses average about 500.

The three Hulsey houses are excellent advertisers. There are no theatres in the country that are more up to the moment than these and one glance at the papers will show that with the exception of the Washington in the Times-Herald they absolutely dominate the situation.

Let's take a look at the pages from the Times-Herald. It is very evident at first glance that every cut on these pages are those furnished by producers—that the paper does not care enough about appearance to go to the expense of having a layout made. And every line of the matter is the purest sort of reading matter notice. A lot of it is printed just as it came from the New York publicity office without any effort to get over a special appeal. It is plainly labeled THIS IS FREE STUFF THAT WE ARE GIVING AWAY BECAUSE WE ARE EXPECTED TO DO SO. It has the least possible amount of reader interest.

In the Sunday issue of the Times-Herald the Hippodrome uses ten inches double column, the Queen an equal amount, and the Old Mill thirteen inches across two. This is good advertising, far better than the average. The Washington uses ten inches double, the Jefferson (combination) six inches double, and the Rex four and one-half single. All in all the advertising is far more attractive than the reading matter.

The Sunday News doesn't think much of the motion picture. It prints the advertising regularly on the second page of the first section and then carries the little reading matter that it accords over to "some other" page. It doesn't seem to think that the people who read the advertising are interested further in motion pictures. It carries 6½ across three columns for the three Halsey houses and then an additional 9½ double for the Hippodrome, seven double for the Crystal and five double for the Jefferson and then it runs a couple of columns of matter headed "Dallas Amusements," and runs the junk cuts that it happens to be handed, one of them a pure advertising cut.

We haven't even taken the trouble to reproduce a page from the Journal. It does nothing for motion pictures except that it carries the three-inch double column display of the Hulsey houses. During the week the News does the same—gives nothing and carries the Hulsey advertisement together with two inches from the Crystal.

In the Saturday Dispatch there are more theatres represented than in any of the others. Beside the standing display of the Hulsey houses announcing the day's bill it has ten inches double from both the Queen and the Old Mill and five inches across five for the Hippodrome. Jefferson and Rex have three inches single each and Crystal and Garrick two inches single with the Washington coming in for three double and the Jefferson with 7½ double. Same old stock cut stuff and same old reading notices are shown here again.

During the week the paper carries a heading "Amusements" and list the attractions at the various houses and carries the displays of all of these houses each day, but with less space.

We have built up a page from the Times-

This attractive lobby display on "Virtuous Wives" at the Alhambra, Milwaukee, was made with the artistic use of stills from the production

Herald showing the regular advertising that it carries daily, the standing display of the Hulsey houses, three inches from the Washington and two from the Jefferson. But on the opposite side we have shown how liberally the Hulsey houses advertise their mid-week change in bill. This paper is liberal in the reading notices, for there is about a column of them every day, but they are strictly reading notices.

Dallas has some good motion picture advertisers. What the city needs is some realization of the interest in motion picture News. At little expense the papers could have interesting departments. As they are they are sloppy, unconvincing and—missing an opportunity.

Another San Francisco House Gives Sunday Concerts

Following the lead of the California theatre, the Tivoli of San Francisco will inaugurate a series of Sunday symphony concerts beginning on January 19. Director Carlos de Mandil will combine the regular Tivoli orchestra of thirty musicians with the orchestra of the same number of men from the Oakland T. & D. theatre, and with the addition of four or five musicians from the outside make up an orchestra of from sixty-five to seventy men. The new symphony orchestras will give "twelve o'clocks." In the afternoon they will move to Oakland and give a concert in the T. & D. theatre in that city. "It is needless to say," asserts Manager E. M. Asher of the Tivoli, "that the Tivoli management can entertain no hope of profit from these concerts, since they are given gratis to the regular Tivoli audiences. They are designed to assist in the restoration of the Tivoli opera house to its former position of musical prestige in San Francisco."

These Tivoli concerts are to be something in the way of popularized symphonies. The Tivoli was built originally for musical productions and is an ideal theatre for such productions.

IS IT "COLD"?

Why Not Put the Heart Interest in Your Presentation

RECENTLY we had a letter from an exhibitor within fifty miles of New York. He referred to some comments that had been made in this publication about a picture and then reported that it had done poor business for him. We knew that his theatre had a fair orchestra, that he was an average advertiser, and that he had a standard theatre that should have had a good patronage.

So, without notifying him, we visited the theatre. As it happened he was then presenting another picture that had earned praise. He had an overture that had nothing in common with the production, and then, after a pause, the feature was started. The orchestra changed the music without the slightest regard to what was on the screen. Evidently there had been a number of selections picked the length of which would fit the length of the picture, and the orchestra and the projection room had no more connection than Germany and Belgium will have.

The picture was put on cold. Nothing of the spirit of it was carried out in the music—fact, one viewing the showing had to fight against the music. It was "music with the picture"—very much WITH it.

Here was a theatre that had facilities enough to put on the picture. He put it on "cold"—let it take care of itself. How many of you are doing the same thing? Even the man who has only a piano can do a lot more than he is doing, but he must study his picture, must try to do things with it—not be content to let it run on the screen—COLD.

What Ruffner Thinks of New York Shows

By Ralph Ruffner

Manager Rialto theatre, Butte, Mont.

TO one who has never been East a visit to New York's best motion picture theatres is quite a treat. It is an event, an experience that lends itself to comparative values between western style of theatre management and presentation and eastern methods, which are recognized standards. It has been the experience of the writer in past years to be told by patrons of the various theatres with which he has been connected that the West is far in the lead in beautiful, costly edifices erected to the motion picture, an observation which is confirmed if one is familiar with the newest and best in that territory from the Missouri River to the Pacific Coast. They were speaking in numbers.

Three of New York's leading theatres had my attention. I visited them for the sole purpose of learning all possible. I came away amazed at the masterful synchronization of music with the picture, addedly difficult through the number of men and instruments involved. I devoted no little attention to the clever, able leadership of their wonderful orchestras. Being a musician, my natural enjoyment lay in listening to the music.

To one who has paid fair prices in the past for the privilege of attending symphony concerts, I felt all wrapped up in appreciative recognition of the fact that never before had my money bought the variety, the colorful gamut of sound as was dispensed by these three theatre organizations. Then, too, this synchronization found another outlet to its soulful appeal. It is what can properly be termed a synchronization of two dimensions, pictures and lighting. This "soulful" satisfaction of which I speak can best be illustrated by the following anecdote:

About two years ago I attended the recital of a great organist. The concert lacked appeal to me through nothing more than negligence on the part of his own artistic self and poor management on the part of the theatre owners. Clarence Eddy was the artist and one of his numbers a "Twilight Reverie." This number was played with all house lights up, as they were during the entire two and a half hours of his recital. He painted a symphonic picture of a cherished old home down on the farm; the cows coming home lazily at milking time; the evening prayer and then bed time.

How the Lights Aid

How much this picture could have been improved by a gradual darkening of the theatre, with a faint amber spot making its appearance on the player as his theme drifted into the warm glow of the fireside, to remain there until the number was finished. I know that I was actually hungry for just such a treatment of his concert, my chagrin doubly enhanced by the knowledge that this particular theatre was equipped in every detail as regards its lighting. It is one of these bits of careless attention to house management that goes on day after day, week in and week out,

THERE'S A BOOST HERE

First of Ralph Ruffner's Articles on New York Theaters

RECENTLY Ralph Ruffner, one of the best known managers of the country and now in charge of the Rialto, Butte, Montana, for Jensen and von Herberg, was a visitor in New York, his first visit, and New York film men had an opportunity to become personally acquainted with one whom they had long recognized as a real live wire.

People who see the same thing day after day lose something of the real ability to appreciate what is going on around them. But Mr. Ruffner came here fresh from the west and he was able to go into the theatres with a new vision of things and his opinions of New York are well worth while.

In this article there is mainly praise, but in one that will appear next week there are accounts of things which he noted that are not so creditable.

never anything new or original or attempted, that causes some men to wonder why it is their investment refuses to pay dividends.

The projection in all three of these New York houses left nothing to be desired. I never saw a bad light. One mis-frame, but that was almost instantly corrected, showing the projectionist was right on the job. It seemed strange to me to find myself looking at a section of the Allies' Official War Review, then suddenly to recognize the familiar title of a Gaumont Weekly, then just as suddenly a bit of Pathe News. While the splicing together of sections from various weeklies is not new, yet it is not generally done in the West, for out here exclusive first run privileges do not run in herds in such a way that any one or two houses can control the entire news service.

It is in these short, snappy bits of current events (Continued on page 702)

Your Idea and Ours

THIS is a splendid advertisement—except for one thing. There are far too many adjectives and superlatives. If you have been reading these pages you know how firmly we are set against them. Now, though these columns are not supposed to pass on the merits of pictures, we are willing to admit that this is one of the greatest

WE are not familiar with the circumstances and therefore we are publishing displays with the frank statement that we cannot tell you whether it is a good or bad one. All depends on the time and the manner in which it is used and we have not been told that.

Of course, it is an advertisement of the picture, "Wanted for Murder," and it undoubtedly attracted attention if it was used as a teaser some days in advance, and FOLLOWED by an announcement of the name of the picture with that of the theatre and the other details. Waterbury is no village, having a census of 82,000, and you are not going to get many people, that is of the class that have the price of admission in their pocket, to go down to "75 E. Main Street" to see what it was about. If the display was used to make the people watch the papers and see what it really meant, it probably attracted attention. We judge that it was so used, but if it was not followed up the sales punch of the picture itself was lost. It's always well to arouse curiosity, but remember that you are selling a picture and that you must get the people who want to know they are going to see a picture, and a good one.

photoplays that we ever saw. But that does not excuse such words as "Defying Description," "Colossal," "Startling, Sensational, Awesome," and the like, especially in such a high-class theatre as the Dayton, Dayton, O.

The writer had already said that Farnum had achieved a triumph beyond anything else that he had done, that this was Hugo's masterpiece, and he might have added that it has been done on a wonderful scale, and then he should have stopped. Our opinion is that he would have attracted more. The average photoplay fan is getting mighty "wise," and when he sees adjectives and superlatives he is mighty apt to come to the conclusion they are camouflage.

In order to get the break on New Year's Eve the Dayton held over "The Greatest Thing in Life" for Sunday and Monday and then put on "Les Miserables" Tuesday, running it for the remainder of the week.

If the electric sign is the only guide to your theatre, lots of your patrons will appear blind.

WE have advised you all along to keep your theatre the dominant thing in the public estimation, but that doesn't mean that you have to slather the name of the theatre all over the page. Here the Wonderland, Clinton, Indiana, would have gotten a much better effect if that hadn't been done. It, in the first place, should have a series of name plates and have used one of these in the upper or lower left hand corner. Then the name of Miss Ward could have

We are making these criticisms frank because we want to see theatres that evince a willingness to advertise to do better, and certainly the Wonderland is showing that, because it uses nine inches across five columns in this display.

PRESIDENT'S ARRIVAL IN FRANCE

Strand
THEATRE
10-12 E. Main St. Dayton, O.

THERE is certainly the Happy New Year spirit about this display of the Strand theatre, Omaha, on "Too Many Millions." It is hand drawn throughout and maintains a perfect sense of values.

First thing that gets your eye is the smiling face of Wallace Reid, and then you get back to the top of the display with the greetings for 1919. Then there comes a little selling talk on the picture, intimate stuff that will get especially close to one at the holiday season.

We also like the way there is displayed at the bottom the announcement of the showing of the pictures of the President's arrival in France. It is well done by the use of a clipping from one of the local papers and the lettering written over this and to the left. And you will note, too, that the name design of the theatre is never sacrificed, no matter what may be the offering or what the occasion.

The fellow who is content to sit in his office with his feet on the desk pulling at his pipe, may make a lot of smoke, but he will never set anything on fire.

IT is a little late to be printing Christmas displays, but the truth is that we have had so many good advertisements on Mrs. Charlie Chaplin that we could not get to this one before. Strand theatre, Providence, R. I., has used nine inches across three columns and has carried out the spirit of the holidays perfectly and at the same time avoids the messy appearance that too often comes when the exhibitor wants to get the Christmassy effect. The border of holly and the Church text lettering for the name of the theatre perfectly.

Although the Strand always runs double bills it features one picture over the other—always the proper thing to do, because you cannot display two things equally and get the real punch over. You will note that practically all the selling talk is about the marriage except the line, "When you see

How New York Stages the Show

WITH this issue full accounts of the presentations of the Strand theatre, New York City, will appear in these pages. They will be covered with the same thoroughness as the Rialto and Rivoli; the settings will be described, the music given and the entire performance accounted in detail.

As has been recorded in the NEWS, Joseph L. Plunkett, well known as a theatre manager and as a motion picture producer, is now managing director of the Strand, and his ideas will be worth a great deal to the exhibitors of the country. Aside from giving you these full accounts here, we will be able to call upon Mr. Plunkett for suggestions or comment about any pictures shown at his theatre that any exhibitor through the country may desire.

For some time we have been giving accounts of the lobby displays and some stories of the presentations arranged by Maurice A. Kashin at the Broadway. From this time on we will review the Broadway with each change of bill. This theatre often runs pictures for several weeks, while the Strand, Rialto and Rivoli make it a rule to change weekly. This week "The Heart of Humanity" is held over for its fifth week, and as this presentation has already been fully reviewed here no account of that house appears this week.

We will have the co-operation of Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld, managing director of the Rialto and Rivoli, in giving a full exposition of the presentations at those houses, as in the past.

Covering the four theatres makes additional work for the writer of these pages, but the spirit that moves the entire staff of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS is that there is nothing too good for the exhibitor, no matter the trouble. And so you are going to get it all.

Rivoli Theatre

"CAPRICCIO ESPAGNOLE" is one of the most brilliant of overtures. It gives an opportunity for the introduction of various solo strains with the violin, the flute, piccolo and harp and then the united effects of the whole orchestra. This is a number that should not be attempted unless you have a large orchestra and one that is trained to the moment. But this week at the Rivoli brings a storm of applause that one rarely hears. We wanted them to stop when we saw the presentation for their appreciation broke into the picture that follows.

Again Prizma comes to the front and gets away with it with the title "Here and There with Prizma." Until three weeks ago the regular patron of the Rivoli didn't know whether Prizma was a new sort of powder or some invention of the war, but these wonderful color pictures have won a following all of their own. These might be called random shots this week for they start it with pictures of Mt. Ranier covered with snow and then show us a bulldog and a cat and get many laughs with it. With the opening of this number we have a gavotte and then "Camelia" played with the picture of the waterfalls and then turning into "Valse Idylle" with the pictures of the bulldog. This is played once through and we have very subtly entered the tinkle of cowbells as we see a drove of cattle go by, the markings of these and of cows in the field perfectly brought out by the color system employed. There is a shot of the "first dairy lunch" that gets a laugh, with the calf at its regular meal where it doesn't have to worry about tipping the waiter.

Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld, managing director
Rialto and Rivoli

"Fast black" with a bunch of little coons and then a couple of very black ones eating watermelon calls for "A Cyclone on Darktown," which is played without the introduction. Then come pictures of yachts, then some wonderful views of flowers, many of them opening before us and finally the "life of a bubble" in which there are some striking color shadings. "Bacareole" is used for these final scenes.

This is some name, "Spanish Choreographic Episode," but it comes next and so we will have to use the full name. There is provided one of the striking John Wenger settings which represents the interior of a church with a long window at the right and a panel of Madonnas at the left. There is a single hanging red light and a bowl of incense burning. Walker Leslie represents the monk dressed in white, and after a voice from outside is heard in the ritual a dancer in black enters. She tempts the monk. He almost falls. At one moment he is moving in rhythm with her dance, but again the voice is heard and the spiritual wins again for him. It is a fantastic sort of thing. It might be called "new art" stuff. First it gets the audiences wondering, but at the end they understand the spirit and the applause is the reward.

Rivoli Pictorial is unusually short this week. It opens with a Mutt and Jeff comedy, "Tough Luck," which gets a bunch of laughs and which is thrown on the screen to the music of "Reuben" followed through by a misterioso grotesque, and then "Speed Her Up." The Official War Review then shows Thaw, Reickenbacker and other aviators being decorated and with this the orchestra plays "Here They Come," remaining tacit during the actual flying machines when we get the reproduction of the purring motors. The same music continues through a Hun attack on an American observation balloon and then we have shots of the retreating vandals seeking to destroy a French city, especially the church and with this "Battle of the Marne."

"Paris beside herself with joy" is the title that shows the President in the French capital, and here we get a shot of Mr. Wilson with Gen. Pershing that brings a storm of applause. And when they laugh at some story that one of them has told the applause becomes all the greater. "Honor to Our Nation" is played from the trio, with the trio twice and the audience refuses to be quiet.

Rivoli bridge forms the setting for the second vocal number, set at the left of the stage with the canal in the foreground and the lighting giving the effect of the moving water. Vincente Ballester appears as a gondolier, accompanied by a guitar and sings "Vizione de Venice."

Then the feature, Elsie Ferguson in "His Parisian Wife." "Barbe Bleu" is played for the opening and this is followed by "Le Roman" No. 2, most of the other selections being of the French schools. "Old Cremona," gems of Foster, Schumann's "Andante" and "Chant des Voaygeur," at the end, are some of the other numbers.

Selections from "The Chocolate Soldier," at the time that we saw the picture, brought the greatest example of singing by an audience that we have heard in a theatre where the people had not been actually invited to sing. It seemed that all of them recalled the words and they hummed it aloud until it seemed that the lips of all of them were moving. This recalling of the old favorites and the favorites of a few years ago has been established at the Rivoli and it is one of the biggest features of the presentations. And you can do the same thing. Try it and see how much they will talk about your theatre. Dr. Riesenfeld knows the power of music and the cunning ways to use it. We'll bet that this number got deeper into the heart than will the most pretentious offerings of some noted opera star.

New York's Way

"Cupid's Day Off" is the Mack Sennett comedy offering that sends them out into Broadway willing to be in good humor even with a taxicab driver. Fifteen different musical selections are used with this one. Here they are: "Big Boat Dance," "Canary Cottage," "Hezekiah," "Izme," "Hearts and Flowers," played very plaintively, "Ho Along," "Yvette," a comic hurry, "Hy Time," "Just the Kind of a Girl," "Our Jackies," "The Debutante," "Naila" and "Kangaroo Hop."

Yes, music has a lot to do with it. You like to enjoy a picture? Your eye likes to feast on it, but you want the soul satisfied and the music does it.

Strand Theatre

WITH "The Fighting Roosevelts" as the feature attraction there is a strong American element running through the presentation as arranged by Managing Director Joseph L. Plunkett at the Strand this week. There is typical Roosevelt "pep" all through the performance and the audience quickly enters into the spirit of it. We did even if we had to stand up for half of the time because of the big crowds that were packing the house.

"American Fantasy," Victor Herbert's assemblage of popular and patriotic American airs form the overture. This includes all the favorites, cleverly interwoven. At the end of the selection the members of the orchestra come to their feet and "The Star Spangled Banner" is rendered while the curtains part revealing a huge American flag. One may well imagine the effect upon the audience and the spirit with which one is imbued for the rest of the presentation.

Then comes the Strand Topical, starting with Paramount Bray pictures of American winter sports. These include coasting, skating, curling and skiing scenes and for this the music is "Tunder Gallop," played once with "Doh Train" followed through. Then come Pathe pictures of the Boston molasses factory fire and here "La Cabrera" is used. Then Pathe takes us to Paris and we have the baby tanks on parade, doing the dance along "main street" and these scenes are accompanied by "Madelon."

Universal Current Events show pictures of the Place de la Concorde where the American peace delegates have their headquarters to the tune of "March Militaire Francaise." Then come the clever Topics of the Day, which have been run at the Strand since their first release and which also get a lot of laughs. Practically all of these newspaper excerpts are based on the war with the exception of the familiar little quotation, "Hush little barroom, don't you cry. You'll be a drug store by and by." There is a succession of laughs with this and "Smiles, Then Kisses," is the music that helps them along.

Then come Pathe pictures of King Victor Emmanuel being greeted by the redeemed Trieste with "March Realse." These pictures get unusual applause. Then we are brought back home, to the American realization, with Pathe pictures of an airship trip over Washington and here Beethoven's "Sherzo" is used with the effects for the aeroplanes.

With the ending of the Topical the house lights come up in red and with the curtains still drawn and without orchestral accompaniment, we have the first verse "When You Come Back" rendered by the Strand male quartet, and at the beginning of the second the orchestra takes up the accompaniment and the curtain parts, revealing a ship ploughing through the seas with the singers in the bow. There are mighty realistic effects here with the foam breaking against the prow. Toward the end of the selection the audience breaks into wild applause as a small reproduction of the Statue of Liberty appears at the right of the setting.

Now the opening of the picture includes quite a number of titles explaining that this picture was authorized by Mr. Roosevelt, etc., and during this "American Fantasie" is used with full orchestral effect, following through with "Adoration" until the title "The Story of Theo. Roosevelt," and then we have "General Mixup" played pp until the story starts, showing the former President as a very small boy. Here the music is "Children's Games," and "The Butterfly" as we have Teddy collecting the bugs followed by the first two numbers from "Galop de Bal" suite until the moment that the youngster is aiming his Christmas gun and then the organ takes up the music for six minutes.

These first scenes trace the boyhood career of the former President and then we go with him to the Maine woods and then we have some scenes at Albany, with the scenes changing to the West where Roosevelt went for his health and here the music is "Un Poco Maestoso" until the scene where "Bad Ike" shoves the revolver into Teddy's face and then we have "Arcadian Festival" followed by "La Navè Rosa" and "The Great Divide," the organ again taking up the music for thirteen minutes. With the cowboys looking at a cartoon of Roosevelt we get "Hot Time."

"San Juan Hill" is used with the battle scenes in Cuba and then we have "Triumph of Old Glory" with the title of the men who sailed with Dewey with the battle music, following with the death of Archie and then "Girl I Left Behind Me" for the story of the other sons.

Then there is another one of the highly interesting "Analysis of Motion Pictures" from Pathe, this one showing diving scenes with the movements slowed up so that one may follow every development of the feats and after this there is a clever comedy with Harold Lloyd in "Going, Going, Gone." Five musical selections are used during this, opening with "Going Up" and then "You're the Greatest Little Mother" until the auto starts and then we get "Demon Galop" with "Flying Rag" and "Oh! Johnny" following through.

The American spirit is kept fully developed through the whole presentation. With the exception of a very few of the selections during the feature the music is wholly American or war music. The spirit is well carried through the presentation and everyone in the audience gets it realistically.

Rialto Theatre

FOR the average motion picture theatre through the country we would advise against the suggestions offered by the Rialto theatre this week so far as the musical numbers are concerned. They go all right on Broadway, but they are mighty classical for most communities. With the wonderful orchestra and all of the settings they get over here, but we doubt very much whether people want so much of these "interpretations of the words" of the great masters.

As an example the overture is the third "Leonore." It is a splendid composition, but the larger part of it is registered in the minor keys and the experience that we had during the presentation was that the audience was talking all the time. True it is that at the time the orchestra did not have the benefit of the splendid direction of Dr. Riesenfeld. And these observations bring us to a question that has puzzled us for years. Why is it that the people next to you will spend their time talking about Mamie Jones' dress and other equally important matters and then break into terrific applause—when they haven't heard a note of it?

Norwegian music is used through the Post-Pathe scenic, which shows scenes in Labrador and largely the huge icebergs. Here we get "Norwegian Scenes," followed by "Norwegian Suite" and then "Norwegian Dance" and the rhapsodie from the "Norwegian Suite." There are some interesting shots of the Eskimo women and children that get a laugh.

Standing in the orchestra Sascha Fidelman, the concert master of the Rialto orchestra, then plays "The Violin Maker of Cremona" to considerable applause, and then follows the Rialto Magazine. This opens with Gaumont pictures of a British general decorating Frenchmen at Mar-seilles, and here we have the full orchestra playing "March Lorraine," which continues through Pathe pictures of the baby tanks doing their dance in the Paris streets. Then we have Universal Current Events pictures of the American peace headquarters in Paris with the captured German trophies and "Les Enfants de France" as the accompaniment.

Then Gaumont brings us back to America and we have pictures of the "mountaineers' club" on their annual hike through the snow, with "Circassinne Dance" used through to Letter D, and then "Ballet Suite," followed through with "Pluise d'on Dance" for this and Pathe pictures of the boys' club camping in the snow at Keechins Lake, Washington, and of ice boats on Mystic Lake, N. J. Pathe then comes along with views of the molasses factory fire, for which Beethoven "Symphony" is employed.

Now come along pictures from Post Field, Texas, with the airships doing their wonderful stunts and the things that we have already described under the reading of the Strand. Here we get "Brunette and Blonde" fading out into the wonderful effects that we explained to you several weeks ago, showing how the sound of the motor is perfectly reproduced. We have the orchestra tacit here as the aeroplane falls and then the organ taking up the music until he is carried away in the Red Cross machine. And then the organ again with Gaumont pictures of the Italian Ambassador taking a ride in an aeroplane. Then come Gaumont pictures of the aged Denver woman who has two boys in France greeted by cheers from the audience as the orchestra plays "Our Flag," and then from the same source come pictures of the boys homeward bound, with the transports racing across the Atlantic with battleships, and the stirring notes of "New York Hippodrome March" add a great deal to the enjoyment and help bring the applause that marks the end of the Magazine.

After Miss Rose Legies sings the aria from "Queen of Sheba," with the lights all a rich red, there comes the feature, Bryant Washburn in "The Way of a Man with a Maid." This might almost be called a farce, and it is natural that the music should be light. The theme is "In Love," and it is first played when Washburn sits down to his work in his office on the Monday after he has been out with the girl. It is repeated a number of times very effectively. In fact the audience begins to like it very much and you have the humming all over the house that shows how they have entered into the spirit of the offering.

"Tete a Tete" starts the picture off and then the selections turn into "Chianti," "Lure of the Night," "Ghost of Sax," "Pierrot," "Conversation," "Medusa," and then the theme introduced. The theme is brought back again with the title "He Takes the First Opportunity," and then again when he enters her room, then when he gives the basket containing the kitten to the taxicab driver, again when the two of them enter the taxi, again when he finds that the charge for the drive is all right and finally at the end, played very slowly.

Maurice A. Kashin, managing director
Broadway and Symphony

With only a purple half light in the dome at the start and then coming up to full gold the orchestra then plays selections from "Robin Hood," and the humming starts again. After that he have one of the cleverest comedies that has been on the screen in a long time, a Fox Sunshine with Ethel Teare and Mack Wain in the leading roles. "Frou Frou" is the opening number, and this is followed by "Lumber Jack," with "Oh Promise Me" used with piano effect with the description of the girl who fell in love with the same old waxed moustache.

Then there is an agitato with "Chin, Chin, Chinaman" following, "Slimy Vipers," another agitato, "Crafty Spy" and "The Curse of an Aching Heart," played in a way that gets the whole house happy. After a hurry we get "Hearts and Flowers" again with the false sympathy, and then "Hunkatin," ending with "Step Lively" and "My Gal Sal."

It's a laughter bill for the pictures all the way through—straight amusement.

Chinese Idea Carried Out Through All Exploitation on "Midnight Patrol"

"THE MIDNIGHT PATROL" afforded Charles S. Branham, new manager of the Majestic theatre in Detroit, an opportunity to display showmanship that exhibitors, who follow his methods, will be certain to profit from.

Mr. Branham did more than advertise the picture as a melodrama and a Thomas H. Ince production. First he ordered almost double the usual amount of advertising carried by the Majestic, and the artist was instructed to get up the display with lettering in the Chinese fashion. Next permission was asked and secured to offer the pictures as being dedicated to the Detroit police department.

Then Mr. Branham turned his attention to the theatre and the surrounding show. The foyer and lobby were decorated in Chinese fashion with paper lamps, beautiful brass lamps, some of large dimensions, and in an alcove a statue of buddha with two incense burners completed the picture. As it was impossible to get all the large lamps required one for the lobby was built by Jean de Caussin, the house scenic artist and carpenter.

Fifty billboard locations were selected for 24 sheet stands and the picture was advertised "positively for one week only." The opening time for Sunday was set forward two hours and continuous shows each day also were advertised. Heretofore the Majestic has given only three performances daily with continuous ones on Sunday and holidays.

The crowds started early Sunday, even before the doors opened and didn't let up at any time. It was one of the biggest, if not the biggest week in the history of the theatre.

Mr. Branham says that he selected "The Midnight Patrol" because it was real melodrama.

"I am sure that the public wants melodrama," he says. "The evidence of it is seen on the dramatic stage, where the big melodramas are the reigning successes. The public wants action more than comedy."

The program that surrounded "The Midnight Patrol" was varied and as much apart from the feature as it was possible to make it.

Stage Coach Parades Streets of Brooklyn for Picture

It is not often that a big city theatre resorts to the small town style of exploitation on a picture, but the handsome new Brevoort theatre, Brooklyn, has been making a hit with its method of advertising Frank Keenan in "The Midnight Stage." The manager was able to locate an old fashioned stage coach, and with four horses, and outsiders this was sent through the streets of the city carrying the announcement of the showing of the picture.

In addition the Brevoort is advertising a "Wild West Party" during the showing.

Here is another "dig-out display" on "Shoulder Arms." A cut out with various hardware attached to the figure has been used by the Superba theatre, San Diego, Cal. The whole entrance to the theatre has been camouflaged, even the frames holding the one sheets having been covered over with bark effects. The display attracted much attention.

Singing Will Help You Put Over Tom Mix Pictures If You Only Experiment With This

ART to aid in entertaining the public is not new in the motion picture field. It is familiar nowadays in all large cities. But novelty in this extraneous aid is not so common.

The Fox Film Corporation is out with a suggestion to exhibitors that bears the stamp of novelty. It plans a "Tom Mix Cowboy Quartet" as a feature of the program whenever the exhibitor is showing a picture by this lively star of ranch life in the West.

The idea is that this quartet, composed of local talent, be costumed by cowboys and render songs of the kind that men sing around a camp fire—the type of song that is always best with four voices. It is pointed out that there are a number of typical cowboy songs, and Tom Mix himself has gathered and compiled several of them. Here are two of the verses of one called "The Cowboy's Life":

The bawl of a steer,
To a cowboy's ear,
Is music of sweetest strain;
And the yelping notes
Of the gray coyotes
To him are a glad refrain.

The rapid beat
Of his broncho's feet
On the sod as he speeds along,
Keeps living time
To the ringing rhyme
Of his rollicking cowboy song.

Then there is another lyric telling about the joys of the great out-of-doors. It is:

Oh, give me a home where the buffaloes roam,
Where the deer and the antelope play,
Where seldom is heard a discouraging word
And the skies are not cloudy all day.

Where the air is so pure, and the zephyrs so free,
The breezes so balmy and light,
That I would not exchange my home on the range
For all of the cities so bright.

It is pointed out that these lyrics, and others can be set to music by the orchestra leader, or the local choir master. They can not only be sung by the quartet, but perhaps the audience can be induced to join in the chorus, or at least whistle it. A slide can be made throwing the words on the screen as they are sung.

The costuming is simple and easy—the sombrero, the neckerchief, the leather trousers. And "properties" can either consist of just a cartridge belt and six-shooters, or can include lassos, saddles, and even a horse.

A special setting is not essential; but if the exhibitor desires to use one, there are many possibilities. The suggestion of a log cabin, or of the tall grass of the prairies, or just a "campfire" on the front of the stage.

Recognizing that in many cases professional singers may cost more than the exhibition is willing to spend on this auxiliary feature, the Fox plan provides as an alternative amateur voices—to be obtained from a church choir or otherwise. With a few rehearsals, it is contended, the exhibitor will have a big novelty that not only will be an attraction in itself, but will put the audience in an expectant mood for the Tom Mix photoplay.

All over the country the wide awake exhibitor is realizing that there are other possibilities in his roll of film besides merely projecting it upon the screen. Novelties in settings and in creating "atmosphere" are not only good art, but they are great publicity and mean extra dollars in the box office.

This quartet plan is said by the Fox officials to have been tried out in a Los Angeles theatre with very great success, and exhibitors who use the "Tom Mix Quartet" are asked to report results.

Wail from Rochester Is Tip for the Theatres to Do More

WE have a wail from Rochester. The newspapers, except one, have raised their advertising rate.

We are in sympathy with the theatres that are fighting the newspapers that seek to use them merely as a source of income, but here is a case where the theatres themselves should start the reform.

Before a theatre can ask a newspaper to make its motion picture department attractive, it must first make its advertising appeal to the public. The advertising of the Rochester houses is just about as bad as can be found in any section of the country. The main idea that one gets from the displays is that they are seeking to sell quantity rather than quality.

To give the real news of the situation on Rochester, the Democrat and Chronicle, morning, the Times-Union, morning and the Herald, morning, have all advanced their rates to 10 and 12½ cents a line. The Post-Express, which is a conservative paper of relatively small circulation and appealing to the more thoughtful class of readers in maintaining its rate at five cents a line.

Both the Democrat and Chronicle and the Times-Union will have the same scale for theatres, from 10 to 12½ cents a line, according to the size of the advertisement. The Democrat and Chronicle has always been the leader in the matter of circulation and has been a much better advertising medium than any other paper in the city, if not in Western New York. It claims a circulation of nearly 70,000 a day. Last summer, when the Union and Advertiser and the evening Times were purchased and consolidated by three Elmira newspapermen and a new paper published under the name of the Times-Union, the Democrat suddenly acquired a formidable rival. With the advantage of the double circulation of the two consolidated papers, the new paper soon was on a par with the old. It claims a circulation now virtually the same as the Democrat. The advertising rates, right after the merger, remained the same as the old Union and Advertiser scale, but it was foreseen that with the big circulation there would be a decided boost.

The new Herald advertising rate for theatres will be from 8 to 10 cents a line, which will mean a higher average rate than before, although for certain kinds of advertisements it will be actually less than before. The Herald had a peculiar scale before, by which small advertisers were compelled to pay considerably more per line than large ones, no matter how many times a week their advertisement appeared. By this scale some advertisements cost as much as 11½ cents a line while others were as low as 6 cents.

The Herald has been known as the amusement paper of Rochester. It has always given more space to the legitimate and the motion picture than any other.

But there has been another change indicated and that is with the giving of more space to reading notices.

Because the lighting effects cannot be reproduced, this Christmas display of the New Garrick, St. Paul, loses much in cut form rent events one must recognize the trick of cueing music. In New York the music apparently never stops. While one man is turning the music the players to his right and left continue. I liked the way the brass was used in bringing out the big punch in some of the scenes. There are several things more abundant than applause in picture theatres, and it is true that patriotism does not always find an outlet through hand clapping, but if a man or woman had not the slightest trace of patriotic fervor in their systems, the music as I heard it, backed up by the subject on the screen, just simply dynamited them into applause whether they wanted to or not. It tickled me, for one who has constantly endeavored to burgle this sort of expression from motion picture audiences appreciated seeing them give it up in large, choice hunks.

I have before me a copy of a combination ad of two of the New York theatres in question, mentioning, among other things, the prices: "20 cents, 30 cents and 60 cents," and where else in this city of eight million souls can a music lover sit down in choice, comfortable surroundings, with every detail in harmony with the particular line of endeavor being followed, and hear a superbly trained symphony orchestra render every kind of music from the most recent rag to the most forgotten classic, and, in addition, be shown the very latest products of human ingenuity and brains and world's circumstances, at prices within the reach of even a little street urchin? I have heard symphony orchestras and attended organ recitals in various western cities, and like many, many thousands of humans, have momentarily hungered for the familiar sound of an old friend's footsteps—a popular number—curious to know how it would sound if played by such an aggregation, or on such an instrument—one which could be readily understood and appreciated without the necessity of a high-browed investigation or hypocritical attitude adopted for the occasion—but never does the entertainment in these three theatres elevate itself—so far as my observations took me—to that point where one's mind became discouraged in following it.

By sight and by sound and, further still, by psychological appeal, I was most royally entertained.

However, there is another angle which might carry additional interest to the reader, assuming that he is interested, and that is: where the New York houses go in for large orchestras, out here in the Northwest we go in for large organs, and it is to our credit, and especially is credit due to the firm by which I am employed—Jensen and Von Herberg—that this section of the country now possesses three of the largest and most complete unit orchestras, built especially for the distinctive field of motion picture theatre work, thus far constructed in the United States, with a fourth rapidly nearing completion. (I am speaking of unit orchestras, not pipe organs.) There are others of various sizes scattered throughout the country, but I have yet to hear of any one other firm owning four such giant instruments. These instru-

Lighting Effects Strong Factor in Display at Garrick, St. Paul

N the Northwest renewed attention is being given stage settings, largely as the result of the work of the New Garrick, St. Paul, under the management of Theo. L. Hays. Here the atmosphere is being given for the photoplay presentation through special displays which are frequently arranged.

Often these settings are arranged to carry out the atmosphere of the feature production, but just as frequently they are built around the music or to provide the background for some current celebration.

For the Yuletide period at the New Garrick, the "Christmas Spirit" was emphasized in the special setting illustrated and a prelude proved to be of timely appeal.

With the beginning of the overture, the velvet curtains, making the picture sheet opening, drawn slowly aside, disclosed under the magic tone of subdued moonlight, a cottage with snow-covered roof and exterior. A background of horizon and sky above the roof top carried slowly moving clouds lightly tipped with moon rays, while soft falling snow lent atmosphere to the scene.

Gradually rising lights disclosed in bold outline the large bay window of a modest cottage, showing the interior of a living room in holiday decoration. A Christmas tree, adorned with tinsel and toys and ablaze with miniature lamps, added brilliancy to the picture. A table lamp spread its glow of amber through the room while a Red Cross card and Service Flag appeared as timely window decorations.

The opening music was a broad choral, followed by ringing of church bells off stage to the music of "Holy Night." As the lights gradually arose, the star of Bethlehem appeared in the horizon of the sky through the moving clouds. "Adesta Fidelas" and "O, Sanctissima" followed on the pipe organ, after which a large chime (located in fly gallery of theatre to give distance effect) sounded twelve o'clock.

The music, now lively with sleigh bells prominent, brought from the clouds a jovial moon. Santa Claus appeared on his mission of Kindness to Kiddies with his sleigh and reindeer sharply silhouetted by the moonlight against the background of sky and cloud as he dashed madly through the air.

ments and the wonderfully efficient and clever manner in which they are played would rope, tie and hold spellbound the most effete New York motion picture audience, and, the more marvelous, for it is all accomplished by one man in place of forty-five or fifty, with a duplication of the instrumentation, and in some sections in excess of that of these large New York orchestras. In one of the Jensen and Von Herberg theatres, the Seattle Coliseum, a splendid orchestra of thirty-one men is maintained in addition to one of the largest and newest types of unit orchestras. Such a combination does not exist in a New York theatre, and the Coliseum's prices are PRACTICABILITY is the outstanding feature of the large campaign book Universal's advertising department is getting out to aid exhibitors in boosting business on "The Red Glove," a serial featuring Marie Walcamp and scheduled for release February 17.

"The Red Glove" contains many unique and compelling advertising angles and it must be said that Universal's advertising staff has not passed up any "good bets" in preparing the campaign carefully and effectively laid out in the book now at the printery and to be sent to every exhibitor in the country immediately after leaving the press.

"The Red Glove" campaign book is to be made up of sixty-four pages, including a special insert of exceptional advertising and publicity value. Nat G. Rothstein, advertising director for Universal is responsible for the statement that this advertising campaign exceeds by a good margin anything previously attempted by the "Big U."

The campaigns outlined by "The Red Glove" book have been originated only after considerable study of what exhibitors actually do in advertising serials and what sort of advertising is most impressive upon the minds of the theatre attending public. The advertising drawings and layouts of the campaign book have all been passed upon by a committee of ten well known serial using exhibitors and their suggestions have been embodied in the many styles of advertisements the book contains.

Advertising cut listed as "R. G. No. 1" is a striking, bold, clear-cut, three column, fifteen inch display, containing a large head

Here's a punch, just one punch in this thrilling sexual photo-play that will cause you to grin to your neighbor and say, "You spoiled, me!" You so eager and anxious for each succeeding scene, even if you're hardly able to wait.

Dealing, beautiful, fearless MARIE WALCAMP, idol of millions of photo-play fans, plays the leading part in this new story of wealth and love, adventure and romance. It is easily the finest sexual photo-play of the year. Bigger, newer, more thrilling, more interesting than any sexual play in any movie house. Don't cross even one single episode. See it all. of Miss Walcamp and the "red glove" re-produced in solid black. The catch lines and reading matter of this ad. are bold, brief and explanatory. Cut No. 2, is of like proportion but even more striking in its construction. This ad. is practically divided into two masses, one of solid black and the other of white, and in any newspaper it will compel interest and hold the attention. Cut No. 3 is also three columns wide and is made striking by the clever handling of solid black matter and white space. A pen sketch of Miss Walcamp's head is also part of this display. Cut No. 4 is a small three column display in which solid black and white masses are equally divided. Cut No. 5 is four columns wide and a trifle deeper than its width. In it gray, solid black and white space are mixed with interesting and compelling effect. This cut is so made that the reading matter may be easily changed without interference with the art work of the display. Cut No. 6 is a two column, nine inch display cut without border and combining solid black, gray and well leaded type masses in a way that makes the ad. stand out splendidly regardless of its location. Cuts Nos. 10 and 11 are of like character though considerably different as to art construction. Cuts Nos. 7 and 8 are short three column displays without borders and containing novel sketches of the film action and the solid black bar bearing white lettering "The Red Glove" diagonally across the dark backing.

Cuts Nos 12 and 13 are two column seven inch displays combining benday and outline art sketches of the action of the film, blocked type construction and the solid black bar which attracts the attention to "The Red Glove" title throughout the campaign. Cut No. 14 contains only a sketched head of Miss Walcamp and a typographical block centered well within the bounds of two column, seven inches, free of border other than a rule line on the right-hand side and top and a shaded edge on the left-hand side and bottom. This ad. is so simple in its make-up that it is one of the most attractive of the campaign. Cuts Nos. 15, 16 and 17 are single column in width and of varied depths. Nos. 15 and 16 combine solid black masses with equal portions of white space and centered type lines. No. 17 is similar to cut No. 14 as the only art work it contains is the sketch of Miss Walcamp's head

In addition to these "straight" advertising campaign cuts the campaign book contains over thirty different "teaser" advertising campaign cuts varying in size from one column, one inch and half column, two inch, to two column seven inches. The teaser campaign is laid out in such simple form that it should prove a great educator to serial exhibitors who heretofore have not known how to lay out their advertising campaigns on serials. The Universal teaser campaign is originated for the purpose of creating interest in the advertising and to compel the newspaper reader to follow each ad. as it appears. Results obtained from the use of "teaser" advertising in the past prove that a properly conducted campaign along these lines is an exceptional box office asset to the exhibitor.

In addition to the "teaser" and "straight" advertising campaigns outlined in the campaign book it contains diverse cuts of the star and attractive bits of art work that can be worked into any display advertisement. Some very practical suggestions as to the typographical construction of original advertisements are also contained in the book.

No novelties will be issued in connection with the release of "The Red Glove" but a number of practical suggestions for novel advertising stunts which may easily be worked up by exhibitors are explained in detail in the campaign book.

Due to the fact that the combination, screen and line cuts, used in previous advertising campaigns have not proved as beneficial to some exhibitors as have straight pen and ink drawings, "The Red Glove" campaign contains no screen finer than the Ben Day stipple that is of such firmness as to reproduce clearly in any newspaper or magazine published.

The advertising campaign on the Walcamp serial has been several months in preparation and judging from the appearance of the campaign book Universal's statement that it is the least expensive to the exhibitor of any campaign yet planned it has been most expensive to develop. Cuts and mats reproduced in the campaign book are now being made and will be supplied to Universal exchanges in quantity.

Pathe Star in Chambers Serial

Pathe Star's Next Serial Adapted from Robert W. Chambers' "In Secret"—Seitz Forms New Producing Company for Work

PEARL WHITE'S next Pathe serial will be an adaptation from a series of stories by Robert W. Chambers, America's most popular writer of romance. Mr. Chambers' work that will serve as the basis for Miss White's next serial, is "In Secret," which ran recently in a monthly magazine. Paul Brunet, vice-president and general manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc., in making the announcement said:

"The coupling of America's most popular novelist and the screen's most famous heroine is an achievement of which Pathe may well be proud. It is in direct line with Pathe's announced intention of placing serials on a higher plane than they have heretofore held and of producing episode pictures which will be as logical and sensible as the finest five-reel features.

"Robert W. Chambers is in a class by himself as a novelist. No other American writer enjoys the popularity, nor his books the circulation that Mr. Chambers achieves. He has been writing for a great many years and each of his novels triumphs over the previous one. Rich and poor, working girl and lady of leisure all await the coming of a Chambers story with the same eager anticipation and as a rule the person who starts to read one, goes right through from cover to cover without stopping."

The screening of this work of Mr. Chambers will mark the first serial production ever made from any of the author's stories. Mr. Chambers' most successful works, including "The Common Law," "The Firing Line," "The Fighting Chance," "The Danger Mark," "The Girl Philippa," "The Hidden Children," "The Younger Set" and "The Moonlit Way" have all been photo-dramatized, but none of his works have ever appeared serially on the screen. Pathe will lead the way.

The Pathe Publicity Department does not state the figure paid for the rights to the Chambers serial, but it is said "In Secret" brought a big figure. It is stated by an official that Pathe has shown adherence to its policy of "better serials" by purchasing this work of so well known an author as Robert W. Chambers.

The serial will be made by a new producing company to be known as George B. Seitz, Inc. George B. Seitz, who heads the corporation bearing his name, has been Miss White's director for many serials and will direct her in "In Secret." Mr. Seitz has had a long and successful career with Pathe, starting in as assistant scenario writer five years ago at a small salary. In the five years he has been with this firm, he has risen to the head of his own corporation. He wrote the scenarios of "The Perils of Pauline" and the three "Exploits of Elaine" serials and directed "The Fatal Ring," "The House of Hate" and "The Lightning Raider," in addition to collaborating on the scenarios. Mr. Seitz is still in his twenties and can undoubtedly lay claim to being the youngest head of a big producing corporation in the picture industry.

Bertram Millhauser will do the scenario for "In Secret." He started in the Pathe publicity department a few years ago and soon showed adaptability for scenario writing. The Pathe executives recognized this ability and transferred Mr. Millhauser to their scenario department. He has written the scenarios for the last three Pearl White serials, "The Fatal Ring," "The House of Hate" and "The Lightning Raider," and also for the Mollie King serial, "The Double Cross."

Work has already been started on "In Secret" at the Pathe studio in Jersey City, but within a few weeks Mr. Seitz will transfer his operations to the Pathe studio at 134th Street and Park Avenue, New York City.

Eight Warner Features Are Contracted

In addition to acquiring the rights of "What Every Woman Wants," featuring Grace Darmond, supported by the Russian actress Hedda Nova, the Robertson-Cole Company, through its division of films, has contracted for a series of eight "strong man" features starring H. B. Warner.

Exhibitors' Mutual will distribute, and the Robertson-Cole Company proposes, according to announcement, that this distributing company will always have plenty of good features to handle.

A third deal, completed a few days later was the engagement of Carter De Haven, his wife, Flora Parker, and the two kiddies, to make a two-reel comedy each month for thirteen months. The newly wed idea will furnish the situations for these comedies.

In a brief resume, Exhibitors' Mutual states that the expansion of the Robertson-Cole interests in the film industry was first noted when the company secured the Martin Johnson pictures, "Cannibals of the South Seas."

Then the group of accepted stars followed, including Henry B. Walthall, Bessie Barriscale, William Desmond, Sessue Hayakawa and Billie Rhodes. Later Alma Rubens was added to the list.

Katterjohn Promises an Excellent Cast

"Hearts of the Stampede," the first of four special productions announced by Monte M. Katterjohn, will have an especially strong cast, according to Katterjohn Films.

"I am confident," says Mr. Katterjohn "that the announcement of the cast appearing in 'Hearts of the Stampede' will create a sensation among exhibitors and producers.

"A number of the players will be sterling artists who have been consistently starred by other companies, and whose names carry a real meaning to the theatregoing public."

Rio Productions Formed

An announcement has just been made of the organizing of Rio Productions, Inc. with Clyde Colt, President; Robert A. Fulmer, Secretary; Miss Nonette Rio, Treasurer. Executive office at 1552 Broadway New York City. Studios at 498 Fulton street, Brooklyn, and 875 Broad street Newark, New Jersey.

The company will produce and feature Miss Nonette Rio, an actress who will portray Latin types. She is heralded as the late star of the Theatre Tebichabo, Barcelona, Spain, where she was a Spanish dancer.

Pauline Frederick in Her First Goldwyn

New Goldwyn Star's Production Released February 16 Is "The Woman on the Index"—Long Silence Period Is Explained by Producer

FROM the Goldwyn offices comes the long awaited announcement that the first Pauline Frederick production is scheduled for release on February 16.

The announcement also contains the information which explains just why there has been so long a period during which it has had to maintain silence as to Miss Frederick's productions. It was one of the stipulations of Miss Frederick's last contract affiliation that she must not be advertised or exploited in any new productions by title for a period of six months from the end of her contract.

As a matter of ethics, Goldwyn has rigidly observed this previous agreement of its star, despite the fact that it could have attained larger financial advantage by making a campaign on the new productions of the star under their titles.

The premiere vehicle in which Pauline Frederick makes her bow as a Goldwyn star is "The Woman on the Index," by Lillian Trimble Bradley and George Broadhurst. This is a new stage success of the past fall and ran for several months at the Forty-eighth Street theatre, New York.

Right Kind of Story

"The Woman on the Index" is said to provide Miss Frederick with the kind of story that she herself has wanted, that her producers have found for her and that the public expects and prefers from her. She has bade good-bye under the Goldwyn name to the French and Russian drama and henceforth finds her stories containing modern American themes of tense emotional power—a fact that is certain to please the exhibitors of the country, who are heavily booked through Goldwyn for her star series productions, which are quite likely to be seen henceforth at intervals of about sixty days.

This initial production, besides being the work of two well-known authors, is directed by Hobart Henley, who has made no less than five Goldwyn productions since the spring of last year, productions in which Mae Marsh and Will Rogers were the stars. His "Laughing Bill Hyde," from the Rex Beach story, was declared an outstanding hit of the latter part of 1918.

Willard Mack, in addition to being the author of the scenario of "The Woman on the Index," is one of the leading players in the cast and is seen in support of his wife for the first time on the screen. In the cast are Wyndham Standing, Jere Austin and several other notables of screen and stage.

Made in the East

"The Woman on the Index" was produced in the East, and at its completion Miss Frederick and Mr. Mack left for California. She is now making her second production at the Goldwyn studios in Los Angeles.

The story is of Sylvia Martin, who quarrels with her father and leaves her home to throw herself into the river. She falls senseless in a doorway and is picked up by Louis Gordon, a bank crook, who carries her to his rooms, shared as headquarters by his pals in crookedness, Jack and Whitey. When Sylvia, stricken with a serious illness, recovers, she marries Louis out of gratitude for his kindness. He, strangely enough, really loves her and has told his pals that the bank robbery he will lead them on that night is to be his last.

The plot goes wrong and police, led by John Alden, new reform chief, trap the band at work. Louis is wounded, but is able to get to his lodgings, and, observed by Sylvia, who has got wind of his crookedness, hides the money in an ash barrel. Alden pursues Louis to his rooms, where, rather than be taken alive, the crook kills himself as the police are breaking in. Jack and Whitey accuse Sylvia of murdering him after she turns up the money for Alden, and she is put to trial and acquitted. Three years elapse.

David Maber, attached to the American diplomatic service, and his wife Helene, are found in their Washington home. It is shown they are happy. Helene is the unfortunate Sylvia Martin of years gone. A caller is announced. He is John Alden, now chief of the United States Secret Service. He recognizes Sylvia, now Helene, and she him.

Many Dramatic Moments

At this point in the story, while Alden and Maber are elsewhere in the house, Hugo Declasse is introduced as a caller. He is infatuated with Helene and takes no pains to conceal it. She despises him, but is at a loss how to be rid of him.

Alden sends for Helene next day and reveals that he is her friend. He really is. He likes her and thinks her immensely clever. He believes he can make use of her in his work of trailing down the ring-leaders of a bank spreading Bolsheviki propaganda in the United States. The leader of this band, he confides to her, is Declasse. She must help Alden trap him.

In pursuance of their agreement, Helene compromises herself with Declasse and her husband threatens to kill the interloper.

At this moment Declasse's plans have reached fruition. It is necessary for him to smuggle a letter to a confederate in London, and he pays his Japanese butler to bribe his cousin, an attendant of Maber, to hide the letter in the diplomat's hat box when he sails for England with his wife. The box is later to be stolen for Declasse. Declasse has tightened his hold on Helene by the discovery of her past, chanced upon when she unwittingly made known to him the presence in her husband's library of a book listing important New York criminal cases, with the names of victims and defendants. She is the woman on the index recorded as having been accused of murder and acquitted for lack of evidence.

By prearrangement Helene goes to Declasse's apartments and is apparently trapped there by Alden, who tells Declasse he is under arrest. Declasse's supposed Japanese butler, in reality an operative of the U. S. Secret Service, has turned over to Helene Declasse's letter to his confederate.

Though Maber has been told all about his wife's past by Alden, he takes her in his arms, overjoyed at the discovery that her affair with Declasse wasn't an affair at all.

Kerrigan Comes Feb. 10 in "Come Again Smith"

J. Warren Kerrigan's eighth picture that Hodkinson handles is described as a frothy comedy of the romantic adventure type and will be released February 10.

It is entitled "Come Again Smith." John H. Blackwood wrote the story, E. Mason Hopper directed it and Jesse D. Hampton produced it.

Lois Wilson, the prize beauty from Alabama, continues to be the object of Kerrigan's celluloid adoration, and she is said to be at her best in this picture. Winifred Greenwood, former American star, plays Miss Wilson's sister.

William Conklin, villain in several recent Kerrigan pictures, designs a new form of trouble for the hero in "Come Again Smith."

House Records Reported Broken

Exchanges Throughout Country Report Big Success with "The Master Mystery," Starring Houdini

OCTAGON FILMS, INC., distributors of "The Master Mystery," starring Houdini, produced by B. A. Rolfe Productions, are in receipt of numerous letters from exchanges in different sections of the country where the Houdini serial has shown, establishing the fact that house records have been broken with this serial running.

Effano Film Exchange, controlling New York City and State, advises that the opening at the Keith and Proctor houses on January 6 was a triumph. At Proctor's theatre, Yonkers, not only did the Houdini serial break the house record, but it drew such crowds that the management had to break its house policy and give two shows at night instead of the usual one.

Rolfe Productions of Northern New Jersey, booking northern New Jersey, states that its customers have increased their business appreciable on days when the Houdini serial is shown, while B. A. Rolfe Productions of Dallas wires that Houdini is going big.

In Eastern Pennsylvania and Northern New Jersey, a territory booked by Arrow Film Exchange of Philadelphia, the serial is being successfully shown over all the big circuits, including the houses of the Stanley Booking Co., the Nixon & Nirdlinger interests, and the Commerford Circuit. Rolfe Productions of Atlanta, covering the states of North and South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and Tennessee, has had big openings all through its territory. Similar results have been achieved by Rolfe Productions of Pittsburgh, booking Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia. In Pittsburgh this exchange is booking downtown houses which heretofore have rejected all serials.

Thirty-seven houses in Baltimore have already contracted to play the Houdini serial through Exhibitors Film Exchange, Washington, supplying exhibitors in Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia. In Washington the serial opened to record breaking business.

B. A. Rolfe Productions of New England reports that hundreds of houses are exhibiting the picture to big profit and that it is an established success. In Illinois and Indiana, booked by Celebrated Players Film Corporation, similar results were attained. The opening in Canada, booked by Regal Films, Ltd., was an unqualified success in both Toronto and Montreal.

U. S. Service Men Back With Universal

MAKING good a promise made when they entered the service, the "Big U" film exchange of New York has given positions to Eddie Cumberland, formerly head booker; Nate Goldberg and Aaron Africk, who have been mustered out of Government service. In addition to making a place for these three former employees, it is stated that the men who took their places when they offered their all to Uncle Sam have been retained.

Mr. Cumberland has been in the chemical division of the army, while Mr. Goldberg and Mr. Africk have been in the navy for over a year.

Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Film Co., has sent a letter to all exchange managers requesting them to make room for former employees who have been in the service. Last June, when the Universal service flag could not be hung up, due to the addition of several stars each day, Mr. Laemmle stated that the loyalty of Universal employees must be rewarded.

His letter to exchangemen is described as proving that he is carrying out his idea of last summer.

Mr. Laemmle's letter to exchange managers follows, in part:

"Not only are these boys who have given their all to aid the nation to be given their former positions, or better ones, when they apply for them, after discharge from the service, but you are authorized to help these splendid fellows get ahead in every way possible.

"There is little we can really do to show these returning heroes that we appreciate the spirit in which they offered their service to Uncle Sam, but we would be the yellowest kind of yellow dogs were we not to restore them to our rosters and help them to help themselves.

"Retain all of the present employees if possible, but remind them that the boys who have rallied to the colors are entitled to first consideration."

Williams' Late Vitagraph Breaking Records

"THE MAN WHO WOULDN'T TELL," Earle Williams' latest release on the Vitagraph program, is surpassing in booking records all previous releases of this star's pictures within the last six months, according to reports from the Vitagraph offices.

In this offering Mr. Williams has the role of a Secret Service agent. Many of the star's best characterizations on the screen have been in the role of a detective or kindred parts, so that the part of a Secret Service agent would insure the best that is in Mr. Williams.

"The Man Who Wouldn't Tell" was directed by James Young. Mr. Young selected some of the most beautiful spots along the Southern California coast as "locations," and it is said that they defy equals in scenic beauty. The country club and grounds at Del Monte serve as the seat of the action for several scenes and this spot is said to be the most ideal in California. Here has been staged a polo game scene in which Mr. Williams rides as captain. Supporting him in the picture are Grace Darmond, Charles Spear and Edward Cecil.

Horne Directs Corbett for Universal

James J. Corbett, new Universal star, is beginning work on the second episode of his first serial, entitled "The Midnight Man." James W. Horne has furnished the story for the serial and is directing the former world's champion boxer. Harvey Gates prepared the working script for the production.

The serial in part depicts the life of Corbett and "Gentleman Jim" is playing the role of "juvenile lead" at present.

When Corbett signed a Universal contract right after Christmas he promised Carl Laemmle he would give the film fans something new in the way of serial action. Corbett explained to Mr. Laemmle some of the things he had in mind, and the Universal executive decided to give him plenty of opportunity to prove his ability. According to Joe Brandt, who is at Universal City supervising the start of three new serials, Mr. Corbett is taking to film work with a will and already has established himself as a favorite among the directors and actors at the Western studios.

Ruby de Remer in "Great Romance"

As in Harold Lockwood's production, "Pals First," Ruby de Remer is also leading woman in the latest Lockwood Screen Classic, "The Great Romance."

Her first picture engagement proving successful even beyond her hopes, Miss de Remer decided to forsake the stage for pictures only, where her work has attracted such favorable attention that she bids fair to soon become one of the really bright luminaries in the screen firmament.

Miss de Remer made her professional debut two years ago as the prima donna in the Weber and Fields production of "Back Again."

Matt Moore Heads Cast

In support of Mae Marsh in "The Bondage of Barbara," her latest Goldwyn picture, Matt Moore heads the cast. He is a brother of Tom Moore.

Making his first appearance in Goldwyn Pictures, his personality and methods are said to suggest Miss Marsh's ideal foil in "The Cinderella Man." Apart from this he is considered well-known figure to motion picture enthusiasts, his roles in support of various stars being too numerous to mention.

Jack McLean plays the important role of the star's brother in "The Bondage of Barbara."

Desmond in Comedy

William Desmond, starring in "Life's a Funny Proposition," released by Exhibitors' Mutual as a comedy, shows in the film that the demands of friendship have their limits.

He discovers this after a friend with malicious humor wishes a Belgian baby on him, and the corresponding circumstances entangle him in many situations that are difficult to emerge from victorious.

William Fox in a Big European Deal

Continental Showings of Fox Photoplays Are Provided for in Record Export Contract Closed with O. J. Monat, the European Distributor of Paris, France

WHAT is stated to be one of the largest export deals in the history of the motion picture industry has just been made known by William Fox of New York and O. J. Monat of Paris, whereby the French distributor has purchased the rights for France and other countries of some two hundred subjects selected from the Fox releases.

With peace assured, Monsieur Monat came to this country to select films for his clients in France, Belgium, Switzerland, Italy, Spain, Portugal, Egypt and the Balkan States. After making a thorough inspection of the products of the leading American producers, he states that he has made ninety per cent of his purchases from the Fox Film Corporation releases.

The money transaction is said to be a large one. Monsieur Monat is said to have paid some 1,000,000 francs ($200,000) for the rights alone of these Fox pictures, and it is reported that his purchase of film will bring the deal to a figure exceeding 2,500,000 francs.

Ten Standard Features

Included are ten Fox features from the Standard series to be shown over M. Monat's entire territory, forty special productions for France, Holland, Switzerland and Belgium, fifteen special features for the Balkans and Egypt, ten productions for Italy and twenty productions for Spain and Portugal.

A number of Henry Lehrman Sunshine Comedies and Mutt and Jeff Animated Cartoons are included in the arrangement.

Speaking of his purchases and of conditions in the industry in Europe, Monsieur Monat said:

"The next six months will see such a crowding of the picture theatres as continental exhibitors never have known. In this country, far removed from the direct ravages of war, you cannot fully appreciate the reaction to amusement that is taking place. Even during hostilities the cinema theatres were operated as far as possible, for the Government recognized the importance of such entertainment in keeping up the morale and the spirits of the people.

"Now that the Boche is overwhelmed, our business is going to be enormous. And I feel that in providing inexpensive recreation the cinema exhibitor's contribution to the period of reconstruction is a most important one.

"Our own producers are resuming activities, but we must look to America for the greater part of the releases. And I must admit that during the past four years you have set a standard of production that will give the French producers a keen struggle to equal.

"Another factor is that many of our finest directors and players have made the supreme sacrifice on the field of honor—others have come to America to seek wider opportunity for their talents. The rivalry is a most friendly one, however, for France has come to regard American achievements with as great pride as her own. As our producers commence to turn out feature pictures again, I expect to see a business in import and export for both nations that will be mutually advantageous.

"May I say a special word in praise of the William Fox productions? It seems to me that, more than any other American company, the Fox producers have used big, world-wide appealing stories, and have made their productions with a care and an attention to detail that is demanded by the audiences of my country.

Praises Fox Pictures

"Before the advent of the cinema the so-called masses in France were accustomed to the very finest acting and plays—our best theatres always have many seats that were moderate in price. They are, therefore, supercritical as to their screen entertainment. I feel that Fox photoplays measure up fully to the highest acting standards.

"I consider the Sunshine Comedies the funniest in the world. And the 'Mutt and Jeff' Animated Cartoons will make an instant hit in Europe. In the more serious plays I am especially impressed by the excellence of the Fox stories—in France no star can neutralize the weakness of a bad scenario. And here I find both—great stars and great stories!

"Speaking of stars," continued Monsieur Monat, "I think that William Farnum will quickly become a dominating name in big box office returns. To my mind, he is a supreme artist. And he will typify to my countrymen the manly, quiet, unassuming American who does really big things—the sort that have become national heroes with us since Chateau-Thierry."

Monsieur Monat also was enthusiastic about the Fox extravaganzas, "Fan Fan," Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves" and "Jack and the Beanstalk." "We never have produced anything to equal them," he exclaimed. "They will create the greatest enthusiasm."

In Two Languages

When asked about the arrangement of titles and subtitles in countries like Belgium and Holland, where more than one language is common, Monsieur Monat said: "We print all titles in the two great international languages, French and English—one under the other, very much as I sometimes see signs in America reproduced on the same card in different languages.

"Even in France it is necessary now to have English subtitles. I am told that fully 20,000 of your countrymen have married or have made such business connections that they expect to remain in France indefinitely? And I may say that for several years your troops and officials connected with reconstruction work in my country will number many thousands.

"For America and things American we feel great affection and admiration. The American eagle is the most popular bird in France today. Just let it be known that you are from the United States and everything waits on your wishes. With the introduction of American films on a large scale I hope to do my humble part in cementing this great friendship."

Crowd Breaks Box Office, Says Exhibitor

"The Lure of the Circus," Universal Serial starring Edie Polo, is reported to have caused some excitement in Detroit, Michigan, according to the following from Manager Fred R. Rumler of the Warren theatre:

"So that other exhibitors may know the success I met with on 'The Lure of the Circus,' I want to go on record stating that today we showed the first episode. The crowd at our theatre was so great that they stood for hours waiting to get in and in addition, broke down my box office.

"The loss of the box office ordinarily would mean a loss to me but I am very glad to say that the receipts warranted my getting a new box office, therefore I take it upon myself to say that 'The Lure of the Circus' is by far the greatest attraction that has ever appeared in my house."

Winnifred Greenwood Back Again

After a considerable absence from the screen, Winnifred Greenwood returns in "Come Again Smith," J. Warren Kerrigan's next, a comedy drama produced by Jesse D. Hampton and distributed by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation.

Olive Thomas Stories Secured

Selznick Pictures Corporation Promises Series of Pictures of Unusual Dramatic Interest

MYRON SELZNICK states that contracts have been closed by the Selznick Pictures Corporation which will insure for Olive Thomas a series of productions which the company believes will be of unusual dramatic interest.

Following the principle that no star can be greater than the stories in which she appears, it is said that great pains have been taken to obtain the best material possible.

"Upstairs and Down," the first of the Selznick Pictures productions, is based upon the play by Frederick and Fanny Hatton, produced by Oliver Morosco.

Work has already begun on this production in Los Angeles, Myron Selznick having closed an arrangement whereby the Brunton studios, said to be one of the best equipped studios on the Coast, will be used for the Olive Thomas pictures.

Charles Giblyn, director-general of the corporation, has completed the engaging of the cast and this picture will be ready in March, it is announced. It is the intention to have one production ready for release every six weeks thereafter.

Another story which has been obtained for Miss Thomas is "The Spite Bride," a novel by Miss Louise Winter, which appeared in serial form in a magazine about a year ago. The company believes that this title is one of the catchiest that has been put upon the screen in a long time.

What is declared to be probably the most important step taken by the company to provide Miss Thomas with suitable material, is a contract which has been closed with Cosmo Hamilton, calling for not less than three stories in the next year. These will all be original scenarios.

Mr. Selznick believes that Cosmo Hamilton is one of the most successful authors that have entered the film field. His success is said to include not merely moving picture scenarios, but novels and plays as well.

"Blindness of Virtue" is declared to have won for him an international reputation and appeared first as a novel, then as a play, and finally as a picture. Another of his creations, "Scandal," was described as one of the big serials which ran in the "Red Book," and provided Constance Talmadge with one of her greatest screen successes.

"Mr. Hamilton's stories have been invariably interesting because they contain both emotional and dramatic tension, combined with a great deal of incidental comedy," said Mr. Selznick. "He is a keen observer of social life and his characters are always vivid and real."

Negotiations are announced as being under way for other important stories and plays, to be announced later.

Reads Four Hundred Stories to Find One

TO select "Diana of the Green Van," which was purchased for Alma Rubens, a statement from Robertson-Cole says that more than four hundred other stories were read to find the proper vehicle for the star.

They point out that the difficulty of obtaining high class material for production constitutes one of the most serious problems of the film industry today.

The famous Selig library, which was purchased by Robertson-Cole Company, was scoured from end to end before the story by Leona Dalrymple, which is said to have won a $10,000 prize for its author, was eventually decided upon as worthy material for the screen talents of Miss Rubens. The production is now being staged by Miss Rubens' own company, the Winsome Stars Corporation, at the Brunton studios in the well known California sunshine.

Miss Rubens is returning to the screen drama after some months of inactivity—months that were devoted by her in aiding the United States to triumph over the Hun.

The fact that "Diana of the Green Van" was considered such an unusual novel that Miss Dalrymple won the $10,000 award in competition with hundreds of authors is taken to establish it as a most promising motion picture attraction.

Word comes East from Charles Greenberg and Franklyn Hutton, who recently formed the company which Miss Rubens heads, that "Diana of the Green Van" will come up to expectations in every respect.

They also declare that Miss Rubens has lost none of her charm and effectiveness before the camera through her lay-off.

Florida Furnishes Atmosphere for Three

THREE Fox companies have invaded Florida, which is declared to show that at least one New York producer is giving Florida a real opportunity to prove that it is a desirable state from the standpoint of motion picture production.

Not only has William Fox sent three companies to Miami, but he even had a story especially written to fit the Florida climate!

The Fox exodus was begun by the William Farnum company under the direction of Richard Stanton. Then followed George Walsh, who is working under Edward Dillon's supervision. Mr. Farnum went to Florida in search of jungle atmosphere and Mr. Walsh went to find sea water of a proper temperature for aquatic stunts.

Director J. Gordon Edwards and Theda Bara, however, departed from New York, carrying the story that was made to produce climatic climaxes—a story of high color and a South Sea island flavor.

Their departure leaves only one William Fox star—Evelyn Nesbit—working in the New York and New Jersey studios.

Director Edwards is very happy over his "discovery" of an island off the Florida coast, near Miami, which he declares is an ideal spot for filming tropical scenes.

McLoughlin to Produce Series of Plays

George McLoughlin, playwright, has entered the producing field at the head of the Argus Motion Picture Company and commenced his first production under this firm's name, this week when the first scenes of his former stage success, "House Without Children," were taken in Cleveland where Mr. McLoughlin transformed an old mansion into a studio for interior scenes. Mr. McLoughlin made a picture exploiting the Fourth Liberty Loan and had such success with it that he has decided to produce a series of features, to be adapted from his plays.

Richard Travers, an old favorite of the screen, who has recently received his discharge from the army, will be the featured member of the cast to interpret "House Without Children." Sam Brodsky will direct the production. Mr. McLoughlin, accompanied by Director Brodsky, spent last week in New York casting for the production. Among those engaged for principal parts is George Hays, for several seasons with Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson, for the character lead. Mr. McLoughlin announced that he would have detailed announcements to make soon.

Breaks Akron Records

The attendance record at the Orpheum theatre at Akron, Ohio, was broken, according to the following wire announced by Exhibitors Mutual officials:

"Opened Sunday, December 29, with Martin Johnson's 'Cannibals of the South Seas' to the largest one-day attendance in the history of the Orpheum theatre. Patrons delighted and commenting on the wonderful photography and educational value. Apparently embarrassing situations are appreciated by the audiences for their truthful depiction and are not questioned.—A. P. Bortzum."

China Scenes by Holmes

Burton Holmes has pictured China in the Paramount-Burton Holmes Travelogue released January 19. It is entitled "Celestial Contrasts," and beginning with China the fabled "celestial empire," one is introduced to the policeman under the present Republican government.

These well trained "coppers" are of Kowloon, just opposite Hong Kong, and are commanded by a Sikh from India under British discipline. This town of Kowloon is a British concession on the mainland and the policemen are all East Indians.

Press Book Completed

"Made in America" special press book is now in the printer's hand and it is said to contain a great number of valuable advertising suggestions and a deal of helpful publicity written from many angles. It will be released February 16.

It is an Ashley Miller production and is published and distributed by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation through Pathe Exchange, Inc.

Pathe Shows Naval Men

W. E. Raynor, manager of Pathe's New York branch, gave a special showing, by request, of Pathe News showing the construction of motors for submarines.

The following naval officers were present: Rear Admiral W. N. Little, Head of the Bureau of Steam Engineering, U. S. N.; Commander Allen of the Bureau of Steam Engineering, U. S. N.; Lieutenant-Commander H. Loring Swasey, U. S. N., Designer of the Submarine Chaser; Lieutenant Sherman Hoyt, U. S. N. R. F.; Lieutenant Wm. H. Nutting, U. S. N. R. F.; Lieutenant Douty, U. S. N. R. F.; William Huskinson, Vickers, Ltd., London; Mr. Duff, U. S. Shipping Board; Eugene A. Riotte, President Standard Motor Construction Co.; Lewis Spinks, Vice President Standard Motor Construction Co.; Leonard J. Brown, Sales Manager, Standard Motor Construction Co.; Herbert J. Grant, Sales Representative, Standard Motor Construction Co.; William A. Rogers, Editor of Motor Boat; Prof. George F. Crouch, Webb Naval Academy.

"Lafayette, We Come," Booked Solid

L. S. Tobias, representing the Exhibitors' Mutual in the Connecticut territory, reports that he has booked "Lafayette, We Come," Leonce Perret's production, starring E. K. Lincoln and Dolores Cassenelli, in every city and town in Connecticut where motion pictures are exhibited. When Exhibitors' Mutual acquired the distributing rights to "Lafayette, We Come," Mr. Tobias and his manager, W. A. V. Mack, arranged a special showing at the Palace theatre, New Haven. The audience, composed of the Mayor, the Governor of the State and the faculty of Yale University, pronounced it a remarkable picture.

"Success Series" Shows Dustin Farnum

The role is that of a young Californian who turns highwayman and spreads terror among the Mexicans in revenge for the murder of his parents and the burning of their home. Winnifred Kingston plays the role of the Captain's sweetheart and Herbert Standing is a padre. Courtenay Foote, Carl von Schiller and Winona Brown are also in the support.

Says "Infatuation" Scores

According to announcements, the reports said to be coming into Pathe offices tend to show that the concern used good judgment in importing the Gaby Deslys feature, "Infatuation."

One Pathe official said: "Miss Deslys's rawing power as a star is probably as great as any of the stage celebrities who have taken to the screen, and the following she acquired during her several American tours in musical comedy and vaudeville is now thronging the picture theatres to see her on the screen."

Select Cites Exchange Policy

Self Reliance Is Said to Be Keynote of Select's Branch Managers Throughout the Country

FROM Select offices comes the announcement of the policy in force at all its exchanges.

"The twenty-one men who are the executive heads of Select Pictures Corporation branches in as many cities throughout the United States are all distinguishable by one significant characteristic," said the announcement.

"This quality is self-reliance. Among the many considerations which have led to the selection of each individual man for the post he occupies at the head of some certain Select branch office, this consideration has been paramount:

"Is this man able to stand on his own feet? Can he think and act for himself? Has he independence of spirit? Has he initiative? In short—is he self-reliant?"

"Each Select branch manager conducts his territory as though the business of that particular exchange was his own. The home office does not harry him with a thousand minor considerations, but dictates matters of general policy, arranges basic conditions for work, seeks to be a guide and a counselor to the branch manager and to support his efforts.

"The home office looks for results. To the branch manager is left the selection of ways and means. To the branch manager is left the choice between alternatives. To him, as far as possible, are left the decisions on contracts. Time and again when a branch manager is confronted with a situation in which the two courses which lie open to him seem to offer about similar advantages, the home office advises him in some such language as this:

"You are on the spot. You know your territory and the conditions obtaining in it better than we do. You know what will be the best thing for you to do, the best for your office and therefore the best for Select. We leave the decision in your hands."

"The Select branch manager who cannot under such circumstances successfully exercise initiative and judgment of choice does not long remain at the head of a Select territory. Self-reliance is indispensable. The Select home office takes the stand that it has furnished its branch managers the tools and instruments necessary to the pursuit of their business and that they must use them.

"The use of these instruments is left to the men themselves. According to his skill can each one of them carve his and the company's success."

Two Win in "America's Answer" Contest

IN the booking contest arranged for the exchange managers and salesmen of the World Film Corporation, by the Division of Films of the Committee on Public Information, for the most intensified booking on "America's Answer," there are two prize winners.

The contest began September 14, 1918, and ended December 31. The exchange managers' prize is awarded to George J. Schaefer of the New York office, the salesmen's prize goes to Ben S. Morgenroth, also of the New York office. H. E. Friedman of the New York office ran Mr. Morgenroth a close second.

Mr. Schaefer will receive a green gold case, full-jeweled, open-face watch, inscribed with his name and with the words "Managers' Prize, 'America's Answer' Contest, 1918—Division of Films." The prize to Mr. Morgenroth is a solid silver cigarette case similarly inscribed.

The contest provided a prize for the exchange manager of the World Film Corporation securing the highest percentage of contracts, the percentage being based on the number of theatres in his respective territory. The salesmen's prize was to be awarded to the salesmen securing the highest percentage of contracts on the basis of the number of theatres in his territory during a given period.

Although a large number of theatres were closed during this period by reason of the influenza, the managers and salesmen of the World Film Corporation are said to have made a remarkable record in the bookings. In figuring the percentages no allowances were made for closed theatres, the full number of theatres in each territory, whether open or closed, were used in the computations.

Western Photoplays Starts on New Serial

THE producers of "Wolves of Kultur" serial for Pathe are at work on another serial with the tentative title of "The Great Gamble."

Paul Brunet, vice-president and general manager of Pathe Exchanges, Inc., announces that Pathe's great serial campaign for 1919 is now well under way and that the Western Photoplays, Inc., will introduce in "The Great Gamble" a new serial star to the picture public in Anne Luther who will be featured with Charles Hutchison.

Miss Luther, although making her debut as a serial star is not a stranger to picture audiences. She has been starred in many features, including "Moral Suicide," in which she co-starred with the late John Mason, and "Her Moment," of which she was the individual star.

Mr. Joseph A. Golden, president of the Western Photoplays, Inc., who has written and will direct the new serial, believes that in Miss Luther he has a great big discovery for the serial field. She is described as a screen beauty of the first water, a Titian blonde; swims, boxes, drives her own car and dares her director to figure out a camera stunt which she cannot accomplish.

Hall Caine Novel for Screen

Famous Players-Lasky Purchases
"The Woman Thou Gavest Me,"
Which Will Be Staged by Hugh Ford

SCREEN rights for "The Woman Thou Gavest Me," by Hall Caine, and published in 1913, has been secured, according to announcement, by Jesse L. Lasky, first vice president of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

Hugh Ford, supervising director of Eastern studios for that concern, will stage the production in Hollywood, Cal., and the scenario is by Arthur Edwin Krows.

"The Woman Thou Gavest Me" is heralded as one of the most popular of the many novels by Hall Caine, and is said to be one of the most widely read and discussed books of the day.

It was dramatized by Derwent Hall Caine, the son of the author, and was presented on the stage for the first time at the Shubert theatre in Boston, April 9, 1917, where it finished the season.

"Unpardonable Sin" Has Western Premiere

MANY of the biggest film productions have had their premiere in Los Angeles during the past fifteen months, and were then immediately taken east for a New York City run on Broadway.

The Garson-Neilan ten-reel production of "The Unpardonable Sin," starring Blanche Sweet, has its premiere also on the West Coast, and the Cinema theatre at Los Angeles starts its run on this production February 3.

Announcements are promised shortly which will designate just what New York theatre will house the eastern premiere. The story is by Major Rupert Hughes and is considered to be very widely known to the American public.

W. H. Rudolph, eastern personal representative of Harry Garson, stated that Messrs. Garson and Neilan had made a picture that will appeal to the finest emotions of all kinds of people everywhere.

"There are no wild battle scenes in 'The Prominent members of the cast were Edmund Breese, who played the part of Daniel O'Niell, Derwent Hall Caine as Martin Conrad, Whitford Kane as Father Donovan, Yorksa as Alma Lier, and Mary Taliaferro as Mary O'Niell.

The book and the play tell the story of Mary O'Niell, from her wedding day on through her married life with a dissolute lord, in which her tortures and sacrifices have been most graphically painted.

Her love for Martin Conrad is beautifully brought out in the theme of the story, and contributes materially to the strength and power of the plot.

It is declared to be one of the most powerful stories written by the British writer and dramatist, and that it lends itself well for motion picture presentation is believed by the many who are familiar with the story.

Mr. Ford has taken with him to California his technical staff, including Arthur Krows, scenario writer; Joseph Boyle, assistant director, and Billy Marshall, cameraman.

"Unpardonable Sin," said Mr. Rudolph. "And there is no picturization of blood-curdling atrocities.

"This production is merely a new treatment of a subject that has been of keen human interest ever since modern civilization came into being—a subject that was discussed and was close to the heart of every father and mother and every son and daughter scores of years before some person tossed a lighted match into the over-dried tinder of European politics and set the world ablaze.

"The clinching argument as to the actual worth of 'The Unpardonable Sin' came when the production was shown even before entirely completed, and brought an offer for an outright sale of $50,000 more than the maximum cost of producing.

"This offer was refused by Mr. Garson because he firmly believes that this will be one of the biggest all around money winners in the history of motion pictures."

Frohman Co. Produces Two-Reel Western

TWO-reel Western dramas every two weeks is a drastic deviation from the established policy of the Frohman Amusement Corporation as pursued by it ever since its inauguration.

William L. Sherrill, president of that corporation, in the statement that he will produce and release one every two weeks, commencing March 1, 1919, to be distributed in all probability on a state right basis, and gave expression concerning the demand and desirability of the two-reel productions which caused him to finally deviate from a policy which committed his company to the making of special feature attractions only.

"It might be of interest to the motion picture industry, whether producers, exchangers or exhibitors, to know the details that entered into my determination to make a series of two-reel Western dramas, largely because it has taken me three months of daily study and investigation before I formed my conclusion," said Mr. Sherrill.

"Now the very basis of motion picture popularity is to be traced to the one and two-reel subjects, this because folks generally find all of the entertainment that they desire in a two-reel attraction and the permanent popularity of motion pictures rests substantially upon the shorter length subjects.

"If a theatre catering to a regular patronage were to advertise 'We do not show productions of less than five reels,' I would venture the belief that such a house would not long survive. If I were running a theatre that made two program changes a week I would devote three days to showing only short reel productions as was successfully demonstrated by S. L. Rothapfel."

Royster and Simril with Atlanta Exchange

Carl de Seay, manager of the Atlanta branch of the Film Clearing House, Inc. through which the Independent Sales Corporation are distributing, announces that he has secured the services of R. M. Simril, formerly manager of the General Film Company's Jacksonville and Atlanta exchanges, and Nat L. Royster, formerly sales manager of Special Features Company Knoxville, Tenn., to assist him in "putting over" Clearing House products. Mr. de Seay reports that business on the first release; "Wanted for Murder," and the series of twelve "10-20-30" features is coming in nicely. He has promised his New York office that Bob Simril and Nat Royster will put over their second special, Lieut. Bert Hall's "A Romance of the Air."

Fred Creswell Advanced

Famous Players-Lasky announced that Fred Creswell has been advanced to the position of branch manager of the Chicago exchange.

Mr. Creswell is no novice in the film business, having been one of the pioneer exhibitors in Indianapolis where he operated two houses, later extending his activities to the management and ownership of a Nashville house.

He then became interested in film distribution and entered upon an active campaign in the State Right field in the South. While engaged in this work he attracted the attention of the Atlanta, Ga., Paramount officials and he was soon induced to join their sales force.

Karger Makes 'Em Start on Time

The clock-like efficiency noticeable around the Metro studios in Hollywood is attributed to Maxwell Karger, director general, in charge of all Metro productions in the West. Recently Director General Karger had signs posted on the Metro stages reading: "Exterior companies must leave studios not later than 8.00 a.m. Interior companies must start shooting not later than 9.00 a.m."

And it is said that when Mr. Karger says 8.00 a.m. he means just that and not 8.01 or 8.02. Mr. Karger says that he is determined to have the studios run on time schedule the same as any other successful business runs.

Next Norma Talmadge Is "The Probation Wife"

"The Probation Wife" is the title of Norma Talmadge's next Select picture.

Having appeared in her last two productions in character roles, in "The Forbidden City" as a Chinese girl, and in "The Heart of Wetona" as an Italian maiden, she is now in the midst of a production which will bring her back to the screen as Norma Talmadge.

"The Probation Wife" is based on a story by Angie Ousley Kepser.

Human Stuff—That's Why!

THERE isn't anyone in pictures quite like HARRY CAREY—simply because he can't be imitated. There are mighty few actors who are so unaffected, so real in every look and move and gesture, so likeable in every whimsical, understandable, human action.

Now you know why his audiences love him. Because they can see him think. Because he's one of them and they're right with him all the time. Because he's human and they understand him.

Let the solemn Law lay its ponderous hand on Harry's shoulder and out comes the old sack of "Bull" and the cigarette papers and you see Harry begin to think. And right away you hear the laughs, the deepchested chuckles of joy begin, too—because they know perfectly well that their old pal Harry will pull some outrageous trick and make his getaway just in time to outwit and outfight the villain and get his girl back again right where she ought to be.

Down on your luck, are you? Go see HARRY CAREY! Is the cold unfeeling world against you? Go see HARRY fight it. In love, poor cuss? Go see how HARRY wins his girl. Harry M. Warner, General Sales Representative

Harry M. Warner, who assisted William Nigh in the production of "The Fighting Roosevelts" and also in the production of "My Four Years in Germany," has been appointed by Frederick L. Collins, producer of "The Fighting Roosevelts," general sales representative for the Roosevelt picture. Mr. Warner's work will supplement the work of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, which organization is distributing the picture.

Those responsible for the success of the production are Leslie Rycroft and B. Behrens, first and second assistant directors to William Nigh; R. Schillinger, cameraman; Assistant Cameraman W. Farina; Chief Technical and Scenic Artist F. Schaefer; scenic artists E. Delansay, P. Purcell, J. Migrath, E. Swart, B. Skacie, J. Ross. The carpenter and studio construction division included J. Metzler, assisted by J. Schoelding, G. Solomon, J. Holgren. Charles Ross was in charge of lighting and electrical devices. A. Blaikie Dick, treasurer of the McClure Productions, Inc., is in personal charge of the business details, with O. J. Nicastro as his representative at the studio and on location, and Emil Brown as purchaser of supplies. Daniel Henderson has charge of the advertising campaign. Miss Claire Wallace Flynn, associate editor of McClure's Magazine, assisted by Charles Wisner Barrell, is in charge of the research department.

Bessie Love Said to Have Made Splendid Debut

Vitagraph reports that "The Dawn of Understanding," Bessie Love's first Vitagraph release, has been accorded a splendid reception all over the big picture circuit.

Bret Harte's prairie romance, "The Judgment of Bolinas Plains," forms the basis for the story of "The Dawn of Understanding," although it is more nearly an adaptation of the stage success, "Sue," in which Annie Russell appeared some years ago.

Griffith's Story Not Divulged

Famous Players-Lasky Gives Reasons Why Details of Plot Are Withheld from Exhibitors and Public

JUST because Famous Players-Lasky considers that the new Griffith production is so extraordinary, as regards the nature of the plot and its climax, mystery surrounds the latest Artcraft, "The Romance of Happy Valley."

For the first time in years the press books issued by that company has no synopsis of the story. The story will, however, be printed immediately that the release date arrives.

"Never before," asserted one of the Paramount-Artcraft executives, "has such situations been presented in motion pictures. The climax of this film conceived by Mr. Griffith, is undoubtedly the greatest situation ever disclosed on the motion picture screen. For real dramatic value this climax has never been approached. Aside from the reason given by Mr. Zukor the construction of the plot is so handled as to get the best results by keeping details of the story an absolute secret."

"When the famous Griffith turns his attention to a simple story, with none of those spectacular effects that have been so notable in his recent productions, it might be supposed that he would find difficulty in discovering therein material for his genius at direction. However, in 'A Romance of Happy Valley,' he has given to the screen something in the nature of a classic, as delightful as a delicate etching, as finished as a mosaic pattern by some eastern craftsman; as exquisite as a miniature by some skilled artisan of the Old World."

Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation now in California, recently viewed an advance print of this production, whereupon he immediately notified his organization to keep the plot of this film a secret. Exhibitors are urged to handle the film in the same manner in presenting it to the public, using the detailed synopsis which will be furnished just prior to their presentation of the picture, for their own information only.

Mr. Zukor's statement to the trade on this matter has been released by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, as follows:

"It is necessary for the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation to withhold until release date the complete synopsis of D. W. Griffith's Artcraft release, 'A Romance of Happy Valley.' The denouement of this extraordinary play is, I believe, a situation entirely new to the drama or stage screen. The privileged few of us who have seen 'A Romance of Happy Valley' believe sincerely that it probably is the tensest scene, the strongest in heart interest that Mr. Griffith ever has done."

"Because of the novelty of this situation, Mr. Griffith naturally is anxious to protect it from any unscrupulous persons who might attempt to take it for their own use before the release of 'A Romance of Happy Valley.'"

Arc Review Is Shown

Arc Review, the new series produced by the American Red Cross, is shown first at the Palace and Rivoli theatres in New York and the Bureau of Pictures, and the premiere subject is entitled "Belgium's Day of Days."

With the termination of the war a changed policy has been adopted by the Bureau of Pictures, which now will adhere to special releases of exclusive entertainment value. With its own cameramen in Europe and Asia at the many centers of current world events, the Bureau of Pictures says it has extraordinary facilities.

John Barleycorn and the Films

Carl Laemmle Sees a Scenario Evolution

ON July 1 the nation becomes dry. Before this war measure is revoked, the new constitutional amendment prohibiting traffic in liquor will go into effect. In other words, the liquor business in the United States has come at last to its end.

Nothing becomes obsolete, even archaic, as rapidly as a custom that has been outlawed. Screen and stage will both be compelled to discard the saloon, the private cellarette, the aristocratic buffet and all other liquor-dispensing institutions and devices, public or private, as incidents in the development of plots for plays or cinemas.

No longer will it be possible for the scenarist or playwright to send his hero for consolation to the cup that cheers. No longer will the plot-maker be able to steel the nerves of his desperate villain by plying him with drink. No longer will dark conspiracies be hatched round the tables of drink emporiums.

John Barleycorn has been a good friend to the writer of plays and scenarios. He has helped them out of many a difficulty.

And now—John Barleycorn is dead. He will serve no more.

A play or a photodrama depending even slightly upon the liquor crutch for scene or incident or motivating or stimulating cause will be, in a few months, passe. The critical, observing it, will immediately label it as a play of yesterday. It will bear a date tag reading, "Prior to July, 1919." It will not be a play or a photodrama of today—of the new today. It will be a production of the past—of a bygone era. It will be what the critics call "historical," in the same class with "costume" plays.

Attention of all Universal scenarists and directors has been called to these facts. Because of them we have already pigeon-holed some good scenarios. It can't be helped. The new day brings its new order and we must labor accordingly. Scenarists who, in the future, submit their products to Universal should likewise bear the facts in mind. The name of John Barleycorn is no longer on the programs.—Carl Laemmle.

Slides Are to Interest Boys in Farm Work

TEN thousand slides, calculated to interest the boys in farm work when displayed upon the screen, were sent to all the Famous Players-Lasky exchanges for distribution to the theatres.

These slides were furnished by David K. Niles, chief of the Motion Picture Section, Division of Information, U. S. Department of Labor, and advertised enrollment week of the United States Boys' Working Reserve, which opened January 20, and in part a campaign to interest the boys of the country to go to work on the farms next summer to help harvest the crops.

The United States Boys' Working Reserve is the branch of the United States Employment Service in charge of mobilization and placement of boys between the ages of sixteen and twenty-one in civilian war work.

Organized under the Department of Labor in April, 1917, the Boys' Working

Reserve has rapidly grown from a small beginning into a substantial factor in the nation's war machinery, performing its share of the heavy task laid upon the Employment Service by the withdrawal of over 3,000,000 soldiers from different lines of production.

Realizing the psychological effect of a military uniform upon the boys' morale, the national director, with the sanction of the United States Army, has approved a regulation khaki uniform of semi-military design, and the coming months will see this official uniform on thousands of boys of high school age throughout the country.

Satisfactory service for a minimum of six weeks on the farm, or ten weeks in industry, is rewarded by a bronze badge, and notable service by a bronze service bar. The valuable assistance which exhibitors can render through their cooperation in this timely project is apparent.

Goldwyn Describes Miss Kennedy's Latest

"Daughter of Mine" is the latest screen vehicle provided for Madge Kennedy by Goldwyn. It was created by Hugo Ballin, the art director.

Madge Kennedy is seen as Rosie Abrazitz, a girl of the tenements, imaginative, appealing and very much given to idealizing people and things. At one stage of the story she reads a manuscript written by her poet-lover, also of the tenements and visualizes the narrative.

Her highly colored imagination embellishes his conventional descriptions into something of which he never dreamed. She becomes his heroine with all the airs and graces of Rosie's impossible feminine ideal.

The other characters in the story within the story become the people Rosie knows best—her venerable, orthodox father, the janitor and the proprietor of the ice cream parlor she frequents.

Transposed to the hectic atmosphere of the imaginary story, they retain all the characteristics of the simple people they really are. Thus each actor plays a dual role.

Faire Binney for Leads

John Barrymore, in his newest Paramount picture, "Here Comes the Bride," released January 19, has as leading woman, Faire Binney.

She is reported to have made a very creditable impersonation in "Sporting Life," the Paramount-Artcraft Special produced by Tourneur, and this is said to be responsible for her present engagement.

To Have Trade Showing

A trade showing of "Made in America" is scheduled and the date and place will be announced by the Hodkinson Corporation which will handle this eight-episode picture through Pathe exchanges. It was produced by Ashley Miller with Government co-operation.

"The Drifters" Goes Big Says C. E. Moore

"The Drifters" broke all house records at the Lyric theatre in Pittsburgh, according to Carlos E. Moore, Hodgkinson representative there. This is the Hampton starring J. Warren Kerrigan.

"The first day the receipts were twenty per cent higher than any previous Friday, and on Saturday not only broke the Saturday record, but smashed all records for one or two days," says Mr. Moore.

"On Saturday afternoon the lobby, sidewalk and street was blocked from 4:30 until after 8 o'clock and two policemen were in attendance."

Mr. Mason, General Manager for the Harry Davis Enterprise Company, owners of the Lyric theatre, is reported to have stated that if box office receipts are any criticism, Warren Kerrigan will not only be one of the most popular of male stars, but will set a new attendance record.

Says "Les Miserables" Creates New Records

Fox Film Corporation declares that not a single print of "Les Miserables" has been idle since its release a year ago, and that this is truly a record.

William Fox believes that some film productions, like some books, are destined to live year after year, and still hold the interest. And he believes that this production filmed from Victor Hugo's book, is one of the film productions that are destined to be played year after year for a long time to come and that "Les Miserables" in the film will always be in demand.

With William Farnum as the star and Frank Lloyd directing, this Fox production was first shown as a special attraction at the Lyric theatre in New York, and has since been shown at leading theatres throughout the country. Fox officials call particular attention to the long runs reported in the various cities for "Les Miserables."

Day Dreams Shattered

As "Primrose" in "Day Dreams," a Goldwyn picture, Madge Kennedy has her day dream of Fairyland shattered by a coat of mail.

The story by Cosmo Hamilton shows that she was adamant to the entreaties of a wealthy merchant to become his wife, and a fairy knight was impersonated by a young man to dispel her dreams. The dream is shattered, but she marries the knight.

Japanese Players Appear

In "Bonds of Honor," Sessue Hayakawa's production distributed by Exhibitors' Mutual, six Japanese players, ranging in age from a diminutive youngster of five to a gray-bearded patriarch of sixty-five, make up the majority of the cast.

Toyo Fugita and M. Foshida, both native Japanese of tried theatrical experience, present the roles of two aged noblemen of the flower islands.

Novel Publicity at New Haven

Poli's Theatre Breaks House Record with "The One Woman," and Police Required to Handle Crowds

Constance Talmadge Is Starred by Select in "Romance and Arabella"

AUGMENTED by a novel publicity stunt, Select's Special, "The One Woman," is declared to have broken the house record at Poli's Palace theatre, described as the largest photoplay house in New Haven. The police had to be called in to preserve order, it is said.

That "The One Woman" achieved this record was due largely to the splendid co-operation shown by the local newspapers, the Palace management, the producers of the picture and the distributors, Select Pictures Corporation.

For two weeks prior to the showing of this photodrama, advertisements and news notes appeared announcing the coming of the Select Special.

To heighten public interest, a woman dressed in black visited department stores, big hotels and other public places; to any one who addressed her and said "Mastercraft," the name of the company which produced this picture, she gave an order redeemable for ten dollars in cash.

It was inevitable, of course, that ninety per cent of the women who appeared in black gowns were hailed and given the password, and within a few days the whole town was agog over "The One Woman."

Interest was kept up by the fortunate individuals who had spoken to the right "One Woman" and received the reward and spread the news among their friends.

When the picture came to the Palace, the mysterious "One Woman" sat in the audience for several hours daily, and it is stated that thousands came to the various showings, afternoons and evenings, to try their luck at meeting her, and also to satisfy their curiosity and interest in the picture itself.

Fundamentally, "The One Woman" is said to have succeeded so enviably not alone through this novel publicity, but also because of its own merit as a photoplay. It was written by Thomas Dixon, who won earlier screen laurels with "The Birth of a Nation," directed by Reginald Barker, and with a cast including Lawson Butt, Clara Williams, Herschel Mayall, Adda Gleason, Thurston Hall, little Ben Alexander and others.

"The City of Comrades" Bought by Goldwyn

BASIL KING'S serial story, "The City of Comrades," just recently concluded in the Saturday Evening Post, has been purchased by Samuel Goldwyn and will be a starring production for Tom Moore.

Mr. Goldwyn feels he has reason to be proud of his acquisition of this story by the author of a previous Goldwyn production, "The Spreading Dawn," in which Jane Cowl starred. That also was a Saturday Evening Post story.

The motion picture rights to "The City of Comrades" is said to have been acquired in the face of lively competitive bidding from half a dozen of the larger producers.

The action is laid largely in New York, from which the story takes its name, and this probably will necessitate a trip to the metropolis from the coast by Tom Moore early in the spring for the photographing of important exterior scenes.

The story gives the Goldwyn star the most humanly sympathetic role he has had. As Frank Melbury, scapegrace son of wealthy parents, he is the central figure in a love story woven with the intense and imaginative skill that is Basil King's and as unlike a hackneyed motion picture plot as it is possible for a story to be.

Frank Melbury has been banished from home by a father who can stand no more of his indiscretions, induced largely by a too great fondness for drink. He comes to New York from his home in Canada to pursue his profession of architecture and is provided by a friend with a letter of introduction to a New York business man. Down almost to the depths, Melbury resolves to forget the letter and instead to rob the home of the man who might help him.

How he finally redeems himself and wins the right girl is familiar to all readers of the story.

Famous Players-Lasky Signs Gloria Swanson

Gloria Swanson, who is seen in Cecil De Mille's late Artcraft special, "Don't Change Your Husband," has been placed under a two-year contract by Famous Players-Lasky, and will appear exclusively in important roles in Paramount and Artcraft productions. Miss Swanson has the role of Leila Porter in "Don't Change Your Husband."

An Enlarged Policy for Metro

At Annual Election of Officers and Directors Metro Pictures Definitely Decides on Production Policy

WHEN Metro stockholders met they elected the following directors: Richard A. Rowland, Joseph W. Engel, H. J. Cohen, Charles K. Stern, David Stone- man, E. H. Hulsey, James B. Clark, Joseph H. Tooker, James D. Rhodes. * Of this number Mr. Tooker of New York and Mr. Rhodes of Pittsburgh are new members, the others being re-elections.

An arrangement was made for an amendment to the By-Laws allowing an increase in the directorate of three members, and anticipating this amendment Mr. Maxwell Karger, W. E. Atkinson and J. Robert Rubin were selected.

An enlarged policy, involving bigger and better productions, was definitely decided upon at the annual meeting of the Metro Pictures Corporation held at the Hotel Astor. Definite announcement of the policy in its entirety will not be forthcoming until a subsequent meeting which is to be held to perfect certain details of the adopted plan.

Immediately after the election of the directors the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Richard A. Howland; vice-presidents, James B. Clark and E. H. Hulsey; treasurer, Joseph W. Engel; assistant treasurer, Charles K. Stern; secretary, J. Robert Rubin.

"Metro's year, just finished, has been the greatest in the organization, founded four years ago," said Mr. Rowland. "The success, both artistic and financial, of the big special productions, together with Metro's understanding of present market conditions, brought about the decision for the enlarged and specialized policy of releases. The plan adopted is a farsighted one, depending upon the merit of each production as an entertainment.

"It is sufficiently elastic to admit of the supplying the public through the exhibitors with productions that have timeliness and which will satisfy popular taste for the best in screen entertainment.

"During the year Metro has moved all of its production activities to the Pacific Coast, and has just completed the erection of one of the finest studios in the world. This studio is equipped for the largest productions and is now in active operation at Hollywood, Cal.

"Metro has several surprises in store for the motion picture industry during the coming year, and before the beginning of its new season in September these surprises will be announced to the trade."

Following the formal meeting of the directors several of the coming releases were screened and the results of perfecting the producing organization were manifest.

World's "Kinogram" Gets Many Bookings

World Pictures reports that the bigger and also the smaller theatres throughout the country are following the example set by the Rialto and Rivoli theatres in New York City and Clune's auditorium in Los Angeles, and are fairly swamping World Pictures with applications for the showing of "Kinograms," the new twice-a-week news reel which begins publication on February 1.

These applications are said to be coming in the form of telegrams and letters, and George R. Meeker, general sales manager of World Pictures, declares that in all his extensive motion picture experience a news reel has never before started out under such auspicious circumstances and with such great numbers of advance bookings.

It is considered that the personnel of the executive staff of "Kinograms," consisting of Charles Urban, Ray L. Hall and Terry Ramsaye carries weight and that the exhibitors, realizing what these men have done with news weeklies in the past, will expect it to be excelled in "Kinograms" in the future.

Taliaferro in Sixth of Twelve Two-Reelers

Although Ruth Chatterton was originally chosen to play the lead in "A Bit of Love," she was called West, and Mabel Taliaferro will be the featured player in the sixth of a series of twelve two-reel photoplays produced by the Stage Women's War Relief and distributed through Universal exchanges.

Prominent in support of Miss Taliaferro are Robert Edeson, whose previous screen work is known, Tim Murphy and Capt. William Harrigan.

Prints of the first five features to be completed by the Stage Women's War Relief are now being made at the Universal laboratories at Fort Lee, N. J., and the date for the releasing of the initial film-play will be announced shortly, it is believed.

Boston Exhibitor Praises "Stolen Orders"

WILLIAM A. BRADY, producer of "Stolen Orders" is in receipt of a communication from Thomas D. Soriero, Manager of the Park theatre in Boston, eulogizing that production.

"I am writing a few lines to tell you that I am playing one of your pictures this week, "Stolen Orders," and the public is certainly taking to it," writes Mr. Soriero.

"We have opened this week to packed houses, and if I had my way, I would break the policy of the house and run it the second week, but the Stockholders object to breaking the policy.

"On the strength of record-breaking business, I immediately booked it into all our theatres, that would be four runs in Boston, one week after the other.

"I took advantage of your name, William A. Brady, in my ads, and it certainly means a lot to the public, and everybody playing this picture should do the same. The audiences were much impressed with the production, and I am sure the mouth to mouth advertising after the first performance did a lot to make a record-breaking attendance.

"Make some more pictures like that for the public and the exhibitors are hungry for them."

The record now being rolled up by the Brady picture in Boston, is said to be the more notable in that "Stolen Orders" last Summer enjoyed a successful engagement at the Shubert theatre in that city.

Select Helps Loew in His Anniversary

Select Pictures Corporation co-operated in making Marcus Loew's anniversary week a success at his new Broadway theatre, Brooklyn.

What is described as one of the pleasant occurrences during the week of celebration was the receipt of Mr. Loew of congratulatory telegrams from Select stars, Norma Talmadge, Clara Kimball Young, Constance Talmadge and Alice Brady.

Marshal Haig Shown

The reception given Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, Great Britain's military leader, upon his arrival in England from the battlefields, is one of the main features of Screen Telegram, Number 3, released through Universal exchanges.

This release also shows Mrs. Vincent Astor, who has just returned from France where she served as a Y. W. C. A. canteen worker, at work in an American "victory hut" serving sailors and soldiers.

Artcraft Cites Cast

Artcraft calls special attention to the cast in Cecil De Mille's "Don't Change Your Husband," released January 26.

Elliott Dexter and Gloria Swanson head the cast. The picture was adapted by Jeanie May Pherson from David Graham Phillips' novel. Other members of the cast include: Sylvia Ashton, who played the slovenly wife in "Old Wives for New," and Julia Faye.

Elsa Lopez Engaged by Norma Talmadge

At the Norma Talmadge studio in New York City, Elsa Lopez is now in charge of the Research Department for all Talmadge productions.

For the last three years Miss Lopez has been associated with David Griffith as a title writer and research worker in California. Joseph Schenck, president of the Norma Talmadge Pictures Corporation, believes that at present producers do not, as a rule, lay enough stress on careful accuracy of detail and artistic nicety.

In the four to six weeks which constitute the average amount of time allotted to the making of a picture, the Director is said to have about all he can do to concentrate on the story and guide the players in their interpretation of the parts.

It is considered an enormous help to him to have someone always at call who could spend hours at the library looking up the correct costume for 1673, the particular ceremonies of a particular Indian tribe's war dance, the type of minuet danced at the Court of Louis XVI, etc.

Dennison at Detroit

The Detroit exchange of General Film Company is now in charge of D. Lee Dennison. Mr. Dennison was manager of General's Pittsburgh branch six months ago but resigned to handle the branch of another concern.

Mr. Dennison is a graduate of the legitimate theatrical business, having been for seven years engaged as company or as house manager for various enterprises. He was two years a manager of Harry Davis houses in Pittsburgh and thus became acquainted with motion picture affairs, after which he handled Quo Vadis road shows.

He was several years with Paramount at Pittsburgh, Detroit, and Chicago and later for the same company supervised the central states branches.

Jack Pickford Appears as Small Town Boy

In the first picture to be released by Jack Pickford for First National distribution, he appears as a small town boy in what is described as a thoroughly human story of a country town.

Mr. Pickford is now starring in his own company and the new picture is from an original story written especially for him by his director, James Kirkwood.

As the boy "Johnny Spivins" who is said to be "in wrong" from start to finish, Jack Pickford is declared to have an ideal part.

Says "Lightning Raider" Booked 100 Per Cent.

Max Westbbe, handling the Jersey territory for the New York Pathe Exchange, has booked the Pathe serial, "The Lightning Raider," featuring Pearl White, in all of the six theatres operating in West Hoboken. He claims the honor of selling the first 100 per cent town on this serial.

Tribute to "Under Four Flags"

S. Barrett McCormick, Manager of Circle at Indianapolis, Emphasized Box Office Value After Armistice

Generals Foch and Pershing at Headquarters in France, in "Under Four Flags," Distributed by U. S. Division of Films Through World

WHAT is described by World Pictures as a most glowing tribute to "Under Four Flags," the victory picture of the Division of Films, Committee on Public Information, was made by S. Barrett McCormick, managing director of the Circle theatre at Indianapolis.

Mr. McCormick states that he played the picture three weeks after the armistice was signed, when it was naturally supposed that there would be a lull in the enthusiasm and interest of war activities, but that his week with the picture convinced him that pictures dealing with the actual achievements of American arms has not been lessened by the cessation of hostilities.

He says further that "Under Four Flags" played at the Circle to the largest attendance of any of the numerous war pictures he has presented.

"It appears to me that 'Under Four Flags' presents to the exhibitor of America one of the best attractions available today," says Mr. McCormick. "It is the Victory Picture of America and her Allies. This was the manner in which we exploited the same. Our advertising was planned to appeal to the public as the victors in the great contest and that 'Under Four Flags' was the undying record of the glorious achievements of America in the war for democracy."

With the American troops returning to their homes the interest in the picture is expected to be heightened. Exhibitors who have not yet shown the picture are said to be very much interested in the comments made by S. F. Rothappel, Harry Crandall, Frank Buhler, Harold B. Franklin and other prominent exhibitors who have shown it to their patrons.

Comment and approval from some of the most prominent exhibitors in America is declared to bear out the claims of Carl Laemmle, Adolphe Osso, David Wark Griffith and other persons of prominence in the industry that the war picture is not through, but has just begun.

The Division of Films reports that while "America's Answer," the second official war picture, hung up a remarkable record for bookings all over the country, owing to its timely appeal and the untiring efforts of the World Film branch managers and salesmen, "Under Four Flags" will far eclipse that record because of the high merits of the attraction, its unusual popularity with the public and its proven box-office value.

Universal Installs Schmidt at Cleveland

ARTHUR A. SCHMIDT has been selected to succeed Joseph I. Schnitzer as district manager for Universal exchanges in the Central States territory. Incidentally with the appointment of Mr. Schmidt comes the announcement of a change in the divisional territories throughout the Central section.

Mr. Schmidt will make his headquarters at Cleveland will have under his jurisdiction the Detroit, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Pittsburgh and Buffalo exchanges. Indianapolis, which was previously in this division, has been placed in the St. Louis, Kansas City and Oklahoma City division, for which no district manager has as yet been selected.

In selecting Mr. Schmidt to fill the position left by Mr. Schnitzer to assume the general sales managership for Universal, the organization has secured one of the country's oldest film exchange executives and salesmen. Mr. Schmidt began his film work in 1907 when he opened the P. A. Powers exchange at Rochester, N. Y. Later he opened the Buffalo and Cleveland offices for Mr. Powers. When the Indianapolis and Cincinnati Powers exchanges were opened some time later, Mr. Schmidt became general manager of all Powers offices and held this position until Universal took over the exchanges about sixteen months ago. During the past year Mr. Schmidt has been active in another line of endeavor, but when approached regarding an appointment to succeed Mr. Schnitzer he was happy to return to the film field.

Sidney J. Goldman has been appointed divisional manager for the mid-Western exchanges. He will have his headquarters at Chicago and will have under his supervision the Chicago, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Des Moines and Omaha exchanges. Like Mr. Schmidt, Mr. Goldman is also a veteran film salesman, his experience having been acquired on the Pacific Coast. For over a year Mr. Goldman has been stationed at Chicago and he is well known to exhibitors in the territory he has now been given control of.

Gus A. Metzger, who was recently appointed district manager of Universal exchanges in the Rocky Mountain territory, is now visiting the offices under his charge.

Alice Joyce Is Starred in Vitagraph's Big Production from the Kleine Drama, "The Lion and the Mouse"

Big Campaign Book on Serial

William Duncan's New Vitagraph Serial, "The Man of Might," Augmented by Intense Exploitation Material

WHAT is declared by Vitagraph to be the most elaborate campaign book ever issued for a motion picture product will be sent out in connection with the new William Duncan serial, "The Man of Might."

Vitagraph's serial campaign and plan books are said to have proved of inestimable aid to exhibitors in the exploitation of Vitagraph serials, and this unit of service has been receiving increasing care as each new serial has been released.

"The Man of Might" plan book, it is stated, will be by far the best all around exhibitor's help that has so far been issued.

Of the serial itself, Vitagraph no longer makes any mystery, for a considerable part of it is now being screened for exhibitors the country over, and it is reported as receiving the most remarkable substantial endorsement that exhibitors can give it. When these endorsements take the form of bookings in theatres that have never before run serials, when exhibitors are giving "The Man of Might" longer runs than the best of serials have heretofore enjoyed, the merit of the serial itself must be putting it over, says Vitagraph.

The realism of the dangers and thrills in Vitagraph's serials, said to be reaching their very high water mark in "The Man of Might," are responsible for the enormous popularity that has come to the chapter-plays produced by the Vitagraph Company. Thrills and stunts are done in the open, before the very eyes of the spectators, it is declared, and without the aid of ingenious devices that look thrilling enough on the screen but that involve no risk to the performer.

An instance of the way Vitagraph serial makers go after realism in their work is said to have been evidenced when Duncan was called upon to blow off the top of a gigantic boulder for a scene in the seventh episode of "The Man of Might."

The camera man at the Vitagraph West Coast studio declared that it would be suicide for any man to attempt to grind a camera within five hundred yards of the rock, and Mr. Duncan had about decided to give up the idea when W. S. Smith, manager of the studio, came to his rescue and directed the placing of the dynamite so that what is described as one of the most thrilling scenes ever recorded by the camera was taken at a distance of less than eighty feet.

Mr. Smith is an expert on high explosives, and the thoroughness of his knowledge of their effect on rock formations was so convincingly demonstrated that the confidence of the camera forces, shaken by recent experiences, has been fully recovered, and now they are all willing to place their cameras wherever Mr. Smith says it is safe.

"The Heart of Humanity" for Loew Theatres

The Marcus Loew theatres will play Allen Holubar's ten-reel Jewel production starring Dorothy Phillips, at all his New York and Brooklyn theatres and has contracted for first run at all his theatres outside those cities, according to reports from the Universal offices.

January 26 marked the opening of "The Heart of Humanity" showings at the Loew Palace theatre at Washington, D. C., Loew's Hippodrome theatre at Baltimore and at the Stillman theatre at Cleveland, Ohio.

These theatres will present the film in the same big way it was offered at the New York Broadway theatre, it is said. Each showing will be backed by a special prepared advertising and newspaper publicity campaign.

Titles for Diando-Pathe Serial Announced

Diando announces the complete list of titles for its new serial, "The Terror of the Range," co-starring Betty Compson and George Larkin, released on February 2 by Pathe. The list of titles for the seven episodes follows: 1, Prowlers of the Night; 2, The Hidden Chart; 3, The Chasm of Fear; 4, The Midnight Raid; 5, A Threat from the Past; 6, Tangled Tales; 7, Run to Earth.

The first episode of "The Terror of the Range" opens the serial by showing how the "Terror," a mysterious marauder who always wears the head of a wolf when leading his gang on their midnight raids, has terrorized the entire Sierra country.

Tearle New Leading Man for Talmadge

Conway Tearle has been engaged as leading man for Norma Talmadge and will be seen opposite her in a screen version of Eugene O'Neale's stage play, "Nancy Lee," production of which will be commenced immediately at the Norma Talmadge Studio. Robert Z. Leonard will direct in the absence of Chet Withey, who is confined to the hospital. Thomas Meighan, who has appeared opposite Miss Talmadge in her last three or four productions, has left for the Coast, where he will be featured in a series of productions. Mr. Meighan's last picture with Miss Talmadge is "The Probation Wife," to be released following "The Heart of Wetona."

Conway Tearle is favorably known on both stage and screen. His last work on the screen was opposite Anita Stewart in "Virtuous Wives." He has supported on the speaking stage, Sir Charles Wyndham, Ellen Terry, Ethel Barrymore, Grace George, Billie Burke and others.

"Diana Ardway" Finished

Herbert Blache, who directed Viola Dana under the personal supervision of Maxwell Karger, announces that her latest starring vehicle for Metro release is now completed.

"Diana Ardway," from the novel by Van Zo Post, was scenarioized by John H. Collins. Miss Dana has an exceptionally poignant role as a modern Diana of the chase—the chase being in pursuit of a bachelor playwright, who eventually succumbs to Diana's artfully artless wiles.

"Bonds of Honor"

"Bonds of Honor," Sessue Hayakawa's latest production for release on the Exhibitors' Mutual program, tells a story built upon the clash of German intrigue and the heroism of a Japanese. Sessue Hayakawa presents the dual role of twin brothers, one wayward and the other courageous and trustworthy.

Darmond at Work on First Hampton Production

A new star has been added to the forces of the Jesse D. Hampton Studios in the person of Grace Darmond, late of Vitagraph Company, and Mr. Hampton is himself personally directing her initial production, which is titled "What Every Woman Wants." The story has many unique features, and contains a decidedly original plot from the pen of William Parker, who is also credited for the continuity. Jesse Hampton has selected what may be justly termed an all star cast, to support this new star in her initial production, and the list contains such well-known names as Wilfred Lucas, Barbara Tennant, Charles Clary, Bertram Grassby, Claire DuBrey, Forest Stanley, Mary Warren and others. Each player named above has been featured in West Coast made photoplays and the cast may be said to be made up of leading men and women. Other activities at the Jesse Hampton Studios include production work on a subject starring William Desmond for Robertson-Cole.

The J. Warren Kerrigan Company has not resumed activities as Kerrigan has not sufficiently recovered from his recent indisposition from influenza and pneumonia.

Fight Scenes "Punch" of Lincoln's First

E. K. Lincoln's first S-L production, which Messrs. Sawyer and Lubin announces nearing completion, will be distinguished by what the producers term "the biggest fight scenes ever filmed." Ralph Ince is directing. Grace Darling and Clara Joel are in chief support of Mr. Lincoln. The principal fight scene occurs between the star and Bob Cummings. The action occurs in the home of Cummings. In order to secure the proper realistic effect, Mr. Ince decided to have no rehearsals of these particular scenes, but let it go through with the admonition to the two players "to make a real rough-and-tumble fight of it." The title of Lincoln's first S-L production and other details will be announced later.

Klutho Studios Active

In Jacksonville, Fla., the Klutho Studio are reported as showing signs of great activity. A seventy horsepower dynamo supplies the current for the Cooper-Hewitt.

Besides the work accomplished by the Town and Country Film Company, under the supervision of Mr. Montgomery Flagg, in the inner studio, many scenes were made on locations in and about the city under the genial Florida sun.

Barber Shop Comedy

Vitagraph's "Big V" special comedy release for February 3 shows Montgomery and Rock employed in a tonsorial parlor, one as a barber and the other as a boot-black. Gilbert Pratt directed this two-reeler and it is titled "Love and Lather." From the Vitagraph offices comes the statement that these Big V comedies have leaped rapidly into popularity.

Betty Compson and George Larkin are co-starred in the new Diando serial, "The Terror of the Range," released through Pathe

Insures Theatres Against Loss

First National Exchange at Louisville
Guarantees to Protect Exhibitors
Against Inferior Quality

BIG Feature Rights Corporation exchange, controlling the First National Exhibitors' Circuit franchise for that territory, adopted a policy January 1 to guarantee exhibitors against any financial loss they may suffer through productions booked from that exchange, according to Colonel Fred Levy, president.

The only exceptions for which the Big Feature Rights Corporation does not assume full responsibility for exhibitor losses are those incurred as the result of strikes, epidemics or similar catastrophes.

Apart from the fact that this guarantee is revolutionary in effect and that it places the exchange in the position of a guarantor of profits to every account on its books, the action is declared to be epochal.

The policy was announced by Colonel Levy in a letter to Lee Goldberg, secretary and treasurer of the corporation. The letter reads:

"I have just looked over the expert's analysis of our business and to say that I am delighted with the progress it shows is putting it mildly.

"It is particularly gratifying to note that we have on our books practically every responsible picture house in the territory in which we operate. And now that this has been accomplished, I would like to see our relation with these people cemented by making them feel that there is no better concern in the country with which to do business, that it is our policy to see that they make money on everything they get from us.

"To put it into more definite terms—if anyone should get a 'loser' from us we will make the loss good on the next picture, excepting where the loss is due to a strike, an epidemic or a catastrophe of any sort. I think it would be well for you to devise a slogan conveying this idea, something similar to 'You must make money on our features or we won't do business with you.'"

The policy was announced by Mr. Goldberg in the form of a letter to every exhibitor in Kentucky and Tennessee.

"It brought the quickest and biggest response I have ever known on a piece of mail matter," he said. "Exhibitor comments on it vary in form and construction, but I have not yet received a reply in which the writer has not voiced the basic thought that Colonel Levy's guarantee is the first real, definite form of standardization they have met in the motion picture business."

New Screen Magazine Is Released

According to Jack Cohn, editor of the weekly, Universal's "New Screen Magazine" makes its debut February 1.

After obtaining views of newspaper and magazine editor and a study of motion picture audiences in various parts of the country, taking several months, the six divisions of the New Screen Magazine have been decided upon. After February 1 each release will comprise six divisions: Educational, industrial, woman's section, vaudeville, comedy, oddities.

The best pictures dealing with interesting topics will be put into each division each week.

Leonard Directs Talmadge

Robert Z. Leonard directs Norma Talmadge in her new picture. This is during the absence of Sidney A. Franklin, who has gone to California to direct one picture for Mary Pickford, by permission of Joseph M. Schenck, and because of the illness of Chester Withey, who has had a severe attack of Spanish influenza.

An Appreciation of "Don't Change Your Husband"

By John C. Flinn

Director of Publicity and Advertising, Famous Players-Lasky Corporation

THE life of the motion picture publicity and advertising man is one film production after another. His day opens in the projection room; it ends in sympathetic discussion of other men's labor. Yet there are events in the scintillating routine of his work—a special production arrived, the debut of a new star, the opportunity to concur in some studio opinion concerning an unusual scene or play.

DURING the four years in which the writer has viewed, in advance of exhibitors and public, the productions on which the structure of modern motion picture exhibiting is founded and securely rests, the opportunity to see a Cecil B. De Mille production has ever stirred unusually keen anticipation.

Through the months like silent heralds of cinema progress the De Mille productions have won increasing favor and tribute from a public that takes its entertainment discriminately.

"The Cheat" revealed a power of emotion that no screen recital of similar length had ever before awakened.

"The Little American" crystallized in a day a latent military patriotism in our country that all the words of a thousand orators had left stilled and chilled.

"Joan the Woman" stands unique above mediocrity of shadow stories as an epoch making recital of the second most beautiful life story in world's history.

DE MILLE has given to the motion picture a variety of concepts as broad as the human understanding. One hesitates to define in what phase of the art of screen expression he excels. His versatility is astounding.

As in the man, simplicity and warm sympathy are outstanding characteristics, it is perhaps but rational to join the chorus of a million admirers of his productions that reflects these priceless attributes.

Co-mingling with sharp humor, a satire pointed but kindly, De Mille's "Old Wives for New" met instant public acclaim. The consummate progress of its detail indicated the craftsman, the suspense of its telling revealed the artist. The sum total of its effect proclaimed the Showman.

And now another De Mille production, "Don't Change Your Husband," the theme of which is original with Jeanie Macpherson, is on the threshold of exhibition.

It means but little to the exhibitors of De Mille's Artcraft Series that "Don't Change Your Husband" delighted and charmed the writer. It means much, however, if he who has been sincerely and enthusiastically sympathetic to the career Cecil B. De Mille, regards it as another great step to supremacy.

Special Service Section on

“Don't Change Your Husband”

WHEN you book a picture as a “special attraction” you should not be content that it is such and expect the shekels to roll into the box office without doing anything additional on your own part. “A special attraction” should mean to you that you are going out and try to get new patrons, that you are going to try to popularize your theatre, that you are going to set a new pace for the presentation of pictures in your city.

With “Don't Change Your Husband” you have that opportunity, for you are given so many elements on which to build your appeal. In the first place there is the title which will make everyone stop and wonder what it is all about and give you a chance to bring your selling argument home. It suggests the divorce element without your having to go into that, and we wouldn't do so directly, because you are likely to sacrifice some of the intensely human appeal of this picture.

Then you have the name of Cecil B. De Mille, who has produced some of the greatest of recent successes. Have you ever felt that certain productions that you have played have left behind them, after the end of the run, more advertising from the comment of those who saw the picture than you were able to get through your own exploitation during its run? And, of course, in such a case you wish that you could bring it back again to get those additional people into your theatre. The name of Cecil DeMille is mighty apt to have that effect with this one and we would advise you to use his name prominently in the exploitation. His recent Artcraft-Paramount

Specials have been “The Squaw Man,” “Till I Come Back to You,” “We Can't Have Everything” and “The Whispering Chorus.”

ANOTHER, and a mighty strong reason, is that you have something distinctly “different” here. There never was another screen story like this one. As a matter of fact, after your advance exploitation you need not worry about the selling arguments, for when you see this picture the first time you will find enough striking lines in the film to sell the picture for the remainder of your run. If you get the print in advance of the showing we would advise you to have your operator run it off once at the ordinary speed so that you can enjoy the picture for yourself, and then to run it over again, stopping him, so that you may copy the titles that will best appeal to your patrons.

But let's take a look at the story together, James Porter, the “glue king,” is a successful business man, and the sort of a fellow who likes comfort at the expense of his personal appearance and of his wife. He is one of the sort of fellows who does his day's work and then comes home and forgets that the wife is looking for something more than mere domestic life. He gives her a wonderful home, provides the material things that she desires, but the evidences of his affection are lacking. The first break comes on the wedding anniversary. He is detained at the office by business and arrives on the scene late. And when he comes to dinner where the bishop, Mrs. Huckney and the latter's Don Juan nephew, Schuyler van Sutphen are the guests, he orders onions.

FROM the moment of his introduction the nephew has started in skillfully to make love to the wife, his plan being to put his niceties in contrast with the careless habits of the husband. There is a clever scene at the dinner when the wife has arranged figures representing a bride and groom and other guests before each plate. The husband has so far forgotten the anniversary that he sweeps these aside in his eagerness to eat his onions.

And then after the dinner the husband still forgets until the bishop is about to present the wife with an anniversary present. Then he awakes to the moment and appropriates the gift and gives it to his wife. But in the meantime the nephew has obtained the bishop's card that was to go with it and later in the evening presents it to the wife.

DeMille's artistry pictures the habits of the husband with clever touches. He smokes cigars and drops ashes on the floor, goes to bed with them in his mouth, unties his tie and unbuttons his collar when he sits down to read and then interests himself in the evening paper to the neglect of his wife. Even after she has found that he had forgotten the anniversary and had used the bishop's present she is ready to forgive him, but when she goes to his room she finds him asleep with a cigar in his mouth and half undressed. She is unable to awake him; her disgust grows.

In the meantime the nephew has shown

his interest with flowers and finally, when there comes an invitation from Mrs. Huckney to pay her a visit she resolves to do so that her husband may awake from his thoughtlessness by her absence. But from the moment of her arrival Van Sutphen begins to make love to her and the climax comes on the day of the masked ball when he portrays to her what pleasures he would give her were he her "king."

RIGHT here there is afforded opportunity for the wonderful allegorical episodes of which DeMille is capable. Now do not get the idea for the moment that the play itself is an allegory, and these are mere incidents, but they supply some of the most wonderful scenes that the camera has ever recorded. He tells her that he would bring her pleasure and riches and love. For the first of these there is a splendid scene showing Glirio Swanson, who has the role of the wife, swinging over a huge pool with a background of flowers and dozens of girls in attendance. There is a sensuous touch here and in the scenes that follow. They will offend no one, but they will create a lot of talk for the picture itself. The second scene shows the wife as a queen with the slaves bearing chests of jewels to her. The third is a daring love scene that will create no end of talk.

But to interrupt the love-making, and the wife has not yielded, husband arrives on the scene. On the way we have a shot of him on the diner, and he is eating onions. And so, when he arrives and the odor is on his breath when he starts to kiss her, she revolts. That night is the ball, and there is a clever touch added when Van Sutphen costumes the husband as a "fool." There is a "Romeo and Juliet" scene between the wife and the other man and this the husband overhears from below, but he thinks that the woman is some other than his wife. He cuts a tassel from the gown of the woman and thinks that he has a good joke on Van Sutphen in discovering the

AS A TEASER

A Command Always Attracts More Attention Than Anything

IF teaser campaigns count in your house, you have a chance here with a single word to attract a lot of attention. Simply mail to your patrons a card bearing the word, "Don't."

Better still if you can follow this up a few days later with an added word, "Don't Change." This plan could be well adapted to the newspaper advertising by using the word "Don't" the week before the picture is to be offered and then following it with the added word and then coming along with the full title of the picture.

We would not recommend the idea of mailing "Don't Change Your Husband" in the form of a card to your patrons. This "You" stuff has been worked to death and it generally gives offense rather than attracting.

one he loves. But he little realizes that at the moment his wife is in the arms of the Don Juan.

Then the husband, in his selfishness, leaves the party and goes to bed. The wife has not yet been won by the other man, but when she goes to her husband and finds him asleep, half clothed, with the stump of a cigar in his mouth, the revulsion is complete.

THE next day she tells him of her decision and in his real love for her he agrees to give her up. Then we find her the wife of Van Sutphen. But almost immediately she finds that he is worse than her husband. His lover-like ways have disappeared. He spends her money and even gets her jewels from her, presumably for his business enterprises. But the awakening comes after she has given him the ring that cemented the marriage with her first husband to raise the money for a "business venture." While she is at the modistes she selects a piece of goods and calls her husband on the phone to learn whether she may spend that amount. He refuses, but barely has she hung up the receiver than "Toodles" Thomas comes into the shop and calls the same number, and is allowed to go the limit on Van Sutphen's credit. There is a striking scene in which the wife makes her identity known.

Now we are shown the regeneration of Porter. A title tells us:

"At thirty a man suspects that he is a fool. At forty he knows it—and reforms."

We are shown contrasting scenes of the old and new husbands, Van Sutphen, the Don Juan abroad and the brute at home, Porter now the man with the care to his personal appearance and his habits. Then comes Christmas time. Van Sutphen is entertaining his latest favorite while the wife is doing her Christmas shopping. We have a shot of her with bundles in her arms trying to push her way into a crowded street car, and just at that moment Porter comes along in his limousine and invites her to ride home. She accepts. When she gets home she has a message that her husband is detained by business, but we have other shots showing him and "Toodles" in a private dining room. The wife invites Porter to come for dinner with her and Mrs. Huckney.

SHE has already seen a great difference in the husband. He is well dressed and his manner is perfect. Instead of his tie being disarranged, it is perfect and he rejects onions at the dinner. The warmth of the old love already shows itself rising, since the moment that he brings her her favorite flowers—orchids. He is a man

Whole Exploitation of This One Should Be "Special"

WHEN we start out to exploit this picture we have to go outside the beaten paths if we would do something unusual—with an unusual production.

Here's a place where we believe that the lighter element should predominate, though the production is far from a comedy. The big element to bring out is the HUMAN one. Whether you are running a theatre in "our leading city" or in the smallest country village the sort of picture that appeals to the people is the sort that "gets close to 'em." Here's a chance to do it.

If you have played "Old Wives for New" we would strongly recommend the advertisement that has been prepared by Famous Players-Lasky and which is available at all exchanges. You know best the comment that the showing of this offering has caused with your people. They, if they are the ordinary people, thought it rather shocking that a husband should leave his wife because she had grown fat, ugly and careless. But they will want to see the other side of the story and here you have it.

THIS picture should be advertised well in advance of the first presentation. It should be the same sort of advertising that you would expect from a big society event. You know that when the annual ball of the Whoosit Club is to be given the women are wondering among themselves what sort of a gown they will wear and how their friends and their rivals will appear. You can get the same sort of anticipation out of this picture.

There are mighty striking stills furnished with this one. DeMille always makes good ones, but this time he has done better than usual and the display of these in your theatre in advance of the showing will cause them to come to the box office early.

Now let's start out in advance with a series of displays illustrated with one of the stills showing Porter and his wife together, and then following with these lines:

"Why is it that a man who will run no risks in his business will run every risk with his wife?"

As we have suggested before, do not get the "You" element into this story. It is likely to offend. The impersonal works just as well and it arouses curiosity.

And here is another one:

"There's a dangerous alchemy in a beautiful woman and a blind husband. He thinks that once the ceremony is said that she is his and that there is nothing more to be done. But she has the longing that all women have to be loved and admired, even to be flattered and when she sees him with his feet on the table and the paper before him, when she sees him falling to sleep with a stale cigar in his mouth, and when his kisses are offered with onions on his breath—and when then comes along a man who seems all that a man should be—what is she to do?"

"But the title of this picture is 'Don't Change Your Husband.' The screen of the Rialto tells why."

GET this line, and all of these have been taken from the titles in the pictures and adapted:

"The mind had a thousand eyes, the heart but one. We get a lot of thoughts in our lifetime, but the most of us get but one love. And it's mighty good, when once we think we have lost it, that it comes back to us. You will agree that the young wife had a mighty good excuse for leaving the man who didn't care enough to care for himself, but you will find that it generally pays to look for the heart before you go following around "soul language." Leila Porter found this out—just in time."

Here's still another:

"Old wood to burn,
"Old wines to drink,
"Old friends to trust."

"She cast off a husband because he ate onions, because he went to sleep with a cigar in his mouth, because he forgot the wedding anniversary. And she married the man whose niceties so contrasted. But she learned. And when she came back to him she must have said:

"'Old friends to trust.'"

Purposely we haven't given you any hard and fast rule to follow in exploiting this picture. Use every bit of the space that you have to talk about it. Follow the McCormick style of advertising and use a striking cut and then set the matter in agate, if you have to do so.

Keep the adjectives out, but aside from that you can go to this to the limit. It doesn't matter about the people to whom you have to appeal. Everyone married or thinking about getting married or against getting married.

"Don't Change Your Husband"—use that in the biggest type that you have in the shop. And don't forget Cecil B. De Mille.

YOU should list the cast in your advertising, for this is one of the usual Demille excellence. For instance Theodore Roberts has but a small bit to contribute, but that eminent actor was used to make the cast exactly right.

Gloria Swanson will delight your audiences and she will cause more comment than most actresses have done. Elliott Dexter, always a favorite, has one of the chief roles; Lew Cody is the "other man."

Writer Spills Beans of Production

Another writer has undertaken to enlighten the benighted public about the inside workings of a studio. This time it is Homer Croy, from Missouri, and his book, "How Motion Pictures Are Made," is expected to find a wide circle of readers in the "show-me" State, according to a statement made this week by the publishers. Just why the one State is mentioned is not made known in the announcement.

How the wheels go round in a studio is the subject of Mr. Croy's new book. It undertakes to explain things every film fan has wondered about—things which the producers have always held sacred and guarded closely to keep the fans from knowing too much about production work. In the publishers' announcement the main selling point of the book as set forth reads: "It is interesting to note that according to Mr. Croy a good many of those tears the poor girl sheds are glycerine. Before she faces the camera in the big scenes she gets her glycerine bottle. Then she is ready for her heart strings to be torn."

Blue and Barthelmess as Leading Men

Monte Blue and Richard Barthelmess have been engaged as leading men according to announcement from Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

Mr. Barthelmess has been given a contract by D. W. Griffith for one year to play leading roles and has been loaned temporarily to the Dorothy Gish Company as leading man for the Paramount production, "Boots." He has appeared in a number of Herbert Brenon productions and also supported Marguerite Clark in three pictures.

Monte Blue was noted for his Indian characterizations in his early screen career and his most recent screen appearances were in "Till I Come Back to You" and "Pettigrew's Girl," supporting Ethel Clayton.

Christies in Two Reels

C. H. Christie, business manager of Christie Comedy Company, announces that a two-reel comedy special will be released once a month in addition to the regular one-a-week single-reel comedy.

This decision was reached after he had made a six weeks' stay in the East visiting all exchanges that handle the Christie product and secured contracts for the new once-a-month two-reel special. He promises a strong cast for the two-reelers.

Al. E. Christie, now directing the one-reel Christie comedies, will find time to personally produce the Christie Specials.

Priscilla Dean's Latest

Priscilla Dean's latest Universal is titled "The Rose of the Dark," and Tod Brown-ing directed it.

The story is from "The Gutter Rose" and Miss Dean is seen as a pickpocket who reforms for the sake of a man who shielded her, returning some precious pearls which she had taken from the man's fiancée.

About New Pictures

A series of pen and ink illustrations by Hy Mayer, well known because of his art contributions to Life, Puck, Judge and numerous other magazines, as well as because of his screen cartoons, is one of the features of Universal's publicity campaign on "The Red Glove," the latest Marie Walcamp serial, scheduled for release February 17.

Supporting Jack Pickford in his first starring production for the First National Exhibitors Circuit, are a number of players who have already won distinction on the screen. Marguerite de la Motte, who played with Douglas Fairbanks in "Arizona," occupies the chief supporting role.

The Louis Bannison smile is irresistible, but never more so than in his second Betzwood production, "Sandy Burke of the U-Bar-U." Critics the country over sang the praises of his cheery good humor when the Bannison smile brought him great fame as the star of "Johnny, Get Your Gun."

Lieutenant Lawrence Grossmith, musical comedy star, plays an important part in J. Stuart Blackton's current production, "A House Divided," which was adapted from Ruth Boucicault's widely read novel, "The Substance of His House."

Robert Harron has shed a uniform and donned denim for the role of the cross-roads swain in D. W. Griffith's third Artcraft production, "A Romance of Happy Valley," which was released January 26.

Vitagraph's two-reel "Big V" Special Comedy released on January 27 is called "Football and Frauds," and features "Slim" Summerville and Maude Emery.

Thurston Hall is seen as Carmel Myers' leading man in "Who Will Marry Me?" the star's latest Universal production, released January 27. Paul Powell has directed the film play from Fred Myton's adaptation of a story by Sonya Levien.

Charles Ray, having completed his baseball picture, has started work on still another Paramount picture, in which the young Thomas H. Ince star will have probably the most unusual role of his career. Jerome Storm is directing under the supervision of Mr. Ince.

For the first time since he quit the Broadway stage to become a screen star for Metro, Bert Lytell is wearing a mustache. Lytell has started work in a new picture at the Metro studios in Hollywood under the direction of John Ince. It is called "The Blind Man's Eyes."

The Official War Review No. 31, released by Pathe on January 26, in dramatic interest that holds the spectator spellbound probably has not been equaled by any issue of the entire series.

Louis Stern will be prominent in the cast of "Break the News to Mother," the latest Julius Steger production, having completed his third successive picture with Pauline Frederick in "The Woman on the Index," Harold Lockwood in "The Great Romance," and Norma Talmadge in "Her Only Way."

In her new Artcraft photoplay, "His Parisian Wife," written by Eve Unsell and directed by Emile Chautard, Elsie Ferguson has another role of the society type in which she excels. This picture was scheduled for release January 19.

The latest Tom Terriss-Alice Joyce-Vitagraph production, "The Lion and the Mouse," has just been completed and will be released as a special picture by Vitagraph. Some of the most magnificent settings are promised.

Beautiful farmerettes share the laurels with "Smiling Bill" Parsons in "The Big Idea," his newest Capitol Comedy. Twenty of them take part—a score of California's hundreds of young women who put aside typewriters and adding machines when their brothers entered the service of Uncle Sam.

"Made in America" is a series of eight one-reel episodes released one each week and produced by Ashley Miller with the co-operation of the Government and published and distributed by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation through Pathe Exchange, Inc.

Miss Young Plans New Organization

It was announced from Los Angeles on January 21 that Clara Kimball Young has made plans for the formation of a new company as yet unnamed, and at present expects to begin production of "The Eyes of Youth" early in February, according to announcement made this week by Harry Garson, who is business manager of the actress' affairs. While in the east Miss Young negotiated for the screen rights of this Al Woods play, and it will be her first release through an organization other than the Select. At this time Mr. Carson said no statement can be made as to who will market this picture.

"Miss Young is going to continue to make pictures at the rate of four each year, and as stated for the protection of the exhibitors throughout the country, she will not have additional releases other than 'Cheating Cheaters' through the Select Pictures Exchanges," Mr. Carson said. "Just where we will produce is not known now, several studios are being considered, and it is probable Miss Young will build her own plant."

First National Declares No Truth in Rumors

Robert Lieber, president, and Harry Schwalbe, secretary, First National Exhibitors' Circuit, have wired as follows to the twenty-six franchise holders and managers of their distributing exchanges:

"To dispel any rumors that may have emanated from this city, your board of directors wish to assure you that there has been no amalgamation as far as First National is concerned.

"Your board of directors hold that our organization shall continue undisturbed in its efforts for the encouragement of greater and better pictures to be distributed independently of each other and be sold strictly on their individual merits according to box office value.

"Charlie Chaplin, Mary Pickford, Norma Talmadge, Anita Stewart and Jack Pickford contracts will be carried out. Contracts with others have been made. Definite announcements covering these contracts will be sent to you through the regular channels later."

Harry Crandall Enthuses on "Cheating Cheaters"

According to reports from Select offices, Harry M. Crandall, proprietor of the Metropolitan and Knickerbocker theatres at Washington, D. C., is very enthusiastic about the latest Clara Kimball Young picture, "Cheating Cheaters."

Select's bulletin states that Manager Crandall had already booked "Cheating Cheaters" for his Knickerbocker theatre, but upon viewing the print at the Washington Exchange, his enthusiasm was so great that he decided to cancel another attraction that he had booked for his new Metropolitan theatre and show "Cheating Cheaters" simultaneously in both of his Capital theatres.

Coming Program Offerings

Eleven Famous Players-Lasky's

February Schedule Calls for An Artcraft Picture, One Paramount-Artcraft Special and Nine Paramounts

WALTER E. GREENE, managing director of Famous Players-Lasky distribution, announces that for the month of February there will be eleven productions released. An Artcraft picture, one Paramount-Artcraft Special, and nine Paramount productions are scheduled.

All three releases of February 2 are Ince-supervised productions. The first of these, an Artcraft picture from the studio of William S. Hart and directed by the star himself, is "Breed of Men," the story being by J. G. Hawks.

"Hard Boiled," with Dorothy Dalton as the star, is released the same day. This is a story by John Lynch, scenarioized by R. Cecil Smith, and Victor Schertzinger was the director.

The third release is "Happy Though Married," by Lois and Arthur Zellner, in which Enid Bennett is starred.

Marguerite Clark in the role of Lovey Mary in "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," a Paramount picture based on the novel by Alice Hegan Rice and the dramatization by Anne Crawford Flexner, is scheduled for release February 9.

Mme. Lina Cavalieri reappears on the Paramount schedule the same date in "The Two Brides," which Margaret Turnbull scenarioized from a story by Alicia Ramsey.

On February 9 also comes another Thomas H. Ince Paramount picture, Charles Ray in "The Girl Dodger."

Thomas H. Ince's production of Louis Joseph Vance's sensational story, "The False Faces," is scheduled for release February 16, as a Paramount-Artcraft Special, with Henry B. Walthall in the role of "The Lone Wolf."

The same date marks the release of Dorothy Gish's third Paramount picture, "Boots," from the story by Martha Pittman and scenario by M. M. Stearns. The third release for this date is Vivian Martin in "You Never Saw Such a Girl."

"Maggie Pepper," a version of Charles Klein's play, with Ethel Clayton in the stellar role, is a Paramount release of February 23.

Another Paramount production, also based on a stage play, is released the same day. It is "Paid in Full," Eugene Walter's story, and Pauline Frederick has the stellar role. Charles Whittaker wrote the scenario and Emile Chautard was the director.

The third release on this date is "The Winning Girl," starring Shirley Mason, supported by Niles Welch.

Grace Darmond, in "What Every Woman Wants," released through Exhibitors' Mutual

"The Girl Question" with Corinne Griffith

"The Girl Question," featuring Corinne Griffith, will be Vitagraph's March 3 release. Joseph Franklin Poland wrote the story, and the picture was made under the direction of Kenneth Webb. The story reveals the folly of man's attempt to understand women.

Miss Griffith has the role of Erminie Foster, inclined toward literature, but who is obliged to work as a model, for financial reasons. She meets a wealthy novelist who is writing a satire on "women," and believing Erminie to be of a flippant nature, makes a bargain with her to come to his home and serve as an inspiration or model for his story. Miss Griffith is said to wear a costly wardrobe in this production.

World Has Five for February

Besides the McClure Special, Four Features, Star Gordon, Love, Blackwell, Greeley and Elvidge

"WHAT SHALL WE DO WITH HIM?" is a McClure special released by World Pictures on February 10. This picture has been hooked up with a nation-wide voting contest conducted by McClure's Magazine and other mediums and gives to showmen the opportunity of a lifetime for a clean-up.

First in the list of the month's release comes Montague Love on February 3 in "The Rough Neck." The story and continuity were written by Harry O. Hoyt and directed by Oscar Apfel. There is but one woman in the cast—Barbara Castleton. Albert Hart, Frank Mayo and other favorites have important roles. "The Rough Neck" is a tense story of a forceful man who uses his vast power for good instead of evil.

"Mandarin's Gold" is the title of the strikingly unusual picture in which Kitty Gordon is starred and which will be released on February 10. Philip Lonergan wrote the story. The scenario was prepared by Lucien Hubbard. Oscar Apfel directed the production. Irving Cummings appears in "Mandarin's Gold" as Miss Gordon's leading man and others prominent in the cast include Warner Oland, Tony Merlo and George MacQuarrie. It is declared to be one of the best pictures Miss Gordon has ever made.

Carlyle Blackwell and Evelyn Greeley are co-starred again in one of their own especial brands of pictures, which have become so exceedingly popular, in "Courage for Two" which is scheduled for release on February 17. The story and continuity for this picture were both written by Hamilton Smith. Dell Henderson directed the production. Mr. Blackwell has a unique double exposure role in this picture. The action throughout is fast.

The final picture scheduled for release in February is "The Moral Deadline," starring June Elvidge. Frank Mayo with Miss Elvidge as her leading man. The story is by Earle Mitchell and the continuity by Lucien Hubbard. Travers Vale directed the production. Muriel Ostriche and Ned Burton are prominent in the cast. "The Moral Deadline" presents Miss Elvidge in another appealing characterization of the sort that the motion picture fans so thoroughly enjoy.

Hoyt, St. Louis Manager

E. H. Hoyt, known in the Middle West as "Honest Poy" Hoyt, has assumed managerial charge of the St. Louis branch of the Capitol Film Company, it is announced.

Aerial Stunts in Official War Review

The Official War Review No. 31, released January 26th, by the Committee on Public Information through Pathe, shows activities of the American Division of Aeronautics in France. A number of American aces are shown receiving decorations for distinguished service in the air. The Distinguished Service Cross is conferred on Major William Thaw, Captain James A. Meissner and Captain Eddie V. Rickenbacker. A Hun aviator is shown in an attack on an American observation balloon. Cameramen of the American Signal Corps are shown close up to the fighting getting their film for history. Americans are shown capturing an important highway under terrific shell fire. President Wilson is shown in Paris.

Pathe Has "Alsace-Lorraine" French Picture

An official French war film, photographed by the Cinematographic Division of the French Army, and titled "Alsace Lorraine," will be released by Pathe February 2. The settings for the big scene of the picture, described by Etienne D. Marsac, popular French writer, as one of the most remarkable ever filmed, are the cities of Mulhouse, Metz, Colmar and Strasbourg. The picture is in four reels.

"The Red Glove" Is New Universal Serial

Joe Brandt, who is in charge of serial production and distribution and who is now at Universal City supervising the production of the Marie Walcamp vehicle, the James J. Corbett serial and the new Eddie Polo serial, wired Universal offices that five episodes of "The Red Glove" had been completed and that over half of the entire 36 reels of the film story would be completed before release date, February 17.

"The Red Glove" is said to provide Miss Walcamp with her best serial story, and in addition to calling upon the actress' during the part of "Billie," demands of her the best of her unusual dramatic talents.

Henry Otto Finishes May Allison Picture

May Allison's latest Metro picture, "The Island of Intrigue," is in its third week of production at Metro's Hollywood studio, under the direction of Henry Otto, and supervision of Maxwell Karger. The company will leave this week for a cruise on the Pacific, where the final exterior scenes will be taken. "The Island of Intrigue" was written by Isabel Ostrander and adapted by A. S. Le Vino and June Mathis. It will follow "Peggy Does Her Darnest" on the Metro program.

"Fortune's Child" Next Leslie-Vitagraph

"Fortune's Child" is the February 10 release by Vitagraph, starring Gladys Leslie.

Joseph Gleason directed the production, which was picturized from a story written by Lawrence McCloskey, and Vitagraph has surrounded Miss Leslie with a supporting cast including Miriam Miles, Danton Vane, Kempton Greene, Stanley Walpole, Francis Mann, Jessie Stevens, Fred Smith and Shirley Brule.

Phil Sanford has the role of the slacker in "Made in America," distributed by Hodkinson, Inc.

"Made in America" Released February 16

ON Sunday, February 16, the "Made in America" series of eight episodes, will be released. This series deals exclusively in the training of America's Army both here and abroad, and the results of that training.

The Hodkinson Corporation publishes and distributes the series through Pathe Exchange, Inc. "Made in America" was produced and directed by Ashley Miller with the co-operation of the United States Government through the Division of Films. It is announced as authoritative in every detail.

The scenes of this human and unique series were taken in one of the largest cantonments in the United States with over 40,000 American doughboys in the production. Every phase of military training, from the day the draftee is inducted into the service of his country until he is going "over the top" in France, is said to be shown minutely.

In fact, the Hodkinson officials state that "Made in America" is so thorough that a print of it will be preserved by the Government in the archives of the War Department.

The series is declared to hold interest from the very start as the story revolves around three American boys who are called to the colors by the system which gave America one of the most powerful armies the world has ever witnessed.

The "Y" man, K. of C. secretary, Salvation Army lass, Jewish Welfare Worker, and the Red Cross nurses are shown on and off duty in this series. President Wilson plays a part in "Made in America," as does Secretary of War Baker and Provost Marshal General Crowder, according to the announcements.

Scenes taken in France, aboard transports, in the trenches, and in the Argonne are said to help make it an unusual vehicle. Those who make up the cast are Richard Turner, Edward Burns, Philip Sanford, Brian Darley, Lillian Lawrence, Florida Kingsley and Emily Marceau. John L. McCutcheon assisted Mr. Miller in producing the picture.

Rothacker Outdoor Releases Are Described

EXHIBITORS MUTUAL describes some of the Rothacker Outdoor Pictures in recent announcements. The three latest releases are "Doing the Dells," "Bulls and Bears," and "Geezers and Geysers."

"Doing the Dells," released January 26, is described as a trip through the beautiful "dells of Wisconsin," a favorite resort for vacationists. "Romance Cliff," "High Rock," "Witches Gulch," "Fat Folks Misery," and "The Horner's Nest," are some of the peculiar freaks of nature shown in this picture.

"Bulls and Bears" brings the flat-dwellers of the cities out into the primitive wonder place of the West, Yellowstone National Park, and shows him wild-animal life at close range. How the bear and buffalo amuse themselves when left undisturbed in their native haunts, is the subject of this picture.

The greatest herd of bison in the country is in Yellowstone National Park, which comprises practically every specimen of this almost extinct monarch of the plains. "Bulls and Bears" was released January 19.

Yellowstone National Park contains more geysers-hot-water volcanoes than all the rest of the world combined. A trip to this geyser-land is pictured in "Geezers and Geysers," released January 12. Spouting hundreds of feet into the air at regular intervals, these geysers are the most spectacular feature of the Park, and tourists—otherwise "Geezers"—marvel at the sight.

The cameraman is said to have caught the geysers in action in some "shots" of marvelous beauty and shows the "Geezers" boiling eggs in the crater of "Old Faithful," one of the favorite outdoor sports of tourists. "The Terraces," formed from mineral deposits of the geysers, are also shown, including the famous "Jupiter Terrace" and "Minerva Terrace."

Release Dates Advanced for "Great Romance"

METRO has set forward the release dates on Screen Classic's "The Great Romance," starring Harold Lockwood, and it is now ready for immediate distribution, according to a statement just issued by Richard A. Rowland, president of Metro, who says that this action is taken by request of hundreds of exhibitors who are anxious to play the production.

One exhibitor is said to have written to the booking headquarters of Metro, in New York:

"I myself want the picture first as a matter of business. I know it's going to go over big. But then I want it too in self defense. I'm going to have a young riot on my hands if I don't come through and flash 'The Great Romance' on the screen pretty soon."

Lockwood plays the part of Rupert Danza. There has been a mystery surrounding the early life of Danza, about which he knew nothing until he had reached his last year in college. Then appeared on the scene a man of foreign appearance, who urged the young student to come at once with him to Rugaria, a small kingdom in the interior of Europe.

The cast for this piece is of the typical order found in Screen Classics, Inc., productions. Ruby de Remer plays the part of Althea. Supporting those in the principal parts are Joseph Granby, Frank Currier, Helen Lindroth, Franklyn Hanna and Clare Grenville.

The picture has been directed by Henry Otto, who screened many previous Metro productions co-starring Harold Lockwood and May Allison, and who now is on the coast directing Miss Allison, a star in her own right.

Edwin Carewe was the managing director of the picture, and Rudolph Bergquist the photographer. The story is an original script by Finis Fox.

The Independent Field

Rivoli Film Company Gets Tolstoi Stories

IT was announced this week that S. Fox, of the Rivoli Film Producing Company, 1400 Broadway, New York, has made arrangements to film a series of pictures based on the works of Count Tolstoi, the Russian. The contract also insures the appearance of the Count in the productions, it is said.

Coincident with this feature is also the engagement of A. J. Bloome, who will direct the entire series of these pictures. Mr. Bloome has completed direction and editing of "The Question" for the Rivoli Corp. with James K. Hackett, Irving Cummings and Ormi Hawley.

Mr. Bloome's first identification with the film industry was in the introduction of "Satan," released in 1912.

It was said to be due to Mr. Bloome's efforts that the picture received the credit due it, as at that period motion pictures were looked upon by some as an inferior medium, and the fact that it received its premier presentation at the Hippodrome theatre, followed by a four months' run at the Broadway theatre and showings at other Shubert houses even makes it all the more remarkable. Following this it commanded bookings in theatres throughout the world, and was received with highest critical comments, one of special significance being an editorial by Dr. Frank Crane in the Evening Globe.

A. J. Bloome will also be remembered for his productions with the Savoia Film Company of America which include, "The Last Curtain Call," "Hearts of Flame,"

A. J. Bloome, Director General of the Rivoli Film Producing Company

"Shattered Souls," "The Fool and the Dancer," and "The Era of a Nation" which at that time was purchased by William Fox of Fox Film fame.

A studio has been secured for the Tolstoi productions, work has already been started on the first script, and several well-known artists are under consideration.

Closes Contract With Mexican Distributor

ROBERT W. PRIEST, president of The Film Market, Inc., which has an established exchange organization, operating throughout the world, announces that he has closed a long-term contract with Sres. Gonzalo Varela, S. en C., one of the leading film importers and exchangemen in Mexico, for the Precision Machine Company's Simplex Projectors and parts. The contract calls for Simplex Service Stations to be established throughout the three republics and to be maintained with the same efficiency as those maintained here.

Sres. Gonzalo Varela S. en C., recently purchased the entire holdings of the Universal Film Manufacturing Co. in Mexico and the Central American Republics, and appointed Mr. Priest their sole and exclusive American representative. Contracts have been closed with the Inter-Ocean Film Corporation for their Paralta Plays and other important productions offered by them for Mexico and the adjacent Republic controlled by Sres. Varela. Contracts have also been signed with Universal calling for their Jewel Productions, Specials and other selected features, together with all of the serials bearing the "U" imprint.

Mr. Priest also announces that J. G. Wainwright, managing director of Cine-productions, Ltd., London, while in this country last month, purchased several special features through The Film Market, Inc., among which were "The Call of the Desert," starring Enid Markey, for the entire world outside of the United States and Canada, and "What Becomes of the Children," starring Corra Beach and Walter Shumway, for the United Kingdom.

The Mayfair Film Corporation has purchased the entire world rights, exclusive of the United States and Canada, to W. N. Selig's "The Still Alarm," through The Film Market, Inc., and later sold the French and Switzerland rights to "Persuasive Peggy," starring Peggy Hyland, to M. Monat of Paris.

Since acquiring the sales rights to the Gathem Film Corporation's miniature features, "The Star Spangled Banner," "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean," "The Battle Cry of Freedom," and "The Girl I Left Behind Me," and "Home, Sweet Home," with one-reel release every fourth week to follow, The Film Market, Inc., has disposed of every territory throughout the United States and has pending negotiations for the rest of the world.

Vine, New England Manager for United

Frank Vine has been appointed general manager of the New England branch of the United Picture Theatres of America, Inc., it is announced by the United offices. Mr. Vine is one of the most prominent figures in the motion picture life of the New England States. For twelve years he has been active in various capacities in and around Boston.

Mr. Vine had his first managerial experience in the employ of Frank J. Howard, one of the leading bookers of motion pictures in New England in 1906. He held this position for two and a half years after which he went as manager of the W. E. Greene Film Exchange which he filled for over a year. He was appointed to take the management of the Kleine branch of the General Film Company with whom he stayed for more than two years. He then opened new offices in Pittsburgh for the Eclectic, but returned to Boston after a year to take the management of the Pathe Boston branch.

The World Film next engaged him for their local branch, and when the Hearst interests organized branches for their International he took the management of the Boston offices after which he went for six months to Buffalo for organization work. Goldwyn obtained his services as manager of their sales force in Boston, and later he went to the Fox Film as salesman and Boston manager.

Sawyer "Back in Harness" as Producer

S-L Productions' first special feature, starring E. K. Lincoln, will be completed this week, it is announced by Messrs. Sawyer and Lubin. With the completion of this production, Arthur H. Sawyer will celebrate his re-entrance into the producing field. Mr. Sawyer, since his executive connections with the original Kinemacolor Company, has been a keen observer of photoplay production and the result of his wide experience is said to be reflected in S-L Productions' first special starring E. K. Lincoln. During the filming of this production Mr. Sawyer acted as supervisor of productions, assisted by Herbert Lubin. Ralph Ince directed.

Wettstein Gets Serial for Wisconsin

Ralph A. Wettstein, Mid-West Distributing Company, Milwaukee, announces that he has closed a contract with Octagon Films, Inc., for the distributing rights in the State of Wisconsin, for B. A. Rolfe's serial production, starring Houdini, "The Master Mystery."

Other companies holding territory on the serial are Rolfe Productions of Northern New Jersey, booking northern New Jersey; Rolfe Productions of Dallas, handling Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas; Rolfe Productions of Atlanta, controlling North and South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi and Tennessee; Arrow Film Exchange, Philadelphia, eastern Pennsylvania and northern New Jersey; Rolfe Productions of Pittsburgh, western Pennsylvania and West Virginia; Rolfe Productions of New England, handling the New England States; Effano Film Exchange, New York City and State; Celebrated Players' Film Corporation, Illinois and Indiana; Exhibitors' Film Exchange, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and District of Columbia; Mid-West Distributing Co., Wisconsin; Regal Films, Ltd., Canada; Export and Import Film Co., foreign rights. Foreign sales negotiated for foreign territories by Export and Import Film Co. are for Australia, Philippines, Porto Rico, Cuba, San Domingo, the United Kingdom, Scandinavia and Argentine.

Censor Board Passes Two Without Eliminations

L. S. Card, general sales manager of the Independent Sales Corporation, received word from the Philadelphia Branch Manager for Independent that the Pennsylvania State Board of Censors had passed without eliminations Harry Rapf's production, "Wanted for Murder" and Julius Steger's special, "Her Mistake."

"Wanted for Murder," starring Elaine Hammerstein, is being booked as a special by Independent, of which Frank Hall is president, and is distributed through the Film Clearing House, which has eighteen units throughout the United States. "Her Mistake," in which Evelyn Nesbit and her son Russell are featured, is released on Independent's 10-20-30 plan.

Grace Darling, with E. K. Lincoln in S-L Productions

H. B. Warner has signed with Jesse Hampton for a series for Robertson-Cole. Marcus A. Beeman has been appointed London manager for the organization. Grace Darmond will appear in a new Exhibitors Mutual release

Farnum's First United, Gets the Results

FROM sections of the country where United Picture Theatres of America, Inc., first release, starring Dustin Farnum, "The Light of the Western Stars," the New York office is receiving daily messages of praise for this offering. Congratulatory messages are reported from California, Missouri, New Jersey and Wisconsin.

J. W. Di Stasio, Liberty theatre, Sacramento, wired:

"Premiere showing in the State of California of the United release at the Liberty theatre, Sacramento, 'The Light of Western Stars' a knockout, turning people away at advanced prices since seven-thirty. Dustin Farnum reaches the height of his screen career in this picture, is unanimous verdict of the public."

H. E. Ellison, Rialto theatre, Denver, followed with the following wire:

"Opened Sunday, Rialto, to capacity on 'Light of Western Stars,' standing room only from two P. M. until ten o'clock, closing time. Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday equalled best records of house. We are mopping up on United First picture."

Richards and Flynn, of the Twelfth Street theatre, Kansas City, Mo., wired like congratulations. Messrs. Miller Brothers, proprietors of the New California-Alhambra theatre in Los Angeles, announced elaborate advertising plans in exploitation of the formal presentation of the first United release, while the Broadway theatre, San Diego, California, instituted an elaborate campaign on "The Light of Western Stars."

Sherry Closes for Edgar Lewis Productions

WILLIAM L. SHERRY, president of Parex Film Corporation, and head of the Sherry Service, has signed with the Edgar Lewis Productions Company for Edgar Lewis' productions, "Calibre .38" and "The Troop Train." Mr. Sherry announces that "Calibre .38" will be released on February 17, and "The Troop Train" two weeks later.

"Calibre .38" is a screen version of Roy Middleton's story of the same title. Mitchell Lewis is the star. Hedda Vena and Lola Pauzdrovna are in the principal supporting roles. It tells a story of the adventurous spirit of the frontier. It is in six reels and directed by Edgar Lewis.

"The Troop Train" is adapted from William Hamilton Osborne's Saturday Evening Post story. Glen White and Josephine Hill are in the featured roles. It is in six reels and tells the story of a New York policeman's adventures with a gang of spies. Edgar Lewis directed. Mr. Lewis will be remembered for his production of "The Barrier," "The Bar Sinister," "The Nigger" and others.

"Wild Honey," Doris Kenyon's latest release on the Sherry Service, is reported a big success. Otto Letterer, proprietor of Colonial theatre, Brooklyn, reports that his house was crowded at all performances and that many had to be turned away.

Great City of Extras in First S-L Picture

SAWYER AND LUBIN, sponsors for the S-L Productions, now completing the first of a series of special productions starring E. K. Lincoln, under the direction of Ralph Ince, promises one of the most stupendous and most realistic mob scenes ever filmed when their first production, the title of which has not been announced, but which is nearing completion, is projected on the screen. It is stated that more than 10,000 "extras" appear in one of the mob scenes.

For the filming of this scene, arrangements were made by Messrs. Sayer and Lubin with the employes of one of the largest industrial corporations in the country. Weeks of careful rehearsing are said to have been spent by Director Ince before the final scenes were "shot."

E. K. Lincoln, with Clara Joel and Grace Darling in the principal supporting roles, is the principal character in this scene as well as the others of the productions. It is said that these scenes depict the largest crowd ever assembled before the camera for dramatic action.

Three Added to Capital Exchange Staff

CAPITAL FILM COMPANY, with headquarters in Indianapolis, announces the names of three new additions to its exchange forces. They are F. L. Smith, J. R. Kappleman and A. A. Hixon, all prominent exchangemen and popular in the district to which they have been assigned.

Mr. Smith, formerly manager for the General and Mutual Film Companies, both at Cincinnati and Cleveland, was recently appointed manager of the Indianapolis branch of the Capital Film Company, Inc. He has taken charge of his office, which is situated in the Wimmer Building.

Mr. Kappleman has been appointed to take charge of the Chicago branch and manage the affairs for the Capital Film Company in that city. Mr. Kappleman has a wide acquaintance with the exhibitors in that district. He has established himself in a suite of offices on the fifth floor of the Consumers Building, South State street.

Mr. A. A. Hixon, formerly connected with the Fox and Mutual Companies, in Minneapolis, is in charge of the Minneapolis branch, which is located at 421-424 Loeb Arcade Building. Mr. Hixon is one of the popular Northwest film men.

"The Fighting Roosevelts" Opens at Strand

"THE FIGHTING ROOSEVELTS" opened its first New York run at the Strand theatre Sunday. It was received by a waiting line at the box-office and a most enthusiastic crowded house on the opening day and each day thereafter for the week's run. It is said that the rental price paid by the Strand is the highest ever paid for a showing by this theatre.

Frederick L. Collins, the producer, concluded this arrangement with the Strand after inducements had been offered to him and the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, which is releasing the picture, to have "The Fighting Roosevelts" open on a large circuit. Mr. Collins said that he intends to stick to the original releasing program outlined—direct to the exhibitor.

Colonel Roosevelt was giving close attention to the production up to the last week of his life, and it portrays in a vivid manner the famous Rooseveltian characteristics. Major-General Leonard Wood, who was a close friend of the late Colonel, is shown in the picture, as is Lieutenant Sims, now Admiral Sims.

Prisoners Commend Arrow's Reed Picture

Following the exhibition of Arrow Film Corporation's production, "A Woman's Law," starring Florence Reed, before the members of the Mutual Welfare League at Sing Sing Prison, the producers received the following letter from one of the inmates: "The pictures that you have given us have been so excellent, far exceeding those we receive from other exchanges, that the temptation when we are 'stuck' for a picture is to call on you, because we know we will get a good one."

"Salvation Sue," Current Christie Comedy

Al Christie has just completed "Salvation Sue," the Christie Single Reel Comedy for release early in February. He says that as Salvation Army stories seem to be the vogue he wanted to get in the swim.

The two-reel comedy specials to be released once a month for state rights distribution the same as the single reel once a week comedies are now distributed, are now in work.

"A Man in the Open," February 16

"A Man in the Open," starring Dustin Farnum, will be released by United Picture Theatres of America, Inc., February 16, it is announced by J. A. Berst, its president. This will be the third release by United since its entry into the field of active production, the first being "The Light of Western Stars" and the second "Adele," with Kitty Gordon, both of which were listed in January.

"A Man in the Open" is a picturization of Roger Pocock's novel of the same title, from which Fred Myton made the adaptation. Ernest C. Warde directed. The production was supervised by Robert Brunton. The story deals with the adventures and romance of a lover of the great outdoors. He is first a trapper, then a sailor, then a cowboy and last a ranger. He falls in love with a grand opera singer whom chance has brought in the forest and the wilderness, and marries her, loses her, fights for her and loses her again.

Irene Rich, Claire DuBrae, Hershall Mayall, Lamar Johnstone and Joseph Dowling are prominent in support.

J. Searle Dawley finished taking the last scenes of Doris Kenyon's latest picture, "Twilight," this week at the Biograph studio. Director Dawley is now engaged in cutting and assembling the scenes. The day following the taking of the last scenes Miss Kenyon was taken sick and is reported suffering from a mild attack of influenza.

The story from which the screen version has been made was originally published in the Metropolitan Magazine, under the title, "The Alchemy of Love," and was written by Vingie E. Roe. Louis Joseph Vance made the adaptation. For the exterior scenes Director Dawley took his company to the mountains of North Carolina, where the action of the story is laid.

Houdini, the Handcuff Expert, Star of "The Master Mystery," B. A. Rolfe Production

Alice Calhoun

Abramson Completing "The Echo of Youth"

Ivan Abramson is now completing for the Graphic Film Corporation his latest production, "The Echo of Youth." Director Abramson is supervising the cutting and editing of the picture and announces that he will have it ready for showing next week. The story is based on the conclusion that justice seeks out and punishes all guilty actions, even though they may have been committed years before.

Charles Richman, Leah Baird, Pearl Shepard, who is featured in B. F. Moss's forthcoming release, "Break the News to Mother," and who has been starring in comedies; Marie Shotwell, Peggy Shaner, who appeared recently opposite Eugene O'Brien in a Red Cross picture; Howard Hall, Jack McLean and Philip Van Loan are seen in the principal roles.

Houdini Reported Strong Around Baltimore

"The Master Mystery," B. A. Rolfe's serial starring Houdini, the escape artist, is reported as scoring heavily by A. Bresner, manager of Exhibitors' Film Exchange of Washington, D. C.

Though he has been in the Baltimore field but about one week only, Mr. Dresner reports already secured thirty-seven contracts there for the serial, and that before the city is covered this number will be largely increased.

In Wilmington, Del., the Houdini serial has been booked in the Victoria theatre, the largest in the city, and a house that has never played a serial before.

Ince Completing First Lincoln Special

Ralph Ince is putting the finishing touches on E. K. Lincoln's first starring vehicle on the S-L Productions list of specials, Messrs. Sawyer and Lubin announce. The initial production will be released as a Ralph Ince Film Attraction. Messrs. Sawyer and Lubin promise full details concerning this production within the next two weeks.

Ford Resumes Work After Influenza Scare

FOLLOWING six weeks, during which time the Francis Ford studio in Los Angeles has been closed owing to the influenza epidemic, work on Mr. Ford's serial, "The Silent Mystery," has been resumed, and Mr. Ford, Elsie Van Name, Phil Ford, Harry Elis Dean, business manager of the company, who were ill, have fully recovered and assumed their various roles.

Following the completion of "The Silent Mystery," Mr. Ford will commence work on his new South Sea Island serial, the scenario of which is now being worked into shape by him. Mr. Ford expects to sail for Japan in the interest of this serial about March 15.

During the filming of the completed scenes of "The Silent Mystery," Mr. Ford was obliged to "shoot" a number of episodes with wild animals as the chief features. These scenes, he announces, have been completed. The final episodes of the serial calls for a New York background, with the social life of the metropolis accentuated. For these episodes Mae Gaston, Mr. Ford's leading woman, is said to have spent more than $4,000 on her wardrobe.

Pearl Shepard Featured in Moss Production

Pearl Shepard, the featured member of the cast chosen to interpret B. S. Moss' production, "Break the News to Mother," commenced work this week at the Norma Talmadge Studio, under the direction of Julius Steger. In support of Miss Shepard appears Gertrude Berkley, who portrayed the mother in "War Brides"; William Bailey, Marion Birk, Forrest Robinson, Raymond Bloomer, Joseph Smiley and Franklyn Hanna. This production will mark the re-entry of B. S. Moss in the producing field. "Break the News to Mother" will be a screen version of a story as inspired by the song of that title and will be screened in seven reels.

"A Romance of the Air" Aerial—Not Serial

An aerial production is not a serial picture, although some compositors may make it so in print.

The Carle E. Carleton production, "A Romance of the Air," featuring Lieutenant Bert Hall and Edith Day, is distributed by Film Clearing House system of exchanges through the Independent Sales Corporation.

In recent accounts of this production, "scoring in Boston theatre," the typographical error made it appear that "A Romance of the Air" was a "Serial" whereas it is an "Aerial" production in seven reels.

Wisconsin Buys Houdini

Wisconsin exhibitors will now have an opportunity to book the Houdini serial, "The Master Mystery," produced by B. A. Rolfe and handled by Octagon Films, Inc.

Ralph A. Wettstein, manager of the Midwest Distributing Company, with offices in the Toy Building at Milwaukee, on a recent visit to New York, acquired the Houdini serial rights for Wisconsin.

Special Representative

Isadore Schlank has been appointed special representative of the Capitol Film Company, with offices in Indianapolis. Mr. Schlank will be associated with J. E. Willis, general superintendent of Capitol's branch offices in United States and Canada. He is a brother of Ike Schlank, president of Capitol Film Company.

Extra Large Bulletin on Arrow Reissue

The Arrow Film Corporation has prepared a press bulletin to be distributed in connection with the exploitation of "The Demon's Shadow," a re-issued version of "The Twenty Million Dollar Mystery," originally distributed in twenty episodes, shown under the re-issued title in ten, said to be 35 x 22 inches, slightly larger than a newspaper and printed in black and white. In addition to articles on sales talks, newspaper write-ups, sample "ads," copies of cuts and the general matter that goes into a press book, there is also included a resume of the "punches" that appear in each episode. Twenty-five thousand copies have been ordered printed.

Julius Steger Busy on New Moss Picture

The forthcoming B. S. Moss production of "Break the News to Mother," a picture International Film Service Company is interested in, is keeping Julius Steger, Director General of International, busily engaged.

Pearl Shepard, the girl who is reported to have been coming to the front so rapidly in the last few months and who is looked upon by Mr. Steger as one of the coming big stars, has the principal role.

Louise Glaum, star of "Sahara," which has been brought East for a showing

Henry Houry Completes Vitagraph Film

The finishing touches have been given by Director Henry Houry to the new Vitagraph super-production starring Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne. The picture was written by Albert E. Smith, President of Vitagraph and Cyrus Townsend Brady.

This is the most important picture entrusted to Mr. Houry since his Vitagraph engagement and follows the work he did with the Corinne Griffith Star Features, which include "Love Watches," "The Clutch of Circumstance," and "Miss Ambition." Mr. Houry also assisted Wilfred North in the production of Vitagraph's "Over the Top."

Henry Houry came to Vitagraph with quite a varied experience. He hails from France.

Pearson Picture Started

Miss Virginia Pearson, in the recently organized Virginia Pearson Corporation, started work on the 20th of January, having selected the Thanhouser Studio in New Rochelle. The first release in March will be a five or six-reel film.

The title is "The Bishop's Emeralds," taken from the novel of that name by Houghton Townley, which had a sale in England and has been out of print for a long time.

Agnes Johnston is supplying scenarios to Mary Pickford

Agnes Johnston Writes Pickford Stories

The accompanying photograph is the likeness of Agnes Johnston, at present engaged in writing Mary Pickford's scenarios. She has already completed two scripts, one from the play "Daddy Long Legs," which is now in course of production, and another from a magazine story on which the star will next begin work.

Miss Johnston, although one of the youngest scenarists in the field to-day, has cut a reputation for herself that is fancy, to say the least. No one knew much about her when she was paid a meagre salary to write one and two reel Vitagraph pictures. She was practically unheard of until a five reel Thanhouser picture called "The Shine Girl," and featuring Gladys Hulette, was released. Then people began to talk, and they kept right on talking until they saw Miss Johnston step in as Miss Pickford's writer.

Miss Johnston comes by her ability to write through her mother, who was for a long time on the old Evening Mail and Express in New York. Last winter she left the picture business for a while to take up Professor Baker's play-writing course at Harvard University.

Blackton Uses Theatre

J. Stuart Blackton, while producing "A House Divided," was permitted to use the Criterion theatre in New York as a "location" through the courtesy of James K. Hackett, lessee, and Smith and Golden managers of "Three Wise Fools," the play now running at that theatre.

"A House Divided" is from Anthony P. Kelly's adaptation of Ruth Holt Boucault's novel, "The Substance of His House."

What Do You Think?

THE letter below is from a man whom we hold in high esteem. He has set before us concisely just how he feels on this most important subject. He has clearly stated our ideas from the viewpoint of the man who actually sees to it that the projectors are in proper order and that the picture on the screen is as near 100 per cent perfect as human hands can make it. He is a real Projectionist—one worthy of all that title implies:

Mr. E. K. Gillett, Editor MOTION PICTURE NEWS, 729 Seventh Avenue, New York, N. Y.

DEAR SIR.—Let me say a few words to and for the men who are responsible for the success of a leading factor in one of the world's greatest industries—the Operator, the Projectionist.

Truly, between these two, there should be and is a distinction of very evident magnitude. The Operator of yesterday, who respected his craft, studied and advanced with faithful, conscientious work and educated himself to be capable and proficient. By combining practical experience with technical study, he has become the professional man of today whom we designate as "Projectionist." These are the men who command the "Salaries." They have risen from the "Wage" class.

A few years ago there could be found excuses for conditions in projection rooms which today are entirely and absolutely inexcusable. In the days of cranks, film tanks and catch sacks, one-lunged rheostat, imperfect machines, cigar-box lamp houses and two by four "booths," there was little to inspire the oily half-baked operator. There was no incentive except to keep the crank going round at varied speeds, watch minutes that seemed like hours until closing time, and to have one empty pocket on Saturday night in which to deposit the eight or ten dollars in nickels, dimes and quarters that constituted his pay. A modern broom was an unknown quantity in the "booth." The floor space would permit of nothing besides the machine, the operator's two feet and the locomotive oil can, the contents of which was poured over the machine head after each performance.

Today such conditions do not or should not exist. Millions of dollars have been spent to provide the operator with "Equipment" and to make his working conditions better, thus giving him an incentive to "Produce the Goods" which the public with its modern ideas demand. It is the men who have seen the point and grasped the opportunity that was afforded who are holding the big jobs, who are authorities on high class projection and who deserve the name of "Projectionists."

I heartily agree with Mr. H. T. O'Brien of the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company. It has been my personal experience that nearly all bad conditions in the projection room can be eliminated by the Projectionist who cares. Ninety-five per cent of the theatre owners depend upon the ability and knowledge of the man in the projection room for advice on projection problems. Fifty per cent of the operators are unable to give it in a dependable manner.

The Projectionist should be as able to advise the exhibitor on projection problems as your physician is able to advise you regarding your bodily health. It's logic. If your employer builds a new theatre and sends for a projection engineer, an expert on projection room construction, location, equipment and wiring, and doesn't consult you about it, if you are to be the man in charge when all is finished, you feel slighted and maybe hostile toward the boss. The boss is wise and you are a back number. If you can't recommend the location of the projection room so as not to have the picture keystone-shaped from being projected at too great an angle, if you can't recommend the best projectors and current changing and saving devices, if you can't tell the boss what lens and condenser combination to buy, and if you don't know the difference between conduit and open wiring—you are not a projectionist; it's doubtful whether or not you are an operator; you deserve to be ignored when such advice is being sought, and you don't deserve to be placed in charge of the modern well-equipped projection room when all is finished.

Operators everywhere—consider the growth of the Motion Picture Industry in the past. Consider its prospects for the future. Read up a little on all the branches of the industry from the time the raw film is delivered to the producer until it is placed reel by reel in the upper magazine of your machine a finished photoplay. Look out into the auditorium and see the hundreds of people who have assembled there to witness the presentation of feature. Now, Mr. Operator, don't you realize your importance to the whole industry? Don't you feel a little proud of your position?

If that feature which you so carelessly handle is shot through your dirty, greasy, misadjusted and pounding machine at a high speed you have destroyed its value to the public who are the final critics of any production. You are insulting the artists who appear in it. You are working in direct opposition to the entire industry (and incidentally your employer may realize it before long with results that will be anything but flattering to you).

In a broad statement, Mr. Operator, you are a great hinge upon which the picture industry swings.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS has worked nobly for the benefit of the aspiring Projectionist, so let's reciprocate with a little noble work for ourselves that will make the operating game stand out as a profession with professional men to back the game. Let's get together and eliminate the old-fashioned "Operator" to replace him with the well-informed and modern "Projectionist."

Let us all be efficient and capable workmen. When a difficult, technical projection problem arises, let's be there with the correct answer. As a member and local official of the I. A. R. S. E. & M. P. M. O. of U. S. and Canada, it seems to me that the different locals could meet at regular intervals and introduce a sort of "School of Instructions" for the benefit of the members. As experience is probably the greatest teacher, practical experience is absolutely necessary but each member could be an instructor as well as a student. Friendly intercourse among the Projectionists with ideas and experiences freely exchanged and their merits brought out would be of great value to all concerned. Let there be comments from men who are interested in their profession and who are willing to help advance it to a high pinnacle of success.

Yours very truly,

Questions

"What Do You Think?"

THE following letter from one of the leading projectionists of Canada has just come to hand. It contains ideas and suggestions which can well be acted upon and carried out by every body of exhibitors in the country.

The suggestion of the classification on the basis of ability is certainly one to be carefully taken up and discussed. We have advocated classification for a considerable length of time; for as it is at present the good man who studies and pushes himself ahead, suffers because of the fact that he is held back through the influence of those who have no other ambition than to draw their pay check at the end of the week.

A few more interchanges of ideas along this line will be of the utmost value. Take part in it and let us know what you think.

MR. E. K. GILLET, Editor,
MOTION PICTURE NEWS,
729 Seventh avenue,
New York, N. Y.

Dear Sir:

I have just received January 4 issue of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS and read with deep interest the article by Mr. H. T. O'Brien of the Westinghouse Company. This gentleman has certainly struck the right key regarding the projectionist and the "operator." He has the right idea.

As time goes on there are more and more articles of this type written each year and no doubt they will continue to increase in the future as the projection machinery is improved and the demand for better projection increases. Every year the projectionist finds vast improvements in projection machines and all that pertains thereto, all of which calls for greater skill on the part of the projectionist. New machines and ideas are brought out. If the projectionist is to be able to properly manipulate and care for this new machinery he must have brains, knowledge and ability. He must study and keep studying. He must keep in touch with the industry. If he does not he will suddenly find that he has fallen into the "operator" class. So in order to be a projectionist a man will find lots to keep him busy during his spare moments. He will also find lots of places to spend those spare quarters.

Now, sir, I have always found, during my term as a projectionist, that a good man never has any great difficulty in getting the manager to purchase what he wants to improve his projection. However, he must, of course, be able to show Mr. Manager that what he wants is really necessary. He must be able to sit down in the office and illustrate to him and explain how he is going to improve his projection by doing so-and-so. Now in order to be able to do this the man must, in plain English, be a projectionist or he is liable to not get what he wants because of his inability to convince the manager (of course, some are harder to convince than others).

I have seen cases right here in this city where certain theatres have been employing the same operator for a considerable period and he would tell you that no matter what he wanted he could not get it. Then shortly after a new man comes on the job. After this new man had been there for a few months you pay a visit to the projectionist and his projection room and what do you find. Well, you find that the room has been cleaned and scrubbed, room enlarged, even installed hot and cold water, a new motor-generator has been installed. This was the manager who would not buy a tooth brush to clean the sprockets with. I have seen this happen several times and some of us wonder why it is. The answer is that the first man was what is known as an operator whereas the second man is a projectionist.

I call to mind a case right here in this city where a certain manager is using a great, big, out-of-date motor-generator which costs him a small fortune per annum to feed it with "juice" and it is delivering about 25 per cent of it to the arc, in fact, you could get just as good results with a good transformer delivering 60 amperes and the cost would be about one-sixth. Now I'll wager that some high class projectionist will walk in there one of these fine days and show Mr. Manager that he can get 100 per cent better projection at one-quarter the cost by installing a generator built for projection purposes. Then Mr. Manager gets busy and inquires about this machine, which he has never heard of before, and finally he makes the purchase. After he has made the installation and finds that it does what his projectionist said he congratulates himself and wonders why he didn't buy it long ago. Now, what is the result? Well, after this manager becomes accustomed to this type of projectionist he will, in the future, employ none but first class men regardless of cost. The man has shown him what good projection is. He has taught this manager that in order to produce good projection a man must have brains, knowledge, and he must study. Now, that's what we should all do. Educate your manager, show him that in order to project pictures a man must possess knowledge. I claim that the more the manager knows about projection the better it is for the projectionist.

Now, to get back to the subject again. The only fault with Mr. O'Brien's article is that it is similar to all the other articles of this nature. It shows the faults of the present system and it shows that some change must be made but it offers no remedy. I claim that there is a remedy and that remedy is classification. All projectionists must be classified and not by the local unions.

You, Mr. Editor, insinuate that it is up to the locals to better the present conditions. With this I cannot entirely agree because they must have outside assistance for obvious reasons. Every local has its good, better and best, and it's up to the local to protect every one of its members in good standing. It is under obligation to its members and naturally it is not the right party to examine its members and classify them in any way.

In this province (Alberta) the Government has found it necessary to examine the projectionists and classify them. All the men are classified in four classes. First class are allowed to work in the cities, also second class. Third and fourth class in small towns. The men are examined by a first class projectionist, Mr. P. Barber. The Province of British Columbia also has an examination system only it is even better than ours but we hope that ours will improve as time goes on and we have every reason to believe it will.

The time is not far distant when all the states and provincial governments will make it their duty to examine the projectionists working in their jurisdiction. It is for the protection of the public, the managers and the projectionists. This will bring to the surface the men who really are projectionists and show the man who does not devote his spare time to study that if he does not get busy and study he will find himself out of a job. Some other man more qualified will step in at a higher salary and fill his place, some man who has devoted his spare time to the study of his profession.

Locals and film exchanges should get together on this proposition and have their governments pass legislation which will enforce all projectionists to pass a practical examination to determine their qualifications as a projectionist. It is their duty to the public and themselves also their employer. It is one of those things the Motion Picture Industry needs.

No doubt there will be those who will not agree with the stand I take on this question, but can any man show me why, for instance, a steam engineer should be made to pass an examination and a projectionist be allowed to work without, in some cases, passing any kind of examination when he has considerable more responsibility, think it over.

Now I am going to explode a bomb right here. Most locals when drafting their wage scale they insert the following or something similar. Projectionist working six hours a day six days a week $35 per week. I think nine locals out of every ten insert this clause. All locals in the said union are on the same level as far as the local is concerned. Every union has its good, better and best. We all know this no matter whether we admit it or not. Now, the best being in the minority, as a rule, it is only natural that if a vote is taken to have an examination to classify its members, the best is going to lose because they are generally in the minority. I don't mean by this that the local is composed of poor men but I am referring to the best. The men don't seem to realize that it is to the benefit of all concerned. It gives every man an opportunity to find out just exactly what he does know. It shows him his weak points and gives him an opportunity to study them. Then if the man does not study he deserves to be put in a lower category by an examining board.

When we come to consider the present system we ask who is it that gets 100 per cent protection from the local union? Well, its the second rater, the man that does not take interest in his work. The man who does not take enough pride in his profession to study it and spend his spare change trying to learn a little about it. A local comprised of high class men demands more respect and consideration than a local made up of inferior men. We all know this and we can't deny it, so every high class man we admit into the local the stronger the local becomes and it is the right kind of strength. A large membership and a big bank account does not make a strong local. How many times have we seen this proven? Its the men that counts. Nothing else.

Now, to get back to the subject again. When all members in a local which is comprised of high class men and second-raters, is it any encouragement to the first class men to stay in the local and continue to study when they are all on the plane. Is there any inducement for him or anything for him to look forward to. On the other hand is there any inducement for the man who does not consider himself a first class projectionist to study when he knows that regardless of whether he studies or not he will get the scale anyway. Well, I don't think so. The only men who get the maximum benefit from the local is the man who don't care. He demands the same salary as his brother and continues to make trouble for his local by enforcing his demands the same as ever. Now, the only remedy for this is a classification as I have already pointed out.

The old argument that it can't be done is out of date because it can be done and it will be done. Its being done every day. If we don't prepare ourselves and do it, someone else will. The quicker we awaken to the realization of facts the better it will be for all concerned. I say let every local get busy and get after their respective governments and have legislation put through that will enforce all projectionists to be examined and those of us who are not prepared will find ourselves legislated out of a job and we will have no one to blame but ourselves.

Now, Mr. Editor, you asked for an expression of opinion on this matter. This is my own candid opinion. I am not afraid to express it. I may be wrong but let some kind friend show me who is acquainted with the present conditions and will apologize. If you think I am wrong just chuck this in the waste paper basket. There will be no hard feelings.

I remain, yours truly,

Local 244 Holds Reception in February

IT was announced this week that on February 28 the Motion Picture Machine Operators Local 244, of Newark, N. J., will hold its annual Grand Reception and Ball at Krueger's Auditorium, in that city.

This affair has always proved a great magnet, a capacity crowd gathers yearly, as the favorites of filmland appear in person and mingle with the devotees of this form of entertainment.

American Projectionists Plan Banquet

IT was announced this week that the annual banquet of the American Projection Society, the organization of motion picture projection experts, is to be held at the Hotel Astor early in March.

SILVERTIP

DIRECT CURRENT

Motion Picture Carbons

The Silvertip is the standard negative carbon for direct current projection. It is of small diameter and is heavily plated with metal to give it a high current carrying capacity. When used with the Columbia upper it gives a pure white light of high intensity.

We wish to call special attention to the new copper adapter which was designed for use with our Silvertip negative carbon. This new adapter, shown in the illustration below, has several outstanding features; it is made in one piece and cannot get out of adjustment while the jaws form a positive clamp, giving a better contact on a smaller portion of the carbon.

The illustration also shows the extent to which the Silvertip can be burned with the aid of this new adapter. The ruggedness of construction, together with the quality of the material from which it is made, gives the adapter a life equal to that of the rest of the projection apparatus.

AN ANNOUNCEMENT

Our activities for the past year have been nearly 100 per cent. devoted to war production of vital importance to the government, compelling us to discontinue regular manufacture in practically all of our lines.

The cessation of hostilities has now enabled us to begin the readjustment to a peace production basis. While this adjustment must be gradual, we are pressing it with all possible speed in order to satisfy the requirements of our normal trade at an early date.

We appreciate the patience and understanding with which our patrons have reacted to the situation and trust they may continue to exercise such consideration until our manufacturing facilities are once more on a pre-war footing.

Francis B. Cannock Dies at St. Luke's Hospital

FRANCIS B. CANNOCK, inventor, designer, of the Precision Machine Company, died Sunday, January 19, at St. Luke's Hospital. He was born in Bristol, England, on April 11, 1872, of Scotch parents, coming to this country with them at the age of six.

Cannock, Sr., became connected with the Singer Sewing Machine Company at Elizabeth, N. J. During the stay of the Cannock family here, another son was born, and the mother's health commenced to fail soon after the birth, which prompted the family to return to their native England.

Francis B. Cannock felt the call of America and returned to the country alone, on May 11, 1899, taking out his first citizenship papers on the eighth of July of the same year.

His love of mechanics led him into the automobile manufacturing line in New York, but the developing of the motion picture machine claimed his attention soon afterwards. In 1897 Mr.

Cannock took charge of the repair department of Blackton Smith (which later became the Vitagraph).

Here he remained until 1899, when he assumed charge of the Eden Musee. During his nine years' connection there, he was constantly busy experimenting with new devices, these experiments were to prove valuable to him in later developments. It might be well to speak here of a tribute paid to Mr. Cannock, at this time for the results he was obtaining through his improvements which Charles Urban who came over here in 1903, said to Cannock, "You are projecting my pictures better than I do myself in London."

The projection at the Eden Musee at that time was considered as being the finest in the world. In 1908, Mr. Cannock, with R. C. Holloman, organized the Edengraph Company, engaging in the manufacture of projectors, until 1909, when he associated with Edwin S. Porter, and through the joint efforts of both, the Simplex machine was invented and designed. While many of the later improvements on the Simplex were due to the efforts of Mr. Porter, many of the earlier ones however, were worked out by these two between whom a close bond of intimacy and companionship developed, which is responsible for the remarkable understanding that has always been apparent.

Mr. Cannock became the secretary of the Precision Machine Company soon after its organization, and watched its graded development with interest, which interest was maintained until late fall when he was taken ill in Akron, Ohio, where he was confined to his bed for two months.

After partially recovering from this illness, he hastened to New York City during the Christmas holidays, in order to consult with experts regarding his condition which was greatly weakened. After this consultation, arrangements were made for the removal of an abscess which had developed in one of his lungs.

While waiting for the necessary arrangements to be made, Mr. Cannock still insisted upon spending some of his time at his experimental room at the factory, which called forth comment upon his faithfulness to the machine upon which so much of his time had been bestowed. He finally entered St. Luke's Hospital, where

Friendly discussion and a free exchange of ideas is the only way that progress can be made. State your troubles. Your communication will not be printed with your full name signed, if you do not wish to have it—but a frank statement will help all the other projectionists and will help the industry as a whole. The Association of Music and Masonry

EVERY thought in life has an influence upon a susceptible composer or musician, whether it be the arts, science, religion or the frailty of human existence. Upon the surface one would hardly imagine that masonry also had its influence upon a musical mind, but nevertheless, we are able to show that such was the effect upon the great Mozart, when writing "The Magic Flute Overture."

There has always been, since 1791, discussion concerning the treatment of Masonic thoughts and rites in "The Magic Flute," both in the text and the music. Jahn had a firm belief that "the dignity and grandeur with which the music reveals the symbolism of these mysteries certainly have their root in his (Mozart's) intense devotion to the Masonic idea. A clear indication of this devotion was given in this overture to the initiated, but in a way that shows how well he distinguished between Masonic symbolism and artistic impulse."

Mozart's devotion to Masonry is well known, and he may have been inspired by Masonic thoughts when he wrote the overture. He tried to express the idea of a struggle between light and darkness. It is highly probable, however, that he was chiefly concerned with making music. As Henri Lavoix says in his "Histoire de l'Instrumentation"; "Here the master, wishing, so to speak, to glance back and give a final model of the old Italian and German overtures with a counterpointed theme, which had served, and still served, as preface to many operas, pleased himself by exhibiting the melodic theme that he had chosen, in all its forms adorned with the riches of harmony and instrumentation. The result of this marvellous work is one of the most perfect instrumental compositions ever produced by human genius. Yet no one can establish the slightest resemblance between the overture and the grotesque magic piece on which Mozart lavished the most precious treasures of this prodigious imagination."

The overture is scored for two flutes, two oboes, two clarinets, two bassoons, two horns, two trumpets, three trombones and strings. It begins Adagio, with three fortissimo E-flat major chords for full orchestra "which have some hidden Masonic significance." The chief movement is a brilliant and elaborate fugue, which is treated with orchestral freedom. About the middle of its development it is interrupted by the "Masonic" E-flat major chords, which were heard at the beginning. "Those chords are the only thing in the overture that reappears in the opera; yet the work is by no means open to the charge of musical irrelevancy, for the theme of the fugue is eminently suggestive of the lively character of Papageno, the bird-catcher. The overture to "The Magic Flute" was probably the one Rossini had in mind when he once said: "I've been trying for months to write some fugued overtures a la Mozart, but I've had to tear them up. The great model is too overpowering! Mine were all detestable."

The theme of the fugue is not unlike one in a sonata in B-flat major, that Clementi played in 1781 before the Emperor Joseph in Mozart's presence; it also resembles the subject of an orchestral "symphony" in J. H. Rolle's cantata. "The Resurrection of Lazarus" (Leipsic, 1779), which Mozart probably never saw or heard. Fugue subjects were common property, and they were often wandering melodies. The more important question was "What did the composer do with his theme after he caught it?" The solemn chords that open and interrupt the overture may suggest the knocking of those seeking initiation, or they may recall "the probation which must be undergone by those who engage in the search for a higher light." They are effective without explanation. As Jahn well said: "The true triumph of genius consists in having created a work which, wholly apart from scholarship or esoteric meaning, produces by its perfection an irresistible effect on the musical mind, animating it to more active endeavor and lifting it to an atmosphere of purest serenity."

Robert Schumann said: "The overture of "The Magic Flute," which will for centuries to come still ravish the ear: that sportive, happy wonder-child—shedding light and joy, it will ever soar skyward, in spite of fog and utter darkness."

Camille Saint Saens stated of Mozart: "No one will accuse him of melodic poverty, although he pursued for a long time the chimeras of instrumental music without "melody." The overture of "Cosi fan tutte" was an unfortunate attempt in this respect; for the absence of "melody" is cruelly felt. The overture of "Don Giovanni" is a compromise. In the overture to "The Magic Flute" the problem was solved—not a bit of straight cantabile, a prodigious complexity, and as a result, clearness, fascination, irresistible effect. It is a tour de force which Mozart only could have accomplished."

Review of Latest Musical Compositions

- 1—"L'Oracolo" (The Oracle). Acclaimed by New York critics as one of the most beautifully melodious of the operas performed at the Metropolitan Opera House. L'Oracolo, by Franco Leoni, is assured a prominent place in the regular repertoire of this famous opera house. (Chappell's, 41 E. Thirty-fourth street, New York.)
- 2—"An Irishman Was Made to Love and Fight," by Jos. Santly. A sparkling, jingly arrangement of this corking comedy song. (Leo Feist, 249 W. 40th street, New York.)
- 3—"A Rainbow From the U. S. A." by Percy Wenrich. The big hit of the N. Y. Hippodrome super-spectacle "Everything." (Feist Edition.)
- 4—"Ja-Da!" Fox-trot by Bob Carleton. Written and sung by Boys of the Navy. Sing the words and make a hit yourself! (Feist Edition.)
- 5—"My Mid-West Yankee Home" by A. M. Laurens. This fascinating melody lends itself readily to either the One Step or Waltz tempo, and if you program this, there will be no wall flowers, for no one could stay off their feet when you swing into the enchanting strains of the waltz or fiery, inspiring one step. (C. L. Barnhouse, Oskaloosa, Iowa.)
- 6—"That Soothing Serenade Was Just Written For Me." Fox trot arrangement of the big song hit by Harry de Costa, wonderful novelty. (Fischer-Whitmark Orch. & Band Dept., Cooper Square, New York.)
- 7—"Our Victors' March to the Boys Over There." The official march played at every patriotic gathering—an American march by an American composer, Kate Vannah. (Fischer-Whitmark Orch. & Band Dept.)
- 8—"Kisses," by Lynn Cowan. An overnight hit in New York. Oh! what a melody—you are going to rave about it. (McCarthy & Fischer, Inc., 224 W. 46th street, New York.)
- 9—"After You're Gone"—The greatest dance hit of the hour. Especially featured by Earl Fuller's Jazz Band. It can be played either as a fox-trot or one step and is being sung in every home in New York City. (Broadway Music Corp., 145 W. 45th street, New York.)
- 10—"When You Take That Trip Across the Rhine" by Percival Knight. One of the greatest march hits in the successful musical comedy, "The Better 'Ole" now on Broadway. (Leo Feist.)
- 11—"When You Look in the Heart of a Rose" by Florence Methven. The melody ballad hit of New York's big success "The Better 'Ole" now playing at the Cort Theatre. (Leo Feist.)
- 12—"Valse Boston." (Drigo Ballet) by Lumbye-Roberts. There is only one number which rivals this for its popularity with the music-loving public and that is the Drigo

"Serenade" from which it had its inception. It is unquestionably the best dance waltz published. (Carl Fischer.)

13—"Because You Say Goodbye," by Sol P. Levy. A ballad of enduring sentiment. The heartrending sentiment expressed in the lyrics of this song will find instant appeal with every audience, and take its place amongst the world's popular-classic ballads. The music is written within the range of the average voice, utilizing the best register. It is truly a singer's song. The wedding of lyrics and music have resulted in a ballad of tenderness, pathos and dramatic intensity. (Belwin, Inc., 701 Seventh avenue, New York.)

Canadian Exhibitors Give Serious Thought to Music

A NUMBER of Canadian exhibitors are giving more serious consideration to the subject of music, judging by recent developments. The Allen theatre, Toronto, leading theatre of the string of Allen theatres throughout the country, recently added vocal numbers to its programme. One of the artists engaged during January was Harold Jarvis, who is Canada's most famous tenor soloist.

The Regent theatre, Ottawa, added vocal selections by special artists to its bill starting with the week of January 13. Manager Moxley of this theatre declares that all the leading moving picture theatres of the country will find it advisable, sooner or later, to add vocal music to its list of attractions as the singing rounds out the programme and attracts still another class of patrons, he believes.

The Imperial theatre, Ottawa, had been making use of its large organ exclusively for some time, but now this leading theatre of the Canadian capital has installed a large orchestra. The Imperial also had a singing act starting with the week of January 13, during which week the attraction was "Romance of Tarzan."

Two New Theatres for Florence, Ala.

FLORENCE, ALA., is to have two new theatres early this year, one of them purely for motion pictures and the other for a combination of the photoplay and vaudeville.

Pixley and Rosenbaum, who have interests in North Little Rock, Ark., will build the combination house, which will stand on Tennessee avenue opposite the recently erected hotel. It will cost $50,000.

M. A. Lightman, president of the Majestic Amusement Company, announces he has leased ground in the very best block in the city and is now building an up-to-date motion picture house which will cost between $15,000 and $20,000. Mr. Lightman controls the motion picture situation in Florence, a rapidly growing city, but believes in giving his patrons the very best in entertainment.

"NEWMAN" BRASS FRAMES AND RAILS

DO YOU KNOW?

that 90% of all the brass frames used in the moving picture houses throughout the country are "NEWMAN'S"?

WHY?

Because we steadily have refused to cheapen or lower the quality of our goods, even though others have sought to undermine our prestige by underselling with cheapened products. That is one of the reasons why nine out of every ten frames sold bear the name "NEWMAN." Insist on that name and save money.

You ought to have our latest catalogue. Write us today.

Francis B. Cannock Dies

the operation was performed, but in spite of the finest medical attention, he was unable to rally, and passed away on Sunday, January 19.

The Precision Machine Company posted notices of Mr. Cannock's death in their various plants, announcing the closing down of all departments in order to avail the employees an opportunity of viewing his remains at the Funeral Church, at 1970 Broadway. Many of these employees had grown up in the company with Mr. Cannock and the splendid response for the procuring of floral tributes spoke volumes for the esteem in which he was held by them.

Impressive funeral services were held at the above church at eight o'clock Monday evening, at which were gathered a throng of representative men and women of the industry from all of its various branches. Here, one of the impressive features was the beautiful masonic service, during the ritual of which a large group of co-workers from the Simplex factory, who were members of that fraternity, participated. A large and beautiful group of floral tributes formed a fitting background for the wonderful ceremonies that contained the final words of appreciation for the sterling worth of one who had been a worthy associate, a splendid companion, and a loyal friend.

Frank Cannock's contribution to the industry will be long remembered by those in the line of manufacture, and his qualities as a companion will always be cherished by those who were fortunate to know him as a friend.

Interment was made Tuesday morning at 10.30 at Kensico Cemetery.

Directory of New Theatres

NEW YORK

Far Rockaway will have two new theatres erected by the Strand Theatre Corporation. One will be a legitimate house named "The Far Rockaway." The other, controlled by the same corporation, will be entirely for motion pictures and will be a replica of the Strand theatre in New York City. The Strand will be located on Central avenue, Broadway and Cornaga avenue.

A new $170,000 theatre will be erected in Albany in the vicinity of State and Pearl streets. Announcement was made by Henry M. Kramrath through Frank P. Dolan.

Everything the Showman Needs on Every Picture Released

The Complete Plan Book

Compiled by Peter Milne

Pictures Reviewed in Advance

[In addition to Advance Reviews—covering pictures shown too early to be included in The Complete Plan Book—readers will also find under this heading each week the reviews of short features and serial episodes.]

Industrial Subject

(Made for S. S. Stafford, Inc., by Films-of-Business)

CAMILLA DONWORTH, president of Films-of-Business, showed for private review, the company's first subject for review this week. The picture is in one reel and shows, in detail, the interesting processes through which the ingredients which make our writing inks, mucilages, carbons and typewriter ribbons go through during the steps to the finished product.

The scenes were taken in the plant of the S. S. Stafford Company, manufacturers of writing fluids and carbons. Every detail is shown from the time the berry or seed from which the tannin is extracted is obtained to its bottled condition. The same applies to the manufacture of the inks for carbons. It is an ideal educational subject, instructive and of the most interest. The picture was made for S. S. Stafford, Inc., and will be offered for distribution as an educational subject.

"Who Will Marry Me," with Carmel Myers

(Bluebird. Released Jan. 27.—Directed by Paul Powell)

YOU are a lucky boy if you have this picture coming. I have seen every Carmel Myers picture released on the Bluebird program to this date, but not one of them can compare with this one. Besides her work being superior, she is backed up by a story; it is so good and it digs so deeply that it will draw tears from a dry person; tears not caused by depressing situations, but by compassion.

The heroine, a young Italian girl, is being forced by her mother to marry an Italian barber, a man she does not love. She runs away and goes to the settlement in the neighborhood, begging the superintendent to help her; she tells him she is willing to marry anybody, but the barber.

There happens to be in the room a wealthy but dissipating young man. He offers himself as a groom and they marry. After the wedding, he takes her to his house. When he sobers up in the morning, regrets the step he has taken, but is unwilling to do an injustice to the girl by applying for a divorce.

Realizing that she is beneath his station in life, the girl tries to do all she can to win his love, and when she fails, decides to take herself out of his way by going back to her mother.

The balance of the story treats of a murder in the husband's home, and how he assumes the blame, in order to save the woman who committed it. At the trial, his wife takes the stand and tells a white lie. This saves her husband from being convicted on circumstantial evidence. Husband and wife are again reunited, thus made happy.

The part of the story that will move you the most is where the heroine offers to wrongly brand herself for life by telling a white lie, in order to save her husband, whom she loves dearly, but who, to that time, had not appreciated her love. Because it has been handled by the director convincingly, it affects the spectator in the same way as if it were an actual fact.

The court room scenes have been photographed in a novel way; no walls are shown whatever, the characters being shown against black background.

The picture is absolutely clean; it should prove suitable for any audience.—P. S. Harrison.

"Oh, What a Knight!"

(Fox Sunshine Comedy—Two Reels)

HENRY LEHRMAN here presents a burlesque western with Mack Swain playing the role of the sheriff, who gives vent to a lot of humorous spoken titles on the order of "my little gal—." The two reels are exceedingly humorous and benefit by a number of cleverly interpolated gags that are mysterious as well as amusing. Fred Fishback, who directed, has handled all the scenes in expert fashion. The film bears more than an outward resemblance to the old "Ambrose" series of Sennett's particularly those that saw Swain in the role of the sheriff. The idea, however, is quite well worth repeating, especially when done cleverly. Ethel Teare provides the feminine interest.

"An Amazing Impostor," with Mary Miles Minter

(American Production Through Pathe—Five Reels)

THE last few pictures released, starring Mary Miles Minter, seem to possess more vigor, and to offer more genuine entertainment, than the ones produced of old. The cause for this change to the better is very plain, instead of depending on the charms of the star alone to put the picture over; she is also furnished with a story that has some "pep."

"An Amazing Impostor" should entertain any audience because of the good story, besides the good acting. "Exchanged identities" furnishes the foundation of the plot. Tired of the notoriety of being the daughter of a chewing gum king, the heroine seeks seclusion at some lonely spot. On the train she meets a notorious crook, masquerading as a European countess. The latter persuades the heroine to exchange identities. Thus the heroine's impersonation of a countess results in many complications that are worked out intelligently. Length, five reels.—P. S. Harrison.

"Her Inspiration"

(Metro—Five Reels—Released Dec. 30)

GEORGE D. BAKER and Tom J. Geraghty collaborated on the story and scenario, "Her Inspiration," which serves as a starring vehicle for May Allison on the Metro program. The writers cannot claim originality in either subject matter or plot construction, but they can lay claim to having furnished an ideal Allison play—the kind that she did so well in when co-starring with the late Harold Lockwood. It is light as to dramatic strength, with no "heavy" moments interpolated and very little tenseness to make you grip your seats, but there is a real surprise in the climax which leaves you more than satisfied with the five reels of screen drama.

The story and adaptation are accredited to both Mr. Baker and Tom Geraghty. Either one or both made a bad break in the story's continuity for at about the beginning of the fourth reel the story ends for all intents and purposes. It is at this time that hero and heroine embrace and avow their love for one another. The remaining footage builds to the revelation that the romance, enacted in the Kentucky mountains with the "moonshiners" taking an active part, has been prearranged to furnish the hero, a young playwright, with the proper "local color" for his play. It develops that the heroine, supposedly, an unsophisticated maid of the mountains and the leader of the "moonshiners," are leading lady and villain, respectively, selected by the producer, to play the parts in the drama. Herbert Heyes as the young playwright is a bit too anxious at times to "act." Charles Elder, Allen D. Sears and Jack Brammall, handle character parts with cleverness. The reviewer recalls some clever work by Mr. Heyes opposite Jewel Carmen. His work in this picture is not in the same class.

"Her Inspiration" presents Miss Allison in an ideal role and brings to the surface all those delightful characteristics which the public will recognize as distinctive attributes of the star. She puts this Metro offering over with a dramatic bang. Robert Thornby directed. William E. Fildew photographed. The production was made under the supervision of Mr. Baker, manager of productions of Metro's West Coast studios.—Joseph L. Kelley.

"The Man of Might"

(Vitagraph Serial—First and Second Episodes)

THE serial of today is something vastly different from the serial of three or four years ago. Then it was a new plaything and producers played with them, they didn't work with them and put their best brains into them. Today the serial demands just as much attention as the most elaborate feature production if not more. Vitagraph in its recent serial productions has shown itself as capable a serial producing company as there is in the field today. And "The Man of Might" gives promise of being its greatest effort in this line.

"The Man of Might" is a rousing, fighting, thrilling serial when the first two episodes recently shown for review are considered. It starts off with action galore, nor does it let up in this regard in the least. As for thrills, the one which terminates the second episode is a thing to make the hair stand on end on a bald man's head. Hero and heroine speeding along in their car see that the bridge over a chasm has been blown up by the villains. But the dauntless pair "step on" their engine, and when last seen they are posing in mid-air with some hundred feet of chasm below them and the blue sky above.

The leads have all been well tried and proven by previous serial appearances. William Duncan is well equipped physically to carry the title role and his personality is pleasing. Edith Johnson is a heroine that appeals whenever she appears, and Joe Ryan, with a pretty scar across his face, is one of the most furious of all villains. Mr. Duncan, in his capacity of director has seen to it that the support enters into the spirit of the frenzied action with suitable vengeance while he has handled the thrills with skill to say the least.

The story again arrays the forces of virtue against those of villainy. This time the center of the struggle is an old white flag which has been cut into eight pieces and distributed to various people. By piecing these together the location of valuable treasure will be revealed, hence the furious struggle.

Cleveland Vaudeville House Turns to Film

THE New Gordon Square theatre, West 65th street and Detroit avenue, Cleveland, O., opened with a matinee on Christmas Day, under the ownership of Messrs. G. T. Sharpe and J. Scoville. Both Mr. Sharpe and Mr. Scoville are exhibitors of vast experience, both of them having other motion picture interests in the city. Mr. Sharpe operates the Southern theatre, West 25th street and Prame avenue. Mr. Scoville operates the Sunbeam, Kinsman and East 71st Street and the Ezella, Superior avenue and East 70th street.

The Gordon Square has been operated for several years as a vaudeville house. By pushing contracts and rushing deliveries Messrs. Sharpe and Scoville succeeded in redecorating, refurnishing and re-equipping the Gordon Square theatre in exactly seventeen days. This is record-breaking time, considering the difficulty of obtaining merchandise at this time, and the obstacles pertaining to deliveries.

A heavy mulberry red carpet has been spread on the floors of the theatre. The lighting fixtures have been entirely remodeled to suit the conditions necessary to get the best results for the projection of pictures, and new simplex projection machines have been installed. The symphony orchestra, under the direction of Mr. John Hronek, is a big feature of the New Gordon Square theatre.

Along with the new management, there is to be a new price policy introduced into the general policy of the house. Instead of two prices of admission, one to cover adults, and another for children, there are three sets of prices. The first one, of 22 cents admits adults. The second one, of 11 cents, admits children under twelve and over six years of age, and third one, of 6 cents admits children under six years old. Mr. Scoville has used this policy for some time at the Sunbeam theatre, and with great success.

The lobby of the house was a beautiful sight on the opening day, when it was filled with elaborate floral designs sent by fellow exhibitors and brother members of the industry.

"THE FIGHTING ROOSEVELTS"—FIRST NATIONAL

Entertaining to Unusual Degree; Thrills Enough for Everyone

DON'T get it into your head that the only merit this picture possesses is the fact that it deals with the life of Theodore Roosevelt and his sons; if you do, you will find yourself sadly mistaken; the picture possesses entertaining values far above those of an average program offering. It should entertain everyone.

It is truly worth remarking at the ability to embody the elements of comedy and suspense in a biography; but they are there just the same. There are also some thrills in a few of the situations that should excite anybody's feelings.

The story deals with the life of Theodore Roosevelt, from babyhood to the time of his death. It is true that the knowledge of a spectator that the characters used to impersonate him in his different ages are not himself destroys some of the illusion; but the fact that all the incidents shown in the picture are true to life more than offsets that disadvantage.

If you handle this picture right, there is no reason in the world why you should not draw large crowds.—Length, 6 reels.—P. S. Harrison.

Produced under the direction of William Nigh for the McClure Company (no cast provided).

CATCH LINES

All the high-lights of Theodore Roosevelt's wonderful career set down on the films with accuracy and discrimination, with an adherence to truths that is commendable and with resultant dramatic climaxes that are more thrilling than fiction could ever be.

Who was the youngest member of New York's State Legislature? Who was the city's fighting Mayor, the State's fighting Governor? Who formed the regiment of rough-riders in the Spanish-American war? Who told the Kaiser to keep away from Venezuela? Who made Captain Pershing a major-general and Lieutenant Sims an admiral? Who was the greatest American of modern times? THEODORE ROOSEVELT is the answer to all those questions, and it is of him that "The Fighting Roosevelts" tells.

The life of the late Theodore Roosevelt is the greatest historical drama ever recorded on the screen. To see it is to see a series of facts more startling, more thrilling than fiction could ever be.

"The Fighting Roosevelts" is an authorized version of the life of Theodore Roosevelt. The late Colonel himself sponsored it shortly before his death. All his share of the profits goes to the Red Cross. See "The Fighting Roosevelts"—the life of the great American.

AD TALK

Next week the theatre will present for the first time in this city a film dealing with the life of the late Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, appropriately entitled "The Fighting Roosevelts." This feature picture traces the life of the great American from the days of his boyhood, up through his career as youngest member of the Legislature of the State of New York, takes us with him to the western plains, shows him to us as Mayor of New York City, as Governor of New York State, as the Colonel of a regiment of rough-riders in the Spanish-American war, as vice-President of the United States and finally as its highest executive chief.

Not one of the many dramatic episodes in the life of Roosevelt has been omitted from the picture and as a result "The Fighting Roosevelts" stands today as an accurate and complete history of the greatest American the country ever knew. The picture was made not long before the death of Roosevelt. He authorized it himself and stated that any profits that might accrue to him from its exhibition should be turned over to the Red Cross or other patriotic organizations. He co-operated with the director, gave him access to his libraries, albums and diaries and saw to it that the various events of his career were set down with the greatest degree of accuracy possible.

The picture stands today as an historical document, vastly entertaining in its each and every scene. Truth is stranger than fiction many times—to say in this case that it is more dramatic, thrilling and generally entertaining is not stretching the point in the least. To miss "The Fighting Roosevelts" would be to miss the best lesson in Americanism!

THE STORY

"The Fighting Roosevelts" traces the life of Theodore Roosevelt from boyhood. Though not robust and impaired by poor eyesight he is the typical American youth. Through his school and college days his ambition always brings just rewards and shortly after his graduation from law school he enters the State Legislature, its youngest member. After his career there he goes West to build up his constitution in the great outdoors and in the open country he makes friends—friends who stick by him for the rest of his life.

He returns to assume the office of Police Commissioner in New York City. Follow then his election to Mayor of the city, Governor of the State and then Assistant Secretary of the Navy. This post he resigns to take his part in the Spanish-American war at the head of the famous regiment of rough-riders, men recruited for the most part from his old acquaintances of the western plains.

The war done, he returns to Washington as Vice-President but only for a short time, for President McKinley is assassinated and Roosevelt comes to the chair. His blocking of the Kaiser in the Venezuelan controversy is depicted and then come his promotions of Captain Pershing and Lieutenant Sims, promotions that today stand as proof conclusive of his sound judgment.

Roosevelt's second term as President concluded, he retires to Oyster Bay, there to take up his home life and to spread the gospel of Americanism through his pen. The European war begun, he watches his four sons go to battle and hears with sorrow, and yet with pride, that one has made the supreme sacrifice.

SUGGESTIONS

It is not necessary to go into the manifold possibilities of this picture here. Localities and exhibiting conditions will direct each showman as to the best possible manner in which to exploit the production. We want to make it clear, however, that the advertising accessories provided are excellent in every respect. Particularly are the advertising cuts and the twenty-four sheet striking. Make thorough use of them. That twenty-four sheet is liable to attract more business to your theatre if properly displayed than all the circus-like bally-hoos you could conjure up. Newspapers, too, will be glad to receive stories regarding the production as soon as they learn that it is authentic. Every one of them, politics notwithstanding, will co-operate with you in promoting the feature.

It will be rather poor ethics to circus the picture. It should be resented with a certain amount of dignity and regard for its central figure. Heavy advertising in dignified terms, a prominent display of the title together with the sub-line that it is "an authorized version of the life and works of Colonel Theodore Roosevelt" will pull business. In all advertising that you get up yourself bring out the spirit of true Americanism which characterized every act and saying of Roosevelt. Ads such as these will be found in the press sheet provided by First National. They are worthy of reproduction in any newspaper, large or small, and can be obtained at any First National exchange.

"CHEATING CHEATERS"—SELECT

Crook Play Which Gives Miss Young Chance to Do Excellent Work

YOU should go the limit with this picture. It is far more interesting and entertaining than any one ever released featuring Clara Kimball Young. To begin with, you have the story; then, you have the cast; and as you all know Allan Dwan, the director, there exists no need for further comment.

The story is a high class crook play, in which the heroine is a famous detective, a fact which neither the characters nor the spectators know until towards the end. Two gangs of crooks, ignorant of each other's identity, try to steal each other's jewels. Both sides pretend to be millionaires. The heroine succeeds in gaining the confidence of one of them and becomes their leader. In this manner she succeeds in rounding them all up, but prevails upon her employers to let them free, since they promise to lead a straight life. In the end, she marries the leader of the other gang, a young man, with whom she fell in love.

As the heroine, in spite of her peculiar position, does nothing despicable, she retains the spectator's sympathy; and as the plot is rather novel for the screen, it holds the interest alive to the end of the picture.

This offering should appeal to all; it is clean.—Length, 5 reels.—P. S. Harrison.

AD TALK

Clara Kimball Young, heading her own company, will appear at the theatre on of week in her latest feature, "Cheating Cheaters." This subject is one of the most elaborate and unusual in which the talented star has appeared. "Cheating Cheaters" ran for over a season on Broadway and attracted thousands to the theatre. It is in the nature of a melodramatic farce, although its actual character is not revealed until the finale. For the most part the action embraces the daring intrigue of two bands of crooks, each operating on the principle that the other is a family of great wealth and easy to swindle. Hence the picture's name, "Cheating Cheaters."

The cast that Miss Young gathered around her for this picture is one of the most distinguished ever assembled. Jack Holt is seen as the star's leading man. Anna Q. Nilsson, Tully Marshall, Frank Campeau, Edwin Stevens, Mayme Kelso and Nicholas Dunaew are others who appear. The picturegoer will instantly recognize that each one of these players stands for the best in the acting art. Campeau, Marshall and Stevens are three of the best known character men of stage and screen and have appeared in many big pictures.

The production was made under the direction of Allan Dwan. Here, too, is another man that stands at the very top of his profession. As Douglas Fairbanks' director he achieved a wide popularity, while he has handled many other stars, including Mary Pickford and the Gish girls. His handling of the many intricate situations of "Cheating Cheaters" is excellent from every standpoint.

THE STORY

A gang of crooks posing under the name of Brockton, makes its headquarters in a house near New York City. The moving spirit in this group of people is Ruth Brockton, who poses as the daughter of the house. The deal which the Brockton gang aims to put through is to purloin the valuable jewel collection of the Palmers, wealthy neighbors. Ruth meets Tom Palmer, the son of the house, and mutual fascination soon develops into love. As a consequence, when a fake telegram comes, calling the Brocktons out of town, Ruth is the recipient of an invitation asking her to stay at the Palmer home until her "parents" return.

Thus do the Brocktons' plans proceed smoothly. There is one fly in the ointment, however, for the Brocktons keep hearing that a headquarters man by the name of Ferris is on their trail. These reports persist and none of the crooks rests very easily when Ruth finally gains access to the home of the Palmers.

Ruth has not been in the Palmer household long before she makes a startling discovery. The jewels coveted by the Brocktons prove to be worthless paste imitations, but moreover the Palmers themselves turn out to be another gang of crooks, bent on robbing the supposedly wealthy Brocktons! When each side learns the truth about the other they decide to merge their forces and operate together, but then—

Ruth Brockton causes a surprise. She is none other than the mysterious Ferris from police headquarters! The crooks are in consternation until she makes known her decision to let them all go, providing they cease being criminals and devote their attentions to hunting down criminals. As for Tom Palmer, of course, he is the first to be pardoned.

SUGGESTIONS

Select offers you a title with this picture that means something. Here, indeed, is a real Broadway success picture. The play enjoyed a phenomenal run in all the large cities. Use the title prominently and play up the author, for he is one of the prominent playwrights of the day.

In addition to the title there is the star and the wonderful supporting cast. Of course Miss Young is a card but don't overlook that support. Practically all the supporting cast is noteworthy, particularly Jack Holt, Frank Campeau, Tully Marshall and Edwin Stevens. Mention them in your advertising, for their many appearances in pictures have gained them a large following.

Allan Dwan also is one of the better known directors in the field. He, too, will add to the box-office value of the production.

In advertising the picture don't, by any means, give away the secret of the plot, for the suspense is carried right through up to the end and the

“OH, JOHNNY!”—GOLDWYN

Comedy of Contrasts Marks Louis Bennison's Screen Debut

LOUIS BENNISON, the new star of the Betzwood Film Company, who is to be presented in a series of pictures through Goldwyn, has a fresh, unassuming and altogether pleasing personality. He makes a fine cowboy and ought to inasmuch as hearsay informs us he once was of the plains. His enthusiasm for that which he undertakes is also marked. In fact, his enthusiasm and personality are so predominant that one forgets to gauge his ability as an actor.

“Oh, Johnny!” by Wilson Bayley, selected as his introductory vehicle is a comedy that contrasts the West with the East. The gist of the idea is that Johnny, happy-go-lucky cowboy and miner, comes east to be snubbed by society, but also to teach it a few things about itself. And when he returns to his home the girl is by his side.

There is a counterplot of crooks and swindlers to make things exciting and be sure that there are a number of laughs. This contrast of the two sides of the great American continent is always productive of some amount of comedy when handled intelligently. And when it comes to bringing out these humorous contrasts the author has done well. His continuity, on the other hand, is rather rough shod—not at all polished or skillful. But withal “Oh, Johnny!” is amusing. No one, we wager, will consider his time or his money ill spent in seeing it.

The production, the cast and the photographic work are commendable.—Length, 5 reels.—Peter Milne.

CATCH LINES

Mr. Bennison is a star new to the screen—yet his performance in “Oh, Johnny!” firmly established him as a star by right of personality. His smile and his manner are irresistible—and so is the comedy that forms his first Goldwyn vehicle. You'll like it.

In which a breezy, happy-go-lucky westerner rescues his lady love from crooks and swindlers of the East to the tune of many laughs.

He didn't have very good table manners and a lawn fete didn't seem like home to him, but, by heck, he had a heart of gold, and when it came to quick action against crooks and swindlers he was there with the goods. “Oh, Johnny!” is a romantic comedy that hands out a real laugh in every scene.

Produced under the direction of Ira M. Lowry, the man responsible for “For the Freedom of the World” and “For the Freedom of the East,” two of the Goldwyn specials.

AD. TALK

On _____ of _____ week the management of the _____ theatre will present “Oh, Johnny!” a new comedy contrasting the East with the West. More than ordinary interest is attached to this presentation in that the picture introduces to the screen a new star in the person of Louis Bennison. Mr. Bennison is possessed of an unassuming and pleasing personality and appears to the manner born in his western clothes. Little was known of him on the speaking stage until a couple of seasons ago he startled New York and came into popularity over night by his playing in “Johnny, Get Your Gun,” a stage play concerning life in the motion picture studio. He exhibited himself to such advantage in this production that soon afterwards he was signed up by the Betzwood Film Company to do pictures. “Oh, Johnny!” is the first of his series, all of which will be distributed through Goldwyn Pictures Corporation. “Oh, Johnny!” tells the story of Johnny Burke, a western miner, who comes to the East when he learns that his partner in the Lost Camp Mine, Adele Butler, is being swindled by her uncle and aunt. Out of his native garb Johnny appears to poor advantage at a lawn fete or at dinner. His manners for such occasions have been gleaned from a text-book and not a very accurate one either. But when it comes to handling the cheaters and rounding up three crooks Johnny is in his element. Then indeed do the ways of the East melt into insignificance compared to those of the West. Throughout its length “Oh, Johnny!” hands out laughs and thrills and a pretty romance. It is thoroughly worth while.

SUGGESTIONS

All advertising that you do on this production should emphasize the fact that Bennison is a star new to the films and that his personality is a happy-go-lucky, instantly appealing one. You can mention his stage success “Johnny, Get Your Gun” and with profit because this play had quite a run on Broadway only a few seasons ago and was generally well liked. The story which shows a westerner in the East is nothing original, but you might hint at it and relate some of the interesting passages because this sort of stuff always seems to carry a great popular appeal. You can promise a fast, pleasing comedy and you won't have any disappointed patrons because “Oh, Johnny!” is just that. The title of the feature gives you a good chance to use the popular song, “Oh, Johnny!” providing you can get the rights, as one of the dominating tunes in your musical program. The character of the tune would fit this picture particularly well.

THE STORY

Johnny Burke, cowboy and miner, becomes more than comfortably well off through the discovery of the Lost Camp Mine. John Bryson, a capitalist from the East, tries in various ways to secure the mine and employs a half-breed to help him, but none of their moves is quick enough for Johnny. He refutes every underhanded attempt they make to get possession of the land. One day Johnny discovers an old prospector near the entrance to his claim. The old man has labored long to get there and believes that he has made the first discovery. He dies, telling Johnny to develop the mine for his daughter, Adele. And Johnny, particularly when he sees Adele, decides that he will follow instructions. Bryson, returning to the East, confers with Mr. and Mrs. Van Pelt Butler, Adele's uncle and aunt, and tells them of her fortune. They invite

"COME AGAIN SMITH"—HODKINSON

Fits the Star Like Proverbial Glove; Interest Is Plentiful

IN writing the story of this picture for Mr. Kerrigan, the author has hit the nail square on the head; it could not fit him any better. He is given the role of a millionaire's son, who is accused by his father of knowing how to spend money, but not how to make it.

Most of the picture's interest hinges on that part of the story where the hero, while sitting on a bench in the park among other tramps, is picked up by a philanthropist, taken to his home, is fed, clothed, and told to enjoy himself at his expense for a week. When asked to relate his past history, he is laughed at when he tells them he is the son of an oil magnate of the West.

Your patrons should enjoy this picture immensely, as it is full of life; it holds the spectator in continual suspense, and it is unusually consistent for an improbable story; besides, clean and wholesome comedy situations are scattered throughout the plot.—Released Feb. 10.—Length, 5 reels.—P. S. Harrison.

THE CAST

Joe Smith.....J. Warren Kerrigan
Ned Stevens.....H. A. Barrows
Franklin Overton.....William Conklin
Anne Stevens.....Winnifred Greenwood
Lucy Stevens.....Lois Wilson
Joe Smith, Sr.....Charles French
John Creighton.....Walter Perry
By John H. Blackwood.
Directed by E. Mason Hopper.
Supervised by Jesse D. Hampton.

CATCH LINES

Joe Smith, Sr., millionaire oil magnate, wagered Joe Smith, Jr., his son and heir, that he couldn't make his own living. One year later Joe, Jr., found himself on a park bench in New York, penniless, hungry and dirty and possessed of a pretty good idea that father was right! But he didn't give up and success came when it was least expected.

J. Warren Kerrigan again supported by Lois Wilson. A romance of an unusual character. The story of a millionaire's son whom people believed a pauper.

Some hard luck! To be stranded on a park bench without a cent in his pocket when his father was three thousand miles away with several millions! And no one would believe that Joe Smith was the son of the famous oil magnate. How he proved it is a story of excitement and romance.

AD TALK

J. Warren Kerrigan in "Come Again Smith" will be the star at the _____ theatre on _____ of _____ week. "Come Again Smith" is by John H. Blackwood and tells the story of a millionaire's son who becomes rather peeved when his father tells him that he doesn't believe it possible for him to earn any money. Joe, the young man, insists that he can and thereupon his father tells him to go ahead. One year later Joe finds himself on a New York park bench, penniless, dirty, hungry and possessed of a strong notion that "father was right." But along comes one Red Stevens. Mr. Stevens is a fellow who believes in human nature and he prefers to invest in Joe rather than in oil stock that he has a strong suspicion is worthless.

And there begins Joe's business success and also his romantic success. To go into a detailed description of the rest of the action in the short space provided here would be to spoil one of the cleverest, most genuine and appealing stories ever transferred to the screen. "Come Again Smith" offers Kerrigan a role in which he appears to excellent advantage, while the support with which he is surrounded is of the highest order, including as it does Lois Wilson, H. A. Barrows, William Conklin, Winnifred Greenwood, Charles French and Walter Perry.

"Come Again Smith" was produced under the direction of E. Mason Hopper, a capable man in his line. Other features on the bill of the _____ theatre for the same dates are _____.

THE STORY

Joe Smith, son of a multi-millionaire western oil magnate, finds himself on a New York park bench, penniless, dirty and hungry. One year before his father had said that he couldn't earn his own living. Joe had said that he could. Now he found himself thinking he couldn't. Ned Stevens, a kindly business man, decides to make an investment in Joe and see whether he'll bring returns. He prefers this method of investment to playing with Franklin Overton's oil stock which isn't exceptionally secure. So Joe is taken to Stevens' home and made presentable. Then unexpectedly Stevens' wife, Anne, and his sister, Lucy, return from a trip. Joe is introduced as a guest from the West and to make the story good, the millionaire's son tells the true story of his life. It impresses Lucy, but Stevens and Overton think him a wonderful liar.

Overton watches Joe's attachment to Lucy grow with jealousy, but he finds the young man valuable, for his story regarding his relationship with the powerful Smith of the West having circulated, Overton's shady proposition prospers when he introduces Smith as his partner. Anne is persuaded to invest in Overton's proposition and when called to furnish a margin she pawns her jewels. The Stevens suspects Joe of stealing them. Anne confesses the story to Lucy, who tells Joe. He thereupon thrashes Overton, but the pawn ticket is not to be found.

Joe's father having heard of the escapade comes east just as Overton is attempting to accuse Joe of having pawned the jewels by secreting the ticket in his clothes. Matters are straightway straightened out. It is proven that Joe's story was no lie. Overton is exposed and Lucy and Joe are very happy in each other's company.

SUGGESTIONS

This romantic, unusual story best deserves partial relation in any advertising done. Tell the predicament of Joe Smith, millionaire's son, who finds himself down and out on a park bench. Then suggest that romance and adventure hovered near and that ultimately Joe made good by seizing every opportunity and telling the truth, although no one but the girl believed him. This is a fascinating insight into the story and ought to create enough interest in the reader to attract him to your theatre.

The title is catchy and should be prominently displayed, while Kerrigan is a star who has held his own for a number of years. Also use Lois Wilson's name. Her many appearances with Kerrigan have created for her a following of considerable proportions and she has a certain "box office" value that should not be overlooked by the exhibitor.

Here's Opportunity to See if Patrons Want More War Stories

THIS is a war picture clear through; consequently, the satisfaction it will give depends on how your patrons like this sort of subjects.

As far as the production end of the picture is concerned, you will find few faults with it, as a considerable sum of money has been spent to make it as realistic as possible; but in regards to the entertaining angle you may find much to question, as several of the situations are gruesome—in fact too gruesome, close up scenes of bandaged soldiers in agony being often shown; blood leaking through the bandages is also shown in some of them.

What the picture does is to arouse the spectator's passion of anger against the shameful conduct of the Germans, who are shown as handling the nurses roughly; the wronging of a woman (not the heroine) is also hinted at.—Length, 6 reels.—P. S. Harrison.

 Scenario by Jack Cunningham.
 Directed by Wallace Worsley.

AD TALK

The second picture offered by the United Picture Theatres of America, Inc., will be presented at the theatre on week. This subject stars Kitty Gordon and is known as "Adele." It is the story of an American nurse's adventures in the European war zone and is replete with situations of a thrilling character. The United Picture Theatres' first offering was "The Light of Western Stars" with Dustin Farnum. This production firmly established the company as one of the leaders in the photoplay producing field and "Adele" adds still further lustre to the name of this organization.

"Adele" is taken from "The Nurse's Story," by Adele Bleneau and is said to be a skillful combination of fact and fiction. Adele, an American nurse, is one of the first to volunteer for services overseas after the outbreak of the war. On the way over she meets Captain Fraser of the British army and later when she is stationed at an advance hospital she again sees him, this time seriously wounded. A German captain who had admired Adele in Washington is later brought in. Jealous of Fraser, he rips the bandages from his wounds when unobserved. Adele comes just in time to save the Britisher's life. But later the hospital falls into the hands of the enemy and the enemy captain has the lovers in his power.

The film builds to a thrilling climax wherein the quick wit of the American girl is pitted against the brutality of her captors. How she wins out over them is told in a denouement of great dramatic intensity. Miss Gordon receives exceptional support from Mahlon Hamilton, Wedgwood Nowell and Joseph Dowling. The picture was directed by Wallace Worsley.

CATCH LINES

The story of an American nurse in France—a thrilling page from the history of the Great War.

Captured by the Germans, Adele was given the choice of betraying an Allied secret or seeing the man she loved, Captain Fraser of the British Army, shot down on a trumped up charge of espionage. How she managed this trying situation is thrillingly told in the climax of "Adele."

Kitty Gordon, the magnificent, in a photoplay of the war. A story that will thrill you—that will make you sit tight with wonder. The predicament that Adele Bleneau finds herself in seems to close all chance of escape. And yet she finds a way out—a way that can be seen in "Adele."

Adapted by Jack Cunningham from Adele Bleneau's thrilling romance, "The Nurse's Story"—it is a photoplay that will grip you with every scene. No war picture like it has been produced.

THE STORY

Adele Bleneau is the daughter of a famous Louisiana doctor and she takes a great interest in his hospital work, learning much regarding medicine and finally qualifying as a nurse. When Doctor Bleneau dies she is his soul heir but a life of luxury does not appeal to her and when the war comes she is one of the first to volunteer her services as nurse. Adele is loved by Captain Fraser of the British Army, whom she meets in Washington. It so happens that she sails for France on the same boat as the Captain who is returning to resume active service in the trenches. Captain von Schulling is a would-be rival for Adele's hand but his suit makes small progress.

When nursing the wounded at the front, Adele learns that Fraser lies very seriously wounded in a section still swept by shell fire. It is she who organizes a rescue party and brings the Captain in from his perilous position. Shortly afterwards von Schulling, also wounded, is brought into the hospital. He is placed in the same room as Fraser. When Adele leaves the room he jumps from his bed and tears the bandages from Fraser's wound. Adele, returning, fights with von Schulling and overpowers him in his weakened condition. She quickly goes to Fraser's aid.

Shortly after this the enemy surrounds the hospital—the tide of battle turns and Adele and Fraser find themselves in von Schulling's power. Adele is given the choice of betraying the Allies or seeing Fraser shot down on a trumped up charge of spying. How she manages this situation forms a climax of thrilling power.

SUGGESTIONS

There have been a lot of war pictures but most all of them have centered around the hero. Here in "Adele" a nurse is the main character. Stress this point in your advertising and you will be playing from a different angle. The problem which confronts Adele in the climax of the story bears relation in your advertising. She is confronted with the alternative of telling an important Allied secret or seeing her lover shot on a false charge of espionage. Here is a strong argument and one which you can use in any advertising with advantage.

Feature Kitty Gordon prominently, for her last screen appearance was made some time ago and there are those who will be anxious to see her. She is known generally for the splendor of her gowns. You might say that in this picture she gives these the slip and dons a Red Cross costume—this would be another way of creating interest, inasmuch as it is such a contrast with her usual appearances. Mahlon Hamilton is a serial hero and has played with Petrova in a good many pictures. His name will carry weight in some localities.

Mrs. Butler schemes to marry her off to the so-called Earl of Barncastle, a man who is, in reality, a crook, while with Bryce, Van Pelt Butler himself plans to swindle her of her portion of the Lost Mine stock. And then Johnny appears on the scene.

He gets a cold reception from Mrs. Butler while her husband retreats to his room, fearful of the consequences if Johnny ever learns what he has done. Things come to a climax when the Earl and two of his pals loot the house, store the booty in a trunk and make off, taking the girl with them. Just as a mock marriage is about to be pulled off, Johnny emerges from the trunk and makes his presence known in no uncertain terms. After that Johnny and Adele return to the West, none the worse for their experience in the too effete East.

"TODD OF THE TIMES"—PATHE

Star's Work Is Good and Story Has Been Treated Well

THIS picture should give good satisfaction, although it may not cause anybody to rave over it. There is nothing extraordinary about the story, except that good treatment and the star's good acting help to put it over.

The plot deals with newspaper men and the methods they use in putting over a "big scoop." The hero is a city editor who aspires to be a managing editor. He eventually succeeds in becoming one, by his success in exposing a gang of racehorse track thieves, headed by the town hotel owner, who was posing as a reformer and a saint.

There are many comedy situations throughout, which should draw good laughs. The picture is well directed and photographed.—Released Feb. 9.—Length, 5 reels.—P. S. Harrison.

CATCH LINES

Frank Keenan in a human, humorous role. Mr. Keenan has been seen in a number of exceptionally strong and dramatic features of late. In "Todd of the Times" he again demonstrates his ability, as in "More Trouble," to play homely comedy and to play it well. There is much that is amusing and much that is real in "Todd of the Times." It's a picture that can best be described as "different."

An entrancing story of a newspaper in a small town. All the characters from Theobald Todd, the plodding master of journalism, to Irene Rich, the society reporter, are interesting and amusing. And the plot is one of the most entertaining of the lighter sort that has been offered in some time.

Theobald Todd was henpecked until his great work on a single story won him the managing editor's chair of the Springfield Times. That night when he went home to his wife he turned the tables—insisted on equal suffrage and told his wife what to do and how to do it. Frank Keenan in "Todd of the Times" is one of the most human and humorous pictures of the year.

AD TALK

Frank Keenan will be the star at the theatre on _____ of _____ week in a Pathe feature entitled "Todd of the Times." This picture is quite unlike the heavy dramatic subjects which Mr. Keenan has been offering in the past. If comparisons must be made, it is somewhat similar in character to his previously successful comedy, "More Trouble," although the content of the five reels reveals a totally different sort of story. Mr. Keenan is as able a delineator of comedy and of homely character as he is of strong, highly sustained parts. And in "Todd of the Times" he makes this fact clear, for as the meek and mild Theobald Todd, city editor of the Springfield Times, he creates a character that is both humorous and human.

It is Todd's ambition to become managing editor of the paper some day, but lack of aggressiveness always stands in his way. His big chance comes when the paper is left in his charge for a short time while his employer is away. Todd gets on the track of some gamblers and proceeds to get the whole story, which is particularly interesting, inasmuch as the leader of the miscreants is supposedly the town's most respected citizen. The owner of the paper is pleased at Todd's ingenuity in handling the story and afterwards gives him the position he so long coveted.

Interwoven with this story, is the home life of Todd, which, at first, is much the same as his office life. His wife continually lords it over him, but when he gains his promotion in the business world he takes it upon himself to remove the family troubles from his wife and don them himself.

THE STORY

Theobald Todd of the little town of Springfield is city editor of the Times and his ambition is to some day assume the duties of managing editor. His lack of ambition seems to hinder him at all times and although he is known as possessing a wonderful nose for news, the owner of the paper looks upon him as its city editor and nothing else. Even when the managing editor's chair is vacated Todd is not offered the position. His attitude in business is much the same as in his home. Mrs. Todd has already had one husband and she knows the managing end of the game pretty well. Consequently, Todd finds himself bossed around both at home and in the office.

Rodney Plummer, foremost citizen of Springfield, sets out on a vice-crusade, his purpose being to sweep the gamblers from the town. Todd, during the absence of his employer, gets on the track of a bunch of race track men who operate under the guise of brokers. His clues lead him into possession of all the facts of the case and he trails the gang to the man higher up, who proves to be none other than Rodney Plummer himself. His reform crusade was only a bit of camouflage, after all. Todd gets out a special edition of the paper and startles the whole village.

When the owner of the Times returns he is so pleased that he immediately makes Todd managing editor, and his success at the office giving him courage to a degree never before dreamed of, Todd returns home and straightway dons the trousers so long worn by his wife.

SUGGESTIONS

Inasmuch as Frank Keenan usually appears in features of a heavy dramatic character, be sure to bring out in your advertising of this production that it is a light subject of a humorous and a human nature. Say that it is a story of small town newspaper life with Keenan giving a thoroughly human characterization of a small town newspaper man. You haven't got much to offer in the way of plot, so be sure to accentuate the picture's humorous and human interest points. Relate the manner in which the newspaper man finally found out how to rule his family when success in business came to him.

Play up Keenan's name, for he is a real star; one so called and deserved. The advertising cuts supplied you by Pathe are a new departure for this house and it would be well to secure some of them, for they are all good and give a good idea of the character of the production.

"THE HIGHEST TRUMP"—VITAGRAPH

Entertaining Spy and War Drama with Loads of Action

"THE HIGHEST TRUMP" starts off with a good touch of mystery, keeps the suspense rising constantly and introduces a number of novel situations that make the whole a thoroughly pleasing piece of entertainment. If the story moved at a slower pace one would feel obliged to point out its various impossibilities, but the fact is that it moves with such startling rapidity and offers such a kaleidoscopic series of incidents that it is entertaining all the while and seldom palpably manufactured.

Its authors, H. H. Van Loan and the star, Earle Williams, have kept it moving like lightning and evidently sought to build to a highly effective climax wherein the heroine discovers her husband wearing an iron cross. This scene the director has chosen to treat more in a comedy light and while the effect is good it is not exactly in tune with the beginning of the story.

The airplane stuff introduced including a fight in the clouds and the crash to earth of one machine is particularly commendable. It is well introduced and provides a number of thrills. One of the best pieces of double exposure work ever accomplished appears in the first reel. Mr. Williams and Miss Darmond appear to advantage in all their scenes.—Length, 5 reels.—Released Feb. 3.—Peter Milne.

CATCH LINES

Written by H. H. Van Loan, one of the rising authors of the day, in collaboration with the star himself.

It was on their peculiar honeymoon that Lois discovered her husband in possession of Germany's Iron Cross. Was he a traitor? Should she kill him to save him from himself? A startling climax caps "The Highest Trump," now on view at the theatre.

AD TALK

Earle Williams will be seen in something of a new role when he appears in "The Highest Trump," at the theatre on week. This is a spy and war story but rest assured that it departs from the beaten track not a little. No atrocities are revealed before the spectator's eyes. Instead, the rapid, breezy action of "The Highest Trump" is loaded with sound mental and physical thrills, while the scenes laid in the war zone are played in lighter vein, a vein, let it be said, that is considerable more realistic than the blood-and-thunder tempo in which such scenes are usually played.

"The Highest Trump" was written by H. H. Van Loan, one of the rising screen writers of the day, in collaboration with Mr. Williams himself. These two have fashioned a particularly adroit and original story. John Paget, when involved in an affair of honor, takes his life after sending for his twin brother, Richard. Circumstances force Richard to assume the role of his brother, even before the late man's fiancée, Lois Graham. It develops shortly afterwards that John was in the power of German spies and that he had financed an airplane company that planned to deliver defective machines to the United States Government.

Of course it is Richard's mission to combat these spies and this he does throughout a series of most unusual and thrilling situations. There are some airplane battles in "The Highest Trump," one of which shows a machine crashing to the ground and exploding that puts anything else ever done in this line far in the shade. Grace Darmond appears as the leading woman in the picture and her beauty and personality are, in a large measure, responsible for the picture's success.

THE STORY

Richard Paget is called from Washington to find his twin brother, John, dead, a victim of poison. In John's papers he finds a plea to him to take over his affairs. Although it is a difficult proposition, particularly as John was engaged to the beautiful Lois Graham, Richard starts in to fulfill the wish. Shortly he discovers that his brother had financed an airplane company, the officers of which are all German spies. It is their plan to make defective planes and so hinder the activities of the American fliers. Richard says nothing, but steadily goes about his work.

Soon he enlists and, winning a commission in the aviation corps, goes to France. Lois follows after as Red Cross nurse. General Graham, her father, is at the head of Richard's squadron. He admires Klassig, one of his lieutenants, very much, not knowing that this man is in reality a German spy. This information, however, Richard has long known, inasmuch as Klassig was one of the prime movers in the airplane corporation. Richard proves himself the master of the enemy in the air. Shortly after his arrival abroad he marries Lois.

Klassig gives him instructions to fly over the German lines and descend. There he is received by the German officers and decorated with the Iron Cross for his work in the United States. Suspicion finally descends on him and he is arrested at orders from Washington. It is not until then that he explains his case; that he had assumed his brother's role for the purpose of double-crossing the spies. This confession out, Lois admires him the more and they go into each other's arms, despite the fact that the enemy is staging a little raid around them.

SUGGESTIONS

Bring out in all advertising that you do on this production that it is a breezy, swift and happy story of the war and of spies, with just a touch of mystery. If you follow this course you will distinguish it from the usual cut-and-dried war play with its attendant scenes of murder and atrocities. Feature the wonderful airplane battles in the film. While some of these scenes have been taken from the weeklies, they have been worked into the major film excellently and it takes an expert to distinguish between them and the other portions of the film. There is one scene that shows a machine crashing to the earth and exploding, which you can well feature in your advertising as the only scene of its kind ever done.

An Example of Excellent Production with Patriotism Uppermost

HERE is a picture you don't have to be ashamed to show to your patrons; nor to invent any excuses to offer to them.

The story is full of "juice" and well put together. It is about a love affair that starts in America and ends in Mexico, just on the other side of the border. The hero of it is unjustly accused as being a coward, but he proves he is not one by risking his life to save the heroine.

The element of American patriotism forms one of the main features of the story. In advertising the picture, however, be careful and avoid conveying the impression that it is a war subject, because it is not. There are no war scenes shown in it, nor does it deal with any of the phases of the war; its object is simply to teach every American, whether a Northerner or a Southerner, to be loyal to the flag, and heartily support the nation in this war; to attain this end, it uses the hero, the son of a proud Southerner, as an illustration.

It is a clean entertainment.—Released through Pathe Exchange, Jan. 27.—Length, 6 reels.—P. S. Harrison.

CATCH LINES

Robert Carr lived in the past. A Southern Confederacy was still his ideal. The Stars and Stripes constituted a foreign flag. But one day came the awakening. Robert learned that a united nation stood in defense of united ideals. The story of his awakening is superbly told in "Fighting Through."

Robert Carr didn't have much use for the United States until he saw a Mexican renegade jumping on its flag. Then his fighting blood came to the surface.

Written and directed by W. Christy Cabanne, one of the leading directors of the art. It was Mr. Cabanne who gave us "The Lamb," "Draft 258" and "The Slacker." See his latest contribution to the screen. It is his best.

A thrilling tale of the Mexican border in which the latent patriotism in a southern gentleman is aroused to fighting pitch.

AD TALK

"Fighting Through," a new picture of particular interest, will be shown on the screen of the theatre on _____ of _____ week. This bears the Hodkinson trademark and has E. K. Lincoln as its star. The picture was written and directed by W. Christy Cabanne, one of the cleverest men in the business. It was Mr. Cabanne who produced the first Douglas Fairbanks picture, "The Lamb," which skyrocketed him to fame over night, and it was he who was responsible for the great patriotic feature, "Draft 258," and following that, "The Slacker."

In "Fighting Through" Mr. Cabanne has produced a patriotic picture of an entirely different sort. The central male character is a southerner who even in these modern times looks with disfavor on the Northern States. He forever dwells on the lost cause of the Civil War. The Southern Confederacy is his nation. How he is made to see the real patriotism through a series of startling experiences on the Mexican border and how he proves to the girl he loves that he is neither a coward nor a disloyalist, forms a photoplay full of stirring incident.

Mr. Cabanne's fine directing hand is to be noted in every scene of the film. The action is fast, there are numerous touches of a real human character, while the suspense of the climax is built to an unusually high point. Mr. Lincoln is a fitting type for the stellar role, while his performance is to be commended throughout the action. He is supported by a capable cast, including Millicent Fisher, Spottiswoode Aitken, Hayward Mack, Frederick Vroom and Helen Dunbar.

SUGGESTIONS

Your strong selling point with regards this feature is undoubtedly the leading male character. Bring out the fact that he cared little for the United States until an encounter with Mexican renegades stirred his latent patriotism. Feature this fact in the most forceful, punchy catch lines you can fix up. Get the spirit of patriotism in all your ad copy, only be sure to clearly bring out the character of the production so that patrons will not be misled into thinking that it is a story of the European war.

E. K. Lincoln is a pretty popular actor and deserve to be featured prominently. So also does the director, W. Christy Cabanne, for although he has not done much work recently, his past pictures have been generally successful and his name has often appeared before the public.

THE STORY

Robert Carr, a Virginian, has been brought up in a family that believes in the lost cause of the Civil War. His flag is still the Stars and Bars. He is engaged to Maryland Warren, a girl of the South who is thoroughly American. One day while the two are riding they are joined by Raymond Haynes, Robert's would-be rival for the hand of Maryland. In climbing a barbed wire fence for flowers Robert tears the seat of his trousers and is seized with a shyness that he cannot overcome. As a consequence he is unable to follow after a runaway horse that dashes by. Raymond goes to the rescue and Maryland calls Robert a coward.

When, the next evening, Maryland sees Robert remain seated during the evening ceremony of lowering the Stars and Stripes, she is convinced that he is disloyal as well as a coward. She refuses to have anything more to do with him. And so they go on until one night Robert is beaten to insensibility by thugs and cast into a freight car. When he awakes it is somewhere in Arizona in company with a Mexican who is in search of the bandits who wronged his sister. In the meantime Maryland goes west on a visit. The train is held up and the girl is taken off and

"THE ROUGH NECK"—WORLD

WORLD FILM certainly picked a good one in which to present Montagu Love this time and after all is said and done it only goes to show what real, skilful team work will produce in the way of a feature. "The Rough Neck" was written by Harry O. Hoyt, who conceived a good idea and developed it with discrimination, and Oscar Apfel, one of the most dependable men in the directing art, had charge of the production. The results of this combination show in every episode of the film. It is the handling that has made it the fine box-office feature it is.

Montagu Love is the star and takes the role of a lumber-camp boss, who shortly changes his activities to a big city. He is one of those honest, fighting fellows who make short work of the corrupt political ring when once he gets started. The romance is closely interwoven with this theme. It is so well woven with it, in fact, that it is worthy the attention of all who would make better pictures. In short, the scenario was a thing of skill and merit, unless our guess is far off.

The part is full worthy Mr. Love's ability, and his support, which includes Barbara Castleton and the always dependable Frank Mayo, is worthy of praise.—Length, 5 reels.—Released Feb. 3.—Peter Milne.

AD TALK

Montagu Love will be the star at the theatre on _____ of _____ week in his latest World feature entitled "The Rough Neck." This is, without doubt, one of the strongest and generally entertaining features that World has presented in some time. Harry O. Hoyt is its author, while the direction was in charge of Oscar Apfel, one of the most capable men in his art. The joint work of these two men has resulted in a photoplay of unusual situations and one which sounds a varying degree of dramatic high lights during its unwinding on the screen.

Mr. Love is seen in the role of a lumber camp boss who is called home to the city by his father, its political boss. The older man realizes that he has not much longer to live and it is his one desire that his son continue his work where he leaves it. This the "rough neck" from the woods agrees to do, not knowing that in reality his father was regularly swindling the city of many thousands of dollars. All this he learns when he steps into his father's shoes and he resolves to make a general cleanup. How this is accomplished despite the severest opposition together with his romance with the daughter of one of the ward leaders forms an altogether thrilling photoplay.

Barbara Castleton and Frank Mayo are seen heading Mr. Love's supporting cast which does commendable work from first to last.

THE STORY

John Masters is called from his lumber camp to the city, where his father, its political boss, is in his declining years. It is the elder Masters' wish that his son carry on his work where he leaves it and to this end he initiates him into the politics of the town. He meets Ryan, a lesser boss; Armitage, a contractor; Ellery Dale, one of his satellites, and last but not least, Frances Armitage. To this girl he is instantly attracted but she believes him a brute and will have little to do with him. After the death of his father, however, Masters forces her to marry him, threatening to send her father and Dale, to whom she was engaged, to jail unless she comply with his proposal.

She consents but refuses to have anything to do with him after they are married. Dale and Armitage tell Frances that Masters has in his possession forged documents that will send them to jail if he ever has them published. They ask her to get these and with this aim in view, she asks for the combination of the safe when Masters plans to return to the camp for a few days. Knowing her motive, he gives her the combination but then kidnaps her and takes her off to the camp with him. When Dale opens the safe he finds a note in the strong box from Masters, saying that the papers he desires are in his (Master's) possession.

Furious, Dale collects a bunch of ruffians and goes to the camp determined to get the papers. In the meantime Masters has told Frances their true contents—that they contain damaging evidence against her father and his own father too and that unless the others will repay to the city all the money of which they defrauded it he will publish the documents, at all cost. This throws a new light on Masters before Frances and it proves the deciding weight in the scales for she has grown to love him during their stay in the woods. When Masters is attacked by the thugs she goes to the camp for aid and returns just in time to save her husband from being severely beaten. And after that they start their "honeymoon."

CATCH LINES

The political ring of a big city thought it could make short work of a lumber camp boss who had come from out the woods to take charge of affairs. But they didn't reckon on fighting a hard-headed, hard-fisted, man, and John Masters was of this mold. That manner in which he cleans up the town is graphically told in "The Rough Neck."

She married him, hating the very sight of him—he had threatened to send her father and fiancé to jail unless she complied with his wishes—so she was forced into this wedlock that was utterly revolting to her. Fate plays a peculiar hand in this affair and brings on a surprising series of climaxes that are truly absorbing. See them in "The Rough Neck."

"THE HIDDEN TRUTH"—SELECT

Combination of Western Mystery, Society and Melodrama

ALL four points of the dramatic compass are skimmed in the plot development of the dramatic offering that presents Anna Case for the first time to a motion picture audience. A combination of Western mystery, society and sprinklings of the melodrama, together, play active parts in unfolding the plot of "The Hidden Truth," scenarioized from the novel by S. M. Weller and produced by the International Film Service Company, under the direction of Julius Steger, for distribution on the Select Pictures' program of specials.

The opening, depicting a typical Western dance-hall scene, admirably staged by Director Steger, promises exciting entertainment. The Western atmosphere closes over a strong melodramatic situation, in which a character is murdered. The action shifts to the unconventional Metropolis, where a wealthy business man and the idol of the Western dance-hall, an orphan girl, hold the stage. Considering the fact that this marks Miss Case's first appearance in silent drama, the part that is given her to portray is done with feeling and sincerity, but her actions do not always ring true. The support is good.—Released Jan. 20.—Length, 5 reels.—J. L. Kelley.

AD TALK

Anna Case, the famous operatic star, will make her screen debut at the theatre on of week in the Select production entitled "The Hidden Truth." Like other stars of the operatic stage who have gone into pictures Miss Case reveals an ability that stands her in excellent stead before the camera. Perhaps it seems strange that stars of this branch of art such as Caruso, Geraldine Farrar, Mme. Cavalieri and others should appear to such advantage before the camera but when one gives the subject any amount of thought he finds that this is a natural state of affairs. No person can sing well without putting expression in his voice and this expression is bound to appear in the face as well. As a consequence Miss Case's brilliant performance in "The Hidden Truth" was to be expected.

She is given the role of a western dance hall girl who appears strangely out of place in the crude environment of Nugget City. When chance gives her her opportunity to go to the East she takes it and, posing under an assumed name she soon wins the love of one of the East's leading citizens. When, however, this man discovers her true identity he turns against her for the time being. But love finally bridges all gulfs, created by class and the ending finds the two happy in each other's arms.

Miss Case receives valuable support from such distinguished players as Charles Richman, John Charles, Forrest Robinson, Grace Reals, Fred Hearn and Madelyn Clare. The scenario for "The Hidden Truth" was prepared by S. M. Weller while the direction was in charge of Julius Steger.

THE STORY

Helen Merrill is a dancing girl in a dance hall in one of the Western mining camps. She is beautiful, has a wonderful voice, and is the most popular girl in Nugget City. Helen befriends another girl in the resort, Myrtle Cadby, whose husband, a drunkard and a bully, treats her abusively. Sheridan and "Snipe" Roach, mining sharpers, salt a mine and attempt to sell it. Charles Taylor, a rich New Yorker, sends George Reed, his mining expert, to investigate the proposition. Reed quickly sees through the fraud, but promises to say nothing if the profit is split three ways. Helen hears part of their plan, and knows that there is something wrong somewhere.

Myrtle kills her husband when he tries to assault her as she lies ill in bed. The shock later kills her, but before she dies she gives Helen a letter and tells her to use it as an escape from the life she is leading. The letter is addressed to Charles Taylor, to whom Sheridan and Roach are trying to sell the salted mine. He was an old mining partner of Myrtle's father and intended to marry Myrtle when she came East, although he had never seen her.

Helen goes to the Taylor home and is taken for Myrtle. She lets the situation drift. Romance develops between her and Taylor and they become engaged. Reed returns with his glowing reports of the mine. He recognizes Helen as the dancing girl and tells Taylor. She confesses and Taylor tells her she has forfeited his love. She later saves Taylor from being swindled and love again comes into its own.

CATCH LINES

Marking the screen debut of Anna Case, the famous operatic star. Her performance in "The Hidden Truth" proves her every bit as capable a screen actress as she is a singer. The story provided her is filled with interesting situations. It is one which no patron of the theatre can well afford to miss.

Anna Case has a beautiful voice on the phonograph. You know instinctively that that voice must belong to a beautiful woman. Your chance to see Anna Case lies in "The Hidden Truth" which marks her screen debut and which is now showing at the theatre.

SUGGESTIONS

Anna Case is your big card with respect to advertising this production. She is a well-known opera singer and although it doesn't always prove the rule that such a star will attract on the screen you can make the most of the big name and take a chance.

"RESTLESS SOULS"—TRIANGLE

Skillful Handling Makes Delicate Subject Very Good Picture

ALTHOUGH this picture deals with infidelity of married people, it is not offensive, because it has been handled in a delicate manner. Both as a production and as an entertainment, it is good and should satisfy the great majority of your patrons, in spite of the fact that the plot is old.

The dissatisfaction of a wife because her husband is not wealthy enough to buy her fine clothes and a good home, like other more fortunate husbands do, forms the basis of the story. In the end, however, by mingling with society people, she finds out that real happiness is brought, not by wealth, but by love.

The fine clothes worn by the women players should prove an attractive feature among your women patrons. The cast, direction and photography are all first class.—Released Feb. 2.—Length, 6 reels.—P. S. Harrison.

AD TALK

"Restless Souls," the Triangle play booked for exhibition at the theatre on of week is adapted from a story by the well-known writer, Cosmo Hamilton and concerns life among the idle rich. Mr. Hamilton has no superiors in writing interesting stories regarding this strata of modern society. He wields a fascinating pen and is the maker of situations of an exceptionally intense style. In "Restless Souls" he has compounded a work that reflects life in this society with a faithfulness to detail and a relentlessness in exposure of its various falsities that remains thoroughly interesting from beginning to end.

Alma Rubens, the dark beauty who has appeared with signal success in many Triangle pictures, has the stellar role in this production. She appears as the wife of a poor inventor whose envious eyes are constantly turned in the direction of her rich society friends. Chance picks her up and sets her down in this life that she has so long admired from afar but she finds that in many respects it is gross and not all the gilded fairy land that she so fondly imagined. How she is saved from disgrace by an old friend and how she finds that she is only too glad to return to her husband's arms makes a photoplay of real entertaining value.

Miss Rubens receives support from a cast that is adequate in every respect and which includes Katherine Adams, Jack Conway, Harvey Clarke, J. Barney Sherry and Eugene Burr.

THE STORY

Hugh Gregory, a poor inventor, struggles hard to perfect a submarine invention. Marion, his young wife, becomes dissatisfied for want of luxuries. Dr. Robert Calvert, the minister who performed their wedding ceremony, pays them an unexpected visit; and as he is about to call on Mr. and Mrs. Wingate, society people and friends of his, invites Marion to accompany him. She accepts. The splendor and the luxuries of their home dazzles her and after her return home, she becomes more dissatisfied than ever. Mrs. Wingate has relations with Oliver Sloan, whom she wishes to marry, but although Chester Wingate himself is in love with another woman, he refuses to grant his wife a divorce. In order to free herself, Mrs. Wingate conceives a plan whereby she hopes to compromise her husband and thus force him to grant her a divorce; so she invites Marion at their summering place. She accepts the invitation and goes there without the consent of her husband.

At the resort, Wingate becomes fascinated with Marion and seeks her company. Soon Marion becomes disgusted, as, wherever she turns her face, she sees husbands making love to the other fellows' wives; so she writes her husband a letter asking him to wire her if he wants her back. But Mrs. Wingate, to further her plans, prevents the letter from being mailed. By a clever ruse she induces her husband to go to Marion's room; she then calls the guests to witness the fact that her husband is found there, thus expecting to compromise him. Dr. Calvert, however, who was present, foresees her intentions and prevents Wingate from entering Marion's room. When the room was entered by Mrs. Wingate and her guests, Oliver Sloan was found instead. He went there to expose to Marion the scheme to compromise her.

Hugh Gregory, who was sent for by Dr. Calvert, shortly arrives on the scene. He is shocked by what has just taken place and, thinking his wife guilty, leaves for home. Realizing the injustice done to Marion, Sloan follows Gregory and, after explaining the situation, convinces him that his wife is innocent. Dr. Calvert soon arrives bringing Marion home. A reconciliation takes place between husband and wife.

CATCH LINES

Another one of Cosmo Hamilton's amazing stories of society life in which its falsities are relentlessly exposed.

She thought that riches would bring her happiness, but she found out finally that true happiness lay only in true love.

In her life of struggling poverty she looked with envy upon the lives of the rich, of which she had heard so much but seen so little. When her chance came to partake of this life she found it but a sham and was glad indeed to return to her home of love and content. See Alma Rubens in the fascinating Triangle play, "Restless Souls."

SUGGESTIONS

Here is another one of Cosmo Hamilton's stories. Are you profiting by Mr. Hamilton's big name? As a magazine writer he is one of the best known men in the field. Many popular magazines have carried his fiction serially and many of his works have been transferred to the screen, particularly so of recent date. Play his name up big and then follow up with some line regarding his ability to write of high society life. Most of his stories are laid in such a setting and he is always relentless in his expose of society's falsities.

With the case of "Restless Souls" he has evolved a plot that lends itself well to advertising of the sensational sort. By relating certain portions of the plot you will be able to awaken a good deal of interest for the production.

Alma Rubens is probably the most popular of all Triangle stars. Play her name up well and use photographs of her wherever possible, for she is a beauty, and even if your patrons are not acquainted with her name they will be attracted by her appearance.

"HERE COMES THE BRIDE"—PARAMOUNT

John Barrymore and Good Cast Make Most of Usual Story

PLEASURE seekers will consider that they received good entertaining values out of this picture, although they may not go wild over it. As a stage play, it has scored a success at the George M. Cohan theatre; but the voice, which was a helping factor, is naturally absent from the screen play; nevertheless, the mimic ability of Mr. Barrymore helps to an extent to supply the deficiency.

The story belongs to the broad farce type; the element of suspense goes hand in hand with that of comedy in it; and as it has been handled cleverly, it holds the interest to the end and entertains.

The star's work is good; so is that of the supporting cast.—Released Jan. 19.—Length, 5 reels.—

AD TALK

"Here Comes the Bride," a Paramount comedy featuring Jack Barrymore, will be the main attraction on the screen of the _____ theatre on _____ of _____ week. Taken from the stage play of the same name by Max Marcin and Roy Atwell, this opus concerns the marital troubles of one Frederick Tile, a struggling young lawyer. Tile loves Ethel Sinclair, the very pretty daughter of a corn magnate who suspects that his would-be son-in-law would be his son-in-law merely for the sake of increasing his bank account. The corn broker excludes all thought of love, being nothing more than a corn broker, after all.

When Sinclair discovers a marriage license made out for Tile and his daughter and when he learns of the planned elopement he tears up the writ in anger, thereby setting the struggling young lawyer still one dollar more to the bad. And then a windfall seems about to descend on Tile and he is happy. A lawyer, acting in behalf of Maria Tile of somewhere in South America, comes to him. Maria has divorced her husband, another Frederick Tile and the will of her late father provides that if this man marry again none of the fortune will go to him. Frederick Tile from the south is in no humor to marry, so Maria plans to cheat the will by employing another Frederick Tile to do the trick. And as a consequence the Frederick Tile from New York is given the job for a hundred thousand dollars. Unable to commit matrimony with the girl of his heart Frederick takes the woman substituted by Maria—a fat old lady who has buried several husbands and thereafter—as best can be imagined—the fun starts.

Barrymore receives excellent support from Faith Binney, Frank Losee, Alfred Hickman and Frances Kaye.

THE STORY

Frederick Tile, a struggling lawyer of New York, is unaware that there is a man of the same name living in South America who has married a beauty of that country and whose wife has divorced him. By the terms of her father's will, her former husband cannot share in his estate if he re-marries within one year after the father-in-law's decease. This woman comes to New York in search of a stranger named Frederick Tile and when they hear of Tile, a proposal is made to him to wed a woman he never saw, she to be his wife in name only, for which service he is to receive $100,000. Tile loves Ethel Sinclair, daughter of a corn magnate, who opposes their courtship, although the couple love each other fondly. Tile yields to the temptation and weds a widow. The couple then separate and Tile receives $20,000, first payment on the contract. Ethel meanwhile withdraws her money from the bank and offers to marry Tile instantly, but when he tells her that he cannot marry within twelve months, she leaves him in despair. It develops that the elder Sinclair hears a report that Ethel and Tile have eloped and he insists upon their instant marriage in "regular" form. The bride creates a disturbance and Tile is obliged to confess that he is married. The convict husband of the bride turns up and she is permanently eliminated from the situation. Tile must wait a year before he can make Ethel his bride, and they sadly submit to the delay demanded by the law.

CATCH LINES

"Here Comes the Bride," a play of matrimonial mixups done to a brisk comedy tune—it's crammed with laughs and John Barrymore appears in the full light of an excellent comedian in the stellar part.

Pretty tough it was on Frederick Tile to have the girl he loved come to him, insisting on marriage, when all the while he had a wife—large and ugly—who had boasted of at least four other husbands—but this was the predicament he found himself in, and there were no loopholes, apparently. The road to the way out is filled with hilarious laughter.

Barrymore follows up his success in "On the Quiet" with another hilariously funny picture, "Here Comes the Bride." The trouble with Frederick Tile was that he saw two approaching at once and he was seeing perfectly straight!

A wonderfully funny mixup resulting from the fact that two men bore the same name—humorous complications galore in this newest five-reeler of Jack Barrymore's.

SUGGESTIONS

Here you have a good comedy, a title with fine advertising possibilities and a star who stands for the best in comedy on the screen. With this tri-star combination you should be able to institute an advertising campaign that should bring real results. Be light in your copy, use humorous scenes if you employ stills in making your own cuts and use humorous arguments. Paramount has hit upon a good idea by using the first bars of "Here Comes the Bride," the wedding march, in all their ads for the production. You might follow this scheme out by printing the first words along with the music.

Feature Barrymore prominently. The play was not a great success on the stage but at least it offers you a fine title and a plot that is rich in advertising possibilities. Use parts of the plot in your advertising copy, state the humorous predicament in which the hero finds himself. By so doing you will create an interest in the picture that should bring real results in the way of cash.

"CHEATING CHEATERS"

denouement reveals that which is never suspected. If you don't carry a line in your advertising giving the time of your various shows it would be a good thing to inaugurate the policy with respect to this production. For here is a picture that must be seen straight from the beginning through to the end to be appreciated. Call special attention to your starting time for all shows.

"Don't Change Your Husband"

Then we have scenes with Van Sutphen and "Toodles," and then a fashionable gambling house with "Toodles" losing all the money. It is then, at the moment that Van Sutphen pawns to the gambling housekeeper the ring that his wife had given him—the marriage ring of her first wedding that Porter arrives on the scene. He buys the ring, and then puts the money in his pocket saying that he is going to give the money to the owner of the ring. Then the scene shifts again to the home to which the first husband drags the newcomer. There is a declaration that Porter loves her and that she will decide. Then Von Sutphen fires and the shot only breaks a candlestick. The wife and Mrs. Huckney rush in. And then the end, with the girl the loving wife of her first husband.

"Take the same room in Reno that you had before" he tells her.

WE have taken up the larger part of the space that we have to tell you about exploiting this picture to outlining the story, because we really believe that our old dramatist friend can be well paraphrased by saying, "The story is the thing."

Go to this strong. Tell the people what it is all about. And after you have done that you needn't worry. Keep away from the adjective stuff. Straight narrative is much better.

The title offers an excellent chance for a teaser campaign, as suggested elsewhere, but we would rather sell this picture to the patrons straight and bank on their seeing more people at the theatre. Above everything else keep the personal element out of your advertising and your letters. Don't, for instance, yield to the temptation to ask your patrons, "Would you change your husband?" In some towns that we know there would be a new manager of the theatre.

"The best thing Brockwell has ever done. Big business." "Great. Packed them. Star is wonderful in this. Everybody liked it." "Big to average business."
Consensus—"Fine production with good drawing powers."
STRING BEANS (PARAMOUNT) RAY (DEC. 22).....DEC. 21
"Ray fans will welcome this interesting one."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Ray in just the sort of role that suits him. Certainly pleased." "Fair. Story light. Direction saved it." "Average business."
SYLVIA ON A SPREE (METRO) WEHLEN (DEC. 16).....DEC. 28
"She glimpses a 'fast' life that is extravagant, anyway."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Just an average picture. Pleasing. Big business." "Like all Metros. Pleased."
Consensus—"Fine picture with good drawing powers."
TELL IT TO THE MARINES (FOX) LEES (NOV. 17).....NOV. 23
"If your patrons like the Lee Kids this one will please them."—M. P. News.
TESTING OF MILDRED VANE (METRO) ALLISON (Dec. 2) DEC. 14
"A well built typical movie."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Best Allison has done." "Pleased. Big business."
THIRTY A WEEK (GOLDWYN) TOM MOORE (NOV. 17).....OCT. 26
"This clean, wholesome entertainment should please everybody."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Tom is a comer all right. Good picture, satisfied all and did fine business for a new star." "Broke record. Seven days." "Very fine. Pleased all." "Tom Moore getting better all the time. Business held up big on one of worst days of the year." "A clean, classy picture, to extra big business." "Very pleasing. Big business." "Average business." "This is the sort of play. It's clean, good story, well played and pleases." "Tom Moore's best." "Great picture. Tom Moore fine."
Consensus—"Excellent production with big drawing powers."
THREE X GORDON (HODKINSON) KERRIGAN (NOV. 17).....NOV. 9

PICTURE BRAND STAR RELEASED PLAN BOOK

FLASHBACKS

Individual Opinions on Earlier Releases Received During the Past Week

TOO FAT TO FIGHT (GOLDWYN) MCINTYRE (DEC. 15) DEC. 14
(Six Parts)
"Nobody loves a fat man but they'll vote for this one."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Only fair. McIntyre not as good as 'Traveling Salesman.' War stuff dead."

TOO MANY MILLIONS (PARAMOUNT) REID (DEC. 8) NOV. 16
"Too much talking and posing in this picture."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Average business." "Good picture. Average business." "Good." "Average business." "Opened extra big and closed extra big with big business during five intervening days."

TWO GUN BETTY (HODKINSON) BARRISCALE (DEC. 16) DEC. 14
"Bessie Barriscale pleases in a 'Different' role."—M. P. News.

UNDER FOUR FLAGS (WORLD) GOVERNMENT (NOV. 17) NOV. 30
(Seven Parts)
"Improvement over previous Government pictures."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Wonderful picture. Extra big business seven days." "A picture that every theatre should play." "Best of the three U. S. films, but the weeklies have shown practically all of it. Business fair, but one of these is enough."
Consensus—"Powerful production with extra big drawing powers."

UNDER THE GREENWOOD TREE (ARTCRAFT) FERGUSON (DEC. 1) NOV. 16
"This one does not come up to the talents of Miss Ferguson."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Good strong picture. Extra big business." "Poor business three days." "Poor business." "Average business three days." "Curtains for Elsie after this one."

UNDER THE TOP (ARTCRAFT) FRED STONE (JAN. 12) JAN. 18
"Star's new Artcraft stands up better than his first."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Fair picture. Average business." "Not good. Poor business."
Consensus—"Fair picture with ordinary drawing powers."

VAGABOND OF FRANCE, A (PATHE) KRAUSS (JAN. 26) JAN. 18
(Four Parts)
"French-made picture shows padding. Titles need improving."—M. P. News.

VANITY POOL, THE (UNIVERSAL) MACLAREN (DEC. 2) NOV. 9
(Six Parts)
"Scandals and intrigues. Will go different in various sections."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Great picture to big business." "Big business." "Good production with strong drawing powers."

VIRTUOUS WIVES (FIRST NATIONAL) STEWART (JAN. 5) JAN. 11
"Lavish production marks star's return to screen."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Extra big business seven days." "Anita Stewart demonstrated that she is still one of the best drawing cards, breaking our record with this superb production. An extra strong picture from a feminine standpoint."
Consensus—"Excellent production with exceptional drawing powers."

WANTED, A BROTHER (GENERAL) GLORIA JOY (NOV. 17) NOV. 2
"This is the best of the series in which this little star appears."—M. P. News.

WAY OF A MAN WITH A MAID, THE (PARA) WASHBURN (DEC. 29) JAN. 11
"Good example of the 'better story' we hear about."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Only fair." "Much better than Bryant Washburn's first Paramount picture from the standpoint of our clientele. Good story. Well acted. Good cast." "Highly entertaining. Clean and well done."
Consensus—"Fine picture with very good drawing powers."

WHAT LOVE FORGIVES (WORLD) CASTLETON (JAN. 6) JAN. 4
"Interesting with good comedy titles but not well balanced."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Just picture, no story or action." "Average business."

WHEN A MAN RIDES ALONE (AMERICAN) RUSSELL (JAN. 19) JAN. 11
"Rapid action Western is William Russell's latest."—M. P. News.

WHO CARES (SELECT) CONSTANCE TALMADGE (JAN. 19) JAN. 25
"Story of light pleasing sort; should be enjoyed by all."—M. P. News.

WHY GERMANY MUST PAY (SCREEN CLASSICS) (JAN. 19) JAN. 25
"German atrocities again, with a good romantic interest."—M. P. News.

WHY I WOULD NOT MARRY (FOX) NOV. 24 DEC. 14
(Six Parts)
"Very entertaining and not so spicy as title would lead you to think."—M. P. News.

WIFE OR COUNTRY (TRIANGLE) MESTAYER (DEC. 29) JAN. 11
"A good idea, but an ordinary picture."—M. P. News.

WILD HONEY (DE LUXE) DORIS KENYON (DEC. 22) DEC. 21
(Six Parts)
"A different sort of Western with a striking star."—M. P. News.

WIVES AND OTHER WIVES (AM.) MINTER (DEC. 15) DEC. 14
"One of the star's best yet."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Average business." "Fine business. Weather bad." "A fair picture only." "Big business."
Consensus—"Fine picture with very good drawing powers."

WOMAN WHO GAVE, THE (FOX) NESBIT (NOV. 17) NOV.
"Wildly melodramatic with producers undoubtedly placing their faith on the star."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A wild 'meller,' but at that the best picture Miss Nesbit has had. Got the business and satisfied public so no kick coming. Photography and settings fine." "She has big drawing power but the less said about her acting, the better." "On same bill with 'Thirty a Week' extra big business."
Consensus—"Fair picture with strong drawing powers."

WOMEN'S WEAPONS (PARAMOUNT) CLAYTON (NOV. 25) NOV. 16
"Plot is sure to go over as it contains heart interest."—M. P. News.
Consensus—"Fair picture with ordinary drawing powers."

YOUR FIGHTING NAVY (EDUCATIONAL) (NOV. 25) SEPT. 21
"Not dry. Absorbs your interest until the end."—M. P. News.

ZERO HOUR, THE (WORLD) ELVIDGE (DEC. 23) DEC. 14
"An involved offering dealing with fake clairvoyants."—M. P. News.

Vitagraph News Bits

Earl Williams last week established what is believed to be a record in the production of a five-reel picture at the Vitagraph studios. He has finished "The Gentleman of Quality" in the short time of twelve working days. It is a comedy drama, and was directed by James Young. Catherine Adams is Mr. William's leading woman.

Larry Semon, author and director and star in many Vitagraph comedies, left Wednesday for New York, where it is said he will remain for about three weeks. No particular significance is attached to his visit, it being a combination vacation and routine business.

Antonio Moreno has begun production on a new serial for Vitagraph, and he and his company this week left for Bear Mountain where the hill scenes and mountain atmosphere will be obtained for the subject. The story is titled, "Mystery Mountain," and was written by Albert E. Smith, president of Vitagraph, and Charles Townsend Brady. Carol Holloway will play the feminine lead. The serial will be one of the most pretentious ever produced by Vitagraph, it is announced.

Universal Newsettes

As a mark of profound respect for Mrs. Carl Laemmle, who died in New York a few days ago, all work at the Universal studios was suspended Wednesday, January 15, for five minutes between 10:30 and 10:45 o'clock, or at the time the funeral was being conducted in New York. Many messages of condolence were sent from Los Angeles this week by various motion picture people and personal friends to Mr. Laemmle. It was only a few weeks ago that Mr. Laemmle was a visitor here.

William S. Campbell, former associate director with Henry Lehrman, the comedy producer, has begun work on a new animal comedy at the Universal studios. Harry Burns and Joe Martin will play in the picture, as will Peggy Aarup. Other well-known portrayals of character roles will be Universal's $10,000 orang-outang, Charlie the elephant and Caesar the lion. Director Campbell will take about three weeks in which to finish the subject.

Joe Brandt, general manager of the Universal Film Manufacturing company, is now visiting at the Universal plant on the West Coast. He is supervising the starting of the new James J. Corbett serial. Mr. Brandt this week reiterated his belief that a good serial is one of the best money-makers in the film business.

'Twas A BUSY WEEK

West Coast Once More Pursues Its Various Pursuits

THE greatest excitement in motion picture circles on the West Coast last week was the organization of the United Artists' Association, a merger composed of Douglas Fairbanks, Mary Pickford, William S. Hart, D. W. Griffith and Charlie Chaplin. This organization proposes to produce and release pictures of the five celebrities named, each to begin the new work as soon as existing contracts expire, as already stated in MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Mary Pickford is recovering from influenza. Producing activities at the Lasky Studios continue uninterruptedly, Wallace Reid, Vivian Martin, Lila Lee and other stars being busily at work.

Pauline Fredericks with her husband, Willard Mack, has joined the Goldwyn forces in Los Angeles and has already begun production on her first western-made picture for Goldwyn. Mae Marsh, Tom Moore and Mabel Normand are also at work, and the Reginald Barker company, filming Rex Beach's "The Brand," is at Truckee, Cal., this week snapping snow scenes.

Another busy week was reported at Universal, with James J. Corbett starting a new serial. Eddie Polo has returned from the East and will soon start production on a serial also. Joe Brandt is here and is supervising the beginning of Corbett's picture.

Vitagraph, Jesse D. Hampton, Brunton and other studios are also busy. Earl Williams completed "The Gentleman of Quality," his latest picture, in twelve days.

Eddie Polo is back at Universal City ready to start on a new serial, which is being prepared by Harvey Gates of the Universal scenario staff. However, the director has not been chosen. Polo has just returned from a trip across the United States, where he made public appearances in a number of theatres. He reports that he received an enthusiastic reception at every appearance.

The Jack Ford company which is producing "The Outcast of Poker Flat" is still at Big Bear filming snow scenes. Harry Carey is playing the lead and Gloria Hope is playing opposite. The Bret Harte story is to be produced on a lavish scale, it is announced.

Fox Studio Doings

Jane and Katherine Lee, the Fox children, having finished their newest picture, "Smiles," under the direction of Arvid E. Gillstrom, have not made arrangements for a new production, it was announced at the Fox studios last week. It is understood, however, that they will not begin production at an early date.

Frank Lloyd, who is directing Gladys Brockwell in a new Fox production, has been filming restaurant scenes on the Fox lot. The rumor has been making the rounds of the studios that Lloyd actually cooked a meal last Tuesday on one of the gas stoves used in the set. Among others who are appearing with Miss Brockwell in the picture are Billy Scott and William Sheer.

Winfield Sheehan, general manager of the Fox Film corporation, who has been on the coast for several weeks, and who was ill for one week of that time, will return to New York the latter part of this week or the first of next week, according to announcement from the Fox studios. Mr. Sheehan intimated that during his trip west he has succeeded in signing one or more famous directors, but he declined to make public any names.

Here and There

Pauline Fredericks and her husband, Willard Mack, arrived in Los Angeles the latter part of last week, and on Tuesday, January 14, Miss Fredericks began work on her first picture for Goldwyn at the Western studios. The subject selected for Miss Fredericks has modern locale and is of the emotional type. Thomas Holding, who played with her in "The Eternal City," will have a prominent part in this production. Sidney Ainsworth will play the part of the heavy. Another important person who is to cast prominently in the production is Corinne Barker, who is expected to arrive in Los Angeles from New York next week. Hobart Henly will be the director. Miss Fredericks will play the part of two separate characters, but there will not be any double exposures in the production, it is announced. Mr. Mack is to have a prominent place in the scenario department.

Samuel Goldwyn, who has been on the Pacific coast for several weeks, intimated, but did not definitely announce, that he will leave for New York within the next ten days.

The Ince publicity department this week announces it will inaugurate a new service for the benefit of photoplay editors, to be issued from time to time. The service will consist in a synopsis of a current release, together with the cast, title and something about the star. Among the samples submitted this week are as follows:

Charles Ray in "The Sheriff's Son," released January 5. Story by William McLeod Kaine, pictureized by J. G. Hawks. The cast consists of Charles Ray, Seena Owen, John P. Lockney, Clyde Benson, Charles K. French, Otto Hoffman and Lamar Johnstone. Directed by Victor Schertzinger under the supervision of Thomas H. Ince.

Another picture is Enid Bennett in "Happy Though Married." The cast consists of Enid Bennett, Douglas MacLean, Philo McCullough, Hal Cooley, Vola Vale and Lydia Yeamans Titus. The story was written by Lois and Arthur Zellner and scenarioized by C. Gardner Sullivan.

Olive Thomas, wife of Jack Pickford, who, like other members of the Pickford family has been ill with influenza, arrived in Los Angeles last Monday from New York. Although he had been confined to the hospital for nearly a week, her husband slipped away and met his wife at the station. Miss Thomas announced that she will soon begin work on the film version of the Hattons' successful play, "Upstairs and Down," which has been purchased from Oliver Morosco by the Select Pictures Corporation. In it Miss Thomas will play the role of a juvenile vampire, which will be expanded in order to make it the lead. Charles Gibbons will be her director.

Announcement is made here that Florence Reed, picture star and also well-known on the legitimate stage, will arrive in Los Angeles at an early date to begin the filming of eight elaborate productions at the Brunton studios. In preparation of the event, and in order to look over the affairs of the United Picture Theatres Corporation, President J. A. Berst is scheduled to arrive in Los Angeles Thursday or Friday. Mr. Berst was expected several weeks ago, but it is announced that he deferred his visit to the West Coast in order to "kill two birds with one stone."

Production activity continued at the Brunton studios. Frank Keenan's picture, whose working title is "Emanuel Blake," is nearing completion under the direction of Ernest Warde. The continuity was written by Jack Cunningham. George Loane Tucker, who directed Anita Stewart in "Virtuous Wives," a current release, has begun work on a new production at the Brunton studios, the title of which has not been announced. Chas. Giblyn will be director of Miss Thomas' productions.

The Alma Reubens company, recently organized, has also begun production work at the Brunton studios. Miss Reubens' play is a prize story taken from Collier's Weekly, it is said. Other producing units, including Sessue Hayakawa and Bessie Barriscale are busy in the filming of current pictures.

Winifred Westover, with "Fatty" Arbuckle in a recent Paramount-Arbuckle comedy

About Metro Players

The May Allison company last week set sail for Catalina Island, where the desert isle scenes in her latest picture, "The Island of Intrigue," are to be filmed. The company expects to cruise between Santa Cruz and Catalina Islands for about two weeks. The final scenes of the productions are to be filmed during this excursion. The picture is being produced under the direction of Henry Otto, and Jack Mower is Miss Allison's leading man.

Hale Hamilton has completed production on "Johnny on the Spot," his newest comedy drama for Metro. The picture was filmed under the direction of Harry L. Franklin.

Paramount-Artcraft

Edward Jose, who has for several weeks been directing a big Salvation Army picture at the Lasky studios, expects to complete production next week so far as scenes to be filmed in Los Angeles are concerned. Completing this work, it is announced, he will return to New York where some remaining scenes will be shot before the production is cut and titled. During the filming of the picture in Los Angeles the entire personnel of the Los Angeles Salvation Army appear in scenes of the picture.

Bryant Washburn has finished "The Poor Boob," his most recent screen vehicle. It was directed by Donald Crisp and Wanda Hawley was his leading lady, with Mary Thurman, recently of the Mack Sennett forces, playing a leading part. It is a comedy drama, as the title implies. Preparations have already been completed for Washburn to start production on a new play, the name of which has not been made public. New productions at the Lasky plant are known by number until they are completed.

Wallace Reid has finished production of his automobile story, but the play has no been given a title.

Indianapolis Seeks to Avoid Crowding in Theatres

FOLLOWING the receipt of complaints concerning the crowding of patrons of some Indianapolis theatres in the lobbies of the buildings, and charges that conditions are permitted to exist which might result in heavy loss of life in case of fire, H. H. Friedley, state fire marshal, and Charles W. Greenleaf, state factory inspector, are investigating to learn just what they may do to prevent such crowding. They said that the solution of the problem is not simple. While the state laws on the subject are explicit enough as to how many and what sort of exits are to be provided, and as to the storing of combustibles and the like, yet when a theatre complies with all of these, keeps its auditorium aisles open, and only crowds persons on the outside of the auditorium in such a manner that the width of the exit is maintained free through the lobby, then it is uncertain whether state laws cover the practice.

It is acknowledged that if a panic were to occur under such circumstances the crowds in waiting would block the aisles and exits quickly enough, but as to doing anything with a theatre when there is no such panic the situation is entirely different.

Both the state officials said today that while they were not going to make any fuss about it, they were going to go over every theatre in Indianapolis and see if they comply with what laws there are in the matter. Regulation of crowding in the lobbies, it was pointed out by the state officials, is outside their domain.

City officials also seem to be somewhat in doubt in just how far they may go in regulating the handling of crowds at the theatres, outside of keeping aisles and passageways clear. It is understood, however, that some definite action is to be taken toward reducing crowded conditions in the rear lobbies of the theatres so that people could get out in case of fire.

One of the complaints received by Mr. Friedly was in a letter signed "J. O. Hues," without any address, in which vigorous objection was made to the manner in which the writer said the lobby of the Circle theatre was crowded last Sunday.

Lee Herz Visits New York on Business

LEE HERZ, president of the Silee Film Exchange, Chicago, Ill., has been on a business trip to New York City, and promises to have many important announcements to make this week or next. Mr. Herz has closed with the Capital Film Company, Inc., for the distribution of its films.

Mr. Herz left New York for Chicago on January 21.

John H. Kunsky Plans Three New Theatres

JOHN H. KUNSKY, president of the John H. Kunsky Enterprises, operating 10 motion picture theatres in Detroit, is planning the erection of at least three new houses to be devoted exclusively to motion pictures. One of these will be on Woodward avenue in Highland Park, on the style of the Alhambra theatre with a 30-foot stage and a 30-foot entrance. The seating capacity will be at least 2500. Architects are working on the plans and actual construction work will be started very soon.

There will be two other houses built during 1919, it is expected, both of which will be on the west side of the city. Plans are tentatively formed and they will seat not less than 1800 people each and will be completely equipped. There is also some talk of a fourth house to be built on the east side but no definite announcement has been made.

The houses already operated by Kunsky are the Madison, Washington, Adams, Garden, Liberty, Strand, Alhambra, Royal, Empress and Columbia.

Springfield Theatre Boosts "Hearts of the World"

THE CHATTERTON THEATRE in Springfield, Ill., is reported as heavily advertising the D. W. Griffith productions, "Hearts of the World," using the newspapers and billboards. The same orchestra and company that played there in August was seen again for sixteen performances, beginning Sunday, January 19. A special price of one dollar top has been made for the Springfield engagement, and the Chatterton expects to play to capacity during the stay here of the great spectacle. A new advertising campaign, originated by Mr. Griffith himself, is being tried out for the first time, and early reports on it say it is sure to produce extraordinary results. "Hearts of the World" played Springfield last August at State Fair time, and despite the terrific heat and fierce competition played to wonderful patronage. Local critics say it is a superior production to "The Birth of a Nation."

Monroe Theatre Celebrates Anniversary

J. R. DENNISTON, proprietor of the Family theatre, J. Monroe, Mich., celebrated the first anniversary of his house January 8, when about 100 Detroit film men were entertained at a special performance, most of which was furnished by the film men. The mayor of Monroe and several other notables were present at the festivities which continued through to the early hours of the next day. Luncheon and refreshments were a large part of the program.

Good Weather Brings out Fond du Lac Crowds

IDEAL winter weather the second week in January resulted in increased attendance at all motion picture houses in Fond du Lac, Wis. Ordinarily, managers look upon January and February as months when they hope to break even, but the graciousness of the weather man has been the means of breaking the record, all of which is very gratifying on account of the losses sustained by reason of the "flu" ban.

The influenza ban isn't likely to be put on the moving picture theatres in Fond du Lac again. In the first place, the situation is showing a marked improvement. It is enough better to allow the ban to be raised on public dances. In the second place, there is a growing belief that an injustice was done the picture houses by including them in the order. In Fond du Lac all picture house attaches escaped the influenza, in fact the precautions taken by the management in each instance made the picture theatres about the healthiest places in the city. There was scarcely so much as a smothered sneeze, according to a correspondent.

Milwaukee News and Views

GEORGE FISCHER, manager of the Alhambra theatre in Milwaukee, has succeeded in establishing the 20 and 30 cent admission price in Milwaukee. Without a fanfare of press agent trumpets to announce the increase, Fischer boosted the admission at the showing of "Little Women" last week, and the public never gave it a thought—their one aim being to see the attractive offering. The entire house, with the exception of the boxes and lodges, of which the Alhambra boasts several, was sold out at the 22 cent mark, and no one thought anything of it. Last week Anita Stewart in "Virtuous Wives" promised to break all records in attendance and financial returns, and still the public gladly gives the increased price. It took Milwaukee a long time to become used to the 15 cent price, but it is recalled that at this time much publicity was given the raise.

NAZIMOVA in "An Eye for an Eye," which ran during two lucrative weeks recently at the Merrill, Milwaukee, proved a big drawing card at the Grad theatre, Madison, the last half of the week. The crowds extended from the lobby far out into the street.

BABY MARIE OSBORNE was presented with a fountain pen by William Aschmann, manager of the Milwaukee Pathe exchange, during her recent visit here, and with it she autographed photographs which she gave to each of her little guests. The affair was a huge success and resulted in considerable publicity, as each of the women dramatic writers on the Milwaukee newspapers had been invited to the tea.

A. G. Spencer, manager of World Theatre, Chicago

World Theatre, Chicago, Under New Management

THE World Theatre Corporation has taken over the World Theatre, situated on Randolph street, in Chicago's loop section. Mr. A. G. Spencer has been made president and will also be the active manager.

The house was purchased from Mrs. Mabel B. Seaver and was built by H. C. Seaver, one of Chicago's oldest picture magnates, who still retains an interest and will be made a director of the new corporation.

The new management will run the house entirely different from the past, as they will use big productions and long runs.

The theatre will be decorated and remodeled, and many new features for the comfort of the patrons will be installed.

Mr. Spencer is also connected with the Chicago Metro office where the gentleman will remain. His many years of practical film experience will enable him to give his clientele the choicest of productions which will, naturally, change the atmosphere of this comfortable little playhouse, and unquestionably place it shoulder to shoulder with the successful houses of Chicago's loop.

Grand Rapids and Western Michigan

THE influenza ban has been lifted at Traverse City, and the theatres again are in operation.

MANAGER C. H. FOSTER of the Lyric theatre at Cadillac is planning a big special program for Thursday, February 6, the first anniversary of the opening of the theatre.

MARTIN JOHNSON'S "Cannibals of the South Seas," has been making a good run at the Majestic Gardens, Grand Rapids.

"BIRTH OF A RACE," drew good crowds at Powers' theatre, Grand Rapids, the week of January 13.

Heard in Detroit

THE WASHINGTON theatre, Detroit, departed from its usual line last week when "men only" were admitted to see "Fit to Win," a film shown in co-operation with the government in the campaign against venereal diseases.

"UNDER FOUR FLAGS," the third U. S. Official Government picture, released by World, was shown at Detroit-on-the-Campus theatre for the week of January 12, in conjunction with "The Battle of Vimy Ridge," another war picture taken under the auspices of the Michigan State Troops.

JAMES STEELE, who operates the Lincoln Square theatre, Detroit, and three houses in Bay City, Mich., is spending most of his time in Detroit arranging bookings for his houses. Mr. Steele was formerly division manager for Paramount.

JOHN CUTLER, manager of the Lakewood theatre, Detroit, declares he has not heard a complaint since he increased his prices to 15c, 20c. and 30c., which includes the war tax.

R. J. CHURCHILL, special representative in Detroit for the United Picture Theatres of America, says Detroit is one of the best territories in the country. January 1, United had 27 theatres signed up for its pictures in the Detroit territory—since that time 20 more houses have signed including all of the Michigan theatres operated by Fitzpatrick & McElroy.

SAILOR members of the cast playing in "The Great Lakes Revue," and the entire staff of doctors and officers at the Henry Ford hospital were the guests recently of Wadsworth brothers in their Virginia Park theatre, Detroit.

PAUL BUSH, Universal manager, W. D. Ward, Jewel manager, and Joe Friedman, office manager of the Detroit Universal Exchange attended a farewell party in Indianapolis recently when Joseph I. Snitzer, central division manager, was promoted to general sales manager of the Universal with headquarters in New York city.

CHARLES H. POWELL is again with the Madison Film Exchange and is now on a trip through the northern part of the state.

P. M. REYNOLDS, special representative for Robinson-Cole Co., who distribute through the Exhibitors' Mutual, spent several days in Detroit recently interviewing exhibitors in an effort to find exactly what stars and what types of pictures are most wanted for this territory. His trip resulted in several novel ideas, he averred, which the company will put into effect in the near future.

Here and There in Fond du Lac

THE success of the Cecil DeMille pictures at the Bijou in Fond du Lac has led Manager F. R. Smith to book another—the latest—"Till I Come Back to You" which will be put on February 6, 7 and 8. Cecil DeMille's "Old Wives for New" and "We Can't Have Everything" were among the Bijou's most popular offerings this season.

FATTY ARBUCKLE, always a high favorite with Bijou patrons was seen at that theatre on January 24 and 25 in his newest picture "The Sheriff."

MANAGER SMITH booked Douglas Fairbanks in "Bound in Morocco" for January 27, 28 and 29.

W. T. GASKELL'S "The Shepherd of the Hills" from Harold Bell Wright's novel, was presented at the Henry Boyle theatre Friday, Saturday and Sunday, January 17, 18

They Say in Chicago That—

THE second Smoker Review for the trade was given at the Little Artcraft theatre, on the fifth floor of the New Exchange Building, 845 South Wabash Avenue, at which time the exhibitors witnessed the screening of the new Paramount-Drew two-reel comedy, "Romance and Ring," also the coming Artcraft special, "The Silver King," featuring William Faversham, the eminent star, supported by Barbara Castleton. Mr. and Mrs. Drew, who are playing in Chicago, were present and personally met and chatted with all the exhibitors. Mr. Drew was particularly effervescent, indulging in many witticisms. Cigars, cigarettes and punch were distributed without stint. Mr. W. L. Hill, Mr. Max Goldstine and Mr. Fred Creswell proving themselves ideal hosts.

"WOMAN'S LAW," a five-reel feature made by the Arrow Film Company, featuring Florence Reed, has been purchased for Illinois and Indiana and will be distributed by the Unity Photoplays Company. The release of this picture will be early in February.

REX LAWHEAD is a busy man these days, booming the first production of the Crest Picture Corp., the title of which is "A Romance of the Air." The fact that Edith Day, who is now starring in "Going Up," the musical comedy playing at Cohan's Grand Opera House, has greatly increased the interest of exhibitors in this forthcoming release.

ACCORDING to a letter recently received by Mr. Hirsch of the Famous Players-Lasky Corp., Chicago office, the management of the Bell theatre, Chicago, has retracted the statement made some time ago through the Exhibitors' Herald, to the effect that the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation's entire output had not exactly met with their approval. They claim at this time that Mr. Hirsch has convinced them that the organization is trying to do all in their power to help the exhibitors, and if their productions keep up, they have no further complaint to make.

LOUIS R. LIPSTEIN, musical director of the Central Park theatre, Chicago, has insisted that his Motion Picture News be sent to his residence, fearing it would go astray at the theatre, and figuring it of great importance on account of the latest music cues. This house and the Riviera theatre both are under the management of Balaban & Katz, and are noted for their magnificent orchestras whose dramatizing of the pictures greatly enhanced their value.

THE O. C. Hammond Amusement Co. opened their new Vendome theatre on South State street, Chicago, Thursday, January 16.

T. R. GILLAM, for a number of years with the Mutual Corp. and the Triangle, St. Louis, also the Continental theatre, Warsaw, Indiana, has just been appointed Chicago salesman by C. C. Pyle of the Bartola Musical Instrument Co.

H. A. SPANUTH, president of the Commonwealth Picture Corp., announces that they will shortly open offices in New York, Pittsburgh and Philadelphia to take care of exhibitors in the Eastern territory.

CHICAGO exhibitors are wondering what the report from Los Angeles that Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Wm. S. Hart, Chas. Chaplin and D. W. Griffith have banded together will bring forth.

LIEUT. PAUL BIESE'S Symphony Orchestra, playing at the Pantheon theatre, Chicago, has proved one of the greatest drawing powers ever used in Chicago picture houses as is evidenced by the crowds that are flocking to the theatre from miles away to hear this aggregation of phenomenally versatile artists. Lieut. Biese's work appeals to the lovers of high class music as well as those of the popular jazz brand. Lieut. Biese is a master of both the violin and saxophone.

THE MANAGERS of two hundred and twenty-five motion picture houses in Chicago entered a petition January 16 for an injunction to prevent the calling of an operators' strike; the complaint being that the operators were not abiding by the rules of the wage contract.

I. L. LESSERMAN, manager of the Universal Chicago exchange, and Louis Laemmle, in charge of their sales promotion department, left for New York to attend the funeral of Mrs. Carl Laemmle.

SID GOLDMAS, manager of the Jewel Chicago office, has booked "The Heart of Humanity" for the pre-release showing week run each in three of Chicago's most popular residential district houses, the Pantheon, Woodlawn and Twentieth Century, where it will open February 9. The picture will be released for general distribution February 16.

"THE SILENT MYSTERY," the big serial, being placed by the Beehive Exchange, Chicago, Indianapolis, Milwaukee, is the first and only serial ever booked for runs in Chicago's loop houses, and is also the first and only serial ever booked in the Balaban and Katz Central Park House. Mr. Cropper says that his "Photo-Play Screen Supplement" is cleaning up and running in all the large houses like the Alhambra, Milwaukee, Circle, Indianapolis, Jones, Linick and Schaeffer houses and the Lubliner and Trinz Circuit, Chicago, and proving a drawing card for the exhibitors.

SINCE the "flu" invaded Evanston, Inspector Richard Lindsey has been in search of violators of the coughing, spitting and sneezing regulations. Evanstonians declare that he is the "cough copper" at large.

THE manager of the Washington theatre, Chicago, claims that his house broke all records on January fifth with Fatty Arbuckle in "The Sheriff." The theatre was crowded from two P. M. till eleven P. M. solid, with hold-outs blocking the entrance. He also reports a remarkable business with D. W. Griffith's recent picture, "The Greatest Thing In Life."

AMONG recent Chicago visitors arranging their bookings were: Mrs. R. G. Jordan, Hinsdale, Ill., C. H. Seip, Palatine, Ill., W. Kramer, Geneva, Ill., Charles Lamb, Rockford, Ill., W. D. Burford, Aurora, Ill., Dr. Atkinson, Evanston, Ill., William Cadovet, Kankakee, Ill., Tony Fink, Oak Park, Ill., Dee Robinson, Peoria, Ill., G. W. Reynolds, De Kalb, Ill.

FOLLOWING the showing of the Paramount-Artcraft special, "False Faces," many exhibitors immediately planned for extended bookings on the picture.

W. L. LOUDY, traveling through Texas and Louisiana for the Enterprise Optical Co., has installed twenty-five motion picture machines in three weeks—"Congratulations, Mr. Loudy."

C. SANFORD HARRISON, general manager of the Vigilantes, reports that the bookings being received at the Unity Photoplay Co. Chicago office for the picture through the State of Illinois exceeds his fondest expectations. Reports are coming in daily from exhibitors showing the picture, stating that they play to capacity business, sending every one home well satisfied.

MAX LEVY would like to have it thoroughly understood that he is with the Celebrated Players, Chicago office for keeps and that all bets that have been made that Max would play a short engagement might as well be liquidated.

C. SANFORD HARRISON, the producer and E. H. Calvert, the well-known director, who has just recently been discharged from Government service, having been connected with the Film Department, at Washington are seen hobnobbing daily, about Chicago's Film World—does this mean another big production?

JOE FRIEDMAN of the Celebrated Players, reports that the Houdini Serial is going over in Illinois and Indiana with a bang. It has now been booked in over three hundred houses in the two states.

With Dubuque Exhibitors

ON Wednesday and Thursday, January 8 and 9, the Dreamland theatre in Dubuque offered "Lawless Love," with Jewel Carmen. Clever stars, a good story, and excellent settings formed as good an hour's entertainment as one would wish to see.

THE Princess presented Madge Kennedy in "Friend Husband," a Goldwyn offering of excellent merit. Miss Kennedy holds the same place with Goldwyn as Douglas Fairbanks holds with Artcraft, in the opinion of Dubuque fans. Her stories are light, full of comical incidents; a few dramatic situations add to the interest of the play.

A PARAMOUNT picture, "Lost in Transit," with George Beban, was the program offered at the Family theatre Wednesday, January 8. Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew were also seen in a comedy.

"ON THE QUIET," by Augustus Thomas, was shown at the Grand Wednesday and Thursday, January 8 and 9. The star, John Barrymore, is a screen player of the highest order, but, while his plays are well liked and well attended, he is not appreciated in Dubuque the way he should be. However, he gains in popularity with every picture.

"THE TESTING OF MILDRED VANE," with dainty May Allison, played at the Dreamland theatre Friday and Saturday, January 10 and 11. May Allison still retains the following she acquired when she co-starred with Harold Lockwood, and consequently an exhibitor is always sure of good business when he shows her plays. Of late her Metro offerings show a decided improvement in direction and setting, and more attention is paid to details.

"OVER THE TOP," with Sergeant Arthur Guy Empey, played a return engagement at the Grand on Friday, January 10. "The fighting sergeant" won a firm place in the hearts of Dubuque picture fans, and many of those who witnessed the picture during its first engagement came to see the second showing.

ELAINE HAMMERSTIEN made her debut at the Family theatre in "The Co-Respondent." The picture presented Miss Hammerstien in a most pleasing setting.

THE Thursday program at the Family was "The Beloved Traitor," with Mae Marsh. As the little fisher girl Miss Marsh had one of the most sympathetic roles of her career. In the portrayal of roles of this kind Miss Marsh has no equal.

"MADAME JEALOUSY," with Pauline Frederick, was shown at the Princess January 10 and 11. Miss Frederick has a large following among the patrons of the Princess theatre, who never fail to attend her pictures in goodly numbers.

THE FAMILY had an excellent program Saturday, January 11. The star of the day was Marguerite Clark in "Bab's Burglar," considered the best of the Bab series. "A Jitney Elopement," with Charlie Chaplin, was used as a filler. Admirers of both stars turned out in full forces, so the Family did a rushing business all evening.

THE Saturday feature at the Liberty theatre was a Gloria Joy offering, "Wanted—A Brother." This talented baby star is one of the most delightful children on the screen, and it is a pleasure to see her play. As usual, a good crowd attended this picture.

"THE FIGHT FOR MILLIONS" continues to pack the Grand every Saturday evening. The serial is nearing its end, and the fans attend each episode in increasing numbers.

"UNCLAIMED GOODS," with Vivian Martin, was finally shown at the Princess theatre on Sunday, January 12. The picture was really worth the long wait, for it showed fair Vivian at her best. The supporting cast, especially Casson Ferguson and Harrison Ford, was fine. This picture drew a record Sunday night crowd.

THE GRAND presented "Come On In" on Sunday, January 12, to full houses, both afternoon and evening. The stars Ernest Truex and Shirley Mason were clever and played their parts in a most convincing manner.

MADELINE TRAVERSE proved quite a drawing card at the Dreamland theatre Sunday and Monday, January 12 and 13, when she appeared in "The Danger Zone." Besides making a pleasing appearance on the screen, Miss Traverse is a good emotional actress. The picture drew a very good crowd at the afternoon performances, while the house was packed in the evening.

THE LIBERTY had Peggy Hyland, that pleasing little Fox player, for the January 12 program. The play "Bonnie Annie Laurie" was an ideal setting for the attractive star. The Liberty theatre patrons were most enthusiastic about the star and the play, and Manager Wilbur is assured that the next time he shows a Hyland picture he will have even a larger house than he had this time.

Here and There in Fond du Lac

and 19, where it met the fullest expectations of large audiences.

WM. S. HART in his latest Artcraft production, "The Tiger Man" started a three days' run at the Orpheum Thursday January 16 by "standing them up." The business kept up throughout the period.

ROBERT WARWICK in "The Accidental Honeymoon" drew a good business at the Orpheum on January 13, 14 and 15.

THE ORPHEUM opened the week of Monday January 20 with Constance Talmadge in "A Pair of Silk Stockings." This was followed on Wednesday and Thursday January 22 and 23 by Tom Moore in "Go West Young Man."

THE ORPHEUM had a genuine treat for its patrons on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday January 27, 28 and 29 when John Barrymore was featured in "On the Quiet."

EARL SCHUMACHER, formerly violinist in the Orpheum orchestra, has returned to that theatre for a few weeks while Private Arthur Hastings is arranging for his discharge from Camp Custer.

On the Screens of Dubuque

ELSIE FERGUSON was presented at the Grand in Dubuque, Ia., Monday and Tuesday, January 13 and 14, in "Heart of the Wilds." Aside from Miss Ferguson's excellent acting, the picture was remarkable for the magnificent scenery. Then, too, there was a very good supporting cast, headed by Thomas Meighan and Matt Moore, both sterling actors. In addition to this photoplay, a Chester Conklin comedy was shown.

JULIA ARTHUR appeared at the Princess Monday and Tuesday, January 13 and 14, in the photoplay, "The Cavell Case." As Edith Cavell, Miss Arthur established her reputation as a screen star. The actress attracted a goodly crowd to the Princess both evenings.

News and Gossip of Springfield Theatres

"LITTLE WOMEN" came to the Gaiety in Springfield, Ill., on Sunday, January 12, and though the management was a bit fearful that owing to the lack of known stars in the cast it would not draw, the picture pulled big and surprised everyone. Nothing finer has ever been shown in this city than "Little Women." Everything about it is "class," and W. A. Brady and Paramount deserve great praise for giving the film world such fine entertainment. "Her First Mistake," a Sennett comedy, with Chester Conklin, Louise Fazenda and Myrtle Lind was on the same bill and made good from the start. Popular Tom Moore followed "Little Women" in "Go West, Young Man." "A Son of a Hun," newest Fox Sunshine comedy, was shown on the same bill.

MARGUERITE CLARK made her first appearance in Springfield since last September, appearing at the Vaudette on Sunday, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, January 12, 13, 14 and 15, in "Little Miss Hoover." The picture was fine and Miss Clark was mighty good to look at. Nothing could have pleased film fans of Springfield better than to have Eugene O'Brien playing opposite the pretty star. Arbuckle in a re-issue comedy and a new Burton Holmes Travelog were also on the bill for the same four days. "Good-bye, Bill," Anita Loos-John Emerson play, with Shirley Mason and Ernest Truex, was booked to finish out the week of January 12-18.

THE PRINCESS had "Her Moment" scheduled for January 15 and 16. Dustin Farnum, in "The Light of Western Stars," came to the Princess the day following for a two days' run. This is the first of the United Theatres' bookings in Springfield. Others are slated to appear at the Princess at regular intervals. Kitty Gordon will shortly be seen here in "Adele."

THE ROYAL has booked some strong attractions to be shown in the next two weeks. Manager Kerasotes did a very wise thing when he put on "The Lure of the Circus," Eddie Polo's serial, every Sunday, and he packs the theatre from opening time to closing-up hour. Monday, January 13, the Royal had "Enlighten Thy Daughter," a special feature; Tuesday, Margareta Fischer in "A Square Deal"; Wednesday, "The Golden Goal"; Thursday, "Power and the Glory"; Friday and Saturday, "Cleopatra," with Theda Bara. "America's Answer" and "Under Four Flags" have been secured by the Royal, the dates to be announced later.

HARRY WEISS was in the city again recently, trying to place the Mary Pickford pictures.

THE SAVOY is the house of serials. Manager Louis Kerasotes has three running at present and is doing fine with all of them. "A Fight for Millions" is shown every Sunday, and on January 12 "The Ninth Episode" was the principal attraction; other pictures on the bill were "Rosalind of Red Gate," a comedy, and "Work or Fight." For the balance of the week Manager Kerasotes had: Monday, Harry Morey in "A Game with Fate," and a Strand comedy; Tuesday, "Mother Love and the Law," with Dollie Ledgerwood Matters; Wednesday, Chapter 17, of "The Brass Bullet," a Broadway star feature and comedy; Thursday, Fritzi Brunette in "The Velvet Hand"; Friday, Chapter 9, of "The Iron Test," and other features. On Saturday a new "Bluebird" special will be shown.

BEN ROVIN, Amuse-U owner, is certainly doing fine with Fox productions. The George Walsh, William Farnum and Theda Bara films all draw heavily. Other sure-fire attractions being booked by wise Mr. Ben are the Douglas Fairbanks and W. S. Art Triangle reissues and the Fox Sunshine comedies.

THE CAPITOL reports extraordinary business with Pearl

White in "The Lightning Raider." The serial is shown every Sunday.

EARL GORE, drummer at the Majestic, has been honorably discharged from the army and has resumed his work at the theatre. One of the first things to happen to him since becoming a civilian was to have his auto stolen from in front of the Majestic while he worked.

THE PRINCESS has signed for the Exhibitors' Mutual Distributing Corporation's features. E. Mitchell, special representative from Chicago, was in the city and closed the deal. Some of the pictures booked under this contract are Martin Johnson's "Cannibals of the South Seas," Billie Rhodes in "The Girl of My Dreams," Henry B. Walthall in "And a Still Small Voice," William Desmond in "Life Is a Funny Proposition," Sessue Hayakawa in "Bonds of Honor," and Bessie Barriscale in "All of a Sudden, Norma."

MISS BESSIE WARE, cashier at the Majestic, has had another attack of illness, which has kept her at home for the past two weeks. Mrs. John E. Bretz is now looking after the publicity for the Majestic.

THE PRINCESS did remarkably well with a repeat engagement of "Eye for Eye," with Nazimova. The picture was brought in for three days, Thursday, Friday and Saturday January 9, 10 and 11, and did big business all three days. With the exception of "Over the Top," this is the only picture that has played a seven-day engagement at the Princess.

THE mild weather of the past two weeks has been a boon to the theatres. It is too fine to stay indoors, and when folks come out they just naturally turn to the picture theatres for enjoyment. Everyone is thankful that we did not have a repetition of last year's series of blizzards.

ONE of the greatest "killings" ever made by any Springfield theatre was that made by the Vaudette, with Charlie Chaplin, in a three-day return engagement of "Shoulder Arms." Wallace Reid, in "The Dub," was on the same program, and it, too, was a great picture. With two such features to draw on, the Vaudette just jammed them in for three days and W. W. Watts was very much pleased with things.

THE finest kind of Spring weather on Sunday, January 12 was responsible for some extraordinary business at all the playhouses. The Vaudette was heavily patronized, the Gaiety was packed, the Lyric stood them out both afternoon and evening, and the Princess management said business exceeded their fondest expectations. The Royal, Amuse-U, Empress, North End Circle, Pekin, Capitol and Savoy, all report unusual heavy patronage. The Majestic sold out for all three performances.

WILLIAM FARNUM, in "The Rainbow Trail," played a fine business at the Lyric on Thursday, Friday and Saturday January 9, 10 and 11. A great many had read Zane Grey's story, while many others had seen "Riders of the Purple Sage" and, with both crowds to pull from, the Lyric was mecca for film fans on all three days.

AT this writing, Manager W. D. Cave, of the Chatterton, has not decided when he will use "The Birth of a Race."

BRYANT WASHBURN, in "Venus in the East," and Lil Lee in "The Secret Garden," will be the attractions at the Vaudette for the week of January 19-25.

THE CAPITOL has booked Charles Chaplin in "Shoulder Arms." This will make the fourth house in Springfield to show the new Chaplin comedy, and the chances are there will be at least four more to show it later.

On the Screens Around Dubuque

ON Tuesday, January 14, the Family presented Constance Talmadge in "The Honeymoon." Earl Fox was the leading man, and he and Miss Talmadge form one of the most attractive teams on the screen. This picture drew exceptionally well. The Sunday, January 12, feature at the Family was "The Keys of the Righteous," an Enid Bennett offering, which was a very good entertainment and a very good drawing card.

THE Grand Opera House has scheduled the Famous Players Success Series. The first one to be shown will be "Wild-Flower," with Marguerite Clark.

THE program for the week of January 12 at the Dreamland theatre at Galena, Ill., included the following features: "Old Wives for New," "Peck's Bad Girl," with Mabel Normand; "Cecelia of the Pink Roses," with Marion Daviess; "Empty Pockets," "Her Only Way," with Norma Talmadge and "Sunshine Nan," with Ann Pennington.

THE Saturday, January 12, program at the Grand theatre at Anamosa, Ia., was "The Land of Promise," with Billie Burke. "The Cook," with Fatty Arbuckle, was also shown. The Grand had an excellent house that day, and it is hard to say which star was the most popular.

THE Star theatre at Decorah, Ia., had Norma Talmadge in "By Right of Purchase" as the Thursday, January 9, star. As usual, Miss Talmadge attracted a splendid house. On Friday and Saturday the Cecil De Mille production "You Can't Have Everything," with Kathlyn Williams and Elliott Dexter, was shown. On Monday, "How Could You, Jean?" with Mary Pickford, played a return engagement.

STARTING January 12, the Star theatre at Decorah, Ia., changed the policy of the theatre. Matinees will be shown on every Monday, Wednesday and Saturday afternoon, instead of being shown only on Saturday afternoon.

DOROTHY PHILLIPS played at the Palace theatre at Waverly, Ia., Thursday and Friday, January 9 and 10, in "Pay Me." A Harold Lloyd comedy, "Are Crooks Dishonest?" was also shown. On Saturday Norma Talmadge was shown in "The Safety Curtain," and on Sunday and Monday William S. Hart held the boards in "The Tiger Man." Charles Richman was the star Tuesday and Wednesday in "Over There."

THE Cozy theatre at Dyersville, Ia., presented William Hart in "Truthful Tulliver" on Friday, January 10. As the editor of the little Western newspaper, Mr. Hart scored one of his biggest hits. On Sunday Tom Mix, Fox's great Western character man, was seen in "Ace High."

THE BIRTH OF A NATION played a two days' engagement at the Palace theatre at Waverly Tuesday and Wednesday, January 7 and 8. The picture was shown at slightly advanced prices.

THE Belknap theatre at Hopkinton, Ia., will present Charlie Chaplin in "Shoulder Arms" during the latter part of January.

Additional News of Springfield

HER MISTAKE," a special picture with Evelyn Nesbit, is coming to the Gaiety, following "A Romance of Happy Valley."

THE GAIETY has signed for the new Drew-Paramount comedies.

VERTISING DIRECTOR W. K. SINES of the Press says Baby Marie Osborne's picture, "Dolly's Vacation," the best comedy he has ever seen.

"LET'S see what P. S. Harrison says about it," is what a good many of the film salesmen are getting nowadays after they tell prospective film buyers what wonderful pictures they are selling. Harrison seldom goes wrong, and some of the local exhibitors have made money following his tips.

"FATTY" ARBUCKLE'S newest comedy is expected to be here in time to show at the Gaiety on Sunday, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, January 19, 20, 21 and 22. The new one is "Camping Out," and was twice advertised to be shown, but did not come either time.

W. W. WATTS is wearing a crown these days. It's a new tooth, and Bill looks happier than at any time since he put the famous "66" order into swift effect.

THE "FLU" has been completely banished in Springfield and everyone is happy. All danger seems to be over and the public is having its confidence restored daily. It was a terrible thing, and those who escaped it are certainly thankful.

THE GAIETY has D. W. Griffith's "A Romance of Happy Valley" coming on Sunday, July 19, for four days. By a peculiar coincidence this is also the same starting day for "Hearts of the World" at the Chatterton. Last August the Gaiety had Griffith's "The Great Love" at the same time "Hearts of the World" was here, and with practically the same cast, did fine business. It is expected that the engagement of "Hearts of the World" will help "A Romance of Happy Valley" as many of the same players appear in both productions.

TOM MIX certainly did some remarkable stunts in "Treat 'Em Rough," Fox play, shown at the Lyric on Sunday and Monday, January 12 and 13. Mix is very popular in this city, and is probably the best drawing star on the Fox program in Springfield. May Allison followed Mix in "Her Inspiration," a Metro play, and the last three days of the week saw Evelyn Nesbit in "I Want to Forget." The Lee children, in "Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves," were booked to play the Lyric on Sunday and Monday, January 19 and 20.

Steps Taken to Disband War Service Association

STEPS were taken at a mass meeting of members of the Motion Picture War Service Association held Sunday, January 12, toward disbanding the organization. A resume of the activities of the association with respect to war work was read, and report made that it had been found to be impossible for the industry to comply with the Government requirement with respect to hospital for maimed and injured soldiers returned from the front. The disposition of funds paid in for membership was placed before the meeting, which voted that it should be returned to the givers according to the amount they had originally subscribed as compared with the total of the funds in the treasury.

As soon as it is possible Mack Sennett and his assistant, J. A. Waldron, will return checks which is now thought will amount to about 90 per cent. of the original donations.

This meeting was called following several conferences of the board of directors of the association at the directors' meeting. Plans were made for the formation of an association that would organize for the purpose of building a home for players of the film industry who have had three years' experience in this field. The mass meeting heartily indorsed the action of the board of directors who proposed that Frank E. Woods shall be the head of the organization. Mr. Woods advised at the meeting he would shortly make a thorough canvass of the industry before formulating plans for such a new association.

Revolutionary Changes Come About in Butte

NOTHING short of revolutionary have been the changes that have come in Butte, Mont., the past fifteen days. The new order came December 31 when Butte, long the wettest town on the continent and widely known for its drinking proclivities, became a "dry" town. The Montana prohibition law went into effect on that date.

The showmen expected their business to increase with the arrival of the dry days. In this they have not been disappointed. On the other hand business right now at every theatre in the city is beyond the most sanguine hopes of a month ago.

Other radical changes that have come in Butte are due to the end of the world war. Thousands of men have been employed here continuously during the war period in producing copper. Higher wages than ever before in the history of the camp—known as the biggest mining camp in the world—were paid.

Now there is a reaction and mines are closing down laying off several thousand men. For the time being this is helping the shows, as the idle men, many with families, have saved up a little money, during the cream months of the past. Nothing else to do, the saloons closed, or open only as soft drink bars, the appeal of the picture and dramatic theatre is strong. However, a prolonged shutdown would hurt. This is not anticipated and most of the mines are making extensive improvements, as the halting period in copper buying is expected to be but temporary, and in a short while it is expected the world will call for more copper than at any time before the war.

But for the present the two events that are of greatest influence in making the show business in Butte the best in the history of the city are prohibition and idle men, incongruous as the latter may seem.

All the picture shows in the downtown district are playing to capacity. The managers report the greatest business ever known here. The vaudeville and stock houses are doing practically as well. So the sum total result is boom business in things theatrical, the biggest in the history of Butte.

Weather conditions have also helped bring out the crowds, no winter as yet been experienced here. There is little snow and but a few cold days have been noted.

Business has been crawling up steadily since just prior to Christmas when the theatres were permitted to resume after the epidemic shutdown.

Hepburn Returns from Trip to New York

W. H. HEPBURN, branch manager of the Vitagraph exchange, has returned from New York, where he attended the first annual meeting of the Vitagraph exchange managers and directors. Mr. Hepburn says as a result of the meeting the managers will this year strive for bigger business and on broader lines than heretofore attempted. Vitagraph productions in the future, he said, will surpass anything released to the exhibitor in the past. Among those addressing the gathering, and who gave helpful advice to the managers, were Albert E. Smith, president of Vitagraph; George J. Quinn, general manager, and W. T. Chatburn, newly appointed western division manager, with headquarters in Chicago. The branch managers in attendance were asked to give their opinions as to the greatest needs of the exhibitor, and to point out what kind of picture in their opinion are in greatest demand. Based on the information gained through such questions, Mr. Hepburn said, will be Vitagraph's policy during the year just beginning. The turning point in Vitagraph's history is beginning, and he predicts a big future for the company. Mr. Hepburn left Los Angeles for New York on December 26, and he returned on January 10. Incidentally he said he would not exchange Los Angeles weather for New York weather under any circumstances.

Henry King Holds at Santa Barbara

HENRY KING will soon be the only one left of the "famous three" directors at the American studios, on the West Coast, and two new directors will shortly appear at Santa Barbara.

As far as is known Director King will continue producing with William Russell as his star. King's little daughter, Ruth, has been quite sick with influenza, but is now recovering.

Floyd St. John Loses Wife

THE wife of Floyd St. John, manager of the World Film Co., in San Francisco, passed away on January 10 after a brief illness of pneumonia following an attack of the influenza. Mrs. St. John died in her old home in Patterson, Cal., where she had been very active in Red Cross work and in combatting the influenza epidemic.

THE WEST COAST

Heard in and Around Coast Studios

THE REX BEACH COMPANY, after many delays, this week, received word that much snow has fallen in the mountains near Tuckee, Cal., and the entire company, under the guidance of Director Reginald Barker, set out for the mountains. The name of the story is "The Brand," and in it are many scenes of the Far North.

NEXT Friday has been set aside as moving day at the Metro studios—moving from the old plant to the magnificent new quarters. Although desks, one at a time, and chairs two at a time, to say nothing of other incidentals that have been passing from old home to new home this week, yet the official day of moving has been set for Friday. Some sort of special exercises will mark the event, and Director General Maxwell Karger is expected to christen the new home on this occasion with a regular address.

MAE MARSH, after an absence from the studios dating back to last October, is actually at work again. She is producing a new picture for Goldwyn under the direction of Laurence Trimble. Wallace McDonald is her leading man. Others who will appear in the cast are Walter Hiers, Mary Thurman and Betty Schade. The new play for Miss Marsh will be a comedy drama with a modern locale. She was ill with influenza before she came to Los Angeles, and upon her arrival on the Pacific Coast she suffered a relapse, which has kept her from the studios for such a long period.

MABEL NORMAND, who returned to work only a few days ago, this week finished "Sis Hopkins," her latest Goldwyn picture. It was produced under the direction of Clarence Badger, who will now return to directing Madge Kennedy. W. Christie Cabanne, it is announced, is to be the new director for Miss Normand.

A PECULIARY situation has developed at the studios of Jesse D. Hampton Productions. Recently Mr. Hampton engaged Charles Clarey to play the part of the lawyer in the play "What Every Woman Wants," but Mr. Clarey was attacked with influenza and was unable to proceed with the role. A hurry call was sent out for another actor and it happened that Bertram Grassby, a well-known actor, was disengaged for two weeks. He consented to play the part. He had previously played with Gladys Brockwell in "The Strange Woman," and with Theda Bara in "Salome." In the former picture he was injured and Charles Clarey took his place. Now it develops that he will take the place of Clarey in the new Hampton production. Wilfred Lucas is playing the lead and Grace Darmond has been engaged as his leading woman.

William Desmond has started work at the Jesse D. Hampton studios on his third production, with Thomas Heffron directing. The title of the story is "Whitewashed Walls," a story that appeared in Munsey's Magazine. The picture version was written by George Elwood Jenks; the action of the play is laid in Central America. Among those appearing in the cast are Fritz Brunette, who will play the feminine lead; Carmen Phillips, Jack Richardson and Walter Perry.

MADLAINE TRAVERSE, who is working under the direction of Harry Millarde, will finish her newest picture, "Madame Rouge, within about two weeks.

THE three Ince companies that last week began work on new productions at the new Ince studios, at Culver City, continued production uninterruptedly this week. Dorothy Dalton is working under the direction of Otto Hoffman, appearing in a drama in which she is given the character of a traveling saleswoman. Charles Ray is playing the part of a magician in his newest screen effort, a story written by Julian Josephson, and being directed by Jerome Storm. Enid Bennet is the third star, working in a film play called "Nemesis," a story by John Lynch. Fred Niblo is her director.

Flickers on the Screens of Butte

WITH a big program for the coming year already being mapped out conditions never looked brighter for Famous Players-Lasky Corporation than they do at this time. Such is the statement of Mel Wilson, Montana man for the Salt Lake Exchange. Mel has just returned to Butte preparatory to a run over the state, following a conference with G. N. Allen, special representative out of New York, and Lou Marcus, district manager. "The policy of our company put into operation last fall, is bringing good results for the exhibitor as well as the producer," said Mr. Wilson.

HELENA opened the past week after the longest continuous shutdown of any city in the state, due to the influenza regulations. The opening was restricted for a time so that only one show daily was allowed. The present week all restrictions were removed.

W. W. KOFELDT, new representative for the Fox exchange, Seattle, arrived in Butte this week, to make his first trip over Montana. He succeeds "Cherry" Malotte.

THE showing of "The Cheat," with Fannie Ward and Sessue Hayakawa, a re-issue put out under the Paramount Success series, at the Orpheum this week, recalls a similar presentation of about six months ago, when fire destroyed three reels. A Charlie Chaplin comedy is on the bill, and when the fire played its role on the former showing of "The Cheat" the other portion of the bill also consisted of a Chaplin. But Manager Taylor was not alarmed at all, by the coincidence.

L. E. FREEMAN, manager of the Gem at Great Falls, was a Butte visitor the past week. Mr. Freeman forsook the plow a few years ago for the screen and made good from the start, as an exhibitor.

J. W. DRUM of Los Angeles, where he represented Universal, arrived in Butte this week, to go on the road for the local exchange of Carl Laemle's company. Mr. Drum has been in the film business for three years.

MANAGER RALPH RUFFNER of the Rialto is continuing to make a hit with the popular songs that are thrown on the curtain, the audience joining in the singing. The few minutes spent by the audience in taking such part in the show seems to be well applied and those present enter into it with zest. Everybody appears to enjoy it.

CHILDREN under 16 were not admitted at the Orpheum where "The Fall of the Barbary Coast" held the boards. But adults were to the tune of record business. Patrons stood into the street waiting their turn to enter the theatre to witness this sensational story telling of the wiping out of the famous San Francisco tenderloin.

CONSTANCE TALMADGE seems to vie with Norma Talmadge for honors at the American. This week the former appeared in "Good Night, Paul," and standing room was the order of the hour. Publicity Manager Raleigh heralded it as a "bonanza of laughter and properly spiced." That wording appealed to the Butte clientele.

What They Do in Seattle

THE DE LUXE FEATURE FILM COMPANY, Seattle, Mike Rosenberg, president, announces the purchase of the Northwestern territorial rights of "Mickey" in which Mabel Normand will star. The picture is a seven reeler and all those who have seen it say it has surpassed all their expectations.

"A PERFECT LADY" one of Goldwyn's live-ones that stars Madge Kennedy, recently made a big hit with Seattle people at Clemmer's, where it played for one solid week. The excellent work of Clemmer's "Guterson's Russian Orchestra" made everything still more pleasant for the crowds. The Clemmer also went over the top with "A Grain of Dust" a short time ago. The De Luxe, Seattle, is booking this in the Northwest.

AMONG those recently seen on Film Row were C. P. Scates of Okanogan, Wash., and W. W. Kriegel of Anacortes, Wash.

HERMAN WOBBER, Pacific Coast manager for The Famous Players-Lasky Company, was recently in Seattle to confer with Northwestern manager Rosebaum.

E. C. KIRKPATRICK, formerly with the Paramount in New Orleans and late with the Fox concern in Denver, Colorado, has joined the Goldwyn sales force in Seattle. Mr. Kirkpatrick has friends every section of the country in which he has worked, as he says it has always been his pleasure as well as his duty to make friends out of acquaintances.

MR. HILL formerly Goldwyn manager in Seattle, but more recently owner of a couple of theatres, announces that his house in Albany, Ore., has been closed for the third time on account of the "flu." The "flu" is still hitting the small places and the action of the officials is ruining many a small movie owner. If the closing of the theatres would do any good in checking this dreadful disease, the managers of the movies would be glad to close their places of business. This action does not help do away with the "flu." It simply gives some officials the chance to show their power, while the larger cities laugh at these chin whisker officials and horse doctors and keep the houses in the big towns open.

GEO. W. EDEN, new Select manager for the Seattle district, has left for a trip around his territory for a big clean-up drive.

THE INDEPENDENT SALES CORPORATION is releasing "Wanted For Murder" and "The Romance of the Air," through their Seattle agent, H. M. Huot.

BERT RUBIN, formerly booker for the Universal's Seattle office, has been promoted by manager Mead to salesmanship and has already left on his initial trip. All his friends, as well as his manager are sure he will make good, as he has done so in the past. A. W. Skogg, formerly booker for Mutual, has accepted the position as booker for Universal and assistant to Mr. Mead. Mr. Skogg is well known along Film Row and by movie-man as an efficient booker.

THE UNIVERSAL is meeting with great success with its combined road show and movie "Heart of Humanity" in which Dorothy Phillips is being starred.

THE three big current event guns of the screen, viz: Hearst News, Universal, and Screen Telegrams are now being put out by the Universal organization. Business men in the Northwest are particularly interested in them because in addition to the 300 feet of Pacific Coast news, they actually see and discover what is going on in every section of the world. One said that he not only "got the honest dope" regarding world events, but he got more than he did in the dailies. Some managers have told Mr. Mead that they find this combination one of necessity.

E. O'KEEFE, of the Regent, Billings, Mont., has booked a number of Universal and Jewel specials.

San Francisco Again Takes up Cloth Mask Fad

WHILE it is stated that no attempt will be made to close the theatres in San Francisco, owing to the increased seriousness of influenza in that city, fifty-one towns in the northern part of the State have closed their playhouses and, it is feared, that others will follow. In San Francisco compulsory masking was again enforced after Friday, January 17. This will undoubtedly reduce the attendance at many of the smaller theatres and probable force the closing of a number. How it will affect the larger houses is a matter of dispute. Some of the managers hold that with masks on the people will attend the theatres with more confidence, and therefore in larger numbers, while others take the stand that all the houses will have to close for want of patronage if the masks are retained for any length of time.

The following is the list of towns which have closed their theatres by official action; with two exceptions all are in the State of California: Antioch; Arbuckle; Atascadero; Aetna; Boul der Creek; Benicia; Coalinga; Colusa; Courtland; Dos Palos; Dinuba; Dixon; Davis; Exeter; Esparto; Ferndale; Gilroy; Hanford; Hollister; Healdsburg; Corbell; Lakeview; Lodi; Livermore; Monterey; Mendocino; Minden; Mayfield; Manteca; Napa; Nevada City; Oroville; Pleasanton; Petaluma; Rochesta; Suisun; Selma; Santa Rosa; Sanger; Sisson; Stirling City; San Juan; Truckee; Ukiah; Vacaville; Yerington, Nev.; Vallejo; Weed; San Mateo; Sebastopol, and Klamath Falls, Ore.

San Francisco Film Board of Trade Is Formed

THE San Francisco Film Board of Trade was organized in the offices of the Pathe company on January 10 with L. Reichart in the chair. The object of the organization is the better protection of the various exchanges and co-operation in various ways in the industry. The following committee of organization was appointed to report at the next meeting which was set for Wednesday, January 15: Herman Wobber of the Paramount; Sol Lesser of the All Star; Ben Simpson of the Triangle; M. J. Cohen of the General; Harry Lee Knappen of the Select and Morris Marcowitz of the Universal. Permanent organization with election of officers is expected to be accomplished at the meeting on the 15th.

With Los Angeles Theatres and Exchanges

DAVID BERSHON, branch manager of the Universal exchange in Los Angeles, and one of the most popular managers on film row, was taken ill last week with what is believed to be influenza. He left his office Friday "not feeling so well" and stating that "he had a bad cold," but he was unable to return to the office Saturday.

THE UNIVERSAL exchange announces that it established the unique record of playing some Universal subject in every downtown theatre in Los Angeles, with the exception of two houses, during the week of January 7. The list is as follows: Grauman's theatre, Hearst's Current News and Hearst's Screen Telegram; Superba, Mildred Harris in "Borrowed Clothes"; Pantages, Helen Gibson in "Wolves of the Range"; Symphony, "The Cabaret Girl," with Ruth Clifford; Garrick, Harry Carey in "Three Mounted Men"; Orpheum, Hearst International News; Quinn's Rialto, comedy; Tally's Broadway, British official war picture; California, Hearst International News; Kinema, Hearst International News; College, Dorothy Phillips in "Talk of the Town"; Palace, Mildred Harris in "For Husbands Only."

MISS JAQUELINE PONNEDEL, cashier of the Vitagraph exchange, is ill with influenza.

HENRY C. DAVIS, who has been in the United States during the war, has received his honorable discharge and is now back with Vitagraph in his former position as booker and assistant manager.

PAT STEVENS, Arizona representative of Vitagraph, left Los Angeles last week on a flying trip to reach the bedside of his wife, who is ill with influenza at Phoenix.

"THE PRODIGAL WIFE," the first Screencraft production released in Los Angeles through the M. & R. Features exchange, was booked for a week's run at Ray's Garden theatre, beginning Monday, January 13. The next Screencraft production to be released, according to Branch Manager H. W. Stubbins, will be "Ashes of Love." Mary Boland and Lucy Cotton take the leads in "The Prodigal Wife," and James K. Hackett and Effie Shannon are the stars in "Ashes of Love."

W. J. MULLANEY, special road representative of Pathe, left last week for a two-weeks' trip through Arizona.

JOHN M. BOLAND, formerly with the "Salome" Company, and R. C. Visner, formerly manager of the Pickwick theatre at San Diego, have accepted positions with the Fox exchange as salesmen. Both are in Arizona this week, Mr. Boland taking the northern part of the state and Mr. Visner calling on the exhibitors in the southern section of the territory.

GEORGE HAYNES, and who was commissioned a first lieutenant in the army, is now chief booker for the Fox exchange, succeeding George Slater, who has been made city salesman for Los Angeles. The announcement was made this week by Branch Manager M. A. Walsh.

R. O. PROCTOR, Western division manager of Pathe, returned to Los Angeles this week following a trip through the North West, where he visited Pathe exchanges at San Francisco, Seattle, Spokane, Denver and Salt Lake City. He said that business is much improved over that of the past three months.

EDWARD WALDO, auditor out of the New York offices of the William Fox exchanges, is in Los Angeles for an indefinite stay. His trip to the West Coast is partially on account of his health, and partially business, it is announced.

C. H. COYLE, former road man for Fox, is active manager of all theatres in Yuma, except the Casino theatre, it was announced last week at the Fox film exchange. He is associated with Joe Johansen, who has just taken over theatres formerly operated by John Gandolfo, Jr., including the new Gandolfo theatre. Johansen is building another house, which, it is estimated, will cost $75,000, to be added to the amusement temples of Yuma.

THE new manager of the Casino theatre at Yuma, Ariz., is Edward Bailey. The house was closed several weeks ago on account of influenza. Since then it has been renovated and new equipment has been installed. It will be reopened on February 19.

JOHN BARNCORD, of the Opera House at Winslow, Ariz., has completed extensive improvements costing approximately eight thousand dollars. He was in Los Angeles last week contracting and booking, and hereafter will have five changes weekly, which include Metro, Goldwyn and Paramount.

PHILLIP LEVY, formerly general manager of the Ansonia Amusement Company of Butte, Mont., is in Los Angeles to spend the winter, and there is a probability he may purchase a theatre in southern California and make this his permanent residence.

B. F. COLLIER, formerly associated with Los Angeles theatres and film exchanges, who is now manager of the United branch at Seattle, spent a recent week in Los Angeles with his family.

GEORGE A. MAUCK, of the Columbia theatre, Phoenix, and Nick Diamos, who operates theatres in several Arizona cities, were in Los Angeles last week calling on the exchange. Both exhibitors announced that as soon as the influenza scare abates they believe business will be better than ever before.

"LIGHT OF WESTERN STARS," starring Dustin Farnum, was given first run last week at the Alhambra theatre. The picture was booked by William Alexander, western division manager of United, through the General Film offices.

M. A. WALSH, branch manager of the Fox exchange, returned last week from a successful business trip to Bakersfield, Cal.

FOUR people in the Fox exchange are ill with influenza, indicating that the malady is not on the wane in Los Angeles so far as this exchange is concerned. They are Miss Helen Banger, stenographer; Danny Levine, poster; Jack Levine, clerk and shipper, and Miss Jeannette Farrell, clerk.

B. E. LOPER, branch manager of Select pictures, announced last week that he has lined up some big business in San Diego.

The Superba theatre in San Diego has signed for the star series, and several Select specials will be played in other San Diego houses.

A. T. CONNARD, proprietor of the C. & C. theatre at Taft, Cal., was again a visitor in Los Angeles last week.

"EYE FOR EYE," a Nazimova superproduction, was the picture shown last week at the New California theatre. Branch Manager A. B. Lamb, of Metro, says the subject is having an unusual run.

EARL SINKS, Universal salesman, left last week for a trip through Imperial Valley and Arizona territory. He will be out of the city about two weeks.

"BORROWED CLOTHES," a Mildred Harris picture, directed by Lois Weber, had a remarkable run at the Superba theatre, according to announcement by Assistant Branch Manager Quinn of the Universal exchange. He said the picture broke all attendance records for that house.

THE UNIVERSAL exchange announced last week that it was compelled to turn down a number of bookings because of an inability to supply the demand with its three copies of the new news' weekly now being released through Universal exchanges.

MARTIN JOHNSON'S "Cannibals of the South Seas," released through Mutual exchanges, had its first run in Los Angeles at Grauman's theatre during the week of January 20. Grauman's management gave the production an elaborate presentation and the theatre introduced some thrilling novelties in connection with the showing of this picture.

Heard in Los Angeles Town

WIVES of the branch managers of Los Angeles exchanges gave a luncheon Tuesday at the Brentwood Country Club, near Santa Monica, the guest of honor being Mrs. Harry H. Hicks, wife of the Select branch manager, formerly of Los Angeles, who more recently has been at Seattle and has now been transferred to Cincinnati. Mrs. Hicks is spending a few days in Los Angeles with friends while enroute to her new home at Cincinnati. Those present were: Mesdames Harry Ballance, A. B. Lamb, Walter Rand, Carl Jessen, Harry Leonhardt, William Alexander, Ernest Silcocks, Paul J. Mooney, Harry Lustig, H. F. Charles, B. E. Loper, E. L. Theuerkauf, Clyde Elliott, H. L. Steele and L. E. Kennedy.

"VIRTUOUS WIVES," starring Anita Stewart, was such a tremendous drawing card at Tally's Broadway theatre last week that it was held over for a second week's run. A novel advertising scheme in connection with the showing of this production was a display of Miss Stewart's gowns used in the play in the show windows of a Broadway shop. The display attracted hundred women each day, who were later patrons of the theatre showing the picture.

HARVEY GAUSMAN, formerly with Goldwyn, this week began his new duties as special salesman for the First National Exhibitors' Circuit exchange in the Los Angeles territory.

W. E. KNOTTS, manager of the First National exchange, this week reported an extremely heavy booking on "Virtuous Wives," Anita Stewart's production, now showing at Tally's Broadway theatre.

J. B. MASON, proprietor of the Dream theatre, at San Diego, was in Los Angeles last Saturday, when he arranged a number of future bookings for his theatre. He signed for two first runs of First National releases among other pictures selected by him.

G. A. BUSH, who operates the Broadway and Superba theatres in San Diego, and the Sliver Strand at Coronado, and the Camp Kearny theatre at Camp Kearny, was in Los Angeles last week arranging for first-run First National productions, particularly Mary Pickford and Anita Stewart pictures.

JOSEPH S. LEE, general salesmanager for Anita Stewart productions, is in Los Angeles for a few weeks' stay. While here he will confer with Branch Manager W. E. Knotts, of the First National Exchange, on the best methods of placing Anita Stewart productions in this territory.

FRIENDS of H. W. Stubbins, branch manager of the M. & R. Features exchange, this week received the following cryptic announcement, written on regulation stationery: "Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ware announce the marriage of their daughter, Edna Riley, to Mr. Howard Willis Stubbins, on New Year's Eve, One Thousand Nine Hundred Eighteen, Los Angeles, Cal." And now Mr. Stubbins' friends on film row.....what?

Al Jennings Speaks at Owners' Luncheon

AL JENNINGS, head of the Al Jennings Productions, Inc., was the principal speaker of the weekly luncheon of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners' Association, Wednesday, and for an hour and a half entertained the fortunate ones who attended with stories of his experiences when he was a bandit, train robber and convict.

The plan of the theatre men to issue a weekly publication giving the news of the film world and carry the programs of all theatres was further discussed. John M. Simler, formerly of the New York Telegraph and Dramatic Mail, told of the wonderful success of those publications and the many money-making possibilities of such a fan periodical. He based his statements upon the success of the two New York publications under his management.

News of the Week in San Francisco

HOWARD J. SHEEHAN, identified with the Rialto theatre in San Francisco as managing director since its opening, resigned from that capacity recently and left for New York to accept an executive position with the Fox Film Corporation, of which his brother, W. R. Sheehan is general manager. The Rialto theatre is one of the most popular theatres on Market street, and owes a large portion of its success to Mr. Sheehan's splendid management.

J. W. SEMLER of the Robertson-Cole Co. has been visiting the Exhibitors Mutual Distributing Corporation, and has returned to his headquarters in Los Angeles.

THE TAM FILM & SLIDE had a fire in its plant in the Hewes Building recently and has moved to 111-113 Golden Gate avenue.

H. S. MEYER, assistant to Floyd St. John of the World Film Corporation, has been very low with pneumonia, but is reported now to be slowly recovering.

THE CIRCLE theatre, Fruitvale, George W. Denny manager, was burned recently. It is believed that the fire started from a lighted cigarette left on the piano by the musician. The projection room was not touched by the flames and the projector is undamaged. Damage about $5,000.

THE PARAMOUNT is enlarging its quarters in this city. W. W. Vaughn, former salesman for the local exchange is back from Camp Pike, Arkansas, and Sidney Cahan has returned from Camp Fremont. Both have been taken on with the company again which announces that it is endeavoring to re-instate all its employees who entered the service of Uncle Sam during the war.

HARRY LUSTIG, special representative of Metro, with headquarters in Los Angeles is visiting the Metro office in this city and goes from here to the offices in the northwest.

THE M & R EXCHANGE announces that it is having great success in booking "Ashes of Love," and has already booked the play up to the middle of March. The second graphic picture put out by this exchange, "When Men Betray," featuring Stewart Holmes and Gail Kane, is booked with the T & D people for the middle of February. "Prodigal Wife," featuring Mary Boland, which is handled by the M & R Co., opens at the Strand on February 2.

JAMES BEATTY of the Liberty theatre, San Jose, and the Liberty, Fresno, was a San Francisco visitor. He says that San Jose has not adopted the mask and the authorities have announced that they do not intend to close up the theatres. Mr. Beatty is arranging to put a ten piece orchestra in his San Jose theatre as soon as he can arrange for a competent leader, and he will also utilize vocalists in his entertainment.

THE AMERICAN PHOTO PLAYER CO., announces that it has made an important change in its method of distribution of the foto player and the Robert-Morton in northern California. A deal has been made with Sherman, Clay & Co., the largest music house in the west and one of the largest music house organizations in the United States to have the exclusive retail handling of the Photo Player company's instruments in this territory. The fact that the big music house tried out the popularity of the organs in Oregon and Washington for a year before signing a contract to handle them in California speaks volumes for the instrument. It is understood that the American Photo Player Co., continues the retail handling of their products in the southern part of the State.

WORD has been received here that Tom McCullough, formerly manager of the Polk street theatre has arrived in London, where as Y. M. C. A. secretary he has charge of the motion picture end of that association's activities.

RICORD GRADWELL, president of the World Film Corporation is expected to arrive in San Francisco on his visit to the Coast offices.

L. DE LEON, of the McDonald theatre, Richmond, says that his town adopted mask wearing today. A week ago without notice the authorities ordered all persons attending the theatres to wear masks. That night the attendance at his house fell to almost nothing. But the next night he secured a number of masks and sold them at 5 cents each to all who attended the play. By this means he has been able to keep his house open.

THE DUHEM MOTION PICTURE MFG. CO., has been remodeling its entire plant preparatory to an expected rush of business this spring and summer. A new printing room has been established, five new developing tanks added to the developing system and a new shop with lathes and other machinery installed.

THE local committee sponsoring the motion picture "Ravished Armenia," which depicts the attempted extinction of the Armenian race by the Turk gave a pre-view of the picture at the hotel St. Francis on February 15 to about 100 society women. The picture starts on a two week's run at the Columbia theatre January 19. The proceeds of the showing will become a part of San Francisco's contribution to the Armenian Fund.

RALPH QUIVE, manager of the Vitagraph, has just returned from New York where he attended the convention of his company.

In and Around Denver

SIGNOR R. CAVALLO, director of the orchestra at the Rivoli theatre, announced the inauguration of a regular series of concerts—twice daily—beginning January 19. Signor Cavallo's new organization will be known as the Rivoli Symphony Orchestra, and will consist of forty musicians. The instrumentation will be six first violins, six second violins three violas, three cellos, three basses, two flutes, two oboes two clarinets, two bassoons, three French horns, three trumpets, three trombones, tympani, drum and harp. With this complete orchestra it will be possible to give the silent drama perfect musical settings.

MANAGER COHEN, of Paramount Artcraft, is entertaining Special Representative J. W. Allen, of the Laskey corporation, and District Manager Marcus of Paramount. Mr. Allen will probably remain in Denver for two weeks.

PRESIDENT ADOLPH ZUCKER has been expected in Denver for several days.

MESSRS. THOMPSON & GOODRIDGE, owners of the Thompson and the Ogden theatres on East Colfax avenue, two of Denver's most beautiful suburban motion picture theatres announce the opening of their third house, the Liberty Bell which was off to a good start in Leadville on Sunday, January 5. It is the first modern theatre in Leadville.

THE local union of motion picture operators announced stag and smoker at T. M. A. hall, Seventeenth and California for Saturday evening, January 18, complimentary to the theatre and exchange managers of the city. The program began at 11 P. M. and included three athletic contests, a battle royal and barrel sparring exhibition.

"THE BORDER LEGION," a typical Western picture with the punch and Blanche Bates and Hobart Bosworth, Goldwyn stars, has been signed for a first run at the Isis theatre.

All the News of Portland

CLEVE SMITH has opened a theatre in Ewan, Wash. It has been in operation for some weeks.

THE PRINCESS theatre, Fairfield, Wash., has been remodeled and the seating capacity increased.

W. J. WADE has leased the opera house in Oakesdale, Wash.

C. VAN WINKLE and O Sutton recently reopened the theatre at Grandview, Wash.

THE O. K. theatre, Enterprise, Ore., has been reopened.

W. W. Van Meter has opened the Victory theatre, Redmond.

AN ORGANIZATION of business men in Dayton, Ore., has taken over the operation of the Arcade theatre.

C. V. BASCOM of Sumner, Wash., has sold his theatre to H. M. Bird.

W. H. BROWER of St. Helens, Ore., will open the Houlton theatre.

L. LEROY has bought the Liberty theatre, Carlsbourg, Wash., from E. Nelson.

F. M. BOWEN is the new manager of the Ring theatre, Kirkland, Wash.

W. W. BONER has reopened the Star theatre, Estacada, Ore.

P. S. WEITTENHILLER is to build a theatre at Crane, Ore.

THE GLENDALE BANK has opened the Auditorium theatre, Glendale, Ore.

ART KOLSTADT, of the Liberty theatre, Hood River, Ore., was in Portland last week. Business is fairly good in his town, gradually drifting back to normal.

THERE are 37 towns closed in the Oregon territory, or were when this was written, but that did not keep C. M. Hill, manager of the Famous Players-Lasky Company, from establishing a new sales record for the week of January 4. A fine tribute not only to Hill and his sales staff, but business conditions generally in the territory.

LEW COLLINS, of The Dalles, Ore., is again "at rest." The "flu" ban forced the closing of his theatre, The Casino, for the second time early in January.

"THE OLD HOMESTEAD" is still a popular photoplay. It broke records when it was run at the Globe theatre, Portland, recently.

CARL MARQUARD, manager of the Globe theatre, Portland, has resigned. He left for Los Angeles.

C. S. JENSEN, of Jensen and Von Herberg, went to California on an extended trip immediately after New Years.

JOHN C. STILLE, manager of the Peoples Amusement Company, has been on a trip to Medford, where his company owns a theatre.

Salt Lake City Short Notes

D. W. GRIFFITH'S "The Greatest Thing in Life" broke the record at the Paramount Empress. Although possibly not as many people were actually handled as in the heretofore existing record of the house, the fact that Manager Carpenter recently advanced prices when he reopened after the "flu" ban was lifted made the total receipts considerably in advance of previous records.

THE AMERICAN theatre reopened to advanced prices. Made bold by the success of the big houses the smaller are falling in line, with the result that the Broadway has advanced to 15 and 20 cents.

THE AMERICAN theatre recently brought back "Shoulder Arms" for Sunday and Monday showing, playing to splendid business.

THE OPERATORS' UNION gets an advance of $5.00 a week, commencing this week. The proposed advance was thoroughly thrashed out on a give-and-take basis, the managers finally signing a contract with the union for one year.

MANAGER GEORGE E. CARPENTER of the Paramount Empress voluntarily raised his musicians $5.00 above the existing scale.

PANTAGES is rushing work on the new big theatre being erected on Main street. It is the intention to have this theatre finished by next fall. This will mean when their old house on Broadway is vacated there will be another fifteen-hundred-seat proposition available for motion pictures. Already rumors are afloat that the old house will be reconstructed for an independent proposition, a move which will be greatly appreciated by film men who have long bewailed the local conditions.

AMONG the propositions already taken up by the Utah Theatre Managers' Association is a proposed test case in the courts, with the object in view of securing a rebate of all or part of rentals covered during the nine weeks the theatres in Salt Lake were closed by order of the Board of Health during the recent influenza epidemic. The attorney for the organization also has been instructed to take action, with the object in view of securing an abatement on taxes and licenses on the same grounds.

THE second influenza wave has reached the Rocky Mountain territory. At this writing it begins to look as though there will be another effort made to close the schools and theatres. This order will be strenuously resisted by the moving picture men unless it is made universal, covering department stores, offices and other lines of business. Manager George Mayne of the American Theatre is quoted as saying if the order is issued he will refuse to close, be arrested and fight the matter in the courts.

DOCTOR PAUL, of the Salt Lake City Board of Health, is opposed to the attitude of the State Board of Health in regard to the proposed closing down. The various motion picture houses here are co-operating with Dr. Paul to the extent of running an educational slide campaign for the benefit of the public.

Again He's a Different Man

EVERY new William S. Hart picture these days brings out a new side of his wonderful nature.

Now he's a lover, as gallant, as faithful and as brave as Romeo.

All for a girl, this bad man-sheriff fights as only William S. Hart can fight.

There are some mighty interesting scenes taken at the Chicago Stock Yards, just to help out on the "color."

An ARTCRAFT Picture

WHEN your people know that "Don't Change Your Husband" is a Cecil B. De Mille Artcraft Picture they know it's going to be one of the important pictures of the year.

They remember "The Squaw Man," "Till I Come Back to You," "We Can't Have Everything" and "Old Wives for New" and they take the family and go!

Cecil B. DeMille's

"DON'T CHANGE YOUR HUSBAND"

Presented by Jesse L. Lasky

By Jeanie Macpherson

The Main Points

IT'S a Cecil B. De Mille Artcraft Picture—the other side of the story that he told so well in "Old Wives for New."

A production of striking appeal to every husband and wife—the kind they'll discuss for days after they've seen it.

The gowns, the settings are superb, the women beautiful, the men appealing.

The cast includes Elliott Dexter, Gloria Swanson, Lew Cody, Sylvia Ashton, Theodore Roberts, Julia Faye and James Neill.

Three Feature scenes, Pleasure, Wealth and Love, make up a spectacle in themselves.

In all—the finest domestic drama of the year.

Vitagraph Serials have never failed to divert the tide of traffic passing the door into the doorway of the live exhibitors who book them.

And now they are being booked by exhibitors who "never ran serials." The results are delighting the showmen who had to be shown.

"The Man of Might" is box-office insurance. It's a fifteen-episode endowment policy that you will cash in on. It's the speediest, snappiest, most thrilling serial that Vitagraph ever produced. It's the last word in action, punch and box-office "pull."

"The Highest Trump"

By H. H. Van Loan and Earle Williams

Directed by James Young

A PLAY full of charm and mystery, bristling with action and unfolding a love story that enthralls—that is "The Highest Trump."

The role of Richard Paget is undoubtedly one of the most satisfactory ever essayed by Mr. Williams. Its freedom, its strong characterization, may perhaps be traced to his co-authorship of the story—for the first time, he is enabled to interpret his own dramatic creation.

Earle Williams is a premier box-office star, and his appeal to your patrons will be stronger than ever in this swiftly-moving series of dramatic climaxes

Prominent exhibitor praises "UNDER FOUR FLAGS"

The Government's Great Victory Picture

S. Barret McCormick, Managing Director of
The Circle, Indianapolis, writes this letter:

PERSONAL DIRECTION

S. BARRET MCCORMICK
INDIANAPOLIS

Jan. 8, 1919.

Gentlemen:-

"Under Four Flags" was presented at the Circle Theatre three weeks after the armistice was signed, when one would naturally expect a lull in the interest in war activities, but our week convinced us that such pictures, dealing with the actual achievements of American arms, have not been lessened in interest by the cessation of hostilities. "Under Four Flags" played to the largest attendance of any of the numerous actual war pictures that we have presented.

It appears to me that "Under Four Flags" presents to the exhibitor of America one of the best attractions available today.

It is the Victory picture of America and her Allies.

This was the manner in which we exploited same. Our advertising was planned to appeal to the public as the victors in the great contest and that "Under Four Flags" was the undying record of the glorious achievements of America in the war for Democracy.

The American troops returning to their homes will only serve to heighten the interest in "Under Four Flags." It will visualize their narration. Such history is not to be passed over lightly by the public and a picture, as it tells the actual and graphic story of the closing days of the war, possesses unquenchable appeal to the public.

Very truly yours,

S. BARRET MCCORMICK
Managing Director.

No Producer Interests Just equal world-sale facilities for everybody's pictures at three important points New-York - London - Paris

Inter-Ocean serves buyer and producer best because it has no American producing interests, no pet films of its own that it must push first.

This secures the foreign buyer because it enables us to coldly appraise ALL American productions at their WORTH TO HIM.

It secures the American producer because it gives the exporter no rival producers' pictures that the latter is bound to favor.

American exporters who are linked to producing interests offer to "act as foreign buyers' confidential agent," but here you find the old story of theory that fails to work in practice. It is not humanly possible for the exporter-with-producing-interests to bring that degree of impartiality to the business of confidential agent for foreign buyers which INTER-OCEAN, WHOSE BUSINESS IS SOLELY EXPORTING, can and does.

Inter-Ocean has been the foreign buyer's guide four years now.

The reason for it is, results. There is safety in sticking to experienced, tested American buying agents—who have no American producing interests.

CALL ON US IMMEDIATELY for a regular supply of World, Paralta, Plaza, and other famous American brands, featuring such stars as Louise Huff, June Elvidge, Evelyn Greeley, Carlyle Blackwell, Alice Brady, Ethel Clayton, Kitty Gordon, Lewis S. Stone, J. Warren Kerrigan, Bessie Barriscale, Louise Glaum, Henry B. Walthall, Rhea Mitchell, Howard Hickman, Anita King, Kathleen Clifford and Jackie Saunders. Or those big Inter-Ocean special features like "Wives of Men" with Florence Reed and "Hearts Across the Sea" with Arnold Daly. Or those funny Inter-Ocean comedies, by the Whartons and other great producers. What A Live Man, Harris Lumberg of Niagara Falls, Says of

PEARL WHITE

in the sensationally successful serial

THE LIGHTNING RAIDER

"Niagara Falls was closed twice because of the 'Flu'. My business has not been anything near what it should be on account of people being afraid to go to theatres.

Last Sunday I opened with the first episode of 'The Lightning Raider'. I broke all records for one day's receipts, holidays or special days included. I could hardly believe it myself that I could play to as many people in one day.

I point with pride to Pathé serials as real money makers."

Who Is This Woman

Lifted from the depths of despair at the very moment when she is on the way to accomplish her self-destruction.

Rescued from suicide only to find herself engulfed amid a band of desperate criminals and suddenly facing a charge of murder.

And finally—saved, with happiness secured at the last minute when all that she had fought to hold was slipping through her trembling fingers . . . These are the thrilling and interest-challenging threads of the first Goldwyn Star Series production in which Acquitted—and then hounded by the dreaded knowledge that her name had been written into the police Index of crime.

Married into the best society, the wife of a powerful diplomat—and ordered by the Secret Service chief to sacrifice her honor or face exposure.

FORD EDUCATIONAL WEEKLY

There Are Exclusive Values Found Only in the FORD EDUCATIONAL WEEKLY

FIRST: The tremendous value and "reach" of Henry Ford's name—in the villages, towns and cities of the nation. A name as familiar to the ears of a nation as the coins of our country are familiar to the eyes of our people. This familiarity means publicity and advertising for The Ford Educational Weekly in your theatre.

Second: The power of the Ford name to get into the very heart of great industries and depict their dramatic phases. You may not know this, so we will tell you that ninety per cent. of all the issues of The Ford Educational Weekly have been exclusive picturizations that no other organizations would have been permitted to get.

Third: An absolute protection against any propoganda fostered by selfish interests. The exclusive functions of The Ford Educational Weekly are to instruct, entertain, and educate and the editors of this great screen publication know that to achieve this they must be human; must be interesting and that everything depicted must be staged in terms of drama.

Having made a splendid start in its exclusive booking of this attraction, having placed it with the representative first runs and neighborhood houses in all important centres and then behind these having obtained volume booking, Goldwyn desires to lay particular emphasis upon the value of The Ford Educational Weekly in the thousands of smaller communities of the nation.

We wish to announce that we are prepared to offer immediate service in the small towns and cities without the months'-long waits after first runs and we invite exhibitors to take this up quickly with their nearest Goldwyn offices.

What the Trade Press Thinks of LOUIS BENNISON As a "Box-Office Bet"

THIS is a time when we will say nothing about the new star whose success and popularity we have confidently predicted. Trade journal critics, the newspapers and exhibitors say more than Goldwyn ever dared say:

VARIETY: Goldwyn and Betzwood have a "find" in Bennison. a combination of Fairbanks, all the other cowboy actors and a touch of Chaplin—but an individuality all his own.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD: Ingenuity and humor are going to make Louis Bennison a mighty popular screen star.

N. Y. TELEGRAPH: Louis Bennison was first announced for popular "westerns," and, lo, he turns out to be a most delightful comedian as well. You'll like him.

PITTSBURGH PRESS: It's almost inconceivable that the first picture of a new star should be a big success. The unique personality of Louis Bennison has made him score a hit from the start.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS: A fresh, unassuming and altogether pleasing personality. Bennison's wonderful enthusiasm is a great asset. You spend your money well when you see Bennison in "Oh Johnny!"

BUTTE MINER: Louis Bennison is even a bigger success than his managers claimed he would be.

LYRIC, Pittsburgh: We want an immediate repeat date on "Oh Johnny." Bennison is a winner from the start. We have signed his series for our three West Virginia houses today.

STRAND, Taunton, Mass: We played Bennison against the two biggest male stars of the screen, day and date, and whipped the pair for patronage.

A newspaper man—manager of the photo-play section of a nearby city daily—came into our office last week and made these interesting statements:

First, he had increased the theatrical advertising in his paper from about $6000.00 to over $50,000 a year.

Secondly, he placed MOTION PICTURE NEWS as a leading and indispensable factor in his success.

He worked in this way:

First, he secured in advance the bookings of the various theatres.

Then, taking the current issue of the NEWS, he found in our Special Service Section, our Service Bureau, and in our Complete Plan Book, full material with which to prepare newspaper advertisements on any of the features booked.

He prepared this copy before soliciting the exhibitor.

This is our idea of proper local advertising of pictures—the result of the right kind of cooperation between the exhibitor, exchange and the newspaper. When done in many cities it will result in the national advertising of pictures.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS is now going to the business offices of the leading dailies of the United States and Canada—furnishes, each week, that complete service which is the basis of this advertising of the picture to the public.

HAS THE QUALITY CIRCULATION OF THE TRADE

Volume 19, No. 6

February 8, 1919

That Time Is Coming

RECENTLY a discussion arose between this office and a producer, which, it seems to us, goes to the very heart of the picture business.

The producer had just completed a picture which, in our reviewer's opinion, was especially good; a "knock-out," he called it.

We suggested that the picture deserved special exploitation in our pages to the important end that the exhibitor thereby might give it special exploitation to his public.

The reply came: "No. This picture is so strong that it doesn't need advertising. It will book itself. But we have some pictures which we would like to have you put over for us."

We would like to make our position very clear and our opinion very emphatic on the point.

* * * * *

Who Is The "Customer?"

TO begin with, the picture maker's customer is the public—not merely the exhibitor of pictures.

We would like to print this statement in the largest type available and keep it running in every issue of this paper.

We would like to see it as a motto on every producer's desk, taking precedence over every other motto; for unquestionably it goes down to the very heart of the commerce of the picture.

In the earlier stages of the business the idea prevailed that the exhibitor was the manufacturer's customer, his only customer. The manufacturer's sole aim was to book the exhibitor—through his selling staff, the pages of the trade paper—blindly, with no thought beyond the exhibitor.

The consequence was that trade paper advertising pages were filled with blind exhortations to book—book—book. Superlatives were used ad nauseum or rather to the point of the utterly ridiculous; and even to-day the same silly custom prevails to a deplorable extent.

The idea, of course, was that if the picture maker could only unload upon the exhibitor—his whole concern over the picture was over with. His work was done; it was then the other fellow's—the exhibitor's business burden.

* * * * *

"Carry on"—Right Through—Or Quit

THE truth of the matter is—and it is a truth big and plain as day—that the real customer of any picture maker is the public which he is aiming to please; it is the public whose confidence he will make or lose; it is the public whose nickels and dimes pay the cost of production; and it is the public which will in no great time keep him in or put him out of business.

No exhibitor in the world is strong enough to stand between the picture maker and the picture maker's public and sell unsalable goods, more especially goods which are lied about. The public lost to an exhibitor is a public lost to the maker of pictures—not to all makers, but to that one particular maker whose goods fell short of their claims.

The rental of pictures is only one step—not the only and final step. It is the selling of pictures—selling them to the public—that counts with the picture maker. That is his sales objective.

Consequently it will avail nothing for the maker to attempt to "put over" a picture in our columns through false assertions to the exhibitor, and thence to the public.

* * * * *

"Advertising" Versus "Wildcatting"

IN the first place, our review—honest at any rate—is the exhibitor's safeguard. And while our advertising pages are the manufacturer's to use or misuse as he sees fit, we will positively not lend ourselves editorially to the overselling of pictures to the public through the exhibitor. We will not do this for the manufacturers own good as well as our own.

And the same rule works just the same the other way.

We are anxious, on any exceptional picture, to give to the exhibitor all its exploitation points. We do this in the manufacturer's own best interest, as well as the exhibitor's; because the public, to be reached through the exhibitor, is the manufacturer's public.

It is absurd for the maker of an exceptional picture to say that the picture will book itself, to feel that its sale ends—for the manufacturer—with its rental. It is just as absurd to undersell it in this way as to try and oversell it through the exhibitor with exploitation aids that lie to the public.

Truth is the basis of advertising power. If advertising isn't truthful it not only loses that power, its very reason for existence, but it becomes a positively detrimental, ruinous boomerang.

* * * * *

Truth the Basis for All Success

THE mere fact that a picture is weak doesn't mean that it is not advertisable—although some manufacturers think enough of their brand names—

Editorially Speaking:

Truth the Basis for all Success

the public, so that public confidence may be maintained—in the theatre which shows the pictures and in the man who makes them.

There's only one person who will disagree with us here and he's the quick clean-up man, the gold brick seller, who doesn't give a rip about his own future nor anybody's else, nor the future of the industry itself.

There's the firm, too, so undercapitalized that it feels pushed to grab the money regardless of the bigger business considerations. Such a firm is in an unfortunate way.

We look to see the time—not very far hence—when the manufacturers left in this business will be those whose eyes are firmly fixed upon the public, their public, who makes pictures for this public, not simply to rent to the exhibitor—and who utilize our advertising pages to tell the truth to the exhibitor, and thence to the public just as scrupulously and skilfully and fully as if they were dealing directly, face to face, with the public themselves.

That time is coming.

* * * * *

The Worth of Established Confidence

SPEAKING of building confidence, there's a man in London, William Jury by name—Sir William Jury since the war—who has told the truth about pictures so long and so consistently that what Jury handles is apt to book unseen throughout the British Empire.

Just estimate the value of this established confidence. It rests with the exhibitor and through him with his public.

* * * * *

Will the Screen Surrender?

THE Evening Telegram of New York interviews one of the reformers at Albany—his name matters not—and pronounces the reverend gentleman hopelessly drunk—with power.

There are more sources of intoxication, of course, than the liquor he and his kind have prohibited.

Drunk with power! Drunk with the glee of having lobbied Legislature against the expressed will of the people! Drunk with the act of having rough-riden and destroyed the sacred rights of the states and put a question mark after the personal liberty which was the keystone of the foundation of the republic.

Drunk and on a rampage!

What is now to be attacked? What is the next regulation to be laid upon the occupation, recreation or domestic activity of the humble citizen of the United States of America?

Is it Sunday newspapers, golf, automobiling, smoking?

No, none of these, though any one is now attackable; especially not newspapers, because newspapers can and do turn back the light of day upon the clouded brain of the bigot.

No; it's the motion pictures!

The rest will have to wait. Pictures furnish riper picking, greater glory, a vaster field of regulation—something closest to the reformer's heart.

Motion Pictures next!

And what will the screen do?

Surrender? Or will it turn, and with a greater power than newspapers have, let the reformer know that its expression must not only be free but that it has the power to be and remain free.

* * * * *

The Play's the Thing

SOME excellent photodramas have been released in the past two weeks.

They show an insistence upon story values. Themes have been happily selected. Artistically these pictures, as a whole, show a steady and notable advance in the making of picture entertainment.

All of which augurs happily for the picture industry this year.

We believe that this will be a year of picture making rather than of star values. We believe that the stars themselves realize this important situation and that they, too, whether they make and release their own pictures or not, will concentrate upon the making of fine pictures.

They realize that there will be severe competition in picture making. The star has a big advantage, but it's the picture itself that tips the scales of popular favor, this the world over.

Stars are only unduly strong when pictures are unduly weak. The ratio is mathematically certain and correct.

* * * * *

Time to Fight!

THEATRES in the Atlanta district, we understand, are going to fight, follow the lead of the Phoenix, Arizona, exhibitors and fight the efforts of local authorities to close the playhouses because of the "flu" return.

Exhibitors all over the country should do the same.

Use your organizations—form your own organizations—and fight in the courts when they attempt to close your theatre while allowing crowds to congregate in schools, churches, stores and saloons.

The courts will hold with you that any attempt to single out the theatres for drastic regulation is discriminatory.

Public opinion will be with you in your belief that a well ventilated theatre is far healthier than the average tenement home or any saloon.

Fight—and fight in the courts—before you allow panicky local authorities to class your theatre among "general nuisances."

* * * * *

A Way to Help the Exporter

DISCOURAGING restrictions still surround the exporting of American-made pictures.

It is our understanding that the Government is very anxious that American pictures be widely circulated abroad—to the end of correcting false war propaganda and to inculcate American ideals of life and world progress.

Surely the Government would hasten to untie this bothersome and uncalled-for red tape if the facts were clearly made known to the administration heads.

W. A. Johnston

Dealing in Personalities

"Hackensack Claims
Much of His Praise"

WE print herewith the picture of the man who will be to blame if W. A. Johnston moves to Hackensack, N. J.

Here's the culprit.

W. A. J. dropped into Paul Cromelin's office this week to congratulate him on the good reports coming in from exhibitors on the feature "The Better 'Ole." He did his part and then listened to Mr. Cromelin.

What followed we can't say of our own knowledge. But W. A. J. came back to the office and for the rest of the afternoon talked nothing but—Hackensack.

The beauties of Hackensack; the glories of Hackensack; the grandeur of Hackensack; the wonders of Hackensack; to all those who listened.

And Paul Cromelin started it! In fact, we are led to believe that Hackensack is "The Better 'Ole."

Read the statement from the Executive Committee of the N. A. M. P. I. on page 845 and decide right now what you are going to do to fight the five per cent rental tax proposed by Congress. What's more—do it right now. Don't think it is too late. The best Washington authority declares that if the people—your patrons—are heard from quickly enough and in sufficient force the Conference Committee will listen. It's up to you.

Just too late to chronicle the fact in last week's news budget we met MILT HOFFMAN at Mrs. Astor's lunch counter. Milt, who now holds an important executive post at the Lasky studios, spent the week renewing acquaintances made when advertising manager for the original World.

Also just too late for mention last week came a telephone call from JOE LEE, breaking the news that the Boston impresario was back on the White Way.

R. M. VANDIVERT has also checked in at Quarantine. The Lone Wolf, who has been touring South America for Uncle Samuel, is mysterious regarding future plans.

Comes a letter from HARRY REICHENBACH on Mrs. Alexandria's Los Angeles stationery. Confesses that his new feature is "the biggest I have ever handled." Will be back in New York next Monday.

Incidentally Harry adds, "I've thought up a lot of new excuses for you to use on your wife to get out nights. Won't charge any royalty." Gosh, it must be a good picture!

Also incidentally, though he has nothing to do with the picture, Harry is among the many who have sent us the tip that "THE UNPARDONABLE SIN" is one of the big pictures of the year.

WINNIE SHEEHAN is expected back in town as we go to press.

DAVID HORSLEY is in town. Don't know his plans but some one told us that Dave had a herd of elephants to sell cheaply.

Announcement is made that NATHAN HIRSCH is no longer connected with Pioneer. M. H. HOFFMAN has merged his interests with those of Pioneer and assumed the general managership of the combination.

Our mail brings a postcard and best wishes from W. R. ROTHACKER, now in Los Angeles. The scene is captioned "Snow and Oranges in California." Gosh, we're glad we are spending our winter in New York where this Winter's first snow is yet among the missing.

A New York Telegram writer carries an interview with Rev. Dr. O. R. Miller, leader of the Prohibition lobby in the Empire State, in which he declares that his organization is now ready to launch a campaign against Sunday motion pictures. It's our turn next, boys. So, just to get in trim for the battles to come, roll up your sleeves and go after this five per cent rental tax. Go to it!

Met WALTER J. PRICE, general manager for the new Virginia Pearson Photoplays, Inc. Visited the office accompanied by ALLAN ROCK. Glad to meet ya, Brother Price.

CHESTER BEECROFT sailed for England last Saturday. WALTER HOFF SEELEY sails Saturday. And the Astor grill looks like a conference of prominent British film men each knew—TAYLOR, ROWSON, et al. Certainly boosting this League of Nations stuff.

Our old friend JEFF DOLAN is back on the 729 Curb Market, wearing the honorable khaki and carrying an honorable discharge. The irresistible Jeff is open for offers.

"LOS ANGELES (Special Wire to Motion Picture News).—Griffith has announced that he made a contract several months ago to produce three subjects for First National. These will be made after he completes his Artcraft contract, which provides, in addition to the three releases to date, for "The Girls Who Stayed at Home," now in the cutting room, and two other productions. This will make possible the completion of the Artcraft contract and the agreement for three First National pictures about the time Chaplin and Pickford complete their contracts."

And close on the heels of the above:

"Los Angeles (Special Wire to MOTION PICTURE NEWS).—Griffith has Lawyers for Hart, Pickford and Fairbanks are on way to Coast to complete organization of United Artists. Five held many meetings during week but no information given."

And then this:

"Los Angeles (Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS).—Ben Hampton has arrived here. He is organizing a company with Zane Gray to produce the latter's novels in pictures."

YOU can't keep Terry Ramsaye off the screen.

Terry broke into pictures while on the Chicago Tribune by being the star reporter in a thrilling film made for that paper.

Later he wandered into the game as a publicity representative. And for years the Fates were successful in keeping him off the screen and keeping him a successful press agent.

But Terry licked the Fates.

It all came about through Kinograms, the deluxe news weekly which Terry, Ray Hall and Charles Urban are presenting to the market.

Someone got the real clever idea of announcing the new feature by an "Extra Edition"—a reel showing the staff, organization and facilities of the infant news reel.

And the idea, we understand, has got over in fine shape. But we also understand that it gives Terry another chance to act.

Maybe we're wrong; but, if we're right, then that "Big Five" will have to make room for a new member. It will soon become "The Big Six"—Griffith, Fairbanks, Pickford, Hart, Chaplin—and "Handsome Terry" Ramsaye:

Walter Hoff Seely Goes Abroad

Sails for London, February 1, in Company with Marcus Beeman, Newly Appointed Manager—Greater Activities Are Expected

WALTER HOFF SEELY, general manager of the Division of Films of the Robertson-Cole Company, 1600 Broadway, left New York on Wednesday, January 29, for Halifax, whence on Saturday (February 1) he sailed for England on the Aquitania. Mr. Seely is accompanied by Marcus Beeman, formerly of the Division of Films, Committee on Public Information, who will have charge of the new Robertson-Cole Company headquarters in London.

Primarily, Mr. Seely is going abroad to superintend the opening of the London headquarters, and to complete the details in connection with the deal whereby Chester Beecroft recently obtained the Continental rights to all the Robertson-Cole photoplays produced in 1918 and which will be made during the present year.

Much significance to the future of the foreign film affairs of Robertson-Cole is attached to Mr. Seely's trip abroad at this time, when affairs on this side of the water are pressing enough to demand his attention almost every minute, but it is certain that the foreign activities of Robertson-

Cole will be greater than ever following Mr. Seely's visit.

It was the intention of Mr. Seely when he left New York to remain abroad about five weeks. Most, if not all, of this time will be spent in London, although it is possible that he will take a trip to Paris, which will be a center of activity for Chester Beecroft in his promotion of the Robertson-Cole films which have just come under his control.

The British headquarters of Robertson-Cole will be established, upon the arrival of Mr. Seely, at 93-95 Wardour Street, London. From here will radiate the motion picture activities of the big export organization throughout the United Kingdom. Under the arrangements with Mr. Beecroft, the Robertson-Cole Company retains all the rights to its pictures for the United Kingdom, which leaves an immense field for the valuable promotion ideas of Mr. Beeman who will handle the Robertson-Cole films there.

The signing of H. B. Warner, who is a favorite with British filmgoers was received by English exhibitors with much approval, and the films starring this actor will be made with as much view to their appeal to Britishers as to Americans, it is said. The Warner productions, however, will be American in every sense, though the stories selected for him should have universal appeal.

Blanche Sweet Film Comes East

Big Ten-Reel Garson-Neilan Production Scheduled to Arrive February 9 by Special Messenger

COMING by special messenger, the first four completed prints of the Harry Garson independent production, "The Unpardonable Sin," starring Blanche Sweet under the personal direction of Marshal Neilan, left Los Angeles, February 1.

They will be delivered to W. H. Rudolph, Eastern representative of the producing company, with offices in the Aeolian Building, New York City. Just when the picture is to be shown in New York has not yet been determined.

A number of offers for "The Unpardonable Sin" are said to have been made by big amusement interests identified with, not only the moving picture branch of the theatre business, but also by men prominent in the so-called "legitimate" branch of amusements.

It is said to be not at all unlikely that "The Unpardonable Sin" will be exploited in a way which will surpass in its magnitude the exploitation of any photoplay yet made.

The only definite arrangements so far made call for the opening of the picture on Broadway, New York, the latter part of February after an unusual advertising campaign.

Three legitimate theatres, each one of them now housing a successful dramatic attraction, are said to have been offered and the one best suited to the needs of the picture, at a $2.00 price scale, will be chosen.

Whether the production will get into the established moving picture theatres of the country within the next few months or will be handled as a special attraction in the first-class legitimate houses of the country for an indefinite period will depend upon what disposition is being made of contracts now being considered.

Manitoba Exhibitors Elect

George A. Graham, owner of three successful moving picture theatres in Winnipeg, has been elected president of the Manitoba Exhibitors' Association in succession to Mr. R. Kershaw, who has resigned. Mr. Graham represents the moving picture business in the Winnipeg Rotary Club and has been an active worker for the film interests in the Province of Manitoba.

Other officers for the current year include M. J. Williamson as vice-president and M. E. Ferguson as secretary-treasurer. The latter was re-elected.

Incidentally a committee of twelve, representing the exhibitors, stage and theatre employes, exchanges as well as dramatic and vaudeville houses, has been busily engaged in organizing the Manitoba Theatrical League, and a general meeting of the proposed body will be held shortly in Winnipeg. The first move of the league will be to present a request to the Manitoba Government for the removal of the Provincial Amusement war tax.

THEATRES REBEL

South Carolina Health Officials Accused of Discrimination

WHEN the local Health Board at Rockhill, South Carolina, ordered all theatres closed January 27, and allowed other places, including the schools, to remain open—the exhibitors rebelled.

The theatre owners refused to close their theatres in the face of what they termed "discrimination" and they appealed to the State Board of Health for an opinion from the Attorney General.

This decision was favorable to the theatre owners and the Governor ordered the Sheriff to close the schools and other places of congregation on the grounds of "Discrimination."

Theatre owners then put the matter in the hands of the courts for a final ruling and the case was due to be heard February 3.

It is expected that theatre owners in quarantined districts will watch for the Court ruling with great interest.

Sunday Bill in Indiana Dies Easily

The bill to legalize Sunday picture shows, passed at the last session of the Indiana State Legislature but vetoed by Governor Goodrich, was finally put to sleep in the Senate last week, but not until the upper branch had got into such a tangle over parliamentary procedure that the measure seemed likely for a while to be left with some traces of life in it.

The bill had been made a special order for 2 p. m. Wednesday, but was brought up on motion of Senator McCray to reconsider the motion to make it a special order. The motion was carried. Several attempts were made to make different motions, all with the intent of killing the vetoed measure beyond recall. Finally when the smoke was cleared away, Senator McCray got in another motion to postpone the bill indefinitely and this carried without opposition. Lieutenant-Governor Bush announced that the effect of this was to kill the measure.

Senator McCray, who took a hand in the funeral, was the author of the bill in its original shape, but opposed it because of surreptitious changes made in it before it reached the Governor, that resulted in the veto. The changes were as to the time during which Sunday performances were legalized, the provision for shows in the afternoon being changed so as to permit shows all day. A new bill to legalize Sunday picture shows is to be introduced in the legislature shortly and the killing of the vetoed bill is not taken as giving any forecast of action on the new bill.

A resolution by the Ministerial Association of Clinton protesting against Sunday picture shows was read.

Gigantic Protest on Five-Cent Tax

Patrons of Theatres Throughout the Country Given Opportunity of Co-operating with Exhibitors Through National Association Campaign Now On Against Film Rental Tax

SINCE combined and quick action on the part of the managers of legitimate and vaudeville theatres was responsible in defeating the twenty per cent tax proposed in the War Revenue bill, the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry is now launching a campaign that the exhibitors may be free from the proposed tax on film rentals.

A nation-wide drive has been inaugurated by the Association and they now claim that it is up to the exhibitors individually to immediately act successfully on the plan provided.

The campaign was started January 25 at a hastily called meeting of the Executive Committee of the Association and the following telegram was dispatched to the forty-eight state chairmen of the National War Work Council of the Association:

Telegram to Chairmen

"The legitimate theatres, through capable and intelligent four-minute men, followed by the distribution of petitions protesting against the 20 per cent. tax on admission tickets, so flooded the post office department with petitions, and thus so impressed the conference committee of the House and Senate, as to cause that committee to strike the 20 per cent. admission tax from the revenue bill. Had that tax been passed the legitimate theatre business would, of course, have been seriously crippled.

"Our own situation with regard to the five per cent tax on film rentals is similar, in that it will be necessary for all picture theatres to substantially raise their admission price. We have not sufficient time to prepare and distribute trailers, but a concerted, powerful and effective protest can be made by each exhibitor, himself acting as a four-minute man, or by obtaining a trained four-minute man from his neighborhood.

"Have the speaker briefly point out what the screen has done for the Government and the people in support of the war, as per, the substance of the resolution passed at the meeting of the United States Chamber of Commerce, as published in full in the Trade Review of December 14, and the MOTION PICTURE NEWS of December 21, that the screen has been the school of American patriotism; that it is the chief means of entertainment and education of all classes of the American public, to the extent that it not only has become an essential, but a necessary part of the lives of the people; that the tax of 5 per cent. on rentals is calculated to raise between five and six million dollars, and that this will mean that admission prices of all theatres must necessarily be increased, thus preventing a substantial percentage of the public from continuing to receive the education and entertainment of the motion picture, as well as causing the closing of many picture houses and the consequent destruction of large investments in every branch of the industry; that there is no more reason for taxing the film rental than there is for taxing the scenery and properties of the stage production, and that consequently the tax on film rentals is not tion of the tax but without avail. It is now clearly up to the exhibitors if they are to save themselves and the other branches of the industry from this destructive burden.

"There is no exhibitor who cannot make a four-minute speech to his neighbors, or who cannot obtain a neighbor to make that speech for him. If necessary, read this telegram to each audience as your speech—the public will be with you in this fight.

"Every decent American will resent Congress excusing the opera patron from paying his 20 per cent admission tax and, at the same time, making the purchaser of a 10 cent ticket to a motion picture theatre pay a 20 per cent. tax, which is exactly what this rental tax we ask you to fight, plus the regular 10 per cent. admission tax, will do in effect."

Live Wire Exhibitors

A second series of long telegrams were sent out from the headquarters of the association in the Times Building on January 27. This second series was addressed to a specially selected list of live-wire exhibitors residing in the home districts of the various members of the conference committee, and urged upon them the absolute necessity of seeing that petitions signed by as many of their patrons as possible were dispatched immediately to the committee. It is believed that petitions from these districts will have great weight.

The members of the conference committee are: Senator F. M. Simmons, Newborn, Neb., Democrat; Senator John Sharp Williams, Yazoo City, Miss., Democrat; Senator Hoke Smith, Atlanta, Ga., Democrat; Senator Boies Penrose, Philadelphia, Penn., Republican; Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Nahant, Mass., Republican; Representatives—Claude Kitchin, Scotland Rock, N. C., Democrat; Henry T. Raney, Carrolton, Ill., Democrat; J. Hampton Moore, Philadelphia, Pa., Republican; Lincoln Dixon, Mount Vernon, Ind., Democrat; and Joseph W. Fordney, Saginaw, Mich., Republican. It is of the utmost importance that these men be reached by every exhibitor in the United States.

Coincident with the work that is being carried on throughout the country, the campaign which has been instituted in New York City has made great progress. Thousands of petitions were printed inside of six hours, and these have been delivered to all of the motion picture theaters of New York City, accompanied by a printed sheet of instructions.

Al Shuberg at Winnipeg

Al Shuberg of Seattle, formerly associated with the Province theatre, Winnipeg, Man., has taken over the management of the Gaiety theatre, Winnipeg.

He is a brother of J. A. Shuberg of Vancouver, owner of the Province, Gaiety and Bijou theatres, Winnipeg.

TURN TO THEM

You'll Find a Man for That Job in This Issue

THE Classified Ads, the newest Service to be made a feature of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, will be found in this issue on page 898.

Under the heading of Situations Wanted you will find the very man you need for that open job you have. And the man you select from the Classified Ads will be worthy of the place, for he will be either a soldier or a sailor honorably discharged from Uncle Sam's army or navy, and willing to get back into the fray of making this a safe business world to live in.

These small ads are published for service men free of all cost, and soldiers and sailors are invited to take advantage of them.

only a discrimination against the motion picture, but it is likewise a tax upon the masses of the people, whereas no such tax is imposed on the comparatively few who attend the legitimate theatres.

"Immediately have printed a petition to be signed by the audience reading as follows: (Form and copy of petition enclosed.)

"Also use slides, and wherever possible have film trailers locally made.

Call Mass Meetings

"At once call mass meeting of exhibitors and their friends, as well as enlist the services of all local organizations. Obtain the greatest amount of publicity in all newspapers that the tax will mean the closing of many theatres and the loss to the newspapers of advertising.

"Execution of this plan will produce a result for the motion picture industry, just as it did for the theatrical enterprises. The National Association has employed eminent council and has done everything else within its power to obtain an elimina-

Rumors Cling to Star Combine

Mysterious Atmosphere Still Floats Around and Envelopes All Details—First National Supposed to Get Griffith

"The or not to be" appears to be one of the most popular of indoor and outdoor sports around Los Angeles these days, proving conclusively that Shakespeare must have had the motion picture industry in mind when he put that sentence into the mouth of one of his famous characters.

At last reports, the "star combination," announced in MOTION PICTURE NEWS, was still "combining," but the rumors were floating about the proceedings so thickly that nothing definite could be learned. At the same time D. W. Griffith was giving his reasons for going into the star merger, it was being told that he had signed with First National, and that the latter would announce the fact officially this week. As usual, the various rumors have kept a lot of people working overtime denying them, with the net result that very little has been accomplished in unscrambling the mystery that more or less pervades the premises.

Rumors appearing in Los Angeles newspapers to the effect that the United Artists' Association, comprised of D. W. Griffith, Mary Pickford, Charlie Chaplin, Douglas Fairbanks and William S. Hart, et al., would probably disband in the near future, and that productions by these artists would, in the course of time, be released through distributing corporations, were flatly denied by all the artists when seen by a representative of MOTION PICTURE NEWS. The artists charged that the rumors constituted propaganda inspired by jealous releasing organizations designed to discourage the new star organization.

"We have entered the combine," said D. W. Griffith, "because we believe the public is demanding a better class of pictures than it is now receiving, and because we believe that through this organization we can meet the public demands to better advantage than in the old way of making productions and the old way of releasing. We feel that the day of machine-made, money-controlled pictures is over. There must be more art, more thought, more of the finished product in future releases to meet the highly cultivated tastes of our audiences. It's for this reason that I am aligned with the new film combination, and for this reason that I want to see the organization fully consummated."

John Fairbanks, speaking for Douglas Fairbanks, said: "Any rumors that we intend to disband our organization are absolutely false. We are going right along with our plans, holding meetings almost every day, with no other object in view but to accomplish what we set out to accomplish—our own producing and releasing organizations. We believe it is a step welcomed by the exhibitor, as we shall be able to release directly from the producer to the exhibitor."

Sidney Chaplin took up the argument

SHORT, BUT SWEET

He Gets 'Em All, But the NEWS Serves Him Best

AS a fitting example of how much can be said in just a few words, permit us to cite below a letter from an exhibitor who was not too busy to say a "mouthful" when he thought it timely.

The letter needs no press-agenting, so here it is:

"I get nearly every trade paper, but I believe MOTION PICTURE NEWS has 'em all beat."

(Signed) R. M. Weaver,
Reaper Theatre, Monroe, Mich.

Service is best measured by the remarks of those who are in a position to benefit by it, and who "tell you so" after trying all the "services" out that are being offered and thrust upon the trade.

for Charlie Chaplin. He said: "We do not understand these rumors, unless it is propaganda inspired by rival organizations. We have entered a combine for a common purpose—that of making better pictures and of trying to place a lighter burden on the exhibitor. That we intend to consummate our plans goes without saying. I think we shall be able to make a statement within a few days that will make everybody sit up and take notice."

Mary Pickford is in the combination to stick. Her mother, Mrs. Charlotte Pickford, said: "Mary is still too much under the weather from her influenza attack to enter into any strenuous arguments with anybody, but we flatly deny rumors that the United Artists' Association is planning to disband. Miss Pickford's heart is set on completing the organization we have begun, and we intend to see it through to a successful working organization."

William S. Hart could not be seen, but Paul Conlon, his personal press representative, said that "Hart is standing pat with the other four. We did not go into this thing blindfolded. We know what we are doing and rumors that we have made a mistake and may abandon our plans are utterly false. You can tell the world that."

Sunday Picture Shows for Rhode Island?

Rhode Island will have Sunday movies for the first time if a bill presented before the legislature is passed by that body. The measure provides that such pictures must be serious, classical and educational and that they may be shown between 3 and 6 p. m. and after 8 p. m. on Sundays.

It also stipulates that theatrical, vaudeville and dramatic performances are barred. The license fee, not to exceed $100, is left to police and town authorities. The House Judiciary Committee now has the measure.

Arthur S. Kane Honored by Kansas Society

Arthur S. Kane is president of the Kansas Society of New York and presided at the annual dinner in New York City, January 29. As Mr. Kane is general manager of Select Pictures Corporation, MOTION PICTURE NEWS has gleaned a few facts about him from the annual number of "The Prodigal Sun," a twelve-page special, five columns to the page, and with the slogan, "Kill the Fatted Calf; Let the Cost Be What It May."

The publication contains a personal message from Governor Allen of Kansas, and also a weather report which is declared to be of intense interest to all former Kansans. The weather man states that "there is no BAD weather. Just different kinds of GOOD weather." A biographical roster of about 150 former Kansans who are now residents of New York, is also published.

Arthur S. Kane is honored with nearly a thousand words in the roster which describes his newspaper experiences and entrance into the film industry.

Bach Succeeds Shurtleff at Hodkinson Corp.

W. A. Bach has been promoted to the position of Sales Manager for the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, performing the duties previously carried out by C. E. Shurtleff, who has resigned. Mr. Bach joined the Hodkinson organization a year ago in the capacity of Assistant Sales Manager, previous to which time he was Special Representative for the Universal Film Manufacturing Company and Sales and Advertising Manager for M. H. Hoffman, Inc.

After a six weeks' vacation in California, it is announced that Mr. Shurtleff will return to New York to affiliate himself with one of the several interesting projects now in the process of formation.

Before joining the Hodkinson Corporation Mr. Shurtleff was Sales Manager for Select Pictures Corporation.

Three More Universal Service Men Back

Lieut. Lee Lawson, former technical director; Sergt. Clarence DeWitt and Sergt. H. Divver, former employees of the Universal City studios, were among those who returned to America last week on board the "Goentoe," which carried 1,200 Americans from Brest, France, to New York.

Lawson, DeWitt and Divver were members of the camouflage regiment, placed with the 40th Engineers, and which has served for over ten months along the entire fighting front.

Harry Weinberg Is Back

Harry Weinberg has returned from his service with Uncle Sam and is on the road, out of Omaha, Neb., for the A. H. Blank Enterprises, headquarters in Iowa, Nebraska and Kansas for the First National releases.

What You Can Do!

A Statement From the Executive Committee, N. A. M. P. I.

AS the following statement shows, speedy action is the only thing that will save the industry from the five per cent rental tax. Quick work is the only means that will save the exhibitor from a five per cent tax on his rentals, the patron from higher admission prices—and many small theatres from going to the wall.

And it is now up to the exhibitor! The National Association has had eminent counsel in Washington for many months, but to no avail. Only a flood of petitions from the patrons—from voters—will now prevent defeat.

Get busy today along the lines suggested below. Start the flood of petitions from your town. Address them: "Conference Committee, U. S. Congress, Washington, D. C." And in the lower corner write, "Finance Committee, Senate. Ways and Means Committee, House of Representatives." Let there be no slip.

The N. A. M. P. I. statement follows:

The legitimate theatres, through intelligent and capable four-minute-men, followed by the distribution of petitions protesting against the 20 per cent tax in admission tickets, so flooded the post office department with petitions, and thus so impressed the Conference Committee of the House and Senate, as to cause that Committee to strike the 20 per cent admission tax from the revenue bill. Had that tax been passed, the legitimate theatre business would of course have been seriously crippled.

Our own situation with regard to the 5 per cent tax on film rentals is similar, in that it will be necessary for all picture theatres to substantially raise their admission prices.

We have not sufficient time to prepare and distribute trailers, but a concerted, powerful and effective protest can be made by each exhibitor himself acting as a four-minute-man, or by obtaining a trained four-minute-man from his neighborhood.

Have the speaker briefly point out what the screen has done for the Government and the people in support of the war, as per the substance of the resolutions passed at the meeting of the United States Chamber of Commerce, as published in full in the MOTION PICTURE NEWS of December 21, that the screen has been the school of American patriotism; that it is the chief means of entertainment and education of all classes of the American public, to the extent that it has become not only an essential, but a necessary part of the lives of the people; that the tax of 5 per cent on rentals is calculated to raise between five and six million dollars, and that this will mean that admission prices of all theatres must necessarily be increased, thus preventing a substantial percentage of the public from continuing to receive the entertainment and education of the motion picture, as well as causing the closing of many picture houses and the consequent destruction of large investments in every branch of the industry; that there is no more reason for taxing the film rentals than there is for taxing the scenery and properties of a stage production, and that consequently, the tax on film rentals is not only a discrimination against the motion picture but it is likewise a tax upon the masses of the people, whereas, no such tax is imposed upon the comparatively few who attend the legitimate theatres.

Immediately have printed a petition to be signed by the audience reading as follows:

From Blank Theatre, Blank City, Blank Date, 1919.

To the Honorable Conference Committee of the United States Senate Committee and the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives:

We, the undersigned motion picture patrons, strongly protest against the imposition of a 5 per cent tax on film rentals. The motion picture has proven itself to be the principal school of patriotism of the American public. It is likewise the chief means of entertainment and education of all classes of the American people, to the extent that it has not only become an essential, but a necessary part of the lives of the people.

If the proposed tax is enacted it will necessarily mean a substantial increase in admission prices of all motion picture theatres, and the consequent privation of millions of people of entertainment and education so necessary in these times of world-wide unrest. There is no more justification for placing a tax on film rentals than upon the plays, scenery and properties of theatrical productions. The tax means that the millions who are patrons of the motion picture theatre are compelled to sustain a burden not imposed upon the comparative few who attend the legitimate theatre.

Also use slides, and wherever possible, have film trailers locally made.

At once call mass meeting of exhibitors and their friends, as well as enlist the services of all local organizations. Obtain the greatest amount of publicity in all newspapers. Point out to the newspapers that the tax will mean the closing of many theatres, and the loss to the newspapers of advertising.

Execution of this plan will produce a result for the Motion Picture Industry, just as it did for the theatrical enterprises.

The National Association has employed eminent counsel and has done everything else within its power to obtain an elimination of the tax but without avail. It is now clearly up to the exhibitors if they are to save themselves and the other branches of the industry from this destructive burden.

There is no exhibitor who cannot make a 4-minute speech to his neighbors or who cannot obtain a neighbor to make that speech for him. If necessary, read this statement to each audience as your speech.

The public will be with you in this fight.

Every decent American will resent Congress' excusing the rich opera patron from paying his 20 per cent admission tax and at the same time making the purchaser of a ten cent ticket to a motion picture theatre pay a 20 per cent tax, which is exactly what this rental tax we ask you to fight plus the regular 10 per cent admission tax will do in effect.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE,
National Association of the Motion Picture Industry.

Letter Tells of Kane's Croix de Guerre

A letter received by MOTION PICTURE NEWS this week, which was mailed in France recently by Marshall F. Brockway, lieutenant A. E. F., tells of the citation of Robert T. Kane, formerly of Paralta, and well known in the industry, for heroism and devotion to duty.

The letter follows: "At the presentation of the Croix de Guerre yesterday, Lieut. Robert T. Kane was presented with this mark of distinction as a reward for his extraordinary heroism and devotion to duty during a very heavy gas attack and shell fire, when he, in order to get a column of ambulances into motion and out of the area being gassed, took off his own gas mask, and with utter disregard for his own personal safety aided the wounded in the ambulances in getting on their masks and out of the gassed area, continuing to do so until he had succumbed to complete exhaustion."

"Under Four Flags" for the Children

Arrangements are being completed by the Division of Films whereby thousands of American school children will witness the Government's Victory picture "Under Four Flags." Recognizing the timely interest of the picture and its remarkable historical interest, as well as its patriotic appeal, many prominent educators have adopted the idea of securing the film for exhibitions in the schools. Denis J. Sullivan, manager of Domestic Distribution of the Division of Films, states that the interest among educators is intense and that he is receiving applications for the film for school purposes from all over the country. One territory alone has taken the picture for showings covering a period of ninety days.

Since its release January 6, "Under Four Flags" has been going along at a rapid rate in bookings and is fulfilling the expectations of the Division of Films in this respect.

First National Owns Many Theatres

Following the meeting of the directors of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, recently held in Los Angeles, it was announced that the circuit now owns more than 200 first-run houses, and is affiliated with 600 additional theatres. The announcement was made officially by General Manager J. D. Williams.

The total value of its theatres, Mr. Williams said, is placed at $45,000,000. Notable among the additional theatres added to the circuit's list within the past few weeks were sixteen houses in Minneapolis owned by Ruben and Finklestein, valued at $2,000,000.

The First National has signed a number of new stars, according to E. H. Hulsey, of Dallas, Tex., who, with Harry Schwalbe, of Philadelphia, was appointed as a special committee to conclude negotiations with the new stars signed, but not named.

IT'S A BOY!

'Congratulations Are In Order to Albert E. Smith

THE news headlines January 29 were brightened by the words, "Another Addition to the Personal Staff of Albert E. Smith, Vitagraph President."

And the story related how old Faithful Stork had stopped at the Smith homestead long enough to leave a chubby package, to which has been tied the moniker of James Gordon Victor Smith.

The advent of James Gordon Victor brings the promising young household of Mr. and Mrs. Smith to the number of five, there now being three girls and two boys in the family.

Mrs. Smith and "young" Mr. Smith are doing splendidly, and a nurse in attendance stated that fifteen minutes after his arrival James Gordon Victor indicated an almost uncanny tendency for one so young toward the professional pathway followed by his father.

He is said to have looked about the room, much as a motion picture director looks about his set, and gave evidence of marked disapproval of the way various pieces of furniture were grouped. It is not reported, however, that sufficient authority has as yet been vested in the young man to have caused any rearrangement of the Smith household goods.

Canadian Exhibitors Get the "Repeat" Habit

Leading Canadian exhibitors are reported as getting the repeat habit. Following the success which attended the first presentation of Nazimova's "Eye for Eye," at the Regent theatre, Toronto, Manager Elliott rebooked the attraction for the theatre for the week of January 27.

Manager Rotsky of the New Grand theatre, Montreal, Quebec, rebooked "The Better 'Ole" for a second week at his house, this being for the week of January 20.

The Dominion theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba, also did such big business with "The Better 'Ole" that the feature was continued for a second week, the engagement being concluded on January 25.

Fire Results in New Regulations

Drastic new fire regulations have been issued by the executive offices of Exhibitors' Mutual Distributing Corporations as a result of the disastrous blaze which occurred in the film building at Pittsburg, recently.

Fire rules have been in force for years in the Exhibitors' Mutual exchanges, but the blaze at Pittsburg resulted in their revision along much more stringent lines.

Over the signature of William J. Clark, president, and A. S. Kirkpatrick, assistant general manager, the regulations have been posted in every exchange.

John H. Taylor Again Visits America

Although he had just braved the submarines in October to visit New York for a close-up view of American producing activities, Managing Director John H. Taylor of London Inter-Ocean, arrived last week at Inter-Ocean Building, New York City, for another two-week stay. He evidently wants to beat out the New York-to-Los Angeles "commuter" he reads of in the American trade press. Mr. Taylor is very optimistic about conditions in England and does not think that the coming of peace will see an abatement in the quantity of American films used over there, provided the quality keeps up.

With Mr. Taylor, on the steamship "Lapland," came the negative of "The Better 'Ole," which Capt. Bruce Bairnsfather, creator of the original "Old Bill" cartoons, had been working upon in London. Mr. Taylor stated that of the many films with exceptional drawing power he had seen in his career as a picture man, none had appealed to him more strongly than "The Better 'Ole," and largely because of its novelty side.

The carbons and accessories handled by Inter-Ocean will be distributed in England by Major A. H. Sowerbutts, who has received his discharge from the Royal Artillery and previous to the war was well known in the London trade as manager of the Warwick Trading Company and Film Libraries, Ltd. Major Sowerbutts had considerable studio experience, as a camera, projection and lighting expert, before coming to the rental side of the business, having been an electrician before entering the picture field.

This, in the opinion of President Cromelin of Inter-Ocean, adapts Major Sowerbutts peculiarly well to the business of distributing the Inter-Ocean accessories line.

Bryson Leases Shubert at Minneapolis

James V. Bryson, manager of the Minneapolis branch of Universal Film Company, has leased the Shubert theatre in the Flour City from I. N. Scott, trustee of the Shubert estate.

"I intend to make the Sam S. Shubert theatre of Minneapolis one of the biggest feature houses in America," said Mr. Bryson. "There is a crying demand in Minneapolis for a theatre that can house big pictures that go begging for a run. There isn't an available theatre in the city that can house these big attractions. I mean that the downtown theatres in Minneapolis that run movies have set policies and are governed by set prices, and it is impossible for first-class houses to make way to handle such productions.

"I have had my eye on the Sam S. Shubert theatre for a long time, but it was not until this week, when "Heart of Humanity" arrived, did I make up my mind that the Shubert had to be mine. It is needless to say that I lost no time in closing this deal.

"However, I don't expect to let up my pounding as manager of the Universal Exchange, Minneapolis, in the least."

Influenza Closes the Whole of Australia

INFLUENZA has clamped its destroying hand upon the entire motion picture industry and theatrical business of Australia, according to a cable which was received in New York City January 29 by Millard Johnson, representing Australasian Films, Ltd.

The theatres throughout the whole of Australia have been ordered by the Government to close their doors for a period of from three to four months, thus not only affecting the public of that country and the exhibitors, but the American exporters who supply much of the film sent there.

Insofar as the producers are concerned who furnish the product which Australasian Films distributed in Australia, Mr. Johnson said: "This will mean that the film producers of America stand to lose from $25,000 to $30,000 a week from our organization alone, as this is the amount our concern generally spends for Australian rights to American film products."

Harry Musgrove, head of Australasian Films, Ltd., is now on his way over here and is due to arrive February 10. It had been the intention of Millard Johnson, the American representative, to leave for Australia about February 15, but he declares that this trip is postponed because of the influenza situation over there, which he pronounces deplorable.

"My Four Years in Germany," "Mickey," and practically all of the big productions were secured for Australia by this concern, and the products of First National, Select, Jewels, Vitagraph, Pathe, World and Triangle will also be tremendously affected in regards to prospective income, according to Mr. Johnson, who stated that the products of those American companies were controlled in Australia by his concern.

Mr. Johnson stated that the direct cable order he received not only dispensed the information that all the Australian theatres would be closed from three to four months by the Government order, but that he was to refrain from spending the $100,000 a month for American film until further notice.

A letter received by Inter-Ocean Film a few days ago from Harry Harper, special representative, intimated the close-down. Mr. Harper said, in part: "Official warning has been given that if one case is discovered, everything—shows, shops, hotels, etc.—will immediately be closed up tight, so the citizens are taking great care of themselves and praying for dawn."

Pathe's "Common Clay" Plays Broadway

It was announced this week from the Pathe offices that "Common Clay," screened from the A. H. Woods stage play, with Fannie Ward in the film version, has been booked by Managing Director Hugo Riesenfeld, of the Rialto and Rivoli theatres, New York, for a week's run at the Rialto the week of March 2.

In addition, it is announced, seven of the Pathe Extra Selected Star Photoplays have been booked for the same theatre, covering a period from March 9 to July 27. They feature Fannie Ward, Frank Keenan, Bessie Love and Bryant Washburn.

Reviewers have agreed that "Common Clay" is an exceptional picture, and the Broadway booking appears as further proof of the excellence of the play.

Woonsocket, R. I., to Have $50,000 Theatre

A corporation to be known as the Social Amusement Company, to be located in Woonsocket, Rhode Island, where it is to conduct and operate a moving picture theatre, was granted a charter by the Secretary of State at Providence last week.

The corporation is capitalized at $50,000 and the incorporators are Wilfred Begin, Hubert Begin and Arsene Denovers. All are residents of Woonsocket. Plans for the erection of a modern moving picture house are understood to be under way.

William L. Gray Dies

William L. Gray, general manager of the Biograph Film Company laboratories in East 176th street, New York, died last week from influenza at his home in New York.

Fifteen years ago Mr. Gray came to New York and became affiliated with the old Biograph Company.

Exhibitors Mutual Board Meets

Many Conferences Were Held Between Exhibitors Mutual, Affiliated Distributors and Robertson-Cole Officials

TO make Exhibitors Mutual a one hundred per cent exhibitor-owned distributing organization was said to have been the principal theme of the meeting of the Board of Directors of Exhibitors Mutual Distributing Corporation, held at 1600 Broadway, New York City.

Conferences were held between the directors of Exhibitors Mutual, officers of Affiliated Distributors Corporation and the Robertson-Cole Company, which represents, as bankers and exporters, a group of independent producers making productions for release through Exhibitors Mutual exchanges.

Definitely the plan is described as proposing to make Exhibitors Mutual a completely exhibitor owned exchange system which shall become an open market for the independent producer. The Robertson-Cole Company in its relations with Exhibitors Mutual will be the bankers for the independent producer and handle the foreign market.

The directors of Exhibitors Mutual elected H. C. Cornelius, of Grand Rapids, secretary of the company, first vice-president to succeed James M. Sheldon, whose resignation was accepted, and named L. A. Cornelius, president of Wolverine Brass Company, a director to fill the vacancy. I. C. Elston, Jr., of Chicago, was elected second vice-president to succeed H. A. Brink, who recently resigned from the directorate.

Control of the Mutual Film Corporation is declared to have passed early in November into the hands of a group of exhibitors headed by William J. Clark. The corporation was reorganized immediately as Exhibitors Mutual Distributing Corporation with Mr. Clark as president.

On January 1, it is announced, a dividend was declared on preferred stock outstanding. The dividend came within two months of the reorganization.

The minority stock in the corporation is said to be owned by bankers and other interests formerly in control of the Mutual Film Corporation. An option has been secured by the controlling interests on the balance of the holdings, which is to be offered to exhibitors generally.

"The control of the Exhibitors Mutual Distributing Corporation is owned by bona fide motion picture theatre owners," announced C. C. Pettijohn, general counsel and a director in the corporation. "The company is controlled actually by motion picture exhibitors and it is our plan to make that exhibitor ownership 100 per cent." The control of the company now is in the hands of fourteen exhibitors, who have an option on the balance of the stock now held by bankers.

"The interests which now hold the remainder of the stock are not anxious to dispose of their holdings, but we secured, with control, an option on their holdings, and that option will be exercised by other exhibitors in the very near future.

"When this stock is taken up from the bankers by other exhibitors, we will sell to exhibitors such proportion of the control as may be deemed fair."

"Mr. Clark has taken the presidency of the company at a large personal sacrifice," said H. C. Cornelius, vice-president. "He has given up his personal business interests in Grand Rapids, his home there, and his political future in Michigan to take executive charge of the company. He does not want to, and does not intend, to remain president for life.

"The fourteen exhibitors who hold the control of the company have no ambition to confine control to themselves."

Favors Bill for State Censorship

Committee of Fifty in St. Louis
Would Do Away with National Review Board and Establish State Board

S. J. BAKER, manager of First National Exhibitors' Circuit Exchange at St. Louis, Mo., this week commented to MOTION PICTURE NEWS on the charges made by the Committee of Fifty in St. Louis that the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures is an incompetent censorship body; that it has failed in its efforts to prevent questionable productions from being shown the public; that it is dominated by producers and that its reviews are little short of a farce.

"The allegations," said Mr. Baker, "against the National Board of Review are a part of a report by the Committee of Fifty giving the results of its investigations preparatory to recommending a state censorship for Missouri."

A bill, based on this report, will be introduced in the State Legislature for the creation of a State Board of Censors for Motion Pictures. Strong influences are being brought to bear to obtain its passage, and once more Missouri exhibitors face the possibility of a drastic, autocratic statewide censorship, with restrictions and curtailments of freedom in action which promise to work havoc with the industry in this state.

Despite the fact that the report pays a high tribute to the motion picture industry, implying that the Committee of Fifty has a definite regard and esteem for the individuals in it—and this regard is based on minute investigation—it contradicts its implied opinion by vigorously urging a drastic state censorship. Following is the report of the Committee of Fifty in its entirety:

"We recommend that a bill be introduced in the legislature creating a State Board of Censors for Motion Pictures.

"REASONS: The motion picture business has in fact become an educational system. It teaches by example. And whatever the pretense, too many of its examples tend to teach crime and corrupt morals.

"It is not necessary to recite the growth and financial power of that business, which claims to be one of the biggest industries of the country and to pay the highest salaries. Suffice it to say that where there are few theatres in the large cities, nevertheless, there will be a score of motion picture houses.

"The motion picture show is the only cultural influence for millions of persons. Its influence for good or evil can then be easily imagined and need not be described. The motion picture show attracts persons of every degree of intelligence, its admission price is low and it is easily accessible. The beneficial influence of the motion picture show, rightly managed, ought to be recognized and secured against evil tendencies.

"Now competition is keen, and prurient and salacious themes and shows are selected to screen for audiences. The experience of too many persons in this state and of the official censors elsewhere prove that the pictures as a whole—have not been improving in character as the producers are wont to assert in their resistance of legal censorship. The producers oppose all censorship except by their own so-called National Board of Review, formerly called the National Board of Censorship.

"This operates in part to mislead the public into belief that the National Government in some way reviews these pictures, etc. A part of the duties of this so-called National Board seems to be to watch the country and go everywhere when legal censorship is proposed and then vigorously oppose the plan by asserting their own as sufficient.

"The habitual visitor of the motion picture show as here presented, is living in a strange world and is in danger of having every moral

"EXCELLENT SERVICE"

That's What They Say About the Classified Ads

WE are glad to be able to serve our returning soldiers and sailors by aiding them in getting settled into new positions—if their old ones are not waiting for them.

That's why, two issues ago, we inaugurated the Classified Ads which won immediate approval throughout the industry.

Men being discharged from the army and navy are invited to let us publish their Want Ads free of all cost to them if they desire to make new connections in the motion picture industry.

Producers, exhibitors and others needing men will find suitable ones by reading the Classified Ads each week. These are the men who will put red, fighting blood into your business. Help them get settled—they settled it for us with the Kaiser.

standard debased. The films parade scenes of assaults on women; we are asked to enter resorts and as it were, to associate with the vile characters that congregate there for an evening's entertainment; we are asked to be present in intimate bedroom scenes; white slave pictures of the most revolting character are presented and with an intimacy of detail that to a normal person must be disgusting, while, to a younger person it may be a positive danger.

"Women parade in almost nakedness in the so-called bathing beach comedies; we have the insidious art pictures and fairy stories whose purpose is to lay the foundation for showing flesh; we are asked to be present at scenes of revelry and debauchery; we are asked to spend the evening with some prostitute who in the past ages has made herself unusually infamous and now has found an imitator to show in detail what kind of an infamous life was led; persons who do not want to become acquainted with prostitutes historical or unhistorical, have the lives of them depicted in their very neighborhood and to their very children; veritable cesspools are emptied into the beholders' minds on the pretext that some valuable lesson is being taught; scenes are shown in the fields that could not possibly be thought of on the stage nor acted thereon.

"There is no legal censorship in Missouri. The National Board of Review is an instrument of the producers and its review has been proved to be a farce in many cases. It has become in part an engine to fight legal censorship. The plain facts must be told.

"The situation above outlined calls for the application of a remedy. There is no remedy except legal censorship.

"The so-called National Board of Review condemns itself by its standard No. 26 on Nudity.

"No. 26—Nudity. The National Board recognizes that there is nothing innately harmful or suggestive in nudity. Custom and prudery, however, have reared a taboo against its display. No logical and satisfying reasons can be given against its use under natural conditions and surroundings. Such is the traditional and emotional opposition, nevertheless that its use in motion pictures should not be undertaken for the present. A number of pictures showing the female nude have been passed by the National Board and it has learned that the public's reaction has consistently been one of condemnation of such films.

"Therefore, the National Board, as a reflector of public opinion has seen fit to take the position that it should not and will not pass any pictures containing, incidentally or extensively, the female nude, dating from January 1, 1917.

"Nothing further need be said as to the National Board of Review after its presentation of the above standard wherein it assumes to scold the public for its prudery. From this fact

Warren Dunham Foster Sails for Europe

To investigate conditions obtaining in the overseas branches of the Community Motion Picture Bureau of New York, which distributes at cost, through the Y. M. C. A. and Foyer du Soldat, to the soldiers and sailors of all nations, President Warren Dunham Foster sailed for Europe.

In his party were: A. H. Brunner, assistant to president; W. B. Patterson of Philadelphia, general auditor; his assistant, Thomas A. Dye of Pittsburg; John T. Benning of Wilkesbarre; A. Gil Spear of Nazareth; Lieut. Henry L. Armes of Boston, and Edward R. Phelps, the overseas director for the bureau.

After graduation from the University of Chicago, Mr. Foster was on the editorial staff of the Chicago Daily Journal, then instructor of English in Iowa State College.

For seven years he was with The Youth's Companion, and while there identified himself with the American Society for Promotion of Industrial Education.

Police Warn Exhibitors Against Ad Man

An advertising scheme calculated to get exhibitors in bad with their business men is exposed by Chief of Police John G. Haglock, of Sterling, Illinois, in the following letter to MOTION PICTURE NEWS:

"The fore-part of this month one by the name of A. J. Klien, representing the Klien Poster Program Co. of Chicago, Ill., made his appearance at Freeport, this state, also Sterling, Ill.

"His scheme is to induce the local manager of some show house to use his program, the manager to take around and introduce him to the business men of said city, in order to sell them space on the program. Of course wherever possible he would collect in advance, and that was the last ever seen of A. J. Klien.

"I have a letter from the Police Department of Chicago, stating there is no such firm as the Klien Poster Program Co. in that city.

"Would it be asking too much of MOTION PICTURE NEWS to publish this man and stop his game? It is easy to work, and no doubt he is still plying his trade, and relieving the innocent."

"Cleopatra" Goes Back to Minneapolis

"Cleopatra," starring Theda Bara, the William Fox star, is slated to return to Minneapolis for an indefinite run at the William Fox Shubert theatre. It will be the first time that the picture has been shown at popular prices and its first presentation will be made next Sunday.

Judging from the amount of enthusiasm the picture created when it was first shown at the Metropolitan theatre here some time ago, its second engagement should prove one of the biggest drawing cards since the influenza lid caused so much grief to the public and theatre managers. An augmented orchestra is to be used as an accompaniment to the film.

Thanhouser Directors Vote to Dissolve Company

One of the oldest film corporations of America, a pioneer in the early days, will dissolve if the Board of Directors are sustained by the stockholders.

At Richmond, Virginia, during a special meeting held there, the Thanhouser Film Corporation Board adopted the following resolution:

"Resolved, That in the judgment of this board it is deemed advisable and for the benefit of this corporation that it shall be dissolved."

Notice was also given that a special meeting of the stockholders of The Thanhouser Film Corporation has been called by resolution of the board of directors, to be held February 19, 1919, in the principal office of the corporation, 909 East Main street, Richmond, Va., in reference to the following:

(1) To take action upon the resolution so adopted by the Board of Directors;

(2) In case such dissolution be approved and said corporation dissolved, to authorize and empower the Board of Directors, in settling and adjusting the business and affairs of the corporation and selling and conveying its property, as authorized by statute, to effect such sale, at public or private sale to the highest bidder, upon such terms as the board shall deem advisable, with authority to sell said property at public sale only to any director or directors of the corporation or to a corporation or corporations in which one or more such directors may be interested, provided the bid of such director or directors or such corporation or corporations is the highest received;

(3) To approve all action taken or authorized by the directors, officers and stockholders of said Thanhouser Film Corporation;

(4) To transact such other business as may properly come before the said meeting.

"Red Glove" Gets New Release Date

It was announced by Universal this week that March 17 has been set as the positive release date of the latest Universal serial, "The Red Glove," which features Marie Walcamp.

The serial was previously scheduled for release late in February, but acting upon the suggestion of Joe Brandt, who is at Universal City supervising the direction of several Universal serials, the film will be held back almost a month.

Ouimet Loses Daughter from Influenza

L. E. Ouimet, president and general manager of the Specialty Film Import, Ltd., with main offices in Montreal, Canada, announced in New York on January 29 the death of his only daughter, Alice, in Los Angeles.

Miss Ouimet had gone to the Coast with her mother, and was stricken shortly after her arrival there by influenza, which developed into pneumonia.

"Thank God—An Optimist!"

A Small Town Exhibitor Who Isn't Always Kicking!

HERE'S a contribution that will cheer the corners of your heart. It's a new optimistic note to the small town viewpoint. E. C. Smith, manager of the American and Liberty Theatres, Dayton, Washington, is the author.

Incidentally, and cheering to us, is the following quotation from Mr. Smith's letter: "Enclosed please find check for two years subscription to MOTION PICTURE NEWS. I have been reading with interest the many articles that have been appearing in the NEWS and other trade journals and I am taking the liberty at this time of telling you that I think your NEWS has got 'em all backed off the map. It's a real magazine, Boys, and just keep right on the track you are now working."

Following is Mr. Smith's contribution:

"SIX YEARS' AN EIGHTY PER CENTER"

I have been reading with interest, the past few weeks, the many articles concerning the ups and downs, the faults, etc., of the motion picture industry.

Now, I do not wish to go on record for knowing much, but I have kept still as long as I can stand it without having MY SAY on a few matters on which I do not agree with a few of the calamity howlers and how they are downtrodden.

We sure have been hit an awful swat by the "flu bug," but too much prosperity and a lot of us fellows would soon want the earth with a down hill pull. I believe this "flu" setback will put a system of economy and financial regulations into our "nuts" that will more than offset our losses in a very short period of time.

The writer almost went to the wall once in his motion picture experience and it was the best school of establishing system and economy he ever attended. I don't mean to give the impression, either, that I was necessarily extravagant and careless.

Personally, I do not think much of the fellow that sets back cussing every branch of this industry and trying to show where the other fellow is a "nut" and don't know his business. Better dig into your own business and see what there is to be done to make things better and perhaps the other fellow will be found to be a mighty bright bird after all.

When it comes to the average exhibitor telling what the producer should do and how rotten this and that picture is and how it should have been made (or never made at all) I think it's time he began a study on "how to sell what there is to sell," as it all has its place.

If the fellow who is selling two, three, or four features a week, as the case may be, will stop to realize that there is something in most everything produced, if properly exploited, it will pay a dividend. There is the constant cry that this and that picture is a LEMON. Forget it! It's true some pictures are lemons in certain localities and whenever an exhibitor gets one of those lemons and starts to cussing he is showing just how little he is posted. The fact is, most every so-called LEMON has a market. I firmly believe MOST ANY picture can be sold most ANY-

WHERE if the exhibitor will dig up its proper selling points. I firmly believe there is a way to sell THEM ALL, for instance: If you get a so-called lemon to dispose of and a patron asks you about it, tell the truth, say "it is not a popular picture in some places, but that you believe it is going to be a winner for ——— as such and such is embodied in the play and you should see it," also telling what you have with the picture worth seeing. I realize that a point that will sell a picture in one place may not prove successful in another, but these things an exhibitor should know if he is a real exhibitor. Again I say most every picture has a market and if you are an exhibitor you should know how to sell the grand and glorious output now at your disposal.

I disagree with the fellow who is not satisfied with what there is now at his disposal. There is so much to select from that I am at a loss at times to determine what to show. My trouble is keeping pace with the rapid changes in the industry.

Don't get the idea I am trying to boost the producer or any particular brand of service, that's not what I am writing for. Every holler an exhibitor makes about how many rotten ones there are, simply helps to encourage the producer to spend more money in making the next one, which in turn means more money from the exhibitor if he sells it to his patrons.

I am strictly opposed to higher admissions. It spells ruin for the EIGHTY PERCENTER inasmuch as he must depend upon all classes at all times in order to secure a profitable audience. The city can market these big ones, as there is a sufficient number of people able to pay such high prices. Therefore the so-called quality bird can operate the $1.00 theatre.

Again I say, dig into your own business, look yourself in the mirror and see if you are really selling what there is to sell and picking the kind your patrons want, not what you want. Do your part to keep the moving picture at a price where it will be in reach of every one at all times.

Respectfully submitted,

E. C. SMITH, Owner,
American and Liberty Theatres,
Dayton, Wash.

Legislators See "The Heart of Humanity"

Motion picture presentation became part of the business before the legislature of Colorado in session at Denver. Manager Edward Armstrong, of the Denver Universal office, and Gus A. Metzger, district manager, staged a special showing of "The Heart of Humanity" at the Isis theatre at Denver, at midnight, Jan. 17. An invitation to the State Legislature to attend in a body was extended and despite the lateness of the showing over 400 solons witnessed the special exhibition.

In addition to the legislators several Red Cross units were represented by their executives, city officials, newspapermen and many exhibitors viewed the big Jewel picture.

So enthused were the reviewers that the following day brought some exceptional praise from the press and in the legislature a resolution thanking the Universalites and the theatre management for the invitation to and the presentation of "The Heart of Humanity" was unanimously passed.

F. E. Tasker Transfers His Activities

After serving for a long time on the War Personnel Department of the Y. M. C. A., Fred E. Tasker has joined the Community Motion Picture Bureau at 46 W. Twenty-fourth street, New York City.

In connection with the Y. M. C. A. work he passed on a great many of the supervisors who went overseas to run the motion picture entertainments. He is temporarily director in the industrial department.

Mr. Tasker is a Washington man. He graduated from George Washington Law School and made a specialty of patent law in Washington for ten years.

Milton Hoffman Visits New York

For First Time in Three Years
Lasky's Studio Manager Pays
Metropolis a Visit—Optimism
His Watchword

MILTON HOFFMAN, studio manager for Famous Players-Lasky on the Coast, is in New York for the first time in three years, and to use his own expression, "Broadway is still here."

To handle the affairs of Famous Players-Lasky's plant in Hollywood is a real job, and Mr. Hoffman has demonstrated in his term of years as manager of this plant, one of the most complete and largest in the world, that there is a real man at the head of it. His is no mean task, and it is because of the thousand-and-one details that confronts him each hour of the day in the discharge of his duty, that Mr. Hoffman has not had the time during these three years to drop in on Broadway and say hello to his many friends.

But even though he has not had time to visit the East, he has not lost himself to Manhattan for every now and then we hear of this or that improvement being made to the Lasky plant in Hollywood; new buildings added, more acreage occupied, and more work being accomplished. Back of all these movements the hand of Milton Hoffman is seen.

Primarily, his visit East, is for the purpose of getting the Eastern angle and conferring with the executives of Famous Players-Lasky. One of his main objects in visiting New York is to say hello to his friends. And since his arrival he has given this little word a hard work-out, for everyone who is anyone in the motion picture world, either on the Coast or in New York, knows Milton Hoffman and he knows them.

Asked about the "doings" on the Coast, Mr. Hoffman replied that "things are booming" in characteristic Hollywood style. "The chief topic of discussion when he left," he said, "was whether the big five were going to combine." "I can't speak authoritatively on the subject," he continued, "nor do I believe anyone else can excepting the stars themselves. I understand that the report is out that Fairbanks has signed with the First National, but no one seems to be able to verify it. Speaking of Mr. Fairbanks I can say that he has had such a move in mind for some time."

Mr. Hoffman said that conditions on the Coast were never better excepting for the drawback incident to the influenza epidemic. But even that, he said, could not seriously retard the trend toward noticeable progress. "During the three years that I have been absent from New York, wonderful changes have taken place in the Famous Players-Lasky plant. I have seen the big institution at Hollywood grow from one small building to acres of buildings and 'lots.' And it is still growing, and growing fast.

"I have noticed big changes in the East during my short stay here. A little depression is noticeable, but as ever one knows, it is due to the re-action caused by the cessation of hostilities on the other side. This is natural and should be expected. I, personally, have never been more optimistic. Activities on the Coast could point to no other outlook."

Will Inspect Theatres Monthly

Health Officer at Cincinnati Requests
Co-operation of Exhibitors in Educational Campaign for Health

HEALTH OFFICER PETERS, Cincinnati, has asked motion picture managers of that city to join him in a movement to improve atmospheric conditions in theatres by means of systematic inspections.

Theatres will be graded on monthly inspections that include dimensions, seating, capacity, ventilating systems, water and sanitary conveniences, disposal of programs left in theaters by patrons, cleaning systems and other items that will improve the air in the theatres.

"It is to be a campaign of education without any persecution or prosecution," Dr. Peters announced. "The downtown theatres have been watching these items, but we want to reach a few that have, since the influenza epidemic, practically made their theatres sealed boxes."

The theatre managers declare that they have been giving attention to matters of this kind and they welcome the move, which is designed to educate the theatre employees and patrons along lines of pure air in places of amusement.

Right across from Cincinnati, the Covington, Kentucky, City Commissioners have declined to act upon a request from motion picture theatre managers of that city asking for a refund on licenses during the period that their theatres were closed during the influenza epidemic. Speaking of the matter, Mayor Craig stated:

"We did not order these places closed and it was not our fault that they were closed. The order was issued by the Council of Defence and the State Board of Health."

The Commissioners held that it would establish a precedent to remit the licenses for the period that the houses were closed.

The Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce has elected officers as follows: President, A. G. Hettesheimer; First Vice-President, John Weinig; Second Vice-President, William Gervers; Treasurer, Otto Luedeking, and Secretary, Beacher E. Hess.

Marcus A. Beeman, acting director of the Division of Films, in the absence of Charles S. Hart in Europe, was the guest of honor last Tuesday evening at a farewell banquet tendered by his associates at the Martinique Hotel, New York.

Aurora Gets Mammoth Picture Theatre

What will undoubtedly be one of the largest motion picture theatres in the country, according to plans announced this week, will be located at Aurora, Ill., when the Sylvandell, formerly a skating rink, and the Fox theatre are combined under one roof, with a seating capacity of 4,000. It will be operated by Thielen and Rubens.

Planned two years ago, and hindered by war's building restrictions, the proposed project was officially announced by Jules J. Rubens last week. Work of remodeling, he stated, will start immediately.

The estimated cost of remodeling is $60,000. All of the seats will be on one floor without a post. Around the entire floor will be mezzanine boxes. Plans provide for a most beautiful and modern playhouse. One feature will be a $15,000 pipe organ. There will be rest rooms for men and women, a nursery where competent nurses will take charge of children, check rooms, and a system of noise deadeners guaranteed to keep out the rumbling from bowling alleys below.

The addition of Sylvandell will give Thielen and Rubens ownership of eighteen theatres. They have investments of over $500,000 in amusement properties in Aurora.

other important deductions can be made as to the operation of the National Board of Review.

"It will be impossible in a short statement of reasons to cumulate evidence as to indecent films shown in St. Louis. Some of the films so shown have been prohibited in states that have legal censorship on the ground that they were too indecent to be shown.

"It is no answer to say that the persons who show such films should be prosecuted. In the first place the damage has in large part been done when the film has been shown. And in the second place, the manager of the showhouses is not the person primarily at fault. Again, if one goes to the exchange manager he will contend that he is retained to get customers for his firm in the territory assigned to him and that he is not supposed to know the contents of the films of his exchange. The producer is not available. And again, one must be very careful and discreet about enforcing ancient laws against the modern motion picture business, because legal proceedings sometimes are made use of by shrewd managers for advertising purposes.

"Now, the motion picture business ought to be kept up to the standard of morality. It is not fair to say that the general standard of morality is low and therefore one might let the motion picture business go down to the same level. As a matter of fact, we can tell by the situation in St. Louis, with its large population, that if the standard were as low as is claimed there would be more than two theatres of a certain type which we do not care to more particularly define.

"There is no solution of this problem of the motion pictures except by a legal State Censorship Board. Such a law ought not to be used as a revenue measure, though its cost of operation should be obtained by an appropriate inspection fee.

"Ohio, Kansas, Pennsylvania and Maryland now have such a censorship law and conditions have mightily improved in the states in question.

"The censorship law requires that the film which it is intended to show in the state of Missouri shall be first presented to the Board of Censors and if indecent it shall not be allowed to be shown, or if it contain an indecent part, the offensive part shall be first eliminated. Proper safeguard for appeal to the Courts are to be provided, and for review a second time by the Board, etc., before an appeal to the court. The fact of the prior showing of the film is to be proved to the public by the approval seal of the Board shown on the screen. There is to be a penalty for showing films not so viewed by the Board.

"The censors must make a report and indicate the parts cut out and in practice the fact that all are treated alike aids in sustaining the principle of censorship and helps to raise the standard of the motion picture industry."

Association Holds Another Meeting

The organization meeting of the fire prevention, regulation and insurance committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry was held in the association's headquarters in the Times Building, Wednesday, January 29, at 3 o'clock.

The members of this committee are: Jesse L. Lasky, Famous Players Corporation; J. E. Brulatoru, Eastman Films; Erich Schay, Goldwyn Pictures Corporation; C. H. MacGowan, Universal Film Manufacturing Company; B. Busch, World Film Corporation; A. I. Siegel, Vitagraph, Inc.; D. The initial meeting of the new censorship committee of the National Association was held at the association headquarters, Wednesday, January 22.

Plans were discussed relative to making the activity of the committee national in scope, and the preliminary steps for the carrying out of this idea were immediately put into effect.

The committee perfected its organization by the election of Gabriel L. Hess of the Goldwyn Pictures' Corporation as chairman, and Frederick H. Elliott as secretary. The other members of the committee are: D. W. Griffith, D. W. Griffith Productions; Wm. A. Brady, Wm. A. Brady Productions; Louis Innerarity, Pathe Exchange, Inc.; William M. Seabury, attorney and counsellor; Paul H. Cromelin, Interocean Film Corporation; Walter W. Irwin, Famous Players-Lasky; F. A. Powers, Universal Film Mfg. Co.; Arthur S. Friend, Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, and J. Robert Rubin, attorney and counsellor. John E. Pembleton was present, representing D. W. Griffith.

Rapf Presents Miss Hall to Harlem Audience

Following out his plan of making the public personally acquainted with the artists who appear in his productions, Harry Rapf, producer of "Wanted for Murder," starring Elaine Hammerstein, presented to the patrons of the Harlem Fifth avenue theatre, 110th street and Fifth avenue, at the Saturday night show, Lillian Hall, who has the leading ingenue role opposite Miss Hammerstein in this production. Following Mr. Rapf's introduction of Miss Hall to a crowded house, the little ingenue talked in intimate terms with her audience and told them how glad she was to meet them.

Kansas City Sees a Busy Week

Exchanges Take on New Life and Break Some Records—Other News of Interest Floats About "Show-me" Town

THE past week has been a busy one for the exchangemen of Kansas City. All records have been broken in sales and the somewhat discouraged managers are beginning to take on new life.

Mr. Pennybaker, of Oklahoma City, has taken over the Mutual Exchange here and has made several changes in policy.

Paramount has added Roy Haffner to the sales force and he has made a remarkable showing for a new man in a new territory. He formerly was an exhibitor in Nowata, Oklahoma.

Sears and Jones have bought the Auditorium theatre in Marshal, Mo. They are to run Paramount pictures. S. A. Davidson, manager and owner of the Royal theatre in Cherryvale, Kansas, has been discharged from the army and will take entire charge of the theatre, which has been managed by his father during his absence.

The Pathe Exchange has finally settled itself down to business again after the visit of Baby Marie Osborne. The youngster was given a very warm welcome. Don Woods, former booker for Pathe, who has been at Camp Bowie for several months, is back and hard at work.

Charles Barron, manager of the Isis theatre in Augusta, Kansas, is in the city. He has booked the Pathe News service again and states that he has been more than pleased with the single reels during the past year. The Pathe-color reel is going well at the Royal theatre in Kansas City. Mr. McClure, of McClure & Faulkner, from Jamesport, Mo., has been reviewing the various pictures and has finally decided on Pathe-American.

Milton Feld, manager of the Universal exchange, has adopted a plan for placing "Crashing Through to Berlin" that is proving most effective. With the picture goes Sergt. Jack Howard, of the Canadian Army, who was gassed and wounded several times in the battles of Verdun, Lille and Cambrai. He will make an address preceding the showing of the film history of the war. The salesmen giving the scheme their attention have to date obtained contracts in every town visited.

Jerry Abrams, special representative of the New York office of the Universal Film and Manufacturing Company, was in Kansas City Saturday, Jan. 18, arranging a special campaign of exploitation throughout the Missouri-Kansas division in the interest of the next seven serial photoplays to be released by Universal.

A. King, of St. Louis, traveling auditor for Universal, spent several days in this city and expressed satisfaction over the rapid increase in business since the "flu" ban has been entirely lifted.

George Crissman, manager of the Gayoso theatre, has purchased the film "Oklahoma Outlaws" from the Eagle Film Company for the entire state of Missouri and he is now negotiating for the New York state rights. The film showed to capacity houses here for two weeks.

Mr. Bell, vice-president and manager of the Equitable Film Corporation, is getting ready to go to New York. He will be accompanied by J. M. Campbell, president of the organization. This is an independent exchange and it has made rapid strides in growth considering the obstacles it has had to meet up with. Mr. Goldflam, sales manager, reports business very good the past week. He booked the new Bull's Eye Billy West comedies for the Gayoso theatre and has made a number of other bookings that are of interest.

The Doric theatre has taken on all the appearance of a real Japanese garden. The foyer is beautifully decorated with trellis and wisteria blossoms. Two dainty Geisha girls serve tea to the patrons and Japanese incense permeates the air. Two beautiful temples have been erected on each side of the screen and tiny windows have lights dimly showing through, giving it a mystic air. The ushers are garbed in costumes of the Orient. The reason for all this special display is the showing of Fanny Ward in "The Japanese Nightingale." Even the exterior of the house has been changed. Huge columns have been placed and written in Japanese is the announcement of the attraction.

Blackton Greets Son Who Returns from France

Among the crowd that went down the bay to welcome the Louisiana and the New Hampshire as they steamed into New York harbor loaded with Brooklyn fighting men, were Commodore and Mrs. J. Stuart Blackton.

J. Stuart Blackton, Jr., was on board, and also Nickalo Musaraca, who was the Blackton chauffeur for ten years before going "Over There." They were among a few of the lucky ones who came through with only slight wounds, from which they have recovered.

January 24 was another busy night for the Commodore. It was "J. Stuart Blackton night," at the Salmagundi Club.

Once a year Commodore Blackton arranges an entertainment for his fellow members at the club, and the feature of this year's event was, by special request, the showing of "The Common Cause," the producer's current photoplay, which he made under the auspices of the British-Canadian Recruiting Mission for Vitagraph distribution.

Wisconsin Paramounts Come from Chicago

It was announced from Milwaukee, Wis., this week that all Wisconsin Paramount-Arcraft shipments will be handled through the Chicago office hereafter. Paramount has turned over its Milwaukee offices in the Toy Building to the Mid-West Distributing Company. Ralph A. Wettstein, who headed the Paramount forces in Milwaukee, is general manager of the Mid-West Company. He was branch manager for Triangle from the inception of that company.

Exhibitor Service Bureau

ABOUT a year ago we printed a series of articles on house organs, from the small four-page folders up to the largest, and we believed at the time that these articles fully covered the situation.

But we have observed a new interest recently in this subject and within a couple of weeks we have received requests for an outline of what we believe to be the model house organ. In some sections this interest has been aroused on account of the attitude taken by the newspapers. At least in one city where motion picture houses were the heaviest advertisers they are now depending almost exclusively on their house organs to hold the business. Such a situation is unfortunate but the exhibitor is forced to do the best he can.

With the exception of a few communities where the conditions are peculiar, we believe that newspaper advertising is far and away the best advertising for the photoplay house and we are insistent that any theatre that fails to take advantage of newspaper advertising—provided they can get co-operation—is passing up a big bet. But a house organ is one of the best supplements as a general advertiser and certainly is a big factor in holding the trade to a particular theatre. The house organ can be made so attractive as to cause it to be read by all the motion picture fans in your community, and that is the ideal achievement.

Now, when we are discussing house organs in this article we are passing by the folders that merely give the program for the week and are going into the real house organ—the one that undertakes to be, in a degree, the newspaper of the fans in that particular section. We know that the publication of a real house organ is quite a bit of work and probably a proposition that most exhibitors will pass by, but we believe that in most cities it can be made successful and that by getting the advertising co-operation of merchants, it will be comparatively inexpensive.

We have been asked for the ideal house organ. And we are giving you that of the California theatre, San Francisco.

Now, the California was pointed out in the articles on newspapers in that city, as the theatre that advertises every day in every paper in that city. The space used is small and it does not go to the larger spaces. But Eugene Roth believes in keeping his attraction before all the people every day in the year—and he has the right idea. But he supplements this newspaper advertising with a house organ that includes everything a medium of this sort should be. And we can imagine that after the day's showing is over, the sweepers do not find many of them under the seats. They are of a quality that will be taken home and read.

On the page opposite, we have illustrated four pages from this twenty-eight-page booklet, which is 5x6¾ inches, so that the reproductions are reduced less than one-third. On another page we have shown the cover and other content of the house organ.

Now, of course, to be able to publish a house organ of this size once a week, the theatre must have some source of income for the organ itself and this can only come from advertising. The California appears to have little trouble in getting this and we have little doubt that this income meets the cost of printing.

A heavy buff paper is used for the cover, which bears the same matter each week, simply the name of the theatre, the date and volume number and the legend, "One of the world's finest moving picture theatres."

Inside the front cover we find a page advertisement for a hotel and then opposite, the scale of prices and the roster of the house organization. This, of course, is unnecessary in case of any but the largest theatres. The fourth page is headed, "House Notes," and gives various information, such as the locations of the conveniences and the like. Opposite is a page of restaurant advertising. Then the sixth page is generally devoted to the star in the picture that is coming the following week. In this case, Sessue weekly expense to the minimum. Then there are two pages of advertising.

From this point on, the right-hand pages are devoted to reading matter and the left-hand to advertising. In fact, the issue that is before us carries about fifteen pages of advertising, and this percentage is about right for any program of the sort.

On the ninth page we have a "standing" head, "This Week's Star from Starland," and in the current issue the story is about D. W. Griffith, whose "Greatest Thing in Life" was being shown.

Of course, Griffith isn't a player, and so this particular heading is a little off, but the point is that here the California gives you a little talk about the current star. You have had his picture the previous week, remember.

The eleventh and thirteenth pages carry the program. The California changes but once a week, and there will follow some suggestions about how to handle more frequent changes.

On the fifteenth page there is a heading, "Pen Pictures of the Players." This matter is illustrated by thumb-nail pictures of some of the players. They will cost you something like a dollar to have made, depending on the prices existing in your section, but they will be valuable to you for future use in your advertising and program. You should have them made sufficiently coarse to be suitable for newspaper use as well as in the house organ. As a matter of fact, the California uses a fairly light grade on the inside pages, reducing the expense and at the same time getting good effects with the standard newspaper cuts.

All of the matter used by the California is taken straight from the MOTION PICTURE STUDIO DIRECTORY. It is slightly rearranged, but every fact comes from that source and you have the same opportunity if you have a copy of the Directory as a part of your equipment.

Then there is a page usually devoted to music talks by Herman Heller, conductor of the orchestra, and in the current issue, talking about the Sunday morning symphony concerts that were recently started. Then the next right-hand page carries a heading, "Where the Stars Are Shining," and consists of a series of paragraphs about the activities of players. All of this matter can be obtained from the MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

There is another page headed, "Our Weekly Feature Page," where there is a talk about some player or a coming big production.

Still another page carries the heading, "California Comment," this being really the editorials. Then comes another with "How and Where They Make Them," with gossip of pictures in production.

Now: Most of you will say that this is very fine, but that you cannot do it. It is true that the house organ of the California is ambitious. If it were not, we would not be able to pick it as the one we consider to be the very best in the country. The only thing that we could possibly suggest as likely to add to the interest would be a "Question and Answer" department.

But you can do something approaching this if you will make up your mind to develop your field to the fullest. Here is the program that we would follow if we thought that this would be a good thing for our theatre:

First, visit the various printers and get from them bids on printing a certain number of copies of the house organ week after week.

Then see how many regular advertisers you can get, apportion-

An interesting interview with Charles S. Hart, director of the Division of Films of the Committee on Public Information, now in Europe in connection with filming the Peace Conference, is published in a recent issue of the Kinematograph and Lantern Weekly of London. Mr. Hart says in part:

"The way the United States motion picture organization has been built up in so short a time is nothing less than a miracle, and it is specially interesting to note that the department received from the United States Treasury, on commencement, an appropriation of $10,000, and that today the organization has in hand a big surplus of money, so that the idea has been successful financially as well as from the propaganda point of view. The Division of Films was created but one year ago."

SUNDAY MORNING CONCERTS

One of the most interesting motion picture shows ever held was given for the sailors of the fleet of battleships who were obliged to stay on the warships in the harbor on New Year's Eve.

There were 161 reels of films presenting the most popular stars, and they were donated by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

When it was learned that a majority of the sailors would celebrate New Year's Eve along Broadway and that there would be quite a number who would not be granted shore leave, Walter E. Greene, vice-president of the corporation, called on Lieut. H. D. Clark on board the flagship Pennsylvania and made the offer for the entertainment.

Lieut. Clark is the officer of the entertainment of the fleet while stationed here. He accepted the offer.

All the late releases were shown first in the officers' library. After that they were relayed to the gun deck for the sailors.

SUNDAY MORNING CONCERTS

Captain Peter B. Kyne has returned from France. Kyne contributed a considerable number of subjects to Metro, Fox and Paralta before entering the service. He has quite a reputation as a short story writer.

HAVE YOU SEEN MICKEY

Robert P. Fairbanks, who has been his brother's efficiency expert for the past six months, has been promoted to manager of production for Douglas Fairbanks.

SUNDAY MORNING CONCERTS

Theda Bara may leave the management of William Fox next May when her contract expires. The general belief is that the star is unwilling to remain with the company that first exploited her.

HAVE YOU SEEN MICKEY

Darwin Karr, late of Vitagraph and Essanay, and the husband of Florence Bindley, is critically ill with pleuro-pneumonia, following an attack of influenza.

SUNDAY MORNING CONCERTS

Charles E. Whittaker, the writer, was taken ill soon after his arrival here, but is able now to use his typewriter. He came west to write exclusively for Maurice Tourneur.

Lois Wilson, who has been J. Warren Kerrigan's leading woman in all his pictures for the past two years, may shortly be seen in a new all-star company, which is about to film a big feature picture—with the interiors made in Los Angeles and the exteriors in New York.

SUNDAY MORNING CONCERTS

The assistant directors in the studio colony have organized a club.

Mary Thurman, formerly a Mack Sennett star, has been engaged to play the principal lead in the forthcoming Paramount production of "Poor Boob" in support of Bryant Washburn.

"HAVE YOU SEEN MICKY?"

Dustin Farnum has been in Arizona hunting big game.

The Ince Company is practically installed in the new studio at Culver City. Several companies are working.

Robert McKim has been engaged by Goldwyn to appear in Rex Beach's new production, "The Brand."

This Week's Star from Starland

DAVID W. GRIFFITH

DAVID W. GRIFFITH, master producer, scores another artistic triumph in his latest Arctcraft photoplay of love and war, "The Greatest Thing in Life." The photoplay introduces dainty Lillian Gish, one of the most charming screen players in the country, Robert Harron and other notable players, all of whom appear to excellent advantage in this remarkable production.

What is "the greatest thing in life?" The title, which may appeal as unusually comprehensive, is suggested by the theme of the play. The greatest thing is somewhat different to nearly every person; but Mr. Griffith has selected what he believes to be the greatest thing for the majority of persons, as the foundation for a drama of fascinating variety and arresting strength.

Mr. Griffith dips again into the ferment of the Western Front for the climax of his story. Americans are in the majority among the characters in the cast. The romance of the girl is touched with a charm of internationalism, but the pursuing action is staunchly typical of America.

The happy blending of delicacy and strength which is conspicuous in Mr. Griffith's unrivalled mastery in screencraft, has seldom appeared than in this superb photoplay. General whimsicalities are offered in contrast to situations of electric suspense and attacking strength. The action mounts with agreeable speed to the intense energy at the close, which is characteristic of all of Mr. Griffith's productions.

The story deals with a young American who is the social harvest of pampering circumstances; with a blithe and merry maiden who is entertained with dreams; and with a sturdy young Frenchman, a green grocer, loyal to his garlic-fed palate until love complicates his menu and many other things.

Mr. Griffith has given his idea in a motion picture that further strengthens his reputation of being one of the master producers of the screen. Its characters are as vivid to the spectator as old friends, definite in their contrasts and tempting in their association.

The picture includes some of the most beautiful photographic scenes Mr. Griffith has ever produced, several of them secured while in France. Among them are the photographs of the Marne river and Chateau Thierry.

ing the cost so that you can get the advertising to approximate the expense. Do not try to make money out of the program. You are getting the greatest benefit of any one, and you should be willing to at least underwrite the risk even if you are not willing to pay part of the printer's charge.

You can get an artist to make the various headings, if you want to have the best results. These will last for years. The headings of the California are in Ben Day effects and the engraver's charge for these will be small. If you do not want to make this trifling investment you can have them set in type with an attractive border and these will serve almost as well.

We have already referred to the thumbnail cuts and we are sure that they will prove a good investment to any theatre. Certainly you can afford an expense of two dollars a week for this, knowing that you can use them time after time in the future if you will simply take the care to file them. They will be of value in your smaller advertising. You can remember the number of times that you have been "up against it" for a small cut to illustrate a little advertisement. If you had these in your file room you would be saved all the trouble of the worry about not getting the right thing from the exchange.

These headings and the cuts are the only expense that you have to go to, for you can get every bit of the other material that you need from the MOTION PICTURE NEWS and from the STUDIO DIRECTORY. An hour's time spent in rewriting the pages of the NEWS will give you all the matter that you need. Of course, you would confine yourself as far as possible to the stars and brands that you play so as to encourage the interest in these actors and productions.

The editorial page, similar to "California Comment," we would suggest as making direct reference to pictures that are coming at an early date and to comment on local civic affairs. Help out here any of the local organizations that may have under way some public movement.

You'll be surprised how easy it is to prepare this matter and how much interest there is in it.

It is easy enough for you to rearrange this space so as to give you more space for the programs if you change oftener than twice a week, and you do not need a diagram for this. Give the full program for each day if you are able to do so.

In any sort of a house organ that you issue, and whether you change your program once a week or every day we strongly urge that you give the cast of characters of each feature production. That makes the program of interest to the person in the theatre at the time of the distribution. Then use the other matter to be so interesting that it will be taken home and preserved.

One great value of the house organ is that it enables you to get home to your patrons the intimate talks on future pictures that you need. And when we use the word "intimate" we do not mean that you should use flippant or personal stuff in your program. That is about the worst thing that you can do. Possibly it is a temptation, but certainly it is a temptation to be conquered.

We believe that the theatre in the smaller city can get as much advertising as the California is doing. If you make your program of interest and of real value to your theatre it is pretty sure to be of interest to certain advertisers. Restaurants, candy shops, book stores, music houses, women's and music stores, photographers and dancing and music teachers should afford a clientele.

In case of theatres located in smaller towns, where they have a mailing list through the surrounding territory, we would suggest that they can enlist the co-operation of local merchants on special bargain days, enclosing copies of the program with out-of-town purchases and helping build up the business of all concerned.

There is just one warning: Unless your newspapers are refusing to cooperate with you do not put your solicitation of advertising on a basis of competition with the newspapers. Don't go out and say to the merchant that the advertising in your program is worth more than space in the newspaper. Put your solicitation on the basis of your patronage and its purchasing power.

Whether you can produce a weekly house organ relatively as creditable as the California depends on how hard you work.

It is not possible here to suggest how to adapt this plan to various communities, but if you are interested and will write us the details or your local conditions we will be mighty glad to give your case earnest consideration and our best advice.

Milwaukee Theatre Aiding in Employment for Soldiers

A free employment service for discharged soldiers and sailors established at the Butterfly theatre, Milwaukee, by Manager Leo Landau, has resulted in considerable publicity and good will toward the house.

Mr. Landau has advertised in all of the newspapers the fact that if a service man will leave his name, address, age and occupation at the box office, efforts will be made to secure him a position. Slides to this effect are also flashed at each show.

Following this, slides are run enumerating the classes of occupations in which men have asked for jobs. Persons in the audience who desire men in these particular branches are asked to stop at the box office, where their names are taken and all men who applied for the job are notified by telephone to report.

How Ruffner Views Service As An Asset

Last week we printed the first of a series of two articles by Ralph Ruffner, manager of the Rialto theatre, Butte, Montana, and one of the best known managers and publicity men in the country, about some of his observations on a recent trip to New York City.

His remarks about local theatres there were highly flattering, but we promised that he would record the faults that he saw, and there are some of them included here. Mr. Ruffner interested the editor of this department very much with the accounts of some of the things in the way of service at theatres he has managed and we have asked him to record them in another article.

But here goes with New York:

HOUSE service? I came into direct contact with the efficient and saw the inefficient. (I dislike to deal in generalities, but they must be accepted in good faith in an article such as this.)

The young man who escorted me to a lone seat in one of the theatres was "a million dollar boy," while in the section adjoining I saw a man and woman subjected to several flippant, uncalled for, remarks from another usher, whose choice neck I itched to have in my possession for a few moments.

How quickly and oh, how thoroughly can such an employee tear down a service structure which has probably taken many hard months of painstaking perseverance to erect. Vigilance, eternal vigilance, is the price of service, it would seem.

New York may have in excess of three hundred thousand transients daily, but, no theatre, however situated, can afford the presence in its organization of any individual not having the best interests of the house and his employer at heart at ALL times. This fellow was a bad cog in a fine piece of machinery and the question is how many patrons that evening were provided with a hammer through his arrogance?

I found his feathered companion acting as doorman later on in this same theatre and my one regret in leaving New York was that I could not remain long enough

INCIDENTALS

"Little Things" Are the Ones That Really Count

INCIDENTALS, the little things, line up the two classes of theatres—those that are doing their utmost and those that are just sliding along from day to day. A "little thing" often makes whole families of customers; and just as often "little things" left undone prevent the patron from becoming a regular.

There is no place in which these incidentals count for more than in service. We have had exhibitors recently relate to us little things that they have seen happen in their houses and which they have been able to turn to their benefit. We'd be mighty glad to have them related here—any little incident that you may recall. They will all help others.

For instance, last Sunday at the Rivoli theatre there was quite a draft in one of the loges, though no one complained. Directly the usher saw one of the patrons turn up his coat collar to keep off the draft. The usher was immediately on the job and whispered the question whether the patron felt a draft. He did, and the draft was promptly stopped. That little thing impressed not only this patron but a dozen others who witnessed the incident.

Let's hear of your "little incidents."

to see 'em feed him, for he sure was a fine old lion. Here's the contrast. At the box office of this same house, when I received my ticket I said "Thank you," and the cordial little lady flashed back a pleasant "You're welcome." This, and the attitude of the fine young man who ushered me to my seat, surely put me in the best possible mood to be entertained, and when I left it was with the conviction of an evening well spent.

In another house, as I was leaving, I stopped near the front doors to put on my overcoat—no one else coming in or going out at that moment—and naturally expected any one of the half dozen neatly uniformed ushers—standing all about me—to step up and assist me, not that I needed assistance, but because that attention to detail is all a part of SERVICE, if the word is accepted at its full value. Not one of them volunteered.

Perhaps that is not the custom in this house, but what a splendid opportunity for management to inject its personality a bit deeper into the opinions of the thousands who pass in and out of its portals each week.

What I have said are mere observations and most decidedly NOT criticisms. Many times, during my visit, I was asked to go on record by criticising the things I saw, but it can't be done. I visited New York to see and learn and I returned home with a heart full of satisfaction at the time spent and commendation for the highly clever craftsmanship apparent on every hand and in every department of motion picture theatre work.

Columbus in 1492 paved the way for a host of things to occupy the attention of the westerner, and old man Balboa came right back with the easterner in mind when he lit on the shores of the Pacific to start things. That both were darned good pavers for the days to come is immediately manifest when we size up the theatres of both coasts in their entirety.

Novel Grauman Prologue for Cannibal Pictures

Grauman's theatre, Los Angeles, was able to get an unusual effect with the prologue during the week that Martin Johnson's "Cannibals of the South Seas" were the stellar attraction.

A score or more people were used, most of them being Los Angeles negroes who represented the cannibals. The cannibal village was built in the background that this was seen with only a small amount of light, representing the twilight. It began with a strange dance, accompanied by guttural voices. The harmony of the lighting, costumes, settings and music was perfect. When the pictures themselves were flashed on the screen the wierd singing, dying away in the distance, could be heard.

Your Idea and Ours

DETROIT motion picture advertising has long been of the same type that has been distinctly tiresome. All of the theatres have been using the reversed style of name plates and have been similarly employing half tones of the stars until, except for the name of the theatre there has been little difference in them.

Since Charles G. Branham took charge of the Majestic there has been a change in the advertising of that house and the result is that here is a display that stands out in the pages of the Detroit papers. It would have been even better if the figures of the chorus girls could have been made larger because it would have obtained a quicker catch of the eye, but as it stands it is mighty good work.

In just one thing we do not agree with Mr. Branham and that is in advertising the attraction for the following week in his Sunday display just as his current bill is beginning. There isn't any use in taking any chance of dividing the interest in two attractions. Seven inches across four columns is the space used.

Most roads turn, but a lot of people quit before they get that far.

TWO things are wrong with this display of the Trent theatre, Trenton, N. J. In the first place the best possible effect of the cut has not been secured because the type effects are allowed to overshadow it. Another thing is that the name of the theatre is just about the last thing that the eye gets. With anything but a short and an unusually attractive title such as "Mickey" we would have called the display a poor one.

Alas, it is too true.

How New York Stages the Show

BEGINNING with next week's issue the accounts of the presentations at the Broadway Theatre will appear in these pages. They have not appeared before since the appearance of the heading above for the reason that "The Heart of Humanity" has been running all of that time. Starting Sunday, Priscilla Dean will be seen in "The Wicked Darling," and the full presentation will be recorded.

Because the Broadway pursues the policy of not changing every week, but permitting some special attractions to run longer the accounts will, naturally, appear with only each change of bill. But readers of this department may be sure of finding a complete exposition of the way the four New York leading theatres present pictures.

AT the Rialto this week the feature is Tom Moore in "Go West, Young Man," and includes a Bruce scenic of unusual appeal and the latest of the Mack Sennett comedies, "Never Too Old."

Rivoli is presenting the screen version of "Cheating Cheaters," with Clara Kimball Young as the star. Prizma furnishes the scenic with "Bird Island" and the comedy element is supplied by "Ask Father," a Harold Lloyd comedy.

D. W. Griffith's latest creation, "A Romance of Happy Valley," is the feature offering at the Strand, with "Bobby Bumps Last Smoke" the comedy. The length and the character of the feature makes a scenic unnecessary.

Rialto Theatre

HUMAN is the best descriptive word for the bill at the Rialto this week, and this element starts in with the Robert Bruce scenic with the horse and the dog and carries through the entire bill to the animal element in the comedy.

We like the artistic bill, sometimes the very dramatic, once in a long while the tense that holds you gripping your seat, but we have seen it prevail as a rule that it is the human element that the masses want—and we'll admit that we're one of the masses.

"First Hungarian Rhapsody," one of the most brilliant of selections, is the overture at the Rialto. Incidentally there are some splendid lighting effects secured during this number. At the start they are down to dim blue and there is only a spot on the cymbalist, who had quite a little to do during the overture. Then after about three minutes there is a wonderful transformation with them coming up to a full gold.

In "Little High Horse," a Robert Bruce, released by Educational, the maker has brought out an element that calls for constant applause from the audience. There is an addition to the title with "being a glimpse of the daily life of a mountain horse," a cayuse that is able to take his master anywhere and you can imagine that Bruce selects some remarkable scenes to picture. The silhouette scenes are unusually good, and there is one of the horse and the dog that gets a great hand and a second one at the end where the horse and dog are standing at the edge of a jagged cliff. Some unusual mountain and cloud effects in panorama are also obtained. "Macbeth" is the music at the start and this is followed through with an organ modulation until we see the man on horseback on the side of the mountain, and here it becomes "Unfinished Symphony," played to the end.

McDowell's beautiful "To a Wild Rose" is the first vocal number. With the lights in red Miss Helen Rumsey comes from between the curtain and renders the song in a manner that delights the audience.

Rialto Magazine opens with Gaumont pictures of Secretary Baker decorating numerous foreign officials on duty in this country with the Distinguished Service Medal, and the stirring strains of "The Right of Way" with full orchestral effects is used here. Then Pathe presents pictures from Kelly Field, Texas, showing the droves of American aviators demonstrating what they had intended to do to Berlin if the Huns hadn't quit so soon. "Boy of Mine" is played for the opening of the pictures and during the flying scenes the orchestra remains tacit and we have the aeroplane effects.

Pathe then shows tricks in camouflage, how the boast were made to look as if they were going backward, and the like, and here we get "Bon Vivant." Pathe takes us across the ocean and shows us the Canadians who were held prisoners by the Germans on their way home. The music is "When You Come Back" until the title "Four years of hard fighting," and then the orchestra swings into "Uncle Tom." These pictures make one of the biggest hits of the bill. Pathe pictures show the youngsters being drilled for the French navy at Brest, and then Gaumont brings a stirring finish with pictures of the battle flags being presented to their respective states, this particular one being the 301 regiment. Starting with the Brest scenes "Les Jeunes Lauries" is played, with rolls of drum for the marching youths and then there follows through "Regiment's Return" to the end.

Before the Byzantine setting and with the effects in red Eduardo Albana, baritone, then effectively sings "Perche."

Then comes the feature, the music for which is especially catchy. It is remarkable in that only three numbered selections are used, the remainder being popular or standard selections. "In a Garden" is used at the start and then with the title, "A storm that has been brewing," we have "Under the Leaves," which is used until Dick starts on the great adventure, when the audience starts humming with the orchestra, "Give My Regards to Broadway," and then there follows through "Strutter's Ball." At the title "Dawn brings the first hunger," the old favorite "The Old Town Pump" and after "Come Across" had been played the pump tune is repeated. Then there is a pause as Dick hears the whistle blow and "Come Across" is then resumed.

Some of the selections that follow include "Porcupine Patrol," "Mystic Shrine," "Aviation Valse." "Mary" is used with the title "The Crimmins Ranch," and then with the title "The afternoon" Victor Herbert's "Love Theme" is introduced and when Dick sees the girl it is followed with the chorus of "Will You Remember?" At the title "I've come to town to see you," we have two choruses of the theme used with 'cello, solo and organ, and then numbered selections until the sheriff saves the girl, where we have the theme again. "What's the Matter with Father" is introduced with the arrival of the boy's parents on the scene and then the theme from the beginning with two choruses as the final number.

With the lights all in gold the orchestra then plays selections from the tune "Naughty Marietta," and we have the Mack Sennett comedy, "Never Too Old," with Charles Murray. The scenes of the drunken monkey making love to the cat is one of the funniest things that has ever been put into a picture and it certainly had the audience roaring with laughter when we saw it. As usual at the Rialto there is a clever selection of lively music with this one, the selections in order being "I'll Say She Does," "I'll Come Sailing Home to You," "My Doughboy," "Hello, I've Been Looking for You," "Fifi," "Après," and then "My Wife's Gone to the Country," introduced as Murray gets the letter. "Oh, Helen" follows with "He Had No Loving for a Long, Long Time," and then "Pepper Pot" for the lively scenes at the end.

Wohstenholme's "Finale in B Flat" the organ solo at the end.

Strand Theatre

REAL Griffith treatment of the most intimate sort is revealed in the making of "A Romance of Happy Valley," at the presentation at the Strand this week in the happiest accord with that spirit. There has been a special music score prepared that interprets it wonderfully, and we only regret that it is mainly made of numbered selections and therefore it cannot be handed along to other exhibitors.

Managing Director Plunkett has also anged a vocal prelude that puts the audiences just in the right mood to enjoy the picture. We recommend very strongly the balance of the bill as shown at the Strand as an example for other exhibitors who show this picture. For instance, the scenic is omitted on the Strand program, as it should be, for a great portion of the Griffith picture is outdoor stuff and you do not need any more of it.

The Southern atmosphere of this picture should be remembered through the presentation. There is almost a religious touch to it, a spirit that makes you think of the people back home—if you have left them to go away. There must have been thousands in the audiences at the Strand this week who have left parents behind them to come to New York to win their fortunes. One might almost look into their faces and pick them. There were laughs enough through the picture, but there were a lot of them that felt a little choking in their throats. And the atmosphere given the presentation helped all this genuineness of feeling.

Brilliant "Mignon" is the overture. There is a special set used here showing the vision of Joan of Arc leading the modern French troops on to victory. It is set in a church window effect and is striking.

Then comes the Strand Topical, which opens with Pathe pictures showing the return of the Brooklyn boys, including some fine shots of the ship, and these pictures get a wild welcome from the audience. For these and for the pictures following of the sale of the "Giants," we have "When the Boys Come Sailing Home," with the full orchestral effects. Then come the Pathe pictures of the Canadian soldiers on their way home and "Maple Leaf" is appropriately used here.

Pathe presents then tricks in camouflage, cartoons of liners being painted to look as if they were moving backward and another apparently having three torpedo boats guarding her, and for these "The Navy Will Bring Them Back" is played. There is a relief from the strictly news events with a Paramount Pictograph showing sculpture in sugar. These are wonderful pictures of the way that these huge ornamented cakes are made and they bring many sighs of astonishment from the audience. "Eternelle Extase" is the accompaniment.

Then come Topics of the Day, most of them referring to the war and the Kaiser. As you probably know these consist in a series of excerpts from the paragraphs in newspapers and are flashed on the screen one after another. They get lots of laughs, especially one this week, which says: "The Kaiser wanted more territory and we gave him hell." Another one declares that it would be an insult to our lead to buy anything made in Germany and the audience yells its approval. During these "When We Meet Again in the Sweet Bye and Bye" and "Oh, What a Time for the Girls" are played.

Universal Current Events of a Sinn Fein mass meeting in Dublin are received in silence except for the orchestra playing "Keltic Suite No. 1." Then follow the Pathe pictures of dropping bombs at Kelly Field, which we have described elsewhere, "The Favorite" being used here.

Some of the finest pictures that we have yet seen are furnished by Universal Current Events with the reception to the President in Italy. These are in great detail, the shots of the immense cheering crowds being especially satisfactory. We have first the great reception in Rome, then a picture of him at the Pantheon with a fine close-up that brings a storm of applause, a view of the Vatican, where he was received by the Pope, pictures of him viewing the Forum and then a panorama of Rome. Then we go to Milan and have a splendid shot of the cheering thousands, and a little later see just as big a one at Turin. "Cleopatra March" and "Hail to the Chief" are the selections that give the Pictorial a smashing finish.

With the lights in a dim blue the curtains now part showing the veranda of a southern home, with two girls standing and two seated. In the background are cabins lighted in the early evening, with a field stretching in front of us and a river fringed with trees in the background. It is a typical Kentucky plantation scene. The girls, who form the Strand Female Quartet, and who have mighty good voices, then sing a medley of old southern songs. Just as "My Old Kentucky Home" is begun the lights begin to go down further, the stars in the sky come out, the moon begins to rise and far in the background we see a fully lighted passenger steamer churning its way up the river.

Then the screen curtain comes down and the feature starts, with the strains of "My Old Kentucky Home" still heard. In fact the strains of this are carried through the picture very effectively at several points. "Lullaby No. 3" of the Nevin suite is the theme and it is first used with the title "Saturday night." There are some clever organ effects used with the church scenes. There is a chance for much of the dramatic music in this, but it should be played largely with the echo of southern airs, of light sympathetic music for the girl and mysteriosos for the robber portion and this is done and done well at the Strand this week.

Then comes Alois Morrice, violinist, playing first "Scherzo Tarantelle." There are no lights for this with the exception of the spot on the violinist. Then the lights come up to gold at the end of the first selection and then go down again in blue, the curtains parting revealing a setting representing a church window and to the accompaniment of the organ he plays "The Rosary."

Next comes a short Paramount-Bray, "Friendly Enemies," of two kittens playfully fighting and it gets lots of laughs, to the music of "A Baton Rumpus." Without a pause it is followed by "Bobby Bumps' Last Smoke," an Early Hurd cartoon. The music is "Harrison Fisher," "Oriental Fox Trot" for the harem scenes and then "Flying Rag" for the chase stuff.

The organ solo is Hill's "Grand March."

Rivoli Theatre

DR. RIESENFELD is presenting two favorite musical numbers this week with "Bonnie Sweet Bessie" being sung and "Old Times Waltz" played by the orchestra at the Rivoli this week. Your audiences will never get tired of these old fashioned songs and we have yet failed to see one of them make a great hit with the audiences than some of the heavy operatic stuff that most people applaud simply because they feel that they will be considered ignorant if they do not.

With the lights all in gold and the curtain in a greenish blue with the side hangings suggesting pink at the top "Raymond" is the overture. It is an unusually brilliant selection and wins thorough appreciation.

Then comes another one of the wonderful Prizma color pictures, this one being entitled "Bird Island," or hunting with a camera in one of the Government preserves off the coast of California. There are pictures of the "Foolish Guillemont," who, one of the titles tell us, "have just enough sense to raise feathers and attend convention," for they stay in great flocks. Then we have other pictures of gulls, of the puffin, or sea parrot. Right here we have the music carried with violin and drum only for "Mother Carey's Chickens." These pictures show the eggs, the young and the full grown birds and the colors are true to life. "Forest Whispers," followed through with "Canzonetta," is the accompanying music.

There is a special setting that follows with the lights all blue, even bathing the orchestra. The curtains are only about half parted revealing a window with a hanging light on either side. There is no light against the curtains. Then James Harrod sings "Bonnie Sweet Bessie" in a manner that earns the warmest of tributes from the audience, so great that it tries in vain to keep the Rivoli Pictorial from starting.

This opens with Pathe pictures of the inauguration of Governor Kilby at Montgomery, Ala., and the big military pageant in his honor. The audience here, at least, are not the slightest bit tired of applauding our soldier boys, and they give the marching men a big reception, to the accompaniment of "Entrance of the Guard." Then we go to Italy to witness the reception there of President Wilson. These pictures are from Pathe. First we have Rome welcoming him and there come unusual cheers from the audience with pictures of him visiting the ancient ruins, and then we see him at the Pantheon, at the Coliseum and then at Milan Cathedral and the great crowds welcoming him. The first seven and a half bars of "From Italy" are used and repeated and then we have "March Reale" during these pictures.

Now we get comedy relief, and a side-splitter it is, with Jeff and Mutt in "Land-ing an Heiress." First we have "Hindustan," and then when they enter the carousel at Coney Island we have the chorus of "In the Shade of the Old Apple Tree" played twice through and then "Frivolity" until the scene changes to Jeff and then there follows a one-step to the end of the cartoon. But the description of the music does not describe the full effect on the audience, for the orchestra is right there with the imitations and these help bring out the wonderful number of laughs. For instance the music of the merry-go-round instrument is perfectly burlesqued.

Saenger Interests Get 2 More Big Theatres; Soldiers for Manager and Musical Director

Saenger Amusement Company, with headquarters in New Orleans, and owning theatres in Texas, Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi and Florida, has just added two more to its string of about fifty. The most important of these is the Liberty, a brand new 1,700-seat house, which has had a short but tempestuous existence. The second is the Marion in Clarksdale, Miss.

The Liberty represents the long experience of Ernest Boehringer, one of the veteran motion picture men of the South. He organized the Boehringer Amusement Company and built the Liberty on St. Charles, one of the principal downtown streets. After many delays due to the inability to get material, it was completed about ten months ago. However, there arose differences between Mr. Boehringer and the majority stockholders and the former resigned. N. E. Thatcher, photo-play editor of the Times-Picayune, was then made advisory manager, and the theatre again closed the first of the year. It has now been taken over by the Saenger Co., of which E. V. Richards, Jr., is general manager, and was reopened January 25.

Maurice Barr, who left the management of the Strand to go to war, is manager of the Liberty now, with Max Fink, formerly musical director for Saenger at the Globe, in charge of the orchestra. Lieut. Fink was leader of the 347th Infantry band during the war and gave many concerts in Paris.

And so being in a high good humor we are prepared for all sorts of enthusiasm for Gaumont pictures of welcoming our boys home. These in this case are Brooklyn's "Lucky Thirteenth," and one might have well thought that every person in the audience was a friend from Brooklyn by the way they cheered. There is a shot of the battleship passing the Statue of Liberty. There are some fine close-up shots and then pictures of the men coming down the gang-plank. The harbor whistle effects are realistic. Then follow Gaumont pictures of the aviation bombing feats at Kelly Field, Texas. These are even more elaborate than the Pathe views of the same event. "The Navy Will Bring Them Back" is used without the introduction at the start of the homecoming troops pictures, and then follows through with "We're Coming," and then at the aeroplane scenes the orchestra fades out and remains tacit to the finish, effects only being used, including the exploding bombs and the whistles of the train.

There is a rather peculiar symbolic prelude then. All of the lights go out and then there begins to play against the black curtain a small spot light and up to the dome. Some of the audience do not get it and laugh—or at least they did when we saw it. Then we see the curtains part and there is the interior of a room with a safe at the left side and then appears a burglar in the inky darkness and then a second follows with a searchlight and there follows a unique dance. Finally it ends with a flash as they blow the safe; there is a little shudder from a few and the picture immediately starts, "Cheating Cheaters," a crook play, so that the audience now understands fully the whole arrangement and applauds. "Jimmy Valentine" is the music for this and it is likewise one of the themes for the feature.

"Woodland Dreams" is the opening number, followed by "Goulash," with the title "A Neighboring Estate," and then with the title "Tom Palmer Is in Love" we have "Always or Never" followed by "Love Song," which is the love theme for the picture. "Pass the Butter" is played with the introduction of the crook lawyer, and then as one of the crooks picks the chain we have "Jimmy Valentine," the chorus being used twice. "Russian Rag" is the real theme for the picture, it being used first when instructions are being given the fake butler, four bars of it when he announces Mrs. Palmer, then again as he rolls in the service table, again with the title "The booze is served," once more with the title "The ruse to locate," and then just as the lovers leave and with the title "The private office" we have "Love Song." As a matter of fact these few lines fail to explain the remarkable way in which these three selections are entwined through the picture. For instance, during the time that the organ is carrying the picture "Jimmy Valentine" is improvised.

Then the orchestra plays "Old Timers' Waltz," with the audience humming and whistling and then breaking into a storm of applause that it really means at the end.

"Ask Father" is the Harold Lloyd comedy that follows. Bebe Daniels also has a prominent part. Lloyd does some wonderful fall stuff and there is a clever element in the way that the girl provides the cushion on which for him to land. "Do Re Mi," "Pajahma," "Listen to This," "Peter Piper" and "Toute la Nuit" are the musical selections.

Emile Giroud's "Fanfare" is the final organ selection.

Jungle Lobby Display Arouses Whole City of Elgin

Elgin (Ill.) theatres seldom do anything startling with lobby displays, but the Orpheum theatre, located in the heart of the business section, literally woke the town up with the decorations that it used for "Tarzan of the Apes."

Oak boughs covered with their brown leaves, a few artificial palms, stuffed animals and birds and a cage full of live monkeys. Saturday, the day the display was being put up, the street was literally packed with people watching the work and it created such a sensation that it got space in the newspapers and continued to attract attention until the showing of the picture, the following Wednesday and Thursday. Manager H. P. Rori reports that it attracted to his theatre people who had never heard of "Tarzan," but whose curiosity was sufficiently aroused by the display to lead them to inquire.

ONE of the liveliest showmen in motion pictures is E. J. Myrick, manager of the Liberty theatre, Portland, Ore., and the only complaint is that we too seldom hear of the big things that he is doing in exploiting his entertainment, things that have put the Liberty at the very top of the motion picture houses of the nation.

Mr. Myrick doesn't believe much in the routine plan—of simply trying to do "something" each week. When he uses a special setting or a special presentation you may be sure that he is doing it because there is a reason for it. Novelty is the watchword and when the Liberty puts on a picture it does it in a way that creates thousands of dollars worth of word of mouth advertising, in addition to the big displays that the Jensen and Von Heberg houses use in the daily papers.

For the showing of "The Biggest Show on Earth," with Enid Bennett, Mr. Myrick converted his whole stage into a stage front with the usual banners carrying the announcements of each of the freak attractions such as "Bosco, the wild man," and "Fatima, the queen of the harem." But he carried the realism still further by the use of characters representing the various attractions, and then secured the services of a veteran showman. In the guise of a "spieler" he described each of the attractions as the spot was thrown from banner to banner and the audience was soon laughing at high speed.
